JUNIATA COLLEGE LIBRARY

27.6.405
.P64
v.3
1871-72

Merkly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

SAMPLE COPY. JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 28, 1871. NO I

Contributions.

For the Pilgrim.

THE INVITATION.

"Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11: 28.

Every one who is away from, or out of Christ, is weary and heavy laden. There may be very little, or no consciousness of the labor which the sinner performs, and of the burden which he carries; yet there is no earthly calling or prospect, which if engaged in by man, has not its labor and burden. The imagination in vain conceives a place on earth, deserving the name heaven; every sinful earthly pleasure, gives a venomous sting at last; even the most glaring worldly prospect, when viewed from every position—the bitter taken with the sweet—cannot by any means claim a result so glorious as that of coming to Christ.

The condition of those who are away from, and out of Christ, may be compared to a vessel and its crew, sailing round and approaching nearer to the center of a Maelstrom. As the ship is borne on in the irresistible current, some of the voyagers labor hard at the helm and wheel to change the course of their vessel, regardless of the remonstrative cries and entreaties of their friends, to desist their labor and trust to being saved from a horrible calamity by coming into a life-boat. All on board are sensible of the awful catastrophe that awaits them if they remain in the doomed ship, but still they are loath to abandon her, and some of them say, "to-morrow" until they are whirled into eternity.

To come to Christ, is simply to believe in Him—to believe that He is the Son of God, and that He is equal with God and consequently to follow in His footsteps, doing what He says.

The condition of the soul is such, that something firm and indissoluble is required upon which it may rest. Christ is that rock, and to rest upon it, is to enter into the feelings of Christ, yea to enter into his very being by following into His foot-prints found in the Bible. The essence and result of such an assimilation with the Son of God, is His love shed abroad in the heart, being the same as the end of faith or the salvation of the soul.

To come to Jesus is to become like Him—to learn that man's duty to man and to God, is to teach man to know his real condition, and to direct him to the source whence all his wants can be supplied; to induce him to sacrifice a temporal rest, in order that he may gain one that is eternal.

How unspeakably happy the soul, that has by coming to Christ taken rest upon a foundation that will endure forever, well might it be commanded, and well may it willingly obey that heavenly mandate to sing praises to God forever, having gained a heritage that affords peace, safety and rest forever more.

The invitation given by Christ to mankind to attain to happiness, is so far-reaching and so general that none need fear but those who willfully refuse to accept the proffered gift; for "the Spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say, come. and let him that is athirst, come, and whosoever will let him come, and take the waters of life freely."

Come then all who labor and are heavy laden, and find rest unto your souls. Come and die with Christ that you may live and reign with Him in glory. He, and they that follow Him, are the fairest among thousands and altogether lovely. He does not ask us to "bow down our heads as bulrushes" or to "afflict our souls." He does not ask you to become unhappy even in this life, but gently and meekly entreat us to be diligent in his service, that we may be truly happy, that we should not be afraid with any amazement, but to rejoice with joy unspeakable, and again He says rejoice. He wants us to be cheerful and glad in keeping his commandments. He gives us rest, feeds our soul with the bread of life, leads us out by the pure waters of the river of life, cares for us, and is with us unto the end.

He gives us rest by enlightening our minds, by restoring us from spiritual blindness to spiritual light, telling us the will of the Father.—Though we must be tried by a fiery trial, buffetted—hated by the world, and assailed by an enemy that threatens our destruction, He gives us grace sufficient for every trial, enabling and encouraging us to fight valiently, and never to give the battle over until we "come off more than conquerors through Him THAT LOVED US." J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the Pilgrim.

SOJOURNING.

"Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear," 1 Peter 1: 10.

The apostle Peter, when making use of this language, undoubtedly saw the necessity of warning the people, and exhorting them how they should pass the time of their sojourn, while traveling through this world. As all Scripture is given for our edification, we feel as those words were left for our instruction, just as well as they were to the persons he was speaking to at that time. We will endeavor to make some brief remarks upon the subject, not expecting to bring up anything new before the minds of our readers, but the idea is that we might impress the subject upon their minds in such a manner that they might be benefited thereby. We say the subject is a short and familiar one; but short and familiar as it may seem, if close attention is paid thereto, we will find that it contains a great deal of weighty matter.

We will look at the subject under the three following heads, viz:

First. Who a sojourner is. Secondly. Where he is traveling to, and Thirdly. Why he should pass his time of sojourn in fear.

We all know that a sojourner is one who is away from home; one who is in a distant land, surrounded with strangers; one who is eagerly waiting for the time when he is to return to his native land, to greet his friends, from whom he has been absent for some time, and who are impatiently waiting for his return.

Secondly. Where is he traveling to? In looking at this point in a temporal view, when we expect to take a journey, we always know where we are going to. Just so it is in a spiritual view. We know that we are all traveling to eternity as fast as the wheels of time can move us on, and ere long will come to our journey's end, when we will pass from this stage of action to an endless eternity. But where we are traveling to is a matter which requires our attention. We who profess to be Christians, have all started for that land where it is all one bright day; where night never comes, and where flows the stream of living waters, on the banks of which stands the tree of life, yielding twelve manner of fruits and where the song of Moses and the Lamb will be sung through all eternity. But we are not sure of ever getting there; we may make shipwreck of our faith; and the Scriptures only give promise to those who hold out faithfully to the end.

Brethren and sisters, if we stand close to the word of God, and pass our time of sojourning here in fear, we will land safely on the other side of Jordan.

But the sinner, where is he traveling to? We ask you sinner, where are you traveling to? If you are honest enough, you will reply to hell, unless you repent from your wickedness. Sinner, pause in your wicked career, and "come let us reason together" for a little while.

Let us look at the subject in a temporal view again. If you had before you two countries; one in which the climate is salubrious, the soil fertile, the people very kind and sociable, and you could live there in case all the days of your life. The other a country in which the climate is sickly, the soil barren, the people very wicked, and where you would be in danger of losing your life, if among them.

The road to the former country is very narrow, rough and hilly, while to the latter it is wide, level and can be traveled with ease. We ask you, which of these roads will you take, the broad or the narrow? We think you would say, I will take the narrow road and if I am right cautious I think I can reach that delightful country, where I shall enjoy myself all the days of my life. In the other country I should be uneasy all the time, for fear of getting sick or of being killed by those bad people. Were this so, they could no more than kill the body, but remember you have some greater things to fear. If you live a wicked life and die in your sins, you will be thrust down to hell, and there made to call upon some one, like the rich man, to dip his finger in water and cool your parched tongue, with which you so often blasphemed the name of God.

Thirdly. Why he should pass his time in fear. This part of our subject is worthy of notice. We will not admit that our time of sojourn here, is but a vapor to compare to that endless eternity which we are all so fast approaching. Our time here compared with eternity, is much less than one drop of water compared with the great ocean. Is it not strange then, that we live so careless and unconcerned as though we were like the dumb brute, when we die cease to be? No that will not be the case with us; we only die to live again and that forever.

We are only placed in this world for a short time, to make a choice of a master, whom we will serve through eternity. And is it not strange, yea strange indeed, that intelligent persons will spend their few short and fleeting days, in serving a master they would flee from if it was in their power so to do, when the time will come that they will have to continue serving the one they had served here, through the ceaseless ages of eternity. Can we not, brethren and sisters, form new resolutions, henceforth to be more zealous in our christian profession, and in the morning of each day, call this subject to our mind. Pass your time of sojourning here in fear, and in the evening call to remembrance, that our journey is one day nearer the end, and that we have one day more to give an account of at the great day of judgment. May God give us grace to work out our soul's salvation while it is called to-day, that when the night of death will come, we can gladly meet it; and pass from this world of sorrow, to that world of joy, there to be with our brethren and sisters, and engage in praising God throughout the endless ages of eternity.

S. M. Smith.

Bradford, O.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the Sons of God." 1 John 3: 1.

John, that beloved disciple of Jesus, declares the singular love of God in making us His sons, and in John 1: 11, 12 we read, "that He came to His own, and His own received Him not, but as many as did receive Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on His name." Then we infer that it is by receiving Christ as our Savior, and believing in His name that we can be called His children. Do we then truly appreciate the love of God manifested towards us. When we, for a moment, consider the great and abundant provision of the Gospel calculated for our present and everlasting welfare, we must be mark to say with the Psalmist, "what is man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of Man, that thou visiteth him." When God created man, it was his design that they should be happy, and ever has been his will, for it is not His will that any should perish, but have everlasting life.—After the creation, our first parents were placed in the garden of Eden, where they could enjoy the presence of their maker, but God gave them a law or command, and told them what they should do and what they should not do, and also told them, what should follow providing they should violate the law; but we find that they transgressed that law, and consequently they were driven out of Eden, that delightful place, and was deprived of the enjoyment. Oh, what a gloomy sight! They who had everything that was desirable—they can no longer enjoy. But this is not all; there was a penalty annexed to that law. "The day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." Thus Adam and his prosterity were thrown under the power of the spiritual death. Wherefore as by one man, sin entered into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men for that all have sinned.

Much might be said upon the fall of man, and I desire to be brief, but we should bear in mind, that there was a time when there was no eye to pity, no arm to save, and eternal life was not attainable, until the time that God saw proper to restore fallen humanity. Thanks be unto the Lord, who, in his infinite mercy, hath opened a way to the Paradise of God, and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.—"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us."—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." It was not for any merit of ours, that we are so highly favored upon the side of God, but we should deeply consider what our redemption cost. After our Savior had delivered unto us His Father's will, he had sealed it with his own blood.

Dear reader, let us often look back on Calvary—there we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man &c, He who was always ready to administer to the wants of mankind, must now be nailed to the cross, there to suffer and die that we might live. "Though he was rich, yet for our sake he became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich." Let me say to you, my dear friends, who are yet out of the ark of safety, when you behold the great love of God, and what he has done for you, how do you feel? Do you not see that you are walking in forbidden paths, and that by disobeying his counsel you cannot inherit eternal life? Oh then come and take refuge in the sanctuary, under the tree of life, the ignominious cross of a bleeding Savior. Fly for safety to that city of refuge opened in his bleeding wounds. His dying merits, His perfect obedience, will then be as rivers of water in a dry place, or as the shadow of a great rock in a dreary land. Remember that you are now brought where the atoning blood of Christ will reach your case, and unless you apply it you cannot be saved. For an illustration of this matter, suppose you would fall into a great pit, and there were no possible way of escape; but after a while perhaps when all hopes of being delivered were exhausted, some kind friend would come along and offer you means whereby you could make your escape. Oh how glad you would feel, and how ready you are to take hold of those means handed down to you, but provided you would not take hold of those means calculated for your rescue, you will never be brought out, but finally perish. Just so with the means of grace. If you do not make the proper application, you have no promise of entering into the mansions of eternal joy. Would it not then be wisdom in you, to forsake the error of your way and join in with the overtures of mercy, before it is too late? Life and death is set before us in the Gospel. We can now choose or refuse, and it is appointed unto man once to die, but after that the judgment; and again, it is said that "we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, to give account for the deeds done in the body, according to that they have been, whether they have been good or bad."—When the great day of the Lord shall come, when the dead, both small and great, shall stand before the throne of His glory, then if we have faithfully trusted in Him, and make His precepts our constant care and director, then shall we be owned and defended by Him. In conclusion we would say, love God and keep His commandments, which is the whole duty of man. "Blessed is he that doeth the commandments, that he might have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city." Daniel Bock.

Miamisburg, Ohio.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Who my ancestors were, and what I know about them.

BY MOSES MILLER.

Having frequently been asked, whether I was related to such and such a Miller family, and generally would have to say, no, not to my knowledge, at least not according to flesh, and as my mother was a Kline, and many of our kindred are scattered over a number of States, it may be a great satisfaction, to some at least, to know who their ancestors were, and what they were. I will here say, that both sides being German, both names have been changed or altered. Miller, was formerly written Muiller, and Kline, which some write Cline, was formerly written Klein.

First then, my Grand-father, Geo. Miller, was born in Switzerland, if I am rightly informed, in Jan. 1722, and imigrated to America when a boy. His father's name was Michael. Of the latter I know nothing. Grandfather settled near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, Pa., and not far from the line between Lancaster and Dauphin counties. Here he became a member of the Church, and also a minister in the Church. His field of labor being principally in Dauphin county, and was the first preacher in the Big Swatara Church. From what I have learned from others, he had many peculiarities. He would take his staff on Saturday and walk fifteen miles to the place of meeting, next day after preaching return home, and that without dinner, save a piece of dry bread by the way, frequently stopping or visiting by the way; saying that if we stop but five or ten minutes the brethren can see that we have not forgotten them. In council with the Church, he would stand back so that the members should not talk after him, consequently not a great speech maker. Although he carried on farming, like many others at that time, he was also a weaver by trade, and when people brought yarn, he would hear how they wanted their work done, &c. As soon as this was said, he began to speak on the subject of religion. When some were willing and glad to hear, others said, "yes, I must go; I have not time to stay." I have also from good authority, that he had an ox stolen from him. He knew where the ox was, but lived what he preached, "If any man take away thy goods, ask them not to return them again." But his neighbors had the thief arrested and lodged in the Lancaster Jail. Being yet under the British law, he feared his neighbor would be brought to the whipping post, and pitied him very much. He also feared he might not have a bed in jail, and the weather being cold, he went to Lancaster over twenty miles to see, intending if he had none he would bring him one. He was beloved by many. One reason of this was, when he would hear anything bad about his neighbors, he would tell no one, but if he heard anything good he would tell every body. He died in September 1798, aged 76 years, and 9 months. Is buried on the farm he had lived, near the old road which leads from Hummelstown to Elizabethtown. Peace to his ashes. He left ten children behind, three sons and seven daughters. Abraham moved to Mifflin county, Pa., was a minister in the Church, and instrumental in building up the Lewistown church. Henry was my dear father, and for many years a Deacon in the Church. Died September 28th 1843. George was also a Bro. at one time, but moved to Erie county, Pa., where there were no brethren, and he joined in with the Baptists and also became a preacher of that faith. Barbara was married to Jacob Smith. Eve was married to Daniel Keefer, who was the fourth preacher in the Big Swatara Church. Elizabeth was married to Valentine Balsbaugh, fifth preacher of Big Swatara Church, who was in his ninety-seventh year when he died. He was the Grand father of C. H. Balsbaugh. This was the first preacher the writer heard. Catharine was married to George Minnich. Maria to George Fackler. Magdalene was married to Abraham Snyder. Fanny died single.

My father raised four-teen children, nine sons and five daughters, myself being the youngest, and the only one who has the solemn charge upon him to watch over the flock, yet three of my brothers are Deacons in the church.

Secondly. My mother's side.

From manuscripts in possession of my cousin and Bro. David Kline, of Stonersville, Berks county, Pa., I have learned that my great-Grandfather, Elder George Klein, was the first minister of the Church at North Kill, now Little Swatara, the Church in which our last Annual Meeting was held. He was born in Zwey-Bruicken, in Germany, on the 9th of October, A. D. 1715. He imigrated to America and settled near Annville, N. J., where he soon became acquainted with the Brethren and was baptized to their faith in 1739, by Johann Naas, who was at that time presiding Elder at that place. He was soon after chosen an assistant in the ministry. In 1750 he removed to North Kill, on the Tulpehocken, to take charge of said Church, where he was ordained in 1757, by Elders Michael Pfautz and Martin Urner. Of his family I know not much, but I do know that our deceased Bro. John Kline's, (of Va.), Grand father, was a son of this George Klein, and my mother's father was also a son of his. His name was David, and also a minister in what is now called Little Swatara Church. He had a number of children, nine I was acquainted with. Their names were David, Jacob, Abraham, Benjamin, Esther, Christiana, Catharine, Sally, and Elizabeth, the latter was my mother.

Benjamin was also a minister in the same Church that his father and Grand-father were, but moved into Big Swatara Church, where he died a few years ago. Christiana was married to Joseph Merky, who was a minister and lived and died on the farm where the last Annual Meeting was held, and where his daughter now lives. Sally was married to Lorentz Etter, who was a minister, and long a faithful servant in the Big Swatara Church.

So I have a little to glory in the flesh. One great-Grand-father, two Grand-fathers, and at least six uncles, with a number a little farther off, who ministered in Holy thing, though I be nothing. But I am well aware that it is written, "He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord," and again, "Let no man glory in men," &c.

I hope that many who may read this, not only those who are akin to those whose names are in this article, but even others, who were acquainted with some of those names, will rejoice with me and my friends for the blessed hope we can have for our ancestors, who are gone before us, and we have more inducements to meet with our friends, than if they had lived and died out of Christ, and their prayers, or some of them at least, were for us, who are now in the warfare. May we then, by God's grace, be enabled not only to meet our fathers and friends who have proved faithful, but all God's children, and with them rest from our labors, and sing the glad song of deliverance in eternal bliss. Amen.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

MASONRY.

It is wrong first, because God forbids the tie that binds the order together, and without which it could not exist. Swear not at all; neither by Heaven, for it is God's throne, nor by the Earth, for it is God's footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great king; neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black, but let your communications be yea, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."—Matt. 5: 34-37. Again hear counsel and receive instruction: "But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the Earth, neither by any other oath, but let your yea, be yea, and your nay, nay, lest ye fall into condemnation."—Jas. 5: 12.

Masonry compells men to swear oaths of the most unhallowed charater before they can become members of the society. Now our prayer to God for all such who have thus violated the laws of the Most High is, that they may repent of their gross wickedness, turn from their evil way, and be saved. Brethren let us pray for our children and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, that they be not caught and entangled in the masonic knot of destruction which the devil has so ingeniously invented.

2. Because it is unauthorized by God, and uncalled for by Christians. God established His church or kingdom upon Earth by Jesus Christ—who said "in secret have I done nothing."—which is the only body authorized by God to be united as the heart of one man, either for temporal or spiritual good. God has set deacons in the church to see after the poor, and minister unto their necessities. He has also set up His treasury from which they are to be supplyed temporally. God has sent his ministers of righteousness forth to feed the flock with the Bread of Heaven that the soul may be fitted to enjoy the presence of God in glory. Are God's plans right? Every christian soul answers yea, amen.

JOHN ZUCK.

Shady Grove, Pa.

PERPETUAL PRESENCE OF CHRIST.

A Christian should make his Savior a perpetual companion—everywhere, and on every day of the week. Christ offers to walk with him in every day's journey of life. What companionship so enlivening and purifying as his; who else can "so make our hearts burn within us by the way."

Christ's presence with believers is one of the best preventives from sin; one of the best stimulators to duty. Jesus is "made unto us sanctification" as well as redemption; that is, his is a spirit of holiness. And when we live in hourly communion with Jesus, he has a tendency to make us holy.

The sense of Christ's immediate presence has a perpetual check upon our lusts—a perpetual spur to our self-indolence. Are we provoked to cutting words or irritating retorts? One look from the gentle, all-forgiving Jesus should be enough to seal the lip and to smooth the ruffled brow. Are we ever tempted to keen bargains or overreaching in business? Selfishness says, "All is fair—others do it—it is the custom of our trade." But what will the pure and the holy Jesus say?

How will our account-books look to him when he "audits" them? And so on through all the calendar of duties and the circle of daily temptations. With my Savior beside me, how will I dare to play the coward, the cheat, the trifler, the sensualist, or the trickster.

Nowhere will Christ's presence be more cheering or sustaining than in the weariness of the sick room, or under the silent shadows of some great bereavement. "Christ comes to me in the silent watches of the night," said the bed-ridden saint, Halyburton. "He draws aside the curtains, and says, 'It is I; be of good cheer; be not afraid.' Here I lie without pain; without strength and yet strong." And when the last farewells have been spoken through the sobs of the dying hour, this neverfailing Friend will sweetly whisper, "Fear not, I am with thee. Where I am ye shall be also. Having loved my own, I love them unto the end."—Cuyler.

He that would be wise, let him take heed unto his ways.

THE INFIDEL'S SHEEP.

Away among the hills of Northern New England, there were two infidel neighbors, who had lived to man's estate, sinning and blaspheming against God.

One of them heard the Gospel message, and hearing, believed unto eternal life.

A short time afterwards the converted man went to the house of his infidel neighbor, and said to him:

"I have come to talk with you. I have been converted."

"Yes, I heard that you had been down there and gone forward for prayers," said the skeptic with a sneer, "and I was surprised, for I had thought you were about as sensible a man as there was in town."

"Well," said the Christian, "I have got a duty to do to you, and I want you to stop talking, and hear me. I haven't slept much for two nights for thinking of it. I have got four sheep in my flock that belong to you. They came into my flock six years ago, and I knew they had your mark on them, and I took them and marked them with my mark; and you inquired all around and could not hear anything of them. But they are in my field, with the increase of them. And now I want to settle this matter. I have laid awake nights and groaned over it; I have come to get rid of it. And now I am at your option. I will do just what you say. If it is a few years in State's Prison, I will suffer that. If it is money or property you want, say the word. I have a good farm and money at interest, and you can have all you ask. I want to settle this matter up, and get rid of it."

The infidel was amazed. He began to tremble.

"If you have got them sheep you are welcome to them, I don't want anything of you, if you will only go away; a man who will come to see me as you have: something must have got a hold of you that I don't understand. You may keep the sheep, if you will only go away."

"No," said the Christian, I must settle this matter up, and pay for the sheep; I shall not be satisfied without. And you must tell me how much."

"Well," said the skeptic, "if you must pay for them, you may give me what the sheep were worth when they got into your field, and pay me six per cent. interest on the amount, and go off and let me alone."

The man counted out the value of the sheep, and the interest on the amount, and laid it down, and then doubled the dose, and laid as much more down beside it, and went his way, leaving a load on his neighbor's heart, almost as heavy as he himself had borne. The full results of that scene is only known to God. One thing is certain, the infidel was seen to frequent the house of prayer, and we may be sure that he afterwards believed there was some power in the Gospel, and that all Christians were not hypocrites.—The Christian.

Selected by H. EMMERT.

THOUGHTS.

If there's any sunshine
Let your spirit find it;
Let the by-gone darkness
Go and never mind it;
If your path has flowers,
Gather them to-day,
Let the winds to-morrow
Give them to decay.

Why should you go drooping,
When the birds are merry,
Plucking every thorn,
Leaving every berry;
Looking down forever,
In the dark before you,
When the stars and angels
Sing forever o'er you.

Time is but a river,
Eternity, ward driven,
Every wave doth bear the good
Nearer to their haven;
Not a dew-drop will be lost
From creation ever;
Purified, 'twill float at last
In life's peaceful river.

Fearing, loathing naught but sin,
Gather all life's honey,
All the flowers that cluster thick,
By the streamlets sunny;
Not in vain the holy soul
Calleth at heavens portal,
All the lovely things of earth
There will be immortal.

Adaline E.

(Selected by B. H. Lehman.)

GOD.

O THOU ETERNAL ONE! whose presence bright
All space doth occupy—all motion guide:
Unchanged through Time's all-devastating flight;
Thou ONLY GOD! There is no God beside.—
Being above all beings! Mighty One!
Whom none can comprehend, and none explore;
Who fill'st existence with Thyself alone,
Embracing all—supporting—ruling o'er;—
Being whom we call God,—and know no more!

In its sublime research, Philosophy
May measure out the ocean deep,—may count
The sands, or rays of sun,—but God! for Thee
There is no weight or measure; none can mount
Up to Thy mysteries. Reason's brightest spark,
Though kindled by Thy light, in vain would try
To trace Thy counsels, infinite and dark:
And thought is lost ere thought can soar so high,
Even like past moments in eternity.

Thou from primeval nothingness didst call
First chaos, then existence;—Lord, on Thee
Eternity had its foundation;—all
Sprung forth from Thee—of light, joy, harmony,
Sole origin,—all life,—all beauty, Thine,
Thy word created all, and doth create;—
Thy splendor fills all space with rays divine.
Thou art, and wast, and shalt be glorious! great!
Life-giving, life-sustaining Potentate!

Thy chains the unmeasured Universe surround:
Upheld by Thee, by Thee inspired with breath!
Thou the beginning with the end hast bound,
And beautifully mingled life and death!
As sparks mount upward from the fiery blaze,
So suns are born, so worlds spring forth from Thee:
And, as the spangles, in the sunny rays,
Shine round the silvery snow, the pageantry
Of Heavens bright army glitters in Thy praise.

A million torches, lighted by Thy hand,
Wander unwearied through the blue abyss.
They own Thy power, accomplish thy command,
All gay with life, all eloquent with bliss.
What shall we call them? Piles of crystal light?
A glorious company of golden streams?
Lamps of celestial ether burning bright?
Suns lighting systems with their joyous beams?
But thou to these art as the day to night.

Yes! as a drop of water in the sea,
All this magnificence in Thee is lost:—
What are ten thousand worlds compared to Thee?
And what am I, then? Heaven's unnumbered host,
Though multiplied by myriads, and arrayed
In all the glory of sublimest thought,
Is but an atom in the balance weighed Against Thy greatness,—is a cipher brought Against Infinity! What am I, then?—Naught!

Naught! but the effluence of Thy light divine,
Pervading worlds, hath reached my bosom, too:
Yes! in my spirit doth Thy Spirit shine,
As shines the sunbeam in a drop of dew.
Naught! but I live, and on hope's pinions fly,
Eager toward Thy presence; for in Thee
I live, and breathe, and dwell; aspiring high,
Even to the throne of Thy Divinity.
I am, O God! and surely Thou must be!

Thou art! directing, guiding all, Thou art!
Direct my understanding then to Thee;
Control my spirit, guide my wandering heart;
Though but an atom 'midst immensity,
Still I am something, fashioned by Thy hand!
I hold a middle rank 'twixt heaven and earth,
On the last verge of mortal being stand,
Close to the realms where angels have their birth,
Just on the boundaries of the spirit-land!

The chain of being is complete in me;
In me is matter's last gradation lost,
And the next step is spirit—Deity!
I can command the lightning, and am dust!
A monarch, and a slave; a worm, a god!
Whence came I here, and how? so marvelously
Constructed and conceived? Unknown! This clod
Lives surely through some higher energy;
For from itself alone it could not be.

Creator! Yes! Thy wisdom and Thy word
Created me! Thou source of life and good!
Thou Spirit of my spirit, and my Lord!
Thy light, thy love, in their bright plenitude
Filled me with an immortal soul, to spring
Over the abyss of death, and bade it wear
The garments of eternal day, and wing
Its heavenly flight beyond this little sphere,
Even to its source—to Thee—its Author there.

O thought ineffable! O vision blest!
Though worthless our conceptions all of Thee,
Yet shall Thy shadowed image fill our breast,
And waft its homage to thy Deity.
God! thus alone my lowly thoughts can soar:
Thus seek Thy presence—Being wise and good;
'Midst Thy vast works, admire, obey, adore;
And when the tongue is eloquent no more,
The soul shall speak in tears of gratitude.

Youth's Department.

RIGHT AND WRONG.

As this is our samp'e copy for 1872, we have been, all week, trying to get a few leisure moments to have a small talk with our young readers, but so far, we have not succeeded. The PILGRIM family has been unusually large this week, as a number of pilgrims have been sojourning with us, and you know when pilgrims get together there is always a feast of good things, we don't mean, in the shape of pies, cakes and the dainties of life, but a feast from our Master's table, such as is manna to the soul, and there are none perhaps, that enjoy such seasons better than ourselves.

To-day brother D. F. Good was with us, and we had a long and pleasant talk about our young friends, their different characters and dispositions, and the blessed condition in which they are born into the world, and the pleasant surroundings of many, having kind and christian fathers and mothers to care for them —direct their little feet in the paths of peace, and pray for them that they may be preserved from the evil of the world, and brought into the green pastures of the Lord.

We had much to say, but it would take a long time to write it all out, and take more space than we would be willing to devote to that purpose, but we will tell you one thing he said, and then you can think about it. It was this: "It is just as easy to do good as it is to do wrong." Now, what do you think of it? If this is so, is it not very foolish for so many little boys and girls to do so much wrong? If it is as easy to do good as it is to do wrong, it seems to us that you should all do right. Suppose you try it. The next time you are tempted to do a wrong act, instead of doing it, do right by letting the wrong alone, and see if it is not just as easy. We sometimes see boys, and occasionally, naughty little girls too, get angry and bite, scratch and strike each other. Now it would certainly be much easier, not to bite, scratch and strike, to do all this requires an effort and often causes much pain, both of mind and body, but to do good requires no effort or action and causes no pain.

We believe after all, brother Good is about right. Do you not think so? But is it natural to do so? We shall now answer this question directly, but may it not be, that we learn all the bad we do by the example of others? If little boys and girls would never see any persons doing bad acts, such as drinking, smoking, chewing, swearing, lying, stealing and fighting, do you suppose they would ever think of doing such things? It is difficult to know exactly what they would do, but the great probability is, that we would have much better boys and girls than we now have.—Notwithstanding many of the evil traits of character manifested in our young people are copied from older ones, yet this fact does not justify the evil. Our young, have also some very beautiful and noble patterns to copy from, and we see and hear of many of our young friends who, like a young Samuel, early dedicate themselves to the Lord and walk in the paths of peace. Our brother was just telling us of a little girl in Virginia with whom he became acquainted. He says she was only ten years of age and had already taken the cross of Jesus upon her, and was so firm and steadfast in the faith, that he thought nothing could move her from the sacred obligations which she had taken. Here is a copy for our young readers. Do not think of serving the devil until you are eighteen or twenty and then turn to the Lord, as thousands and millions have died before arriving at that age, and God demands your service NOW, "Son give me thy heart, daughter give me thy heart," is the call of God, and if you refuse you sin, and God is angry with the sinner every day. May we not hope that our young readers will try whether it is not just as easy to do good as it is to do wrong? Try it boys—try it girls, and Jesus will help you.

——HOLD ON.—Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to swear, lie, or speak harshly, or use an improper word.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to strike, pinch, or steal, or do any improper act.

Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited or imposed upon, or others angry about you.

Hold on to your heart when evil associates seek your company, and invite you to join in their mirth and revelry.

Hold on to your name at all times for it is of more value to you than gold, high places or fashionable attire.

Hold on to the truth, for it will serve you well, and do you good throughout eternity.

Hold on to your virtue—it is above all price to you in all times and places.

Hold on to your character, for it is, and ever will be your best wealth.

He who has no opinion of his own, but depends upon the opinion and taste of others, is a slave.

Autumn, with its balmy days are now over.

Correspondence.

TO COMMITTEE OF ARRANGMENTS.

DOUBLE PIPE CREEK, MD., }
November 9th, 1871. }

To E. L. Yoder, one of the Committee of arrangements for holding A. M. in 1872.

Dear brother. Yours of October 7th, (informing me that the brethren of your District expect to hold next A. M., and that you are one of the committee of arrangements for holding said meeting, and that it is the wish and desire of your brethren that the arrangements should be complete, and that the brethren with yourself on said committee are all ignorant of your duties, &c., and so by the advice of some of them you write to me for information &c.) came to hand in due time. But being from home on ministerial duties, it could not be answered sooner.

I am glad to hear that your brethren contemplate having the arrangements complete. I however, am not the proper person to instruct how to develop and execute them, never having served in that capacity, I am inexperienced myself. My knowledge is obtained only by observation, and from that would conclude that the boarding or eating arrangements for last few years, has been as near complete as need be, and if you need any instructions to aid you in making yours as complete as others were, you no doubt can obtain it by addressing any of the brethren who served on these committees of arrangements.

I will however, offer a few suggestions, to aid you in correcting what I consider a grevious imperfection of the arrangements for holding Annual Meetings.

First. The sleeping arrangements for the brethren serving on the Standing Committee are not only incomplete, but often wretchedly bad. So much so that the opinion is entertained that our bro. Elder Peck, in a night of exposure, laid the foundation for the disease which cost him his life.

There are few, if any brethren living, who attended more Annual Meetings, and served on Standing Committees oftener than I have, hence I know whereof I speak. As I will, perhaps not attend many more, I hesitate not to say what I do, for the good others.

I will not describe to you the general sleeping arrangements made for brethren serving on the Standing Committee, who, as you have undoubtedly observed, are closely confined to labor all day, and generally, 'til midnight. Many of these, as you know, are aged, and then to stow them away the few remaining hours of night as they generally are, is an outrage on age, to say the least of it. This is not because the brethren holding A. M. are poor and have no beds fit for a brother to sleep in. If that were the case, there would be no reason to complain. The reason is, both men and women, and some even not members, who have nothing to do at A. M. but to see, hear, eat and sleep, take possession of the brother's house, occupy all the beds in the rooms, and when the committee adjourns at midnight, they are left to occupy what I will not describe to you, for their sleeping apartments.

Here, dear brethren, you have much room for improvement, and as you say it is the wish of your brethren to make your arrangements complete. I hope you will reform this part of the general arrangements. I suggest no plan; your own prudence and knowledge of what sleeping departments for old brethren ought to be, will suggest one.

Secondly. A grievous error in the arrangements for holding A. M. in these times of Railroad traveling, is to select the place for holding the meeting so far from the line of Railroads. I am told that the tax thus imposed upon those going to last A. M. by rail, amounted to $1800. This was an imposition upon the brethren by a bad arrangement in the selection of the place of holding the meeting so far from the Railroad. I hope your brethren will learn to improve on this error.

You will please excuse my apparent neglect, in not replying sooner. Circumstances as above stated, rendered it impossible. I hope God, in whose cause we serve, will by His Holy Spirit aid you, and instruct the brethren holding next A. M. to His honor and to the good of the Brotherhood.

Through the grace of God I have been enabled to perform my part of the "Feet Washing" Mission, that the last A. M. imposed upon me. I have made a tolerably thorough search, and am now ready to write out my report, to be submitted to next A. M. In love, farewell.

D. P. SAYLER.

Dear Pilgrim: We think it might be interesting to some of the readers of the PILGRIM, at least, to have a brief sketch of our Lovefeast at Duncansville, held on Thursday and Friday Oct. 26th and 27th. Amid the rainy season for several days, and even the heavy clouds on Thursday, did not prevent a goodly number of God's people from assembling at His house of worship. The ministerial brethren present were, Joseph R. and George Hanawalt of McVeytown, Peter Hollowbush of Pottstown, J. B. Garver of Aughwick Congregation, J. P. Hetric of Red Bank, Joseph Snowberger of Clover Creek. Also G. Myers, Joseph B. and J. A. Sell. The subject of the holy ordinances of God's house was fully and clearly demonstrated by the brethren to the minds of those who were present for edification. And those were verily present, who were not witnesses at such an occasion previous to this meeting. Here, dear brethren and sisters we should be very careful to let our light so shine, that we may prove to the world that we are "followers of God as dear children," fully obeying the holy ordinances of His house. The ordinance of Feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and holy Communion were celebrated by a goodly number of God's children. Quite a number of brethren and sisters from a distance were present at the table. On Friday morn. at an early hour, bro. Hetrie bade us farewell, and journeyed homeward, having important business to attend to, consequently could not remain with us to the close of the meeting. Bro. J. Hanawalt and father took a journey of two miles to visit my sick uncle, my father's brother, who has been a great sufferer for about two months. Disease dropsy. But he has now the great consolation that he can lean upon the mighty arm of Jesus, for on Sept. 29th, amid his great suffering, he was buried beneath the waves of the stream near by his house, and arose to live a life of righteousness. Many thought he could not possibly live to have the ordinance of baptism performed, but God supports those who put their trust in Him. Shortly after, a Love-feast was held at his house, that he might follow God in His appointed way. At nine A. M. the congregation again assembled for divine services. The twelfth chapter of Rom. was read by G. Hanawalt, and addresses by the brethren from the words, "Let love be without dissimulation." Bro. Hollowbush being the last that spoke upon the subject, very touchingly admonished the brethren and sisters if he should never again be permitted to meet with them, that they would henceforth be more firmly united by the strong ties of Christian love. Dear brethren and sisters, I greatly fear that some of us, at least, too often let slip this all abounding love, which should dwell within the breast of every one professing to be a follower of the holy child Jesus. Let us then banish from our minds and hearts all the envy, malice, ill-will and hypocrisy, and dwell together in unity. Dear brethren, God surely refuses to smile upon us, if we neglect to have that love abounding in our hearts that is required of us by our blessed Lord and Master. "As I have loved you, ye also ought to love one another." After service on Friday, one precious soul bowed at the foot of the cross, and was received into the fold of Jesus by being buried with Him in baptism. God still continues to call precious souls to unite with His little flock. O, that many more would give heed to His timely warning. Let us then not neglect to feed these "babes in Christ, with the sincere milk of the Word," that they may feast thereon and grow. The time of parting came, and how sad were we to part with the dear friends with whom we formed acquaintance, and with those we had been acquainted. If we no more shall meet with these dear friends, let us, as a little flock, dwell in love and unity here below, that when we bid adieu to this vain world, that we may be received into glory, to dwell with all the Redeemed and Sanctified, at God's right hand, is my prayer.

Your sister in Christ.

EMILY R. STIFFLER.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

BATAVIA, IOWA, }
Nov. 2nd, 1871. }

Dear Pilgrim Family:—I have for some time past thought of penning a few lines for the PILGRIM readers, not that I think to exhibit any wonders, or an excellency of speech or anything that would cause one soul to stumble and fall. I am imperfect, and stand open for correction wherein I do wrong. As it is a great pleasure to hear from other parts of the Brotherhood, so may it be also to others to hear from us in this part of God's moral vineyard.—We are still trying to do something in the sight of God for ourselves, and those around us, by declaring the will of our creator through Jesus Christ our Lord.

We thank God for past blessings and also aim for those to come. He has favored us much by aiding us in getting our long standing trouble settled. We have a reason to look forward and take courage, not only for this, but we are gathering souls for our hire. We have again our old brother Peter Lutz for our watchman or co-laborer in God's vineyard, and others that have come in the kingdom from among them, by the door Christ Jesus. Pray for us brethren, that we may stand fast immovable, always abounding in the love of God, going on to perfection, showing to those around us, that we have a crown in view that fadeth not away eternally in the heavens.

Our Love-feast in now past, at which we had indeed a feast of love. When we commune with so many of of our old and beloved brethren and sisters, that have stood firm in the army of our Lord, being the ground and pillar of the truth, through whom we have learned to know the Lord, and our souls are made glad, and we still feel the need of their labors to keep us in remembrance of the one thing needful. But we see them go one by one, the ways of the earth, leaving us to fill their place. Are we safe to have these treasures entrusted to us? Should be our meditation. If not, why not qualify ourselves for the important duty. God has entrusted in the hearts of men to distribute to their fellows, so they might become heirs of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. In love this is written, do as seemeth good to thee.

JACOB H. FISHEL.

Dear Brethren:—I perceive from the PILGRIM dated Nov. 7th, 1871, that you have published a communication, from P. S. Myers, who with hundreds of others are not satisfied with the manner of holding our Annual Meeting, and then gives his views how they should be held.

I rejoice that the subject has been, or is about to be investigated; light is what we want. We should not wait until the Annual Meeting is in session, and then have a plan sprung upon us on a sudden—though it be prepared by a committee before hand. The plan we are now acting upon is very defective.

Brother P. S. Myers in the closing of his communication says "in our next we propose to investigate the different ideas as presented for holding our Annual Meetings, and then submit the whole to the indulgent reader, hoping that it may call forth the expression of others who are interested in this important subject."

To which I would now simply say, do not yet commence to investigate, wait until you have the views of other brethren upon the subject.

You would have had my views long ago, had not the editor of one of our publications seen fit in his discretion, to withhold it from publication. On my return from our last Annual Meeting, in the cars, the subject was canvassed, and I remarked as soon as I returned, I would prepare my plan with some improvements which I offered at the Conference at the Antietam church, near Waynesburg in 1866 (part of which the Committee there publicly assured me, had been accepted,) and have it published in our periodicals—the request was made by several brethren, that it appear first in the papers to which they were subscribers, to which I consented, but as already remarked, it has not yet come to light, for reasons, I suppose, satisfactory to the editor. But the reason for refusing to return my manuscript was not satisfactory to me, had it been returned, I would have offered it to the PILGRIM or Visitor perhaps with better success—I kept no copy, and hence if I were to venture upon the task of giving the church a duplicate, it, peradventure, would be a failure, from the fact it would perhaps not be what it purported to be, a duplicate, hence I will have to await, a change of purpose of said editor, respecting to the matter, or though he may not change his opinion as to the propriety of its publication, yet perhaps he might defer to the request of some of his subscribers, for its publication, if it should appear, I expect that you will copy it, as also the Visitor. I am not solicitous, because I think it is a plan superior to any that may be submitted, but I think (with all due deference to the Annual Meeting of 1866) that in many respects it will meet the wants of the church more fully than our present arrangement.

Our Congregation which has its centre at Brownsville, Washington county, Md., is increasing in numbers slowly—and I trust also in interest, for the Redeemer's Kingdom. We have added some 9 or 10 members during the past Summer, and there is a probability of adding still some more. Our meetings are well attended, and considerable interest is manifested by those not already with us in Christian fellowship. We have as yet, made no continued effort among our people, not that we are averse to that plan of operation. Our meetings are held every two weeks at Brownsville, next Sunday, November 12th being our regular day. Would be pleased to have any of our brethren to meet with us at any time they can make it convenient. The place is easy of access—the Railroad trains pass from Hagerstown three times a day each way.

The writer, during the latter part of September, attended several Love-feast meetings, in Rockingham county, Va. The first at Beaver Creek Meeting House, where the largest Communion meeting was held that he ever witnessed—near 500 were seated at the tables. The house is quite large. This church is presided over by Bro. John Wine. He has a number of fellow laborers, among whom are George Wine, and Jacob Thomas, brother to Daniel Thomas, (now deceased) generally known by the Brethren.

The writer also attended Bro. Solomon Garber's Lovefeast. Though not so large as the first, yet was also quite large. In the interval attended a funeral and took part in the services. The deceased was a sister Miller, quite aged—was the daughter of old Bro. John Flory, who, during his life was regarded by the Brotherhood, as one of the pillars of the Church; who with the Garbers, Browns, Bowmans, and Wines and Millers, used to make the annual trips through Harper's Ferry, Shepherdstown, Eastward to Pa.

Here also the writer renewed his acquaintance with the younger Flory, who was led away by the fanaticism of the man who made that very humiliating confession, and promised better behaviour in the future, and yet failed to do so. I mean "Thurman."

I was very hospitably entertained by Joseph Bowman, who is classed with the "Thurmanites," the last night I was in that section of country, and what I learned from the younger Flory and others, they will all come back to the church, if not too rigidly dealt with. May the Lord open a way for their return is my prayer, for I think they wish it, and I was assured by at least one young man, that a reconciliation would be the means of his union with the church.

I also attended Bro. D. P. Sayler's Lovefeast. The weather was very unfavorable, yet the meeting was interesting. Also at Beaver Dams, weather fine and a large meeting, both of members and others.

EMANUEL SLIFER.

Dear Pilgrim: On the 27th of October, we in company with Elder Christian Keefer, (of the Welch Run arm, Md.) George Mourer, J. F. Oller, and other ministering and lay members, repaired to the western portion of Welch Run arm, known as Little Cove, to have a Communion or Lovefeast. Many of our dear brethren and sisters remember, last winter we had a number of meetings with the brethren in this Cove. The result of which was an increase of from 18 to 27, and this time the number is about 40. Our dear brethren in the fervent zeal to prosecute the holy cause of Jesus, and also being much encouraged by the increase of numbers, undertook and succeeded in building a very commodious house for meeting, and communion purposes. To this house we repaired as above stated, to hold the first Communion, or for the first time, for the brethren to commemorate the sufferings, and death of the Lord Jesus, in the valley. This fact seemed to give the people a great anxiety to see and hear. The meeting commenced at 2 o'clock, P. M. The congregation was large for the place, and the brethren conducted the services with zeal, interest and power. I think we are safe in saying, that the meeting was a pleasant one. The brethren and sisters enjoyed a feast to the soul, and the people, (some at least) realized more than they expected. The meeting continued 'til noon on Sabbath. During the meeting four were added to the church, and at the close a number made application for baptism, and we fondly hope that many others may not find peace to a troubled conscience, until they find it in the bleeding wounds of a crucified Redeemer. Eighty-two devoted brethren and sisters surrounded the tables, as Communicants, which to the eager spectators, was a sight (in connection with the preached Word,) that will long be remembered, and trust leave with them a soul convert ing influence.

The Church thought it good to have an election for two deacons, at this time and place, which resulted in the choice of three, which three, we trust, are brethren such as the Apostle designates, full of the Holy Ghost. The election resulted in the choice of brethren Jacob Myers, Jacob Weller, and Jacob Boby, whose ability and zeal with that of their worthy wives, our sisters, will fully quality them for the responsible position to which the Lord has called them through the Church.

D. F. GOOD.

THE BED OF AFFLICTION.

Dear Pilgrim:—If it were not for the many comforts and consolations, that the Christian receives through the Word of God, we would often sink beneath the rod of affliction. Knowing this by our own experience, we feel like talking upon this subject.

While we live in this world of trouble, we meet with many afflictions of various kinds, but none so afflicting to the heart, as death, which is often sent upon our dear family circles. Having been called upon to part with our dear father a short time ago, we feel that earth can give us nothing to compare with a father's love. His seat is vacant, and none to fill it. We shall hear no more, the kind admonitions of that loving voice that we once heard in the family circle,—all is hushed in death. We do not mourn as those that have no hope. We have the bright hope that he has landed on the blissful shores of eternal deliverance. He died as a Christian can die, rejoicing in the Savior. His last request was to sing, "Alas and did my Savior bleed." He had lived out his threescore years with us, and now is gone from earth to Heaven. We have the consolation of the Apostle to cheer us in all our afflictions; "Knowing that our light afflictions which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." They are but for a moment, compared to eternity. Then dear mother, sisters and brothers, let us not be discouraged, though afflictions, and troubles and trials surround us, let us press onward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We have no abiding city here, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Let us prove faithful, so when we come to die, we may be prepared to meet our sainted father in Heaven.

He sleeps, his pilgrimage is o'er,
His earthly race at last is run—
His soul mounts to that blissful shore,
A life of glory is begun.

No more shall sorrow shade his brow
A long eternity he'll spend.
Amid that bright and joyous throng,
Where bliss shall never know an end.

CHARLOTTE I. MASTERS.

Berens Eye, W. Va.

Dear Brethren: Our Communion Meeting in Andrew Co., Mo. was held according to arrangement. We had quite a refreshing time, a very good turn out of members, and a goodly number of spectators. The ministering brethren from a distance were, A. J. Correll, D. D. Sell, Elders, and D. Gibson and —— Blocker, accompanied by other brethren and sisters; and though the meeting is now over, but the memory is still bright and fresh in our minds. We trust that deep and lasting impressions have been made, and that the seed sown will ere long spring forth, ripen into full ears for our Masters grainery. Many tears were seen to flow from the eyes of the almost converted sinner; while the earnest appeals of the brethren were brought to bear upon their hearts. Upon the whole we had a good meeting, both saint and sinner we trust were benefitted. May God bless the labors of the brethren, may souls be their hire, and eternal life their reward. We have learned since the meeting, that some of those who were in attendance are now new born souls in the Church of Christ. May many more see the advantage of accepting salvation while it may yet be found.

In conclusion, we will touch upon something that has made me feel sorry, and not only myself, but all of the members here, who have seen and heard of the same. It has caused many of the brethren and sisters to exclaim, in the language of the sorrow stricken Apostle in that night of the betrayal. "Is it I, is it I? If it were not for fear of wrong impressions being made upon the minds of some, we should forever hold our peace. But, dear members, how can I when the impression has been made publicly, that the church in Andrew Co., Mo. is drifting to destruction? Oh! how should the brethren in East, and elsewhere feel, to hear of one of the churches in the frontier drifting down to destruction. But, dear brethren, do not lose confidence in your Western brethren, for the brethren and sisters in Andrew Co., are contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Our ministers are young but zealous in the cause of Christ, most of the members are young, and probably not as plain as older ones should be. But brethren, we are humble. We are not too proud to wash one another's feet, or to obey any other commandments in the word of God. The disadvantage under which the brethren labor, and the circumstances in which they are placed, travel where you may, you cannot find a more orderly set of members than you will find here in Mo. These are facts just as they be, and where brother Correll saw or found anything that caused him to exclaim; "My God, my God, where are we drifting to," is best known to himself. Where is the heart that will not feel the pangs of such language. We think brother Correll could have found milder language when he was here, as his membership is in this arm of the church. Probably the members are worthy of his admonition, and willing to take and receive admonition. We are willing to be subject one to another when a lawful course is taken. The apostle Paul says; "Rebuke, exhort in all longsuffering and doctrine." Is this done in every case? we fear it is not. We always try and do for the brethren when they visit us the best we can. We invite brethren to visit us and preach for us, and to see whether they can find anything that would give rise to such thoughts as published in PILGRIM, written by brother A. J. Correll, and if such a thing should be, we hope a satisfactory explanation will be given, hoping all is well, and all things work together for good to those who love God. SAMUEL C. BASHOR.

Dear Bros. Brumbaugh: Not long since, I was asked by one of our Elders why I did not write for the PILGRIM—my reply was, I have not got time. Which under existing circumstances is so; for after duty to myself, my family, and the Church, I have no time left.—And if I write for one of our Periodicals, and not for the rest, it would not seem altogether brotherly in me to do so; more especially as our Editors have all been so kind, as to send me their respective Periodicals, and for which I in return have been soliciting and forwarding subscriptions to the Visitor, the Companion, and the PILGRIM. I also receive the Vindicator and the Children's Paper. These like the Pious Youth, are still in their infancy, and under other circumstances might be productive of doing much good, i. e. In case our Editors would consent to the idea of consolidation, then those who now write for those junior papers, could each have a column or so, in the consolidated paper, consequently their productions would be more generally read, and read wherever the senior periodicals are read. This arrangement would be far more convenient, and more expedient, as the reading matter could be furnished at less expense and less labor. I favor the idea of publishing a Magazine, hence, I think the Visitor in its present form should be sustained, while all our other Periodicals be consolidated into one suitably sized Folio.

The idea (you have heretofore suggested), of publishing the PILGRIM, in Folio form, I think a very good arrangement, as it will be more convenient for the printer and the reader, and there can be a column or two devoted to secular news, or miscellaneous matter. I think when the PILGRIM comes with its contemplated change, you may expect to receive a few more names to your subscription list from this locality. More anon.

PHILIP BOYLE.

New Windsor, Md.

MISSIONARY.

The following we insert by request, but do not wish to be held responsible for the contents, as we do not understand the movement. We have known bro. D. M. Holsinger from our boyhood, and would not take him to be an instigator of an unlawful measures. It is true, the Mid D. C. of Pa., sent him to Michigan, but why he is not fulfilling his mission, we are not fully informed. As a large number of our readers are interested in the result of this mission, we would be pleased to have bro. Holsinger give us a report for the satisfaction of our readers.—EDITOR.

Dear Brethren:—Since the missionary cause has of late been much talked about, and some little done in that direction, for which we feel to thank God, and since the Middle District of Pa., has sent one to Mich. as we understand, we thought we would ask that meeting what the object was in sending D. M. Holsinger? Was it to preach in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, or Michigan? Was it to preach, or try and have all the brethren see things as he sees them, in those places he may see proper to visit? We understand that he was sent to preach in Michigan. He told us a few days ago that he had been out about five months, and had been to Michigan about five weeks. He is now in Indiana, trying to set things in order as he sees them. A few days ago, he in company with others, met at a private house and came to the conclusion that they would call a meeting of the Preachers and Deacons of the Northern District of Indiana. Not the Laiety, but the officers, and are now sending out invitations to the different Arms of the Church, calling on them to meet at, or near Goshen, on the 6th of December. This looks to us like usurping authority that God and the Church does not grant to any set of brethren, and as we have our District Meetings, we think bro. Holsinger & co. had better attend to those things for which the Church sent them. We have our District Meeting in the Spring, and we all have the privilege to go that can, both officers and laiety, brethren and sisters. Why not then and there meet, and if there is any trouble meet it? If the Middle District of Pa. has sent D. M. Holsinger for this purpose, he is filling his mission well, if not, they ought to know it, hence this notice, which I hope you will give in your next issue.

GEORGE W. CRIPE.

Editor's Department.

OUR INTRODUCTION.

In days of yore, much depended upon the preface or introduction of a book or periodical. If that was well done, the work was in a fair way for success, but those days, with their peculiarities, are among the things of the past, and every thing must now stand the scrutiny of an intelligent people. With this expectation, we send the PILGRIM in its new dress and form, forth to the Brotherhood, and all others that may appreciate its visits, with full assurance that it will receive a kind and pilgrimlike reception.

Our first reason for making the change was for convenience. In the other form it could not be read without cutting it open, and if that was done, it was also necessary to stitch it together, or it would soon be lying over the floor or table, which is no unfrequent occurrence. In the present form, this can be avoided and be read just as well, by following the pages. Our second reason for making the change is, that in the present form it will contain about one fourth more reading matter, which can be determined by measuring the blank space in the old form, and our printers think it can be determined quite as well, by the additional type and labor that it takes to put it up.

Our third and last reason is, that many of our readers have been pressing their claims for a change upon us, and we feel that they should be gratified. Among the number, are some of our old and influential brethren who have both experience and judgment, therefore we hope that if any of our dear patrons are not so favorable to it, they will be willing to give it a trial for one year at least, and if at the end of that time, it does not meet the general wishes of the Brotherhood, we will again change it to any form that may be best adapted to our wants. This number will be a fair specimen of the next year's volume, except that this is of the extra paper, ($150) which is richly worth the price asked for it, the fact is, it defies competition. Every one that has a taste for a pretty and good paper, should take this edition. The $1.25 edition will be printed on the same paper as heretofore, perhaps a little better, and of course will contain the same reading matter as the $1.50 paper. We do this simply to accommodate those who wish a better paper and are willing to pay for it, and we hope that all such will avail themselves of this opportunity and make the number as large as possible so that we may be compensated for our trouble. The good paper will commence with No. 1, 1872. All those that wish it should let us know in good time, so that they can have their whole volume of a uniform quality of paper. After seeing the number you can determine which you will prefer as the coming volume of good paper will be the same weight and quality of this, but of a pure white. The first side is already printed and our strange brethren who are now with us, express themselves as highly pleased with its appearance and think it will be the means of greatly enlarging our circulation, we hope so as it will cost us considerable extra labor. We do not intend to say that it is cheaper or better than our other periodicals, as such comparisons are low and beggarly. All we intend to say is, that we intend to make it the very best PILGRIM we can, and richly worth the price asked for it, as we believe all our other periodicals are.

Our labors shall be devoted to the good of the church, the building up of Zion, the encouraging of the weary pilgrim on his journey to the Celestial City and the conversion of sinners, and to you, dear brethren, we appeal for help. We can all labor for these results. Then let us have your united aid, not only in dollars and cents, but in contributing to our columns. Do not be afraid to send us your productions, we will neither expose nor censure, but all will be treated with christian courtesy and brotherly affection. Then dear brethren and sisters, may we not claim your best wishes and happy co-operation? If you have the will, you can do much for us, by introducing and speaking good words for the PILGRIM. We think that the merits of this number will recommend itself, all you will have to do, will be to let others see it, and we think that many homes will be opened to its weekly visits.

THE PILGRIM FAMILY.

The PILGRIM family, on account of our meeting now in progress, has had, this week, an unusual amount of visitors, among whom were the following ministers; D. F. Good, H. Hershberger, J. F. Oller, George Mourer, and Daniel Miller. Such visits are highly appreciated by us, and will be long remembered. Brother Good took a seat at the Sanctum Table, and below we give the result. It is a little flattering, and was it not his first, and perhaps last production at an editors table, we would feel like tabling it on that account.

OFFICE OF THE PILGRIM, November 20, 1871.

This morning, dear readers of the PILGRIM, I am privileged to enjoy, for the first time, the pleasure of the association of the PILGRIM family, and we just feel as though many of our brethren and sisters would like to enjoy a more intimate acquaintance with the PILGRIM family, but as many cannot enjoy this with us for want of opportunity, I will try to give them an idea of the family association, and its adaptation to the task of sending forth weekly, its quota and ratio of vital matter, to encourage the pilgrim upon his way to Zion. The acting Editor, H. B. B. the head of family, is a man of sanguine temperment, about thirty-five years of age, and I think well adapted for the place and position he occupies. He is the son of our worthy father and Bro. John Brumbaugh. I should have said that H. B. B. is one of the efficient ministers in the James Creek arm of the Church.

George Brumbaugh H. B. B's elder brother, who is now the Elder minister in the James Creek Church, although not directly connected with the office business, wields a considerable influence for the good of the PILGRIM, and more for the Church over which he now presides.

J. B. B. one of the publishers is a youthful brother, a little reserved in manner of address, kind, pleasant, diligent and, in short, seems just the man for the place. As an additional force for the task of editing the paper, two others are employed, whom we would judge, from the diligence and activity, in prosecuting their part of the work, are doing something, at least every week 'comes out' the PILGRIM, brim full of vital matter.

Heretofore they used a hand-press to print the sheet, which is soon to be superceded by a power press, which will enable them to print the paper in much less time. With the advantage of a largely increased subscription list, they have been induced to give us further advantages in the character of the paper, in manner and matter of which they have now laid sample of before you. Brethren and sisters, how do you like the sample copy for the coming year? If you like it, try and encourage others to take it; it may do them good, as we trust it has done the upright in heart. Our PILGRIM family promise to do the best they can for us and others in the prosecution of the sacred and holy cause, and I think they are just the men to do what they say. I am not going to say anything about the hospitality of the PILGRIM family, and our dear sister, the wife of the Editor, H. B. B. and those of the family, but one thing I do know, that if you pay them a visit, dear reader, you may get refreshed, and am sure you will not leave hungry nor thirsty.

The place of location is Markleburg, Huntingdon county, Pa., some ten or twelve miles South of Huntingdon, near the line of the H. & B. T. Railroad.

The Lord has thus far prospered us on our journey. I have been here, and labored with and for the Church a few days, and expect to continue, if the Lord will, for some days yet.

The meetings are well attended with much interest upon the part of the Church and people.

Pray for us brethren that the Word may have free course, and the people to glorify it to the praise of God.

D. F. GOOD.

Subscribe for the PILGRIM.

TO OUR PATRONS.

The PILGRIM has been making its weekly visits to your homes, and we have certainly sent it out freighted with the very best we had. Soon the year will be closed, and the time of decision has come. Shall it continue to come for the year 1872, bringing the glad news of the kingdom of Jesus to your homes and firesides?—This No. shows you what it is to be for the coming year. Don't you think you would like to have it continue to come? It don't need to cost you more than $1.25, and where is the brother or sister that cannot, by using a little economy, save that much—It may be worth much more to you than the price asked for it.—It may be the means of saving a son or a daughter from the second death. Then, close not your door against it, and it will continue to come more pilgrim-like than ever before.

PLEASE NOTICE.

According to previous announcement, we intend to send the PILGRIM to all old subscribers unless notified to stop it. This number is a fair specimen of what the next volume will be, as there will be no more of this form until No. 1 of next year—Vol. 3rd. Now we kindly ask all of our readers who do not want to take the PILGRIM for the coming year to let us know as soon as possible, we should know by the middle of December—either write to us, giving name and post office, and say "stop my paper at the end of the year," or tell the agent and he will inform us. This request is so reasonable that we hope all that wish it stopped, will attend to it at once.

OUR TERMS.

As we said last year, so we say again. Any that has not the money to spare now, but can pay for it during the year, can send us their names and the PILGRIM will be sent. We have learned to trust our brethren and feel assured that again the year is up, we will have little to lose.

Brethren, we do not believe there is one in the brotherhood, who enjoys the use of his hands and feet, but what could save $1.25 during the year, therefore we believe, if all are honest, we will not lose by this liberal offer.

TO AGENTS.

Our agents will please send us a list of all old subscribers, who do not wish to take the PILGRIM for the next year, and all the new names which can be had, which we hope will be many.

The old subscribers who continue to take it can be sent when the money is paid.

NEVER send any money without giving the name and address of those who paid it. Please remember this.

HOW TO REMIT.

All sums under $2.00 if carefully put up and addressed, at our risk.—All sums over $2.00 may be sent in P. O. Money Orders, Checks or Drafts payable to our order, or send in a Registered letter.

Every agent will please reserve at home, a complete list so that all accounts can be kept square. Thus, an agent can always know who has, and who has not paid, also correct the publishers if they make any mistake.

SPECIMEN NUMBERS.

We have issued, this week, a much larger edition than usual. Some of these we will send out to such addresses as we may think proper, and retain the others for such as may wish to work for us, and want sample copies. All those who receive this number are kindly requested to act as agent for us, or hand it to some one who will. Specimen Nos. with premiums to agents, and prospectus sent free to all on application.

CAN IT BE BOUND?

There are a few of our readers who wish to know whether the PILGRIM can be bound in this form. We answer, yes, just as well as before. The book will be larger, but those who wish to get them bound should wait until they have two volumes and have them bound together. They will thus make a pretty book for the table, and not cost us much as to have the old form bound in separate volumes.

DIED.

GARLING.—Near Upton, September 30th, 1871, MARTHA ELIZABETH GARLING, infant daughter of friend George and Sarah Garling; aged 8 months, and 17 days.

CUMP.—In Greencastle, November 4th, 1871, MINNIE ANN CUMP, daughter of friend Emanuel and sister Catharine Cump; aged 1 year, 3 months, and 22 days.

DOME.—In the same congregation, son of brother Dory and sister Sally Dome; aged 2 years, 7 months, and 21 days.

The above funeral occasion were improved by the writer GEORGE MOURER.

(Companion and Visitor please copy.)

MONEY LIST.

D. H. Bonebrake,	$5.00.
Daniel Bock,	.75.
V. Gilbaugh,	1.75.
P. S. Myers,	.35.
E. S. Miller,	4.50.
Catharine Bare,	1.00.
George Brumbaugh,	4.00.
Daniel Hays,	1.25.
Uriah Wagoner,	1.25.
Susan C. Shelby	1.25.
Mathias Neffing [illegible]	1.00
Louis Young,	1.25.
Jacob H. Fishel,	8.75.
Emanuel Bollinger,	1.25.
John Culp,	.75.
J. N. Detrick,	1.25.
Lizzie F. Miller,	1.25
Daniel Buck,	18.75.
Sadie E. Oller,	1.25.
George Mourer,	28.78.
Samuel Myers,	1.25.
Samuel N. Wine,	25.00.
Louis Young,	1.25.
George S. Rinkin,	2.00.
H. M. Sherfy,	1.00.

Religious News.

The clerical list, embracing all branches of the Lutheran Church in America, according to the forthcoming Almanac, contains, 2, 175 names, a gain of about 100 during the year.

Of the nominal Protestants of Glasgow, 130,000 attend no place of worship on the Lord's Day. The united Presbyterians are one of the strongest denominations in that city, but their gain last year was only 757, though they have fifty-two places of worship.

THE Westminster Review, in an article on the Baptists, says of Mr. Spurgeon:—"We know, on good authority, that some of his own deacons describe him as a 'Pope,' popular though he be with them, and that he at one time had thoughts of introducing the Presbyterian form of Church government among the Baptists."

THE increase in the number of missionaries in the last fifty years is more than five hundred per cent. In 1820 there were 357 Protestant missionaries from England and America, in 1870, 1,949 missionaries, with 10, 986 native preachers and assistants.

IN Germany, the Church question occupies every mind, and men earnestly wait to see how the governments will free themselves from the embarrassment to which they are subjected by the dogma of infallibilty. It appears that all the governments are determined to protect and thereby to promote the movements against the dogma. Prussia has deprived the Catholics of a great advantage in dissolving that part of the Ministerium to which Catholic affairs are exclusively referred. Bavaria has called a minister that proves rather fierce toward the Romans. And the German Reichskanzler, Bizmarck, has expressed himself so openly against Romish doings that it is plain he does not intend the Jesuits shall rule.

A DEBATE.

The following we clip from the Christian Standard. The reporter seems to think that Bro. Jewell did a vast amount of good by defending the Gospel. Undoubtedly, if he defended the Gospel, he has done a good work, but in these days of sectarian bigotry, our minds become so biased, that we sometimes think men defend the Gospel, when they only defend their own dogma or creed.

The second debate was between our people and the Dunkers. They selected Robert Miller, of Ladoga, as their man, and demanded a first class minister on our side; and that the difference between us and them should be fully discussed, we selected Bro. Jewell. They presented four propositions.

I. "Christ commanded a single act in baptism, and not three." Jewell affirmed.

II. "Foot-washing is a command of Christ, and is to be observed throughout the Gospel dispensation in the Church, as it is done by the Dunkers." Miller affirmed.

III. "The bread and wine to be taken in memory of our Lord can be taken any hour on the first day of the week, as it is done by the Disciples." Jewell affirmed.

IV. "The holy kiss is an ordinance of the New Testament, and is to be practiced throughout the Gospel dispensation as it is done by the Dunkers." Miller affirmed.

The discussion lasted five days, and Bro. Jewell did a vast amount of good in his manly and intelligent defense of the Gospel throughout the entire debate. THOS. M. BURNAN.

A COMMITTEE of the London Dialectic Society has been at work two years upon an investigation of the alleged phenomena of Spiritualism. Various experiments were made with professional mediums, and non-professional believers, and even that arch Spiritualist. Mr. Home, was made to go through with his performances for the enlightenment of the committee. With respect to the seances with Mr. Home, it was the committee's report that nothing occurred at any of them which could be resonably attributed to supernatural causes. The general report of the committee seems to be that unexplainable sounds are heard in connection with so-called spiritual manifestations, that movements of heavy bodies take place without visible agency, that these movements and sounds sometime follow a code of signals; and give coherent answers to questions, that the facts communicated are generally commonplace; and that the "manifestations" may or may not be affected by the presence of particular persons. This is all! It is a significant fact that Prof. Huxley, who was very properly invited by the committee to assist in the investigation, replied:

"I regret that I am unable to accept the invitation of the council of the Dialectical Society to cooperate with a committee for the investigation of Spiritualism, and for two reasons. In the first place, I have no time for such an inquiry, which would involve much trouble, and (unless it were unlike all inquiries of that kind I have known) much annoyance. In the second place, I take no interest in the subject. The only case of "Spiritualism" I have had the opportunity of examining into it for myself, was as gross an imposture as ever came under my notice. But supposing the phenomena to be genuine—they do not interest me. If anybody would endow me with the faculty of listening to the chatter of old women and curates in the nearest cathedral town, I should decline the privilege, having better things to do. And if the folks in the spiritual world do not talk more wisely and sensibly than their friends report them to do, I put them in the same category. The only good that I can see in a demonstration of the truth of "Spiritualism," is to furnish an additional argument against suicide. Better live a crossing sweeper, than to die and be made to talk twaddle by a "medium" hired at a guinea a seance.—Congregationalist.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for December is at hand. Among the Magazines we recieve each month, none are more carefully pursued than the Phrenological, on account of its sound views on everything relating to the times. It is progressive and reformatory, but never deals in vague and illusory schemes, like most of the so-called progressive publications. The December number contains among other good things, Judge Daily, of New York, with a fine portrait; An Old Bone of Contention; An able review of Mr. Beecher's Life of Christ; The Bridge of Motion, or recent Scientific Developments; Laura's Experience, a Strange, but True Love Story; Gen. Robert A. Cameron, the Colorado Colonist; Chicago; Chronic Catarrh, its Cause and Cure; Thought, in Sound or Motion; The Geological History of Man; The Faculty of Order and its Culture; Working at Night; The Deserted Village. Single Nos. 30 cts. $3.00 a year. A new vol. begins with the next number. S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

SERIES OF MEETINGS.

There will be a series of meetings at the Maple Grove Meeting house, 4 miles N. E. of Ashland, near bro. John Beeghly's, commencing on the eve. of the 16th of Dec., and continue one week, or longer. A general invitation is extended to all laborers in the vineyard. By order of the Church. WM. SADLER.

THE BEST BOYS' AND GIRLS' MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

DEMOREST'S YOUNG AMERICA.

Always sparkling with interesting stories, Poems, Music, Puzzles, Travels, Games, and other Pleasing Features, all PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED, and calculated to amuse, instruct, and elevate the taste of the young, and make their lives useful, and happy.

Single copies, 10 cts. post-free. Yearly, $1, or with a choice of the following beautiful and valuable premiums to each subscriber, for 50cts. extra; a fine Parlor Chromo, worth $5.00, or two interesting Juvenile Books, bound in cloth and gilt, worth $1.75 post-free; or a fine pearl-handled two-blade Pocket Knife and a pallet of best Paints, post-free; or a very powerful brass-mounted, double-clyinder, ivory-tipped, adjustable Microscope, worth $2 postage 24cts.; or a good Stereoscope with a series of views, postage 18 cts.; or an elegant Photograph Album for holding 50 pictures, postage 16cts.; and valuable premiums for clubs.—Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 838 Broadway, New York.

AFTER THE FIRE.

THE SCHOOL FESTIVAL.—Quarterly magazine, devoted to original matter, for Day School and Sunday School Exhibitions, and Public Occasions.

The October number of this popular magazine, which was destroyed by the great Chicago fire, when all ready to mail, has been reprinted, and has just reached us.—As its subscription list was burned, the Publishers request us to ask their subscribers their addresses, stating what numbers were yet due them, and to remit their subscription for next year. Let all teachers and pupils subscribe now, for the School Festival—they all need it. It costs only 50 cents a year, in advance, or 15 cents for a single number.

The Publishers were very heavy losers by the fire, but they don't propose to allow their subscribers to lose anything.

Send, by mail, to ALFRED L. SEWELL & Co., Publishers, Chicago, Ill.

INCIDENTS OF THE GREAT FIRE.—Send, by mail, fifty cents to Alfred L. Sewell, Publisher, Chicago, Ill., and receive, postpaid, a copy of his cloth-bound book of Incidents of the Great Chicago Fire.

MARRIED.

FAHRNEY—MILLER.—On the 14th ult. at the residence of the brides parents, by Elder Moses Miller, brother JOSIAH FAHRNEY of the firm of Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co., Waynesboro Pa, to sister KATIE JANE MILLER of Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa. DANL. H. FAHRNEY.

BRUMBAUGH—BOOKMILLER.—By the undersigned, Nov. 16th, brother JOHN H. BRUMBAUGH, and sister SOPHIA C. BOOKMILLER, both of Montgomery Co., Ohio. The groom formerly of Huntingdon Co., Pa. ISAAC STUDEBAKER.

CRAYTON—COATES.—At the Methodist Parsonage, Alliance, Ohio, Tuesday evening Oct. 10th 1871, by Rev. Woll, MR. ROBERT CRAYTON of Pittsburgh, Pa., to MISS. JENNIE COATS of Alliance, Stark Co., Ohio.

STAYER—CAMERER.—At the bride's parents, Thursday Eve. Nov. 16th, by G. W. Brumbaugh, MR. ——— STAYER and SARAH CAMERER all of Blair Co., Pa.

KENSINGER — METZGER.—At the bride's parents, by Eld. J. W. BRUMBAUGH, Nov. 19th, GEORGE KENSINGER and MARY METZGER, all of Blair Co., Pa.

HANN—Mc GRAW.—By S. A. More at his residence, Nov. 7th, AUSTIN C. HANN and JENNIE Mc GRAW, all of Blair Co., Pa.

DIED.

REPLOGLE—In Moulton, Appanoose Co, Iowa, Oct. 16, 1871 JEMIMA REPLOGLE daughter of bro. George B and sister Catharine Replogle, aged 17 years 2 months and 14 days. Disease Dropsy.

She was afflicted for a long time and died very suddenly. She was an obedient child to her parents and kind and affectionate to her little brothers and sisters. At the close of her life she frequently spoke of her future happiness and love to Jesus. Funeral services in the M. E. Church in the town of Moulton, by bro. Wm. Strickler from St. John 5: 25, 26.

[Companion and Visitor please copy.]

HESS—Near Marion, Franklin Co., Pa. Nov. 2nd, friend ABRAHAM HESS, aged 59 years, 2 months, and 29 days.

The subject of the above notice, though well stricken in years, was not a member of the body of Christ. Like many others, he waited for a more favorable opportunity, or thought there was still time; but suddenly the messenger death claimed him a victim. On the fourth inst. his mortal remains were conveyed to the Antietam Church burying ground, followed by a large concourse of friends. He left behind a sorrow stricken and bereaved wife, a sister in the Church, besides a loving and interesting family of sons and daughters, most of whom are in the fold of Jesus and who together we trust, in Christ, are able to bear their affliction—"Not to sorrow as others that have no hope." D. F. GOOD.

DESHONG—In the Maple Grove congregation Nov. 4th Bro. JOHN V. DESHONG, aged 69 years, 7 months, and 21 days. He took his bed on the 31st of October and after a short sickness died. He left an aged companion and a worthy sister and family to mourn his departure. Funeral services by the Brethren and writer from Isaiah 38: 19 to a large and attentive Congregation.

Also in the same congregation CORA ALICE BEEGHLY, aged 2 years 3 months and 18 days. Funeral services by A. M. DICKEY and the writer from the language of the Savior, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the the Kingdom Heaven."

WM. SADLER.

BOWMAN—In the Sandy Church, Stark Co., Ohio, on the 27th of September 1871, our beloved brother MICHAEL BOWMON, aged 85 years, 9 months and 11 days. He leaves a companion, a sister in the church, and many friends and connections to mourn their loss. Brother Bowman was a faithful member of the Church for upwards of 50 years. Shortly before he died he called the Elders of the church and was anointed. On the 29th his remains were followed to their last resting-place by a large number of relatives and friends.

Funeral occasion improved by brother David Byers, from 2nd Timothy 4: 7, 8.

The text was selected by our aged brother himself as his funeral text; also, the 598 hymn. S. B. STUCKEY.

THE PILGRIM,

Edited and Published by Brumbaugh Bros.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa.

Mikveh Yisrael.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JANUARY 2, 1872. NO 1

ESSAYS.

THE SCRIBES AND PHARISEES SIT IN MOSES' SEAT.

"But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their Phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, * * * for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves. * * * Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell." Matt. 23: 5, 15, 33.

This charge, though severe, is nevertheless the language of Jesus, who spake as man never spake, and being addressed to man it demands our serious considerations, as it is our privilege to know whether it applies to us or to some other men. The charge being preferred against the Scribes and Pharisees, we note their character and occupation to know who, and what they were. "In Scripture, and in Jewish history, a Scribe was a clerk or secretary to the king. Seraiah was scribe to King David (2 Sam. 8.) An officer who enrolled or kept the rolls of the money, and called over the names and recorded them, (2 Kings 25.) (2 Chron. 26.) A writer and a doctor of the law; a man of learning,—one skilled in the law; one who read and explained the law to the people, (Ezra 7.) A Pharisee was one of a sect among the Jews, whose religion consisted in a strict observance of rites and ceremonies, and of the traditions of the elders, and whose pretended holiness led them to separate themselves as a sect, considering themselves more righteous than other Jews." (Webster.) The Pharisees were the most considerable sect among the Jews, the Scribes and all the learned men of the law were of their party; and consequently they drew after them the bulk of the people, and the chief priest being in sympathy with them, made them a formidable, and a dangerous sect.

As to their religious opinions, they believed in the existence of a God, they received the five books of Moses and the writings of the prophets.—They believe in a future state of existence, in the resurrection of the soul and body, in rewards and punishments &c. Their faith in the resurrection, however was confused, having received the Pythagorean doctrine of transmigration of souls. The notoriously wicked, they, however, consigned at their death immediately to hell.

These are the characters, Jesus says "sit in Moses' seat." That is, Moses being a teacher, and they assuming the functions of teachers, are said to sit in Moses seat. The sole object with them was, their own aggrandizement, and to effect it, they made broad their phylacteries, and enlarged the borders of their garments. In the law, God "spake unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the border a ribbon of blue." Num. 15: 38.) "But thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates." (Deut. 6; 8, 9, and 22; 2.) The design was that they should remember the law, and not to forget the duty it enjoined upon them, to teach it to their children, and childrens' children, and to talk of them when they came in and went out, and when they sat down, and when they rose up &c. In these fringes, or ribbons they wrote some sentences of the law to aid their memory of it. These are now called phylacteries.

Among the Jews, it was a slip of parchment on which was written some text of Scripture, particularly of the decalogue, and was worn by devout persons on the forehead, or neck, as a mark of their religion. Dr. Clark, on Matt. 23, says, "An original phylactery lies now before me. It is a piece of fine vellum, about eighteen inches long, and an inch and a quarter long. It is divided into four unequal compartments: in the first is written, in a very fair character, with many apices, after the mode of the German Jews, the first ten verses of Exodus 13; in the second compartment is written, from the eleventh to the sixteenth verse of the same chapter inclusive; in the third, from the fourth to the ninth verse inclusive of Deut. 6, beginning with, Hear O Israel &c. In the fourth, from the thirteenth to the twenty-first verse inclusive of Deut 11."

These Scribes and Pharisees made their phylacteries broad, no doubt much broader than the one described above, so that they might write on it large quotations from the law, and in large letters, so that men at a distance may see and read. They also enlarged the borders of their garments, (the fringe and ribbon of the Law,) so as to be very conspicuous, and seen by men not only in the Synagogues and at feasts, but also in the market places, and corners of the streets, &c. Being thus armed in the armor of a teacher, they would command the respect of the common people who would meet them with greetings, and salute them with Rabbi, Rabbi, that is, My teacher, My teacher. These Rabbins were looked up to by the people as the infallible oracles in religious matters, while they, through pride and ostentation, usurped unto themselves not only the power of the Law, but of God himself.–Annulling, and making of none effect the Law of God, by their traditions.

They were missionaries, having home and foreign missions. Their pride and ostentation will not be gratified in the home circle, no not in Jerusalem and all Judea, but they will carry their systems into other countries. They will cross the sea and go into Europe that their broad phylacteries and enlarged borders in their garments may be seen there also. "They will compass sea and land," to make one proselyte. That is, they will compass sea and land, travelling over all lands to make one new convert to their sect, system of religion, or party. They did all in their power to gain one convert, not to God (that would be commendable), but to their sect, to add to their number strength and influence in secular matters, and so made them two-fold more the child of hell than themselves. That is, these proselytes not being converted to Judah by the spirit of God working in them, but by the spirit of the devil working by these wicked Scribes and Pharisees. And so the converts having the power, but not the power of God, is twofold more wicked, more deceitful than their teachers, and so are worse than heathens. Justin Martyr observes, that the proselytes did not only disbelieve Christ's doctrine, but were abundantly more blasphemous against Him than the Jews themselves, endeavoring to torment and cut off the Christians wherever they could, they being in this the instruments of the Scribes and Pharisees." The Jewish nation considered the proselytes the scabs of the Church, and they hindered the coming of the Messiah. In consideration of all this they were two-fold more the children of hell than their deceitful, and hypocritical teachers.

This being the result of their proselyting, it is manifest the work was not of the Lord. If the extracts from the Law, written on their phylacteries had convinced the heathen Gentile of the existence of the one true God, the Creator of the Heavens and Earth, to be the only object of worship and adoration, the effect would have been different. They would have obeyed the Law, and been counted children of Abraham. But this not being the result, of their teaching, other means, not of God, must have been employed. And these were their traditions. Teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. Therefore in vain did they worship God. Observe their character, they say and do not. Jesus began both to do and to teach. "But all their works they do for to be seen of men." "And loved the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the Synagogues, and greetings in the market, and to be called of men Rabbi, Rabbi." They "shut up the kingdom of Heaven against men" with their traditions. "For a pretence they would make long prayers." They were "blind guides, which would strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel," &c. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers." In consideration of all your pride, and hypocrisy, "how can ye escape the condemnation of hell?" What ground have you or what hope that you will, or can escape hell, and your damnation.

Dear reader, I have endeavored to get the Scribes and Pharisees who sit in Moses' seat, with their principles and hypocricies, and final damnation in hell, before you. I now inquire, is their spirit and principle dead, or is it still extant? Is not the spirit of proselyting alive and rampant in our land? Do not some of the sects make their phylacteries very broad, and greatly enlarge the borders of their garments, while they compass sea and land to make proselytes, not to the obedience of Christ, but to their sect? Witness the Methodists for instance. At their great Emery Campmeeting, last Summer, the preacher in charge would frequently bid the congregation kneel in silent secret, prayer for holiness of heart, &c. This was a conspicuous, though deceitful character in their phylactery. Jesus says, "And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrits are: for they love to pray standing in the Synagogues and in the corner of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward. But thou, when thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Mat. 6: 5, 6. Here the one loves to pray standing, and the other kneeling, but both have the same object in view: TO BE SEEN OF MEN. The idea of kneeling in secret prayer in the camp ground, surrounded by 650 tents, with police officers, news paper reporters, and what not all around you, performing their duties, and reporting and publishing to the world the very act of kneeling, &c., is simply hypocritical vanity. But it was Dr. Eddy's conspicuous character in his phylactery, and with some it had its intended effect. But as this is not very interesting to the Generals and other military spirits with their field tents on the ground, their phylactery is broad enough to sing for their entertainment, "The Star Spangled Banner," and behold the proselytes flock to the bench.

In order to show how exceeding broad these have made their phylacteries to make proselytes to their sect, I will ask the indulgence of the reader to make some extracts from the Daily Baltimore American, of December 1st 1871, of proceedings and "Dedication of a Spire."

Washington, November 30. "This has been a memorable day for Methodism in the Capital of America. It was generally known that on this Thanksgiving, the dedication services of the Spire and chime of bells on the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church would take place, and as acts of Christian courtesy the Rev. B. Peyton Brown, pastor of Wesley's Chapel, and the Rev. S. A. Wilson, pastor of the Keridee Chapel, concluded to defer their Thanksgiving services until the evening, so that all their congregations who wished to participate in the extraordinary services would have an opportunity to do so. * * * * Rev. Dr. Newman then arose and announced his theme for the morning to be, Responsibility of American Citizenship. This subject was examined and elucidated at considerable length. * * *

After the close of the discourse the usual Thanksgiving collection was taken, during which and the rendering of a fine piece by the organ, a little boy, bearing a banner on which was represented the Church with the Kelso Spire, and eleven little girls from their infant class, entered the Church with banners, on which were the name and inscription that is on each bell. Their dear, little ones took positions in line in front of the pulpit, each stating audibly the banner she represented. Mr. Burr then read a letter from Bishop Simpson, regretting his inability to be present on the occasion, and expressing his satisfaction at the success of the grand enterprise, &c.

The Hon. Mr. Tullock here asked a few moments to add a paragraph to the programme. * * * Mr. Tullock persisted, and proceeded to read a preamble and resolutions of deep and abiding gratitude and high appreciation of Mrs. E. A. Newman, wife of the beloved pastor, and closed by the presentation of a basket of magnificent flowers, beneath which was a more substantial consideration of $550, &c. * *

Rev. Dr. Hamilton, whom Dr. Newman said, "we all loved so well" being then called upon, delivered the dedicatory prayer, appropriate, beautiful and spirit stirring, then a fine piece by the organ, and then came the fine, sweet tone of the chimes.—Joy to the world, Home, sweet Home, Hail Columbia, Yankee Doodle, and the grand old Doxology—Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Here, dear reader, you have broad, very broad phylacteries, and greatly enlarged borders, in which is written, Star Spangled Banner, Hail Columbia, Yankee Doodle, and Praise God from whom all blessings flow. All under the sacred name of religion in order to make proselytes to their sect.

Who that has learned religion from our Lord Jesus Christ as taught in His Gospel, can conclude otherwise than that such conduct is demoralizing, and blaspheming of the religion of the Son of God. And behold the world is going after it, and is ready to denounce as narrow-minded ignoramuses, all who may dare to breathe a word dissent from it. No doubt this will be the epithet applied to me. But dear reader, as you and I must know we are to escape the damnation of hell, "Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law; fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their railings." Isa. 50: 7.

D. P. SAYLER.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

We have received a number of Christmas articles too late for insertion at the proper time, and as they contain some instructive ideas which adapt themselves to our every day reflections, we insert a few in this number, hoping they may be read with as much pleasure as if they had appeared sooner.

For the Pilgrim.

GOD INCARNATE.

On the 25th day of December, according to the generally accepted Chronology, the most important and sublime scene transpired in the land of Judea, that ever did upon this Earth, God manifested in the flesh, brought into existence by a virgin, born as an infant babe, in the despised little town of Bethlehem. The exuberant joy evinced by the heavenly messengers added much to increase the importance of that eventful period. And should it not be calculated to solemnly impress the mind with the necessity of properly appreciating the day in which God ushered into the world, Him on whom depends the happiness of man? Behold the Celestial choir, in the plains of Judea, witnessed by the humble shepherds, singing the sublime anthem, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." If angels be thus interested concerning salvation to man, why not they who derive the benefit, the blessings, the enjoyments, the eternal felicity thereby designed by God the Creator of the human family? Let man's ungrateful silence and inactivity not incur the displeasure of God on him, when every inducement is held forth, and all the felicities offered this world can expect, by neglecting to devote himself entirely to the service of God, but rather celebrate the Holy Christmas-day in humble prayer to God, and in singing songs of praise to Him who consecrates the day to His birth. And let the service of that solemn day only be ended with your mortal existence, which thus spent will secure to you entrance into an eternal Christmas in the triumphant Church in Heaven. Brethren and sisters, think of these things.

Oh! let the gay, the inconsiderate youth, and the careless sinner, who spent that noble day which ushered in their Redemption Victim, whose sacrificial death atoned for their inherited sins, in mirth and folly, in drunkeness, in haunts of vice, in gambling hells, or in any other way, but devotion to God, especially remember that they will aggravate their destiny in life accumulate sins, increase God's wrath augment their misery here, and may produce corresponding care in after life. It may cause painful stings and remorse of conscience upon a dying bed, and if the Salvation of the soul is neglected in time, will sink them down to the lower depth of hell, and be banished from God for ever and ever.

As a friendly and I hope timely warning to whom it may apply, I beg you to receive for information—for your own eternal benefit, and for the sake of Him whose birth-day you are called to celebrate, and who suffered, died and rose again for our justification. Reflect deeply, ponder well, loving brethren and sisters, and my dear friends, the object for which you are created, and the design God had in giving you a place in this world for a little season. For, He who was once a child in Bethlehem, but now exalted to the right hand of God, will come again. And all those who spent their † Christmas day devoted to God, will be taken home, glorified together with Him, in order to enjoy Him for ever and ever.

"Therefore, let us glorify God in our body, and in our spirit, which are God's." LEONARD FURRY.

New Enterprise, Pa.

† By Christmas-day I mean every day of life. If we live holy every day, we are sure of getting the right day.

CHRISTMAS.

Probably never since the expulsion of Adam from his lovely paradise in Eden, or at least since the destruction of the world in the time Noe of, did such a sublime and speculative event occur as the advent of the infant Savior into the world. Over eighteen hundred years have since rolled by, and yet the day upon which this great event occurred, is as fresh in our minds as though it happened in our own generation. The ravages of time have failed to obliterate the precise situation of this among notable days of inferior greatness, and through all the dreary ages which it yearly passed, its return and position has been guarded with vigilance and religious care. It was on this particular day that the angel appeared unto the shepherds and after announcing the birth of the "Savior of men," was immediately surrounded by a brilliant host of heavenly beings who sang that notable song, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will towards men."

That gracious being remained not long in this inhospitable world to endure the scoffs and sneers of a blind and deluded people, but after a short life of wandering over the desert sand and sun-parched plains of Western Asia, accomplished the great mission of His being; and after several hours of unparalleled suffering upon the cross, died a death that caused the mind at this distant day to shudder before the least vivid imagination. Well might the sun refuse to shine upon such a heart-rending and shocking spectacle, or have violent convulsions as if stunned and mortified at the wicked proceedings of its inhabitants.

Christmas then, is the day on which Christ was born, and to-day, as well as in time past, is looked for with great joy as being the era from which a new order of things emanated.—The long looked for Christmas of 1871 has at length rolled round; cold wintery blasts howl dismally without, but around many a hearth is gathered a happy, loving group who are enjoying this great annual feast. Soon it will be over and then for a long, long year we must look ere we can welcome Christmas day to our hearths once again. How the heart sinks with dread as the mind hovers over past changes, and dwells for a moment upon the probability of still greater changes in the future.

Those who enjoy and celebrate this day with us, may, before another year be locked in the cold chamber of death. The violets of Spring may blossom and shed their sweet odors over the graves of our nearest and dearest friends. Those who survive the stern decree of fate and celebrate the Christmas of 1872 may do so amid the broken fragments of many a family circle.

But that great Being whose birth occurred upon the day we celebrate can heal the broken heart

Had Christmas never occurred our condition might have been to-day upon a level with heathen darkness. But by the suffering and death of Christ, a path clear and bright is opened that leads to regions of perpetual bliss, where angels and archangels surround the throne of the most high God, flapping their wings in the Celestial City whose maker and builder is God.

J. H. Worst.

New Pittsburg, Ohio.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

Again, has appeared the day called Christmas. Oh, what glad tidings of great joy—the Redeemer King is born. We have seen his Star, but where is He gone? Up to the realms of glory, there to prepare a place for all that love Him. How good the tidings are, having the assurance that Jesus suffered and died to give all the advantage of a free salvation.

To many, Christmas comes but once a year, but to the Christian it comes every day. To them the Star is always visible, but like the Wise Men, they must travel Eastward—Zionward, or the Star will be lost sight of. Our journey must not be backward, but onward and upward.

Dear Brethren and sisters, I fear it is the case too much with us in these days, we are not anxious enough to go after the Star and seek for the Child. May the coming year be a year of Christmases to all the people of God, and may we live closer to our Father so that when death overtakes us we may be crowned with our Jesus in glory.

M. N. Hollinger.

Dickenson, Pa.

NEW YEAR.

J. S. Flory.

Hail! Happy morn! that gives birth to New Year—offspring of time. thou comest in place of the old year that has run its race and passed away. Gone, gone, forever, never more to return. It seems but as yesterday since the revolving wheel of time brought to view on the face of its calendar the number 1871 and now it has passed and here is 1872. Oh how swift the moments are fleeting by! Golden moments they are indeed, and how precious when we consider there are so few allotted to us here and we so much to do. Oh shall we let them go without making good use of them? How rich they appear when we discover they are moments full of God's grace and mercy; every one abounds in innumerable blessings from him. They are moments in which we may approach a throne of grace,—moments in which we may feel a Savior's love and drink at the pure and sprinkling fountain of Redeeming Grace. Only an inch of time to prepare for an endless eternity! Oh! shall we squander a part of that valuable time in the courts of satan—kneeling and bowing at the shrine of worldly honor or worldly pleasure?

Stop careless sinner, and remember you are impoverishing your precious soul by not gathering the richness of God's grace that surrounds you. Now at the commencement of a new cycle of time, resolve that you will close the floodgates of sin, and let the "Lord of glory come in." With Christ as your companion, and Heaven your aim, gather the richness that surrounds you—gold and silver, diamonds and precious stones, and never fading and ever fragrant flowers, that you may build and adorn a house for eternity—a house of faith that shall stand forever. In the name of your soul's eternal interest and the sake of Jesus who died for you, follow in the ways of wisdom, for her paths are paths of peace and holiness. Let not another year roll away—pass as a shadow and find you yet unprepared to meet your God! What! let the precious sands of your life run out grain after grain, and thus draw nearer and nearer eternity with your soul,—guilty soul, overwhelmed in sin. Oh! God forbid! that any longer you should thus go on. May the power of the Gospel, and God's spirit awake you and move you to a proper sense of your duty, and acceptance of Christ as your Savior ere it is too late.

And ye that have named the name of Jesus with a faith and hope of salvation, now is a good time to make a thorough examination of ourselves and profit thereby. Do we not discern upon an investigation of our past lives that we might have done more than we have in the cause of our blessed Master, and might have had more treasures laid up in Heaven. As the year rolls on let us strive with a more earnest zeal in the paths of duty. Though dark clouds at times seem to hover around, and all our prayers not yet answered, shall we be any the less fervent? Should we be cast down because God has not heard our prayers to open the way and bring into the Fold a dear father, brother, child, companion or friend. Oh no, but let us pray the oftener, and with a greater fervency of spirit believing that God will hear us; and this year we may rejoice greatly in seeing those dear ones safe in the Fold and feeding from the hand of our beloved Shepherd. On, on, dear brethren and sisters in the line of duty, and may it be a happy year to us either in fellowship with God and his children here, or with Him and glorified saints in Heaven above. A happy, happy, New Year to all!

Fayetteville, W. Va.

ANSWER TO QUERY

Brother Editors: In No. 48 of the last volume, Bro. D. F. Good asks an explanation on a passage of Scripture, on which I will endeavor to give my judgement, and if it fails to give satisfaction, let some one else give an exposition of the language in question. Were it not that Bro. Good propounded this same query to the writer about one year ago, while tarrying all night at my house, I would not have thought to make an effort to answer it.

The language refered to in the query reads thus: "And as many as were ordained to eternal life believed." At first view these words might give occasion to encourage the belief in the doctrine of "Predestination." In my humble opinion it would seem preposterous even to attempt to reconcile such an idea with the plain teachings of the Bible. There are men, however, at the present day, even among the learned divines, who hold to this erroneous dogma, namely: That God from the foundation of the world has predestinated or elected one part of the human family to eternal life, and the other to eternal death. This doctrine was more or less advocated at an early age in the history of the Church.

It is claimed by some ancient historians, that Augustine, who flourished about four hundred years after Christ, that most notable and learned Church father and finally bishop of Hippo, in Africa, to have been the incubater of this strange tenet. From that time on during the different epochs in the history of the Christian Church, long and sharp controversies have taken place in consequence of this erroneous doctrine. But as far as the Church of the Brethren is concerned, I am free to say, as far as I have learned their sentiments on this subject, that they are universally disinfected from this strange disease, which has made such rapid strides in some of our so-called reformatory denominations.

We believe that Christ died for all, not a part of the human family, and consequently are all placed upon a free footing, so that we can rather choose between good and evil, life or death. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

From the above brief consideration it seems evident to my mind, that the language included in the query has no bearing whatever, to the doctrine of Election.

That a difference of opinion has obtained even among the Brethren, in regard to this query is evident, from what I have learned of late, and I also believe that a great many have not a clear and satisfactory insight to these words. The point of dispute called in question, is the exact time, when those "Gentile converts were ordained to eternal life." Now, then that time of ordination, in our humble opinion took place when they in sincerity of heart could say, "Not my will but thine be done" in all things. In the very act of believing, the believer obtains this divine appointment and promise of becoming a son of God. "As many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on His name." From the above Scriptural language we understand, that the promise is only to those, "who recieve Him," which cannot otherwise take place, than by a full resignation of our will to the will of God, in faith believing at the same time.

W. G. Sherock.

Berlin, Pa.

ADVANTAGES OF AFFLICTION. NO 1.

While reading over and contemplating the exceeding great "Advantages of Christianity" in this life, my mind was led to the consideratioo also of the great advantages of affliction. I had written some time ago to the beloved brother, the writer of the above, and among other subjects, I had requested him to write something on the "Pilgrimage of Israel," involving his trials and afflictions &c. In the providence of God, I had the great pleasure of meeting him at our Lovefeast on the 16th of Oct., and hearing him preach the gospel in the demonstration of the spirit and of power even to melting some of the congregation to tears, and hope that some lasting benefit may be derived therefrom to the honor and glory of God. In conversation with him, he said that he had not yet answered my letter, but would do so some time. I then requested him to write on the "Advantages of Affliction." In reply, he requested me to write on the above subject, but my inability intimidated me for awile, but I now feel to thank the dear brother for his wholesome and salutary admonitions. So I will endeavor to write something on the peculiar benefits that may be derived from being afflicted, by which I include, not only bodily afflictions, but trouble, distress, sorrow, temptation, adversity, persecution, from whatever cause they may arise, or originate, ever keeping this idea in view, that "affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground." Job 5:6. Who knows but the hand of God may be in it to draw them more effectually from the transient and perishable things of this world and life, to woo them, by his loving kindness, his amazing love and mercy to Jesus Christ. So afflictions of some kind or other, as God only knows best in his all wise providence, are best calculated to work together for our good in the end, are as necessary for our spiritual welfare, as the bread we eat is to nourish and sustain the natural life of the body. I will try to make appear and illustrate. We naturally slum affliction. It is not desirable nor pleasing to the flesh, but now since man fell from his original state of innocence, friendship and communion with God, he is a sinner by nature and under a curse from which, through repentance and conversion to God, he is again reinstated into his favor and friendship. He then has a warfare "for the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, hence in this warfare, a life of labor and sorrow &c., has become as a necessary consequence, and is a restraint on sin, converting the curse into a blessing.

I will commence with the Patriarchs who were greatly benefited by afflictions, especially Jacob, Joseph, and his brethren. When Jacob first became acquainted with God, at Bethel, in the vision of the ladder the Lord said unto him, after renewing the covenant promise, "And behold I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest." So that every event in his eventful life shall work together for the best, for his spiritual welfare and advancement. This was also St. Paul's experience, "for we know that all things shall work together for good, to them that love God," which includes all true feeling. But this exalted privilege did not exempt Paul from great trials and afflictions in the flesh, neither will it exempt you, nor I, dear reader, if true believers, though perhaps we may not suffer one tenth part as much as Paul did, at least for righteousness sake, yet he says, "for our light affliction, which is but for a moment worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." 2 Cor. 4:17.

To follow Jacob we find that God did according to promise, "go with him and keep him." So that every thing in respect to his life, seemed to prosper in his hand. But this did not exempt him from trials and temptations, for they rather increased, being frequently disappointed, and endured great hardships. "In the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night and my sleep departed from mine eyes." Gen. 29:25:31:40. But we find that in his pilgrimage he not only met the approbation of God, but also the ministration of angels to encourage and strengthen him on his way. But did this exempt him from great pending trials? No, for they were still accumulating. He had just been delivered from one enmy and difficulty, but there was still apparently, another greater obstacle in the way. "Then Jacob was greatly afraid and distressed." How unworthy he felt, in view of past mercies, and how very dependant upon God in his then pending trials? His supposed enemy with his army was approaching, and meet him he must. How liberal he was with his wealth, if possible therewith to appease him, but he had still a better and surer way to subdue and appease his enemy, so as to meet him peaceably, namely: The sure mercies and promise of God. "And the Lord said unto Jacob; return unto the land of thy fathers and to thy kindred, and I will be with thee," Chron. 31:3, which promise he now lays hold of and plead, wrestling with God in prayer until the break of day, and a most glorious victory he achieved. "Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel, for as a prince hast thou power with God, and with men and hast prevailed." Israel prevailed through the redemption purchased by Christ. Paul says, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ. Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerers through him that loved us." And in reference to affliction the Prophet says, "In all their afflictions, he was afflicted, and the angels of his presence saved them in his love, and in his pitty he redeemed them." Isa. 63:93. Though his prophecy was not yet written, it was realized by Israel in his afflictions. O, how consoling and sustaining it is for every believer and lover of Jesus to have, and realize such a sympathizing friend. "For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched by the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Heb. 4:15. But this exalted privilege of Israel did not exempt him from great trials and afflictions, for even along with the great blessing received, like Paul, there was given him a thorn in the flesh, "he touched the hollow of his thigh, and Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him," which temptation, and affliction in the flesh he had to feel and endure, being needful and for his good, else it would not have been given to him, proved, "as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast," yet "through manifold trials and temptations, that the trials of his faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire severely, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, in the end." 1 Pet. 1:6:7. "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither fruit be in the vines." Heb. 3:17. As under a seemingly adverse and frowning providence, Israel exclaimed, "All these things are against me," when they were only preparing him more fully to appreciate future happiness and joy. How cheerful Israel went down into Egypt, especially when on his way God spake unto him in visions of the night, and said, "Jacob, Jacob, fear not to go down into Egypt for I will there make of thee a great nation. I will go down with thee and I will also surely bring thee up again, and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes."

D. NEGLEY.

Welch Run, Pa.

When difficulties increase, a spiritual Christian seeks wisdom of God; and the God of wisdom, according to his promise, bestows it.

A hundred years of wrong do not make an hour of right.

THROUGH FIRE TO LIFE.

BY BROTHER RIDGELY.

Beautifully the text comes to my mind: "Some shall be saved, though as by fire." The fearful obstacle through which we have passed tends to draw the mind nearer the divine idea of reward for the just and punishment for the wicked than any sermon, though preached by the most eloquent tongue.

As I stood and watched the hissing, seething, flashing flames as they surged on, devouring buildings, & blocks in their terrible march I was forcibly reminded of the fearful punishment meted out to the unrepentant sinner, in the next world, for nothing can picture to the mind more vividly than fire the idea of a hell. The rushing flames tell us that death is near, very near, and yet we stand upon the very verge of the abyss of destruction, and are safe. Safe! did I say! Oh no! Not safe, for we must flee further from the fearful pit for safety. Its destroying arm is ever reaching out to grasp those who are sufficiently near. As we move further and farther away, little by little, we find the infuriated demon pursuing us with relentless steps. We dare not pause to look back, for death is in our rear. We must first place our feet far beyond the devouring reach of the fiend who follows our footsteps with such untiring energy.

As I stood and gazed upon the scene, in our late terrible conflagration, and heard the fearful shrieks of terrified women, the groans of ruined men, the cries of frightened children, my mind was rendered useless.—Neither tongue nor pen can describe the awful, yet sublime, ideas that flashed through my mind, for before me was a perfect hell; such as no mortal can endure. A seething cauldron, where man cannot stay and live. But look! see yon high window! below all is a burning mass; there stands a mortal whom no power on earth can save. The poor creature stretches her arms piteously toward the crowd that stands gazing in awe, grief, misery, up at her tomb; then with a shriek, such as freezes the blood within the veins she sinks with the ruins, and her life is o'er.

There is a group standing in terror in the midst of a burning block. Upon all sides the fire is raging and escape seems impossible. Suddenly a strong voice from among them is heard to say "rely upon me and I will save you!" There is something in his tones that inspires confidence. Some immediately signify their assent to rely upon his counsel; others hang back as if doubting his power; and yet others refuse to be guided by his advice. He leads his followers safely through the seething mass that surrounds them. Those that held back follow in their course, but many a scar and wound attests to the terrible ordeal through which they have passed; while those who refuse, raise their voices in their terrible agony as the flames reach and destroy them.

Oh sinner, there is a voice calling to you, "rely upon me and I will save you. Put your trust in me and I will deliver you from the bondage of death." Will you not listen to this voice? Why will you not heed the counsel of one who is all-powerful to save? Behold even now He is knocking at the door of you heart, admit Him and a happier life will follow, both in this world and the next. Hearken to the warning voice, and be saved.

Chicago Ill.

Youth's Department.

JANUARY.

The icy breath of wintry winds
Congeals the river's glassy breast,
And with the opening of the year
The world puts on its snowy vest.

The jovial skater wings his way
Along the frozeo pond or stream.
And merry sleighbells fill the air
With music like a pleasant dream.

OUR NEW YEAR CALL.

By the time this reaches our young readers, the merry holidays, Christmas and New year, will be in the past, but we hope that you may all be wiser and better from their enjoyments. We need not tell you, Christmas is the day held sacred as the birth day of Jesus. You all know this, but perhaps some of you have not thought of the greatness of the gift that was given to the world on this eventful day. No doubt many of you have received very pretty gifts, and that from the best of parents and friends, but those gifts are of a perishable nature and will soon pass away, as many of you have experienced by this time, but the gift that Jesus brought for us will never perish. We hope our young readers will all seek to obtain this gift, we mean the gift of salvation. We may all obtain it on the best and most easy terms. This gift is not only obtained on Christmas day, but Jesus is calling upon you every day; My son, my daughter, give me thy heart, and how nice it would be to do it just now, in the beginning of the New Year 1872. We, of late, have seen some that were quite young go down into the watery grave, and there be buriad with Jesus in holy baptism. May many more experience this burial, and be born into the kingdom of Jesus before the present year grows very old.

In order that you may be encouraged to accept the precious gift of salvation, the pilgrims of Jesus intend to help you. They will do this through the medium of the PILGRIM for 1872. We have the promise of some who intend to make a speciality of writing for our young readers. Therefore you may expect, during the year, some sweet manna drops from the Masters Table. We also invite young and old to contribute to this column, so that we may make it more interesting and instructive than it ever was before. While we labor for your good, will you not also labor a little for us by getting for us, some more little PILGRIM readers?

With this short introduction we now go forth visiting all your homes, East and West, North and South. We come in our youthful vigor shouting good news from shore to shore, feeling assured that we will receive a hearty welcome from many a little pilgrim band, and now we say good-bye, little brother, little sister, until we come again.

HOLD ON.

I do not mean that you should stop, or cease acting, by the expression 'hold on'

We often so use the words, but another meaning is here to be given to them.

I have often watched the weather-cock on the barn gable. It is never still for any length of time, and sometimes it is very restless indeed. First it points one way, and then another. It whirls in a very uneasy fashion indeed. And yet makes no headway. No matter how fast it has whirled, nor how many ways it has pointed, it remains just where it started. The days and months, and even years, pass away, and yet the fidgety little weather-cock keeps just where it originally was. And in that particular, it is very much like some people. They whirl and fidget and fuss away, as if they were doing something very grand, but when you examine into their case, you find that they have made no progress. They are just where they started. Sometimes they get bewildered, and lose their way through inattention. A man sometimes loses his way in the woods by walking in a circle. I knew one such man. He entered the woods meaning to take a direct south course, but he failed to mind his business, lost his way, and, after walking a long time, came out very near where he started It was not his misfortune, but his fault.

Now, boys, I find not a few people who make very little progress, an the fault is their own. They talk and worry enough, and pretend to be doing something, and yet do nothing.

We find some boys of this kind in our schools. They attend school a quarter, or a winter, or a year, and the next year they know just about as much as they did when they commenced. They can add or multiply just as slowly as they did a year before, and their spelling is just as bad. Their writing books are covered with the oddest-looking marks and blots to show that no business man would employ such blunderers.

What is the matter? They do not hold on; do not persevere. It is so easy to do nothing, and so hard to do something well, that they do nothing but stand still. They are not like that famous spider we read of in Robert Bruce's life, which tried again and again many times, until he had fastened his thread to the wall. He was not the fellow to give up, and yet many a boy has not the tenth part of that spider's resolutions. He plays when he ought to study, and sleeps when he ought to work, and there he stands in the same place, just as the weather-cock does. He needs to study two words with all his might, and those two words are "HOLD ON."

A certain young man studying such lessons as boys do now, and his habit was to 'hold on' until he had perfectly mastered them. He would study his lesson over, and OVER, and OVER—the secret of good scholarship—until his lesson was perfectly in his mind, and on his tongue. So he did through college and in the law office, and when at last he began to practice law, people soon learned that he did the same thing there. If he started a point in law, he did it clearly; if he argued a case, he studied it with all his might, and people said 'this is the man we want to attend to our business.' And so business came flowing in upon him, and he became the richest and most celebrated lawyer in the State. His great motto in everything was 'HOLD ON.'

A boy in his class, and generally supposed to be his superior in mental power, was lazy and careless. He would begin a study, and get tired of it. One day he would have a fine lesson, and the next day a poor one, or none at all. He was fired with ambition at one time to be as great a man as Daniel Webster, but it lasted only a little while. Then he was going to be a business man; Latin and Greek were all fol-de-rol; he must study book-keeping and mathematics. But the fit lasted only a little while, to be succeeded by another of a different sort. He suddenly conceived a great respect for farming! It was so grand a thing to have a great farm, with herds of blood-cattle, and broad acres of grain! It was so independent and noble a life! He would be a farmer. The fit lasted as long as the chills and fever sometimes do, to be succeeded by something else. To-day he is like the weathercock on the barn-gable, he whirls, and shifts, and boxes the compass, and yet has not moved an inch. The first man has reached the high places of society by holding on, and the other is a worthless cipher because he had not enough of man in him to choose what to do, and then to 'hold on' until that thing was done.

I run my eye back over the list of my acquaintances to find out who among them have succeeded, and who have failed. The fact is, boys, the two little words, 'HOLD ON,' contain the secret of the difference. I advise you to study them.

IT WAS SO DREADFUL.

"It was the dreadfulest thing I ever did see!" exclaimed Charlie Ware, to his sister May, as they entered the house together. He had met her near the door on coming home from school.

"What was dreadful, Charley?" asked Mrs. Ware, looking up from her work.

"O, mamma!" and the little fellow ran to his mother, his face quivering with excitement. "O, mamma, it was dreadful?"

"What, my son?"

"Why, to see Mr. Lawrence going on just as if he were crazy; and poor little Aggy, so frightened, and crying so hard, and looking so pale. Oh dear! They said he was drunk.—Isn't it awful, mamma?"

"Indeed it is, Charlie, awful enough. But where did you seek all this?" asked Mrs. Ware.

"Over by Mrs, Lawson's. Aggy and I were coming home from school, and just as we got near the house, her father came staggering out into the road. His face was red, and he was talking to himself and throwing his arms out as if he were trying to hit somebody. Aggy said, 'O, dear!' and stopped right still. When Mr. Lawrence saw her, he tried to catch hold of her, but she wouldn't let him.—And then he called her a dreadful name, and swore awfully. O, dear! it made me shake all over. And the boys from school came along and laughed at him, and pushed him about, and Jim McCarty knocked his hat off. I was so sorry for Aggy. O, how she did cry! What makes him drink, mamma, when he knows it makes him drunk?"

"Shall I tell you about it, my son?"

"Yes, mamma, do. I should like to know."

"Well, dear, there was once a time when Mr. Lawrence was a sober man, and kind and good to his family; and if anybody had told him he was in danger of becoming a drunkard he would have got very angry. But he drank a glass of ale or wine or a little whiskey now and then. He said it did him good. But that was a mistake. Well, after a while he began to use beer or whisky every day; for whoever begins to drink these liquors soon begins to love them, the stronger grows his love for drink, until at last his appetite becomes a burning desire that it is almost impossible to resist. This is the way men get to be drunkards."

Charlie listened with wide open eyes. "I'll tell you what mamma," was his soberly spoken reply, "you'll not catch me being a drunkard if that's the way. Nobody will ever see me take a drop of wine or beer again. It isn't good anyhow, and makes your face burn so, and you feel kind of bad all over."

"Why, Charlie, how do you know all this? When did you have beer or wine?" exclaimed Mrs. Ware.

"O, I get some every two or three days. Tom Wilkins brings a bottle of beer with his lunch, and gives me a tast sometimes; and when I go to Mrs. Calver's she's sure to treat me to some of her cake and beer, or currant wine. She says it will give me new blood."

"My dear boy!" said Mrs. Ware, with unconcealed alarm and anxiety, "don't ever again taste these dangerous things."

"You need't be afraid mamma. I didn't know just how it was," answered Charlie; "but I know now, and I would not drink any beer or wine again for all the world. They are not so nice anyhow."

"Stick to that, my son," answered his mother, kissing him tenderly, "and you will be in no danger, when you grow up to be a man, of being like poor Mr Lawrence."

Editor's Department.

INTRODUCTORY.

Dear pilgrims, with glad hearts and renewed zeal in the Master's cause, we meet you for the first time in 1872. Another year is past and gone and how stands the record? It is customary in business relations to close up and balance all book accounts at the close of the year, so that the new year can be entered unencumbered. This is what is called "Good Policy," and recommends itself to all thinking minds. If this is so, and there is such a general desire to have all accounts balanced that pertain to our business relations, should we not be much more concerned in regard to our account that stands between us and God, through whose tender mercies our lives have been spared to enter another scene of time? Truly, we should and trust have been. If so, how gladly can we breathe the spirit of the poet when he said:

"From all the guilt of former sin,
May mercy set us free,
And let the year we now begin,
Begin and end with thee."

It is true we can labor and use good economy so that we may have wherewith to cancel our worldly accounts, but our debt to our God is so great that we have nothing to pay. We may, by laboring and pilfering, scrape together our thousands and millions, yet if we balance it against one sin it will rise as a drop in the bucket. But we rejoice in the fact that our Heavenly Father has allowed us to cancel our indebtedness in such a way that the poorest saint on earth can do it more easily than those who are rich in this world's goods and surrounded by all the luxuries of life. Was not Jesus good to die for sinners like we? Yes, brother, yes, sister, Jesus was good, immensely good, to bear the sins of a world and thus cancel the great debt which was incurred in the event of the fall of our first parents. That sin is now blotted out of the record and all that now stands against us, is that of our own committing and that can be paid on the most favourable terms—by the sacrificing of self, and an humble obedience to the will of Jesus. May we not hope that every brother and sister have balanced their accounts with the Judge of all the Earth, and entered the year 1872 with a clean record. There is nothing in this life that can give such unalloyed, bliss and comfort of soul, as the inward consciousness of peace with God. Such were the feelings of Job when he gave expression to this beautiful sentence. "Behold my witness is in Heaven, and my record is on high."

The year 1871 is now in the past but it has dealt so kindly with us, and bestowed upon us such rich blessings, that it would be ungrateful in us to give it a hasty burial. Before giving it the winding sheet, let us count over the mercies that have quietly fallen in our pathway during its stay. Down they came every morning and evening, as the angel messengers of the Father of Heaven. Have you, dear reader, lived, wasting mercies, renewing every day, and never yet realized whence they came? If you have, Heaven pity you. How often have you murmured under affliction, but where is the angel to record your rejoicings over untold blessings received? Ask the sunbeam, the rain-drop, the star or the queen of night, What is life, but mercy? What is health, strength, friendship and even affliction itself? Had each the power of speech, they would say, "I am mercy." All these have been our's during the past year, with an untold number of others. Then with humble gratefulness, we dismiss the past and step forward with the renewed determination of living more closely and devotedly to God.

We enter the "New Year," with brighter prospects than it was ever our lot to realize before, which will greatly lighten the burthen of the onerous labors devolving upon us. We have verbal evidence that many pilgrims, during the past year, have been encouraged, and enabled to keep their faces Zionward, by the manna drops that fell into the sin burdened soul from the pages of the PILGRIM. Oh, how we wish we could, for the year 1872, be true, loving and self-denying PILGRIM, having our pages burthened with such food as will be adapted to the most tender lamb of the flock, as well as the most saintly saint. This we can do if our contributors will allow themselves to be governed by the humble and forgiving spirit of Jesus. Brethren, let us labor together. There is a great work for the Church to perform, and wisdom calls upon us to make use of all such means that may result in the salvation of souls. Hundreds and thousands are dying out of Christ, and the question comes home to us, whose fault is it? Has every effort been put forth by the Church that might be done? All are ready to admit that much more can be done and should be done, and we feel certain that the great desire of the Church is, that a greater effort should be made to have the truth promulgated. May we not hope that this desire will grow into action, and that the present year may be one blest with a general ingathering, and that many may remember it as the epoch of their spiritual life.

Our periodicals have a large field for operation, and if we labor in the spirit of Jesus and for the reforming and christianizing of the world, untold good may be accomplished through their instrumentalities, and our prayer is, that God's blessing may attend them all, and may their respective editors be governed by that meek and forgiving spirit that characterizes a child of God, so that they may all be as the salt of the earth and a light to the world. May our dear brethren and sisters also be blest with liberal hearts that our work may be well sustained, so that the truth may be sent abroad with healing on its wings until many precious souls, for whom Jesus died, may be gathered safely into the garners of the Lord.

TO OUR OLD PATRONS.

According to previous announcement, we this week, send the PILGRIM to all old subscribers who have not ordered it stopped. We have borrowed this arrangement from some among the best and most honorable periodicals of the country, a few of which we named in our last issue; and there are hundreds of others we can name that have been publishing under this system for years, and today, retain a reputation above suspicion and are not unusually beggarly as some would have it. We adopted this arrangement with the best of motives, and gave some of our reasons for it in our last issue, but to be fairly understood, we will explain again. On our single list we have some 400 subscribers. Among that number, many have said, "Send my PILGRIM on until I order it stopped," others say, "As long as it continues to bring Jesus, send it along." From a number of such requests we thought seriously of adopting the plan last year, but did not do it as you all know. In our whole list we did not lose over 75 old subscribers, and perhaps not that many, as a number died, but many of the names were not returned until the third number was issued, and some not until the fourth and fifth. These all wished the back Nos. We sent them until our back Nos. were exhausted, and broke down our files until we had but bare three complete sets left in the office, and still a number did not get full volumes, and then think of the extra labor it made us to send all these back Nos. We feel persuaded that every thinking and considerate brother and sister will say that it would have been better and more satisfactory on the whole, for the 75 who wished to discontinue, to have ordered theirs stopped, and left all the others receive it from the beginning of the year. Some may say this trouble could be avoided if all would report before the year is up. That is very true, and if all would do this, we would ocver have thought of adopting the present system, but every publisher knows that such is not the case, and where the territories are large it is almost impossible for agents to get all before the year ends. We will now look at it in the light of policy. According to our liberal system of allowing our subscribers to pay when it suits them, we get a large number of poor that would not otherwise have the pleasure of reading the PILGRIM. According to our former way of stopping all at the end of the year, all those that wished it and had not the money ready, were necessitated to write once and let us know that they wished the PILGRIM continued, and when they were able to pay, to write again to send the money. This year they need not write until they are ready to send the money, thus saving the labor and cost of once writing, and where there are established agents it works equally as well. All those who wished it discontinued could report to the agent just as easily as if they wished it continued, and it was just as easy for our agents to give us the names of those who wished it stopped, as those who wished it continued.

With this explanation we now submit it to our kind readers, with the assurance that they will admit that our plan is both honorable and reasonable, and we kindly hope that if any of our dear readers have failed to comply with our reasonable request, they will consent to read the PILGRIM another year, as we do expect to make it worth $1.25, no matter how many other papers you read. It is true, that according to law, those who have paid up all arrearages, can refuse by sending back the first number, or have it sent by the post-master. It is also according to law to give a blow for a blow, and to kill a man in self defense and say it serves him right, but our brethren think it is not according to Jesus, neither are they disposed to take advantage of all its nice points, especially when they can avoid it by complying with terms as reasonable as was ours, neither would we advise any brother to put another to unnecessary trouble when it can be avoided. We are brethren and should love one another as becometh the children of God. Our plan works very well, and found only one brother who expressed dissatisfaction, and he wrote us as a good brother should do, and with him special arrangements were made so that all are accommodated. If other publishers prefer the other system, we have no fault to find with them about it, but hope they will allow us our liberties in doing that which we with hundreds and thousands of other publishers think to be just and right. If we find it not to be so, we will abandon it again another year.

PERSONAL.

JOHN ZUCK.—Your letter ordering Certificates was not received. We will send them.

A. APPLEMAN.—The Hand Book for Home Improvement has been sent. We think you will be pleased with it.

H. J. SHELLENBERGER.—"The Right Word in the Right Place" has been sent to your address.

A Bro. writes us that there are wrong references in PILGRIM. We expect all contributors to be responsible for their quotations and references and we will be responsible for our typography.

BENJAMIN LANDIS.—Your paper is mailed regularly at our office—hope it may reach you safely for the present year. Perhaps if you could get a few others to accompany it, your office would be found more readily—try it.

JACOB TROXEL.—The Debate between Campbell and Rice can be had by writing to R. W. Carroll, 117 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, O. Of the price we are not informed just now—can ascertain by writing to them.

JAMES L. SEARS.—Will you please inform us at what time Jackson Philips, Peter Wilt and Wm. Stemple commenced receiving the PILGRIM? Of "Bunnyan's Pilgrim's Progress" we have none on hand. As soon as we get a supply, we will let it be known.

—Sallie G. Keller informs us that her father is not dead, as reported by us some time ago, but enjoys better health than usual. Also, that at time of writing none of the family had taken his disease, the Small Pox.

We are sorry to give our readers false reports, but we are really glad that our report proved untrue. Bro. Daniel will certainly pardon us for publishing his death before the time, as it must have sounded quite strangely in his ears. How such reports originate we know not, but we do know that we received such intelligence.

Bro. W. B. Sell reports a series of meetings near Hamilton, Mo., commencing on December 12th, and continued almost a week.

—A meeting commenced at McVeytown, Pa., under the charge of Eld. J. R. Hanawalt, on the 30th of Dec., and is to continue until the 4th of January, 1872.

—Eld. Jacob Mohler, of Dry Valley Church, Pa., informs us that they intend to commence a meeting on the 6th of January and to continue one week.

—Eld. F. P. Lehr, of Michigan, says: We have a very pleasant winter, quite good sleighing for the last three weeks.—Snow has gradually melted down to a few inches, but today is falling again. Had none melted it would be by this time, 20 inches deep.

—Our Post Master informs us that there was a letter registered for us at Union Mills, Mahaska county, Iowa, on the 16th of December, and up to January 1st, there has been nothing more heard from it. If any of our readers know of any brethren living in that section of country they will please inform them, that they may know that neither money nor names have been received by us.

—We are sorry to inform our readers who have ordered the Book paper, that this number is not of it, although it is better than what we have been using, but not as heavy as that which we have now on hand, and will appear in our next issue. In our last issue we announced that we had it on hand. We had a sample of it and the lot was shipped so that we felt sure that it would reach us in good time for this issue, but it was waylaid and reached us about 6 hours too late.

"In Memorium," from Gospel Visitor was overlooked until too late for this No.—will appear in our next.

WORDS TO PATRONS.

1st. Every reader of the PILGRIM is invited to contribute to its columns. Essays, Church News, Obituaries &c, are solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. If you desire a good and interesting paper, help us to make it such by furnishing the material.

2nd. Be sure and write plainly, your name, post office, county and state, in every letter, and do not expect us to credit money and change addresses, unless you tell us to whom, and where sent.

3rd. Never send money without giving name and address of those who paid it.

4th. In sending lists, mark who are old and who are new subscribers. Please remember this.

5th. Money may be safely sent in Drafts, Checks, Postal Orders drawn on Hunt'gdon P.O., or in registered letters. All amounts under $2.00 may be sent at our risk, if put in the envelope and carefully sealed and directed.

Correspondence.

ELDORADO, PA., Dec. 17th 1871.

Left home on the 25th of November, stopped off at Duncannon, Perry county, Pa., had three meetings. Dedicated a new Meeting House, built by the brethren, (a branch of the Lower Cumberland Church.) The meetings in the new Meeting House were well attended and seemingly with interest. Here I would say to brethren preachers traveling on the Penn'a. Central R. R., stop off and preach for them. Stop at Juniata or Duncannon. Address George Wagner, Duncannon, Perry county, Pa. Left Duncannon on Monday the 27th, arrived at Mechanicsburg in the evening. Met Bro. Daniel Longenecker that evening, had three meetings in Mechanicsburg, well attended, with apparent interest. Left Mechanicsburg on the 30th for Upper Cumberland, had three meetings in that District. On the 3rd of December, morning, was taken by S. Miller to Foglesanger's Meeting House, Ridge Church, and had four meetings in that Church. On the 6th was taken to Falling Springs, Franklin county, and had 3 meetings there. On the 9th was taken to Price's Meeting House, Antietam Church, had ten meetings at their different Meeting Houses. They have now a splendid new Meeting House in Waynesboro, where two of the meetings were held, with crouded houses. Here I was made glad to see so many young members, and from their personal appearance, very promising. May God grant them clear conceptions of his will, that they may hold out faithful to the end. All the above named Churches, I found contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. May God bless every means for the spreading of the Gospel of Christ, also the brethren and sisters for the brotherly kindness manifested while among them. Arrived safely at home on Saturday the 16th, and found all well, thank God. Farewell, God be with us.

GRABILL MYERS.

MARRIED.

BECHTAL—LANE. On Dec. 21st, at the residence of the bride's parents, by John Spanogle, DANIEL BECHTAL to ANNIE LANE, all of Huntingdon Co., Pa.,

STONER—GOOD. Near Quincy Pa., at the residence of the bride's father, by the undersigned, Mr. JACOB S STONER, to Miss. CHRISTIE GOOD, of Franklin Co., Pa. JOHN ZUCK.

DIED.

FISHEL.—In the bounds of the Snake Spring Valley Church, Bedford Co. Pa., December 23rd 1871, ALMIRA FISHEL aged 14 years, 10 months. Funeral occasion improved by the brethren from Heb. 13th chapter, 14th verse, to a large congregation.

This was the youngest daughter of our worthy sister and widow Fishel. Though young in years, she seemed to have a foretaste of the happy place prepared for all good children. She told her mother and brothers and sisters she would have to die soon, and go on her journey to that beautiful home in Heaven, and they would soon follow after. As she had now learned that no pride or sin could enter they should prepare to die. I hope the kind admonitions will not be disregarded by her friends, and especially those out of the pales of the Church. HENRY HERSHBERGER.

NEARHOOF—ANDREW NEARHOOF, of the Warriorsmark Congregation was born the 18th of Oct. 1801, and died Nov. 27th 1871, aged 70 years, 1 month and 10 days. Funeral exercises by the writer, from Matt. 24:44, "Therefore be ye also ready."

He was a consistent member of the Church for 16 years, leaves 9 children, and only one a member. He was sick for several weeks, and bore his affliction with Christian patience and fortitude.

WM. H. QUINN.

Tyrone, Pa.

MONEY LIST.

George Heiserman,	$1.25
Jacob C. Claar,	3. 5
Peter Eby,	1.50
J. P. Hetrick,	1.25
A. Appleman,	20.75
Jacob Myers,	3.50
J. B. Garver,	14.75
Daniel Bock,	7.50
Lydia Brumbaugh,	1 25
David Negley,	.25
Adam Hollinger,	1.25
Henry Brumbaugh,	1.25
John Smith,	1.00
J. R. Durborrow,	1.25
Henry F. Peightal,	1.50
Susan Fleck,	.75
G. G. Lint,	1.25
John Clapper,	7.50
Joseph W. Beer,	1.25
J. J. Kessler,	1 25

[Money list partly crowded out]

REVISION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

Dean Howson made a very interesting address in Calvary Church (Dr Washburn's), on Thurday evening last, respecting the work now in rogress in England for a revision of the English version of the Scriptures. The most learned divines and scholars, of various denominations, are associated, they meet once a month in the Jurosalem Chamber of Westminster Abbey to compare notes, and they expect to be seven years upon the whole. He answered the common objections to the revision, showed its importance and prospective value, gave some examples of needed improvements in translation, and said when the work is done, it will stand or fall on its own merits, no Church or State authority being used to give it support. He appealed to American scholars to sympathize with and aid the movement.

Dr. Schaff said that a committee of American scholars, representing various denominations, and colleges and seminaries, had been selected, and on that day had held their first meeting, to act in concert with the English revisers. The plan is to have the English work sent over here to be revised, and finally to have a joint meeting of the English and American revisers to adopt the result. The earnest prayers of Christians were invoked for the divine blessing upon the great work.

THE JEWS IN JERUSALEM.

In Jerusalem, as in Rome and elsewhere, the Jews are shut up in a separate quarter, and that the meanest, darkest and filthiest. One twilight, I came unexpectedly into their settlement. It was a mud lane, lined with hovels, through which a funeral procession was slowly moving, the body borne on men's shoulders, in the dress of life, a perfect tatterdemalion crew, wailing as they followed. Come to the Land of Promise to die, many of them are robbed on the way, and all are preyed upon after they arrive, so that I apprehend, nothing is more real about them than their wretchedness. They have no counsels to interfere when a tax is exacted the second time in the year. If injured, they must suffer in silence; if plundered by Arabs, they have no hope of recovery. Only conversion would make them outwardly comfortable, and that they hate as perdition. Generous help is constantly sent them from abroad, but none too much, though the amusing story is told of Sir Moses Montefiore having spent all his money in alms at Jerusalem, and being obliged to borrow at usurious interest from one of the beggars whom he had relieved, that he might get back to London.—Lippincott's Magazine.

TO AGENTS.

The followiog annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subcribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our childreo were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers —many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," In one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not Marry. For both Sexes. By S. R. wells. Plain, $1.50; Extra gilt. $2.00

GLAD HOSANNAS.

A NEW MUSIC BOOK

For Revivals Prayer-Meetings, Sunday Schools, and the social singing. ATTRACTIVE NEW MUSIC which can be had in no other form. written solely for this book.—"GLAD HOSANNAS," is printed in

CHARACTER NOTES,

Simple, plain, easy, CHEAP, NEAT, GOOD. Hundreds of recommendations pour in upon us from every quarter, testifying to its merits, and its large sale speaks much for its value. Send 30 cents for a specimen copy.

☞Special Terms to Ministers, and others ordering by the dozen or 100 copies, Address at once, as given below.

THE SONG CROWNED KING.

FOR SINGING SCHOOLS. A NEW EDITION.

160 pages of Choice Music for the Singing school, the Home, and Social Party. Gems of Song The elementary Course is very plain. Just the book for every singer. A copy sent post paid to any address on receipt of 60 cents. Per dozen $6.00. Address as below.

THE CHRISTIAN HARP.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS. 128 pages.

This is an established work of its class and well known in the South and West. Price per copy, post paid 35 cts, per doz. $3.00 post paid.

The Golden City Songster.

☞New Music & Hymns, price 10 cts.

 State in what paper you saw this when you write to us. All of the above books are printed in patent Character Notes. Inducements to agents and booksellers. Send for samples and Special Terms. RUEBUSH & KIEFFER.—Write your name, P. O., county and State, and address RUEBUSH & KIEFFER, Singer's Glen, Rockingham county, Va.

1872 1872

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD.

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

USE DR. FAHRNEY'S BLOOD CLEANSER OR

PANACEA.

Established 1780 package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form, which was brought to its present high degree of perfection some years later by Dr. Peter Fahrney, Chicago, Ills., who conducts the trade West of Ohio. Unsurpassed remedy and cure, being an alterative and cathartic, or tonic and purge combined, for diseases arising from impure blood, such as sick-headache, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Erysipelas, Chills and Fever, Worms, Scrofula, Pimples Tetter &c. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Ask for that made at Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa. and Chicago, Ills. Beware of imitation. Genuine retails at $1,25 per Bottle. Druggists and others sell it. Many ministers are introducing it and give encouraging reports of its great virtues gives the history and uses of the PANACEA, testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge.

"Dr. Fahrney's Health Messenger."

Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.

J 13 tf Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Trancient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

TRACTS.

A Treatise on the Salutation. Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr. J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

New Hymn Books, English.

	TURKEY MOROCCO
One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25
	PLAIN ARABESQUE.
One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00
	PLAIN SHEEP.
One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

We have had the pleasure of examining this little work, and are much pleased with the general character of the music, as being well adapted to church and social occasions.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex.	Mail	Stations.	Down Train. Ex.	Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 30
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 20
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 34	4 12
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough & Rea	7 53	3 28
6 51	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Summit	7 30	3 05
Ar 7 15	9 44	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 24
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 43	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50. Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county, Pa.

Narrow Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JANUARY 9, 1872. NO 2

ESSAYS.

TIME AN EVIDENCE OF CHRISTIANITY.

BY EMANUEL UMBAUGH.

Another year has passed away,
And with it some mortals too
Have left the mortal shores of time—
Bid to all the world adieu.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-two
Now shall mark its point of time;
Twelve years have passed away we know,
Since eighteen and fifty-nine.
Go back from then just fifty-nine
When this century begun;
From thence just eighteen hundred years
The Christian era was yet unknown.

This proves to all with wondrous pow'r
That by searching, we may find
A point of time that's past and gone,
When Jesus died for all mankind.

Thus time itself, to all proclaims
That infidelity is vain;
Then what shall they do for their cause,
When they can no victory gain.

DANCING.

"And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, what shall I ask? and she said, The head of John the Baptist." Mark 6: 22, 24.

Excepting the account of the prodigal, Luke 15, this is the only instance in which we have any account in the New Testament Scriptures of persons dancing, hence true Christians never did, and they never will sanction it among them. And it being demoralizing in its tendency, its propriety may well be doubted in moral associations. This will be apparent to all who observe the origin of this famous dancer, the character of her infamous advisor, and admirers, with the sad and murderous result.

Herodias, that infamous mother and adviser of the dancer, was the daughter of Aristobulus and Berenice, and grand daughter of Herod the Great. Her first marriage was with Herod Philip, her uncle, by whom she had Salome, the dancer. Some time after, she left her husband, and lived publicly with Herod Antipas, her brother-in-law, who had been before married to the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia. This is the woman, John the Baptist said to Herod, it is not lawful for thee to have. And for this just reproof this debauchee had a quarrel with him, and would have killed him if she could. Bad as Herod was, he had some good traits in his character. He "feared John, knowing that he was a just man and holy, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly." John certainly had reason to hope that he might be reformed, and as he did many things toward a reformation, John as a faithful minister tells him of a grievous sin he is lying under, while he unlawfully has his brother's wife. Now it does not appear that Herod was at all offended by this reproof; but this, as an author says, "infernal woman" was. As Herod done many things John told him, it is to be hoped he intended to do this also, and put her away. This stirred up the devil in her, and she plotted his destruction.

"There is no person so revengeful as a lascivious woman, when reproved and blamed. A preacher of the Gospel has most to fear from this quarter. The first of this profession lost his life for the sake of truth and chastity, and others, especially those who have anything to do with men in power, who are profligates, may learn what they are to expect in return for a faithful discharge of duty" Clark's Commentaries.

This profligate mother watches an opportunity to wreak out her vengeance. Herod's birthday festival is at hand, a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee is to be made, and a grand ball follows. My daughter is a famous dancer, I will send her in to dance before these dignitaries, and as Herod and his guests will be infatuated with her, then as the custom of kings on such occasions is, the king will offer her a present, and I will instruct her to ask for a gift the head of John the Baptist. This hellish plan succeeded, and through the demoralizing influence of dancing, the servant of God had his head cut off.

With this picture before us, can we doubt that the diversons of the world feasting and dancing, are popular occasions of sin. Hear what Dr. Clark says on the subject. After so fatal an example as this, can we doubt whether balls are not snares for souls, destructive of chastity, modesty, and sometimes even to humanity itself; and a pernicious invention to excite the most criminal passions? How many on such occasions have sacrificed their chastity, and then to hide their shame, have stifled the feelings of the human being, and the parent by direct or indirect means, have put a period to the innocent offspring of their criminal connections. Unhappy mother, who exposes her daughter to the same shipwreck herself has suffered, and makes her own child the instrument of her lust and revenge! Behold here, ye professedly religious parents, the fruit of what was doubtless called in those times elegant breeding and accomplished dancing! Fix your eyes on that vicious mother, that prostitute daughter, and especially on that murdered embassador of God, and then send your children to genteel boarding schools, to learn the accomplishment of dancing; where the fear of God makes no part of the education." Com. Matt. 14: 12. But ah, pleads the professing Christian mother, in our age of Christianity and good morality dancing is no more demoralizing. We send our children to dancing schools where morality is inculcated, as well as the accomplishments of dancing taught; and there they only dance in respectable society, and avoid the vulgar.

Let such know, that to play on the devil's harp, is to play at his game, and your children and your preacher's children are no better than the worst of mankind when in his service, which from the above it is manifest dancing is. Fashionable society is generally most demoralized. Herod's ball was one in high places, and his chief men, and women attend it, and the result is before you. Do you suppose the high and fashionable life, and balls at Washington are any less demoralizing? Witness Keyes, and Sickel's wife, with many others of a similar character which have come to light, with unnumbered thousand like them that eternity and the day of judgment will reveal. It is certain that in these balls, whether in high or low life, the preachers of repentance and repentance itself is as completely murdered, killed in the spirit, as was John in the body.

In this work of demoralizing and debauching the mind, there is no end to the contrivance, or arts the devil resorts to. Here is a case of the day. "One of the New York belles has determined to create a sensation at Prince Alexis' ball, by having her hair lit up with little gas jets, the reservoir of which is to be concealed amids a wilderness of false braids, puffs and curls and a French twist. She is to pay $10 for dressing her hair for the evening and arranging her crown of blazing stars, while she pays $150 for the false hair added to her own abundant tresses. This is not an origioal idea of the young lady's however. It was a device of Miss Fannie Castor of Boston, who was first married to a grand son of old Peter Lorrillard, and after his death, to Mr. Ronals, a brother-in-law to Senator Conklin. She wore such a head dress on one occasion at a ball at the Tuileries, in Paris. She was a brilliant star for a long time in Parisian society. Her romantic career was closed recently by her death from consumption at the Isle of Wight, England." Baltimore Daily American, Nov. 15, 1871.

My dear reader, what more do you want to convince you of the demoralizing tendencies of dancing, whether in high or low life, it is the devil's card, and they that play it, play at his game. No doubt that the Miss who intends to dance with such a head gear at Prince Alexis' ball, and Miss Fannie Castor, who danced at the balls at the Tuileries, in Paris, was and were respectable members of some nice fashionable church, where the people are taught, if the heart is only right, all is right. My dear readers who have escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust, what do you say to these things? Do you not think that at such balls, as at Herod's, some will be pleased, and that repentance will be as effectually murdered in the soul as John the Baptist was in the prison?

My dear young brethren and sisters, these are the characters that cast a stigma on the true religion of Jesus, under esteem his humble followers, & to court their sympathy and friendship, you and your former associates, have followed their style and fashion. When you and your sisters used to, and some of your friends and former associates still decorate your heads with curls and flowers, you did it not to please your God-fearing mothers and friends, but to please and be in favor of such characters as given above, although they were not your direct associates, yet they being the head and front of style and fashion, you unconsciously followed after. Oh! how you should now rejoice, that through the mercy and grace of God, your feet have been taken out of the miry clay, and fixed upon the solid rock, Christ the Lord. When you contemplate the great danger you have escaped, do you not feel to unite with us in the feeble effort we try to make, to save others out of the allurements of the devil?

"She being before instructed by her mother to ask the head of John the Baptist. This mother who would have killed John herself if she could, avails herself of the advantage the coming ball would give her, when her daughter would dance. Perhaps like those named above, when the king and his guests would be captivated, that according to the prevailing custom, he would give her a gift, as a token of his approbation to her accomplishments, &c., the mother instructed her to ask that the gift be the head of John the Baptist. Thus this mother prostitutes her daughter to serve her hellish desires, and accomplishes all through the agency of dancing. You, my dear readers, who have not yet given yourselves into the service of God, have you such souls as these? It is hoped none of you have, but I know many, very many of you have quite different ones. Think how often and how kindly have your mothers advised you differently. They have not only advised you in the ways of virtue and truth, but they have advised you not to associate with, and follow the sinful ways of those who will surely lead you from God, into ultimate ruin and disgrace. They have wept over, and prayed for you. Why will you not hear?

This child of incest obeyed her mother in ungodliness, why will you not obey yours in godliness? You think it would be so great a cross to become an humble member in the Church, just because you think your fashionable associates, who you have made the choice of your company would make remarks about you, and in order to please those who you know are living in sin, and if they do not repent and be converted, and have their sins blotted out, will be lost. Yet to please these you go on with them, and think it no cross at all to leave your dear parents, who have done so much for your comfort, to weep and sigh over your degeneracy, and at last even bring their gray hair with sorrow to the grave.

This child prostituted herself to the devil to serve her adulterous mother. Why will not you dedicate yourselves to God in obeying your parents in the Lord, which is right, and is the first commandment with promise? This daughter of infamy brought her gift, the head of John the Baptist in a dish to her mother, as an evidence of her obedience to her advice. Why will you not give your soul and heart to Jesus, and your hands in fellowship to parents and friends as brother and sister in evidence to obedience to God? I suppose this poor deluded dancing daughter did not know what to do with her gift, her mother had instructed her to ask for. The head of John the Baptist in a dish or bowl does not suit her cabinet, so she brings it to her mother, and the text does not inform us what she done with it. Tradition says, she pricked the tongue with needles, &c. But you, my dear readers, when you become obedient to the admonitions of your godly parents and obey the voice of God by doing his commandments, you will have no trouble with yourselves. For you will be dead to sin, and your life will be hid with Christ in God. And while the angels in heaven, and the obedient on earth, in the Church, will rejoice over the soul rescued from the snares of sin, you in your own heart will realize what it is to be a Christian, and your influence will be felt in society.

Many of us have known our dear young sister, Sarah Grim, daughter of Bro. Samuel and sister Mary Emmert, who walked through the valley of the shadow of death in North Carolina a short time ago. She had given herself to God early in life, and enjoyed the benefits and comforts of religion while she sojourned in life, and when she walked through the valley of the shadow of death, she had no evil to fear. Her life having been hid with Christ in God, her soul would be restored to her on the other side of the valley, and then she shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever, she has no evil to fear. But when she overhears the doctor telling her companion, She must die, she calls her husband to her side and asks. Did the doctor say I must die? He answered, yes. I have no fears to die, was the calm reply. She calmly gave instructions how to bury her, clothed in a plain white shroud, and be sure to put my cap on my head. This is not the dancer's head dress, but the Christian sister's covering, because of the angels. And as she is now going to where they are, she will take it with her. Then followed a season of admonition and instructions to all present, and to the brother who had grieved her heart because he had attended a travelling circus, where they also have dancing. She said to him, you have yet much to do. This, said the doctor is the first time I have been made to feel the necessity of religion, and if I could die as that woman is dying, I would wish now to die. This was the first sister he saw dying. When she was supposed to be dead, she again called, and said, It is almost over, and with a smile passed over to him whom she obeyed in her young and tender age. Oh what a gift is this to bring to her heart-grieved father and mother, and religious brothers and sisters in the Lord. I can scarcely see the paper I write on for my tears of joy are falling thick and fast while I write. How different the gift of that bloody head of the murdered minister of God which the accomplished dancer brought to her mother. God save us from the dancer's doom. Amen.

D. P. SAYLER.

ADVANTAGES OF AFFLICTION. NO. 2.

"And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush, and he looked, and behold the bush burned with fire and was not consumed." Ex. 3: 2.

In the history of Abraham we have a noble example of the triumph of faith, and is worthy of all imitation. But he had to endure great trials of temptation. The impression of my mind seems to be, O that I had more of his faith, while endeavoring to write concerning the same. But perhaps, I may be encouraged and strengthened while so doing, as I have been, since I commenced trying to write on the above subject. When God called Abram from Ur of the Chaldees he said, "Get thee out of thy country and thy kindred into a land that I will show thee, and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy home great, and in it shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12: 1, 2. Abraham's whole life was one series of trials. His leaving his native country and kindred, his sojourning in the land of promise as in a strange land, his being driven by famine to seek for sustenance in Egypt, and so long a time intervening between the promise of a numerous prosterity and the birth of a son; the birth of Ishmael so long before that of Isaac, the painful observance or right of circumcision, and the expulsion of Hagar and Ishmael, were so many severe trials of his faith and obedience. But more severe than all these, was the command to offer up his beloved son who was to be heir of the promises and father of the blessed seed. Notice also how Abraham's other sons abound in children, Gen. 25 chapter, while Isaac, in whom his seed is to be like the stars of heaven, remains childless for twenty years after his marriage, and that too, a marriage on which the divine blessing had been so remarkably sought and obtained. Gen. 25: In view of this, the apostle treating of the faith of Abraham says, "As it is written I have made the a father of many nations, before him whom he believed, even God who quickeneth the dead and calleth those things which be not as though they were, who against hope, believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations according to that which was spoken, so shall thy seed be." Rom. 4: 17, 18.

"God said unto Abram, know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years, but in the fourth generation they shall come hither again. Gen. 15: 13, 16. According to Bible chronology, from Abraham's arrival in Canaan to the birth of Isaac, was twenty-five years. Isaac was fifty-three years old when he begat Jacob, and Jacob was one hundred and thirty years old when he went down into Egypt, making together one hundred and eighty-three years. And from his family coming into Egypt until their departure, was just two hundred and fifteen years more, making three hundred and ninety-eight years. The Bible informs us, that, "all the souls of the house of Jacob that came into Egypt, were seventy," so that in space of two hundred and fifteen years they increased to, "about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children and a mixed multitude went up also with them." Ex. 12: 37, 38.—"And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire, out of the midst of a bush. In the bush burning and not being consumed and the symbol of the divine presence in it, we have beautifully represented he afflictions of the Israelites under the cruel oppression of Pharaoh and the Egyptians. But Christ was in it, hence the safety of the bush amidst the flames, the Lord's admirable care and protection of his poor suffering ones, none so tenderly careful as Christ, "In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them. In his love and in his pity he redeemed them." Isa. 63 : 9. "Now there arose a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph, and he said unto his people behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we, come on let us deal wisely with them &c." Then, more especially were there afflictions increased, for Pharaoh saw how astonishingly fast they increased, and fearing that the Israelites would become more numerous and mighty than the Egyptians, they increased their burdens and afflicted them the more, thinking thereby to hold them in check and from increasing so fast, but to his utter amazement and grief, it is said "the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew."—

D. NIGLEY.

Welch Run, Pa.

SABBATH SCHOOL REPORT.

Statistical report of the Sabbath school at the Brethren's Meeting-house Sam's Creek, Carroll Co, Md., for the year ending October 22nd, 1871.

Number of days in session during the year,	28
Number of Hymns sung,	48
Number of officers,	8
Number of teachers male and female,	23
Number of male pupils,	60
Females,	60
No. of chapters read, Old Testament,	73
New Testament,	75

We take pleasure in saying that the diligence and perseverance of the entire school was highly commendable, and after enjoying a season of perfect harmony, the school closed Saturday Oct., 21st 1871. There were two of the ministering brethren present who delivered very appropriate addresses to the children and friends. On the occasion ample provision was made for the comfort and encouragement of the school.

This school of the Brethren at the Sam's Creek Meeting-house, was organized in the year of our Lord 1864, and has been increasing ever since. Perhaps some of our dear brethren and sisters may wish to know in what manner our Sabbath School has been conducted, and also the way in which it is closed at the end of the session. We will try, in the fear of the Lord, to give a correct statement of the proceedings of the school. In the first place it is opened with singing, exhortation, and prayer by the Superintendant, after which the Bible and Testament are given out to be read by their respective classes, also the spelling book and Primer to the junior classes. After we have been together a sufficient length of time, we close in the same way as opened. At the end of the session we close by calling our school together on Saturday afternoon, getting some of the ministering brethren to address the school and all present, after which we proceed to reward the scholars according to their merit. We do this in order to encourage the children, as they commit a very great number of verses out of the Old and New Testament to memory. Some people call this a festival, but we do not, from the fact that it is not conducted or closed in the same way and manner that the major part of the Sabbath Schools are in our country, with martial music, parade &c. Our school is under the jurisdiction of the Church and it is not likely that it will retrograde as some apprehend, under the eye of the Church. Now some of our dear brethren may differ with us in regard to the advantage of the Sabbath School to the young and rising generation. Though we will admit that the Sabbath School cause has been greatly abused by some, but shall we discard a blessing because it has been abused? If we do, we will not have many to enjoy, and as the word of God is but little read or used in our public schools, and many of the parents do not obey Eph., 6th chapter 4th verse, we contend that it is far better for children to attend a Sabbath School that is properly conducted, where they can read and study the word of God, than to engage in things that are calculated to make them immoral and irreligious, as it is often the case when they do not go to Sabbath School. The Scripture that we commit to memory when we are young, are most useful to us when we get to be old. We now close our report by ascribing to God the glory for what we are and expect to be, and as we feel that we are engaged in a good work, a work that we believe will meet with the divine approbation of God our Heavenly Father, we therefore solicit the prayers of the faithful in Christ our Savior.

WM. H. FRANKLIN.
JOEL ROOP.
Superintendents
JESSE T. MILLER, Secretary.
ABNER BAIL, Manager.

——The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright, but the mouth of the fool poureth out foolishness.

EARLY TRAINING.

Wisely does Solomon direct us to begin at the mouth or entrance of the child's way, at the first opening intelligence. The more early the training, the more easy the work, and the more encouraging the results.—Our character largely takes the form of that mould into which our early years were cast. Much in after life, both good and evil, may be traced back to the seed sown in the days of infancy. It is a matter of experience, that what is early learned is most tenaciously retained. It stands the friction of time with the last injury. Far better, instead of waiting for the maturity of reason, to work upon the pliability of children. The gardener begins to graft in the first rising of the sap. If the crooked shoots of self-will and disobedience are not cut off, then the rapid growth and quickly grown strength will greatly increase the future difficulty of bending them. Present neglect occasions after risk and perplexity. We may begin our work too late, but we can scarcely begin it too soon. If the child be too young to learn to read, he can not be too young to learn to obey.—The Christian.

HOLD ON, MY HEART.

(FROM THE GERMAN)

Hold on my heart, to thy believing!
The steadfast only wears the crown;
He who when stormy waves are heaving
Parts with his anchor shall go down;
But he who Jesus holds, through all,
Shall stand, though earth and Heavens should fall.

Hold in thy murmers. Heaven arraigning
The patient see God's loving face:
Who bear their burdens uncomplaining,
'Tis they who win the Father's grace.
He wounds himself who braves the rod,
And sets himself to fight with God.

Hold out! There comes an end to sorrow
Hope, from the dust shall conquering rise;
The storm proclaims a sunnier morrow
The cross points on to Paradise.
The Father reigneth! cease all doubt!
Hold on my heart, hold in, hold out!

Selected by JONAS GRAYBILL.

NEW YEAR.

O God! my helper ever near;
Crown me with thy smiles this year.
Preserve me by thy favor still,
And fit me for thy sacred will.

My safety each succeeding hour,
Depends on thy supporting power;
Accept my thanks for mercies past,
And be my guard while life shall last.

Let me not murmur nor complain,
At what thy wisdom shall ordain;
Sickness or health may blessings prove
As ordered by thy sovereign love.

My moments move in winged haste,
Nor know I which shall be my last;
Dangers and death are ever nigh,
And I this year perhaps may die.

Prepare me for thy trying day.
Then call my willing soul away;
From sin and sorrow set me free,
And let me rise to dwell with thee.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died, suddenly of apoplexy, Sept 24th, in Portage Congregation, Saint Joseph county, Ind, our beloved brother Eld. JACOB MILLER, aged 59 years, 6 months, and 21 days.

This death has caused many tears and deep sorrow. Not only our beloved sister, his widow, and nine children, all grown up, and several of them members of the church, mourn the loss of him, so near and dear to them, but also the congregation in which he presided with so much ability, deep humility and love, for nearly thirty five years together with the many districts in Northern Indiana and South Michigan, who had so often been made glad and rejoiced in his labors of love, now mourn also deeply feeling our loss. Brother Jacob Miller was often called to visit the sick and the sorrowing for aid and counsel. His kind heart was ever ready to do good. His counsel was confided in as one blessed with wisdom from on high. All who knew him best loved him most, both in the church and out of it.

We will insert a quotation from the St. Joseph Valley Register, the editor, who was acquainted with him, voluntarily giving a notice of his death as follows:

Sept. 28th.—"Our community was startled and grieved on Monday morning at the announcement of the death of Elder Jacob Miller, which occured at eight o'clock on Sunday evening, at his residence in German township. Regarding his sudden death, we were conversing with him only a short time ago about Mr. Colfax's recent illness, and he remarked to us then that he expected to be called away suddenly, although he was then apparently enjoying the best of health. The wishes he then expressed concerning his interment were conscientiously carried out."

"Elder Jacob Miller was born in Preble county, Ohio. He was the oldest of a family of sixteen children, only four of whom are now living. While he was yet quite young, his parents, who had emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, moved to Indiana, where he was raised and received his education."

"Early in life he became a convert to religion, and joined the church of the Brethren, and when about the age of twenty two was set apart to the ministry, according to the usage of the church, and was soon advanced to the office of Elder, and ever after, to the day of his death, was noted as one of the most zealous and efficient among their."

"His name was familiar among the Brethren from Maryland to California, and his extensive travels to preach the gospel, and being a member of the district and Annual Meetings, made his personal acquaintance very great; and it is worthy of note that all with whom he came in contact he inspired the greatest respect. An earnest Christian and faithful worker in the vineyard, so thoroughly versed in the teachings of the Bible as a life long study could make him, the church has no member who will be more widely missed; nor has the neighborhood in which he lived a citizen whose influence there as everwhere was on the side of good. He was a peacemaker by principle as well as belief, and became the arbiter of many a quarrel that otherwise would have emerged into an expensive lawsuit and an endless feud."

"Years ago, he and his brother James, also an Elder, were instrumental in having a commodious church built in a beautiful oak grove, on the latter's grounds. His funeral took place on Tuesday forenoon from the church near his residence which, for so many years, had been the scene of his labors of love for the great Master, whose ardent and faithful follower he was. It was the largest that had ever occurred there. The services were conducted by Elder D. B. Sturgis, of this city, assisted by Elder J. Berkey and C. Wenger. The body was interred in the graveyard near the church, and just across the road from his residence."

C. WENGER.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

Dear Editors: —By your permission I will try and give an explanation on brother D. F. Good's query, in No. 48. "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me.—Rev. 3: 20.

I understand the Revelator speaking of Christ and His Church, and the sinner. We may understand the above Scripture in a two fold sense. We believe that God ever had a people on the earth, but there was also a time that they were wrapped in slumber. But when our blessed Master arose from the tomb, He calleth for His Church. Read Solomon's Song, 5. 2. "I sleep but my heart waketh, it is the voice of my beloved that knocketh saying, open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled, for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night." Also read the 14th chap. and 23rd verse of St. John's Gospel. He is also pointing forward when our blessed Master will come the second time without a sin-offering unto salvation, then He will gird Himself and serve those that faithfully await His coming. Read the 12th chapter and 37th verse of Luke, "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that He shall gird Himself, and make them sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." Oh, what a blessed promise! Brethren and sisters, I hope we remember the time when Jesus knocked at the door of our stubborn and sinful hearts, and was made willing to come in by the door, (Jesus) into His glorious Church, through His own terms. O yes, now brethren He promises to come and make His abode with us, "and sup with us, and we with Him" The above Scripture has a more direct reference to the door of the sinner's heart. He has appointed His ministers to take His blessed Word, and knock at the sinner's heart, and the promise is if they open their hearts, "I will come into them." The text was originally addressed to the Church at Laodicea, but is capable of a more general application. Let us consider it as the address of Jehovah to all who are favored with the light of Revelation, and yet remain strangers to salvation. Notice the state of soul supposed. Closed against God. This is an obvious and lamentable truth. He is not in all the thoughts of the wicked. They live without God, and without hope in the world. Several things keep the soul closed against God.

Ignorance, pride, self-esteem, stubbornness. Pride, and ignorance go together, and is the principle cause that keeps the sinners heart closed against God. I hold brethren, that a man's heart has never been opened, until they resolve from the heart to obey Christ in all his precepts, and examples. And every one that says Lord Lord, shall enter into the kingdom; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven. Such as will not open the door of their hearts in full, do not know God, nor their need of his divine favor. "Souls perish for lack of knowledge."—Minds darkened by the god of this world. Hosea. 4: 6. God cannot dwell there so long as this state of things abides. Light has no fellowship with darkness; sin with holiness, &c. Rom. 6: 17. Love of the world is the ruling topic. Temporal things absorb all the desires of the mind. Visible, apparent good, preferred to that which is invisible and eternal. Worldly honor, worldly riches, worldly pleasures, preferred to the honors, riches, and pleasures which come from God. Jas. 4: 4. John 2: 15.

Unbelief. The statements of revelation are not believed. Hence, threatenings do not alarm, invitations do not allure, promises do not attract, and the Gospel produces no saving effect on the heart. Unbelief effectually closes the soul against God.—"He could not do many mighty works there, because of their unbelief," Heb. 3: 19, Mark 6: 6. Notice, Jehovah's address to the soul thus closed against him. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock." Now let us consider three things, the blessed being from whom the address proceeds. "Behold, I." The high and lofty one, who inhabiteth eternity; heaven his throne—earth his footstool—universe his temple—hosts of heaven his attendants. Self-existent, independent, ever blessed; yet he stoops to solicit the possessions of the sinner's heart. Well may heaven and earth be called to behold an act of such condescension and grace. Behold his attitude. "He stands at the door." Denoting his patience and long-suffering; while his enemies are enthroned within, the blessed God stands without. Let us look at his readiness to depart, can easily pass on; easily withdraw himself, and leave the soul to infatuation and ruin. We learn a long time ago, that God said my spirit will not always strive with man. Gen. 6.

"Stand at the door and knock." He does this, by his daily bounties; the necessaries and enjoyments of life. Psalm. 10: 3, 2. By the gracious offers of his Gospel. Pardon, peace, and eternal life proclaimed, by his called and faithful ministers. Brethren let us look at the events of his providence. The following events abound in the world, and sometimes visit our families with afflictions, bereavements, disappointments, heavy heart, we think we have felt a share of these events. Read Hosea. 5. 15. Notice the conditional promise given.

"If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in, and sup with him, and he with me." Now let us observe the conditions given. "Hear my voice;" so as to understand it, consider it, believe it, and, "open the door." Freely, cheerfully, and with all his heart, give me a welcome into his soul; in my own way, and on my own terms, and to effect my own purposes. The promise, "I will come in to him," to illuminate the mind—convince the heart—regenerate the soul—to cause all old things to pass away, and to make all things new. "And sup with him, and he with me," mutual fellowship and communion here, and eternal and uninterrupted enjoyment in the world to come. God waits to be gracious to the children of men. He desires their happiness and salvation. The sinners responsibility. Life and death before him; God waits to save, his eternal well-being or no depends on his acceptance or rejection of the offers of mercy.

Brethren as the knocking at the door of the sinners' heart depends much upon the minister, Oh! cry aloud and spare not; for there is much depends upon us. But the whole church must remember that they have something to do in perfecting this great work. Do not forget the poor ministers that are trying to knock at the door, who only have work one or two days in six. Brethren do not forget the missionary cause. Let us all then love, honer, and obey him, that at last we may join the heavenly hosts, and praise him forever.

WILLIAM H. QUINN.

Tyrone, Pa.

THE RICH MAN. NO. 2.

"And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed; so that they which would pass from hence to you, cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence." Luke 16: 26.

The rich man not only finds himself after death, in hell, but also a great gulf fixed between himself and the now happy Lazareth, which is impassible; for Abraham saith, "you cannot pass over it." With mortals the word cannot, can sometimes be mastered with reference to temporal things, but in eternity, we think it means exactly what it says, that you cannot. And with reference to spiritual things, the same little word may be intended to mean the same thing; for says Paul in parallel language, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace, but to be carnally minded is death." Rom. 8: 6. This seems to signify that the same gulf, that Abraham speaks of, extends through this world of mortality, as a boundary line between the kingdom of this world, and the kingdom of heaven; a separating line between saint and sinner, between light and darkness. Consequently the Savior says, "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence." John 18: 36. The Savior has a kingdom, and in that kingdom reigns King supreme—having a right to manifest his sovereignty as a king, in establishing a means of escape from the consequences of sin. And whom he will he hardeneth. Rom. 9: 18. And if it is possible to imagine that that gulf extends through this world of mortality, as a dividing line, between the two kingdoms, then the bridge which many have constructed out of Gospel material, hewing, fashioning, and putting it together to suit their own carnal notions, will undoubtedly fail to land them safe over the gulf of despair, into the land of liberty—"The kingdom which cannot be moved." As the prophet saith in regard to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty had become a fading flower, "Wherefore hear the word of the Lord, ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem."—(please read from the 14th to the 22nd verse of the 28th chapter of Isaiah, inclusive.) By this may we learn the strictness, and severity of God's sovereignty in regard to his rebellious creatures. And to suppose that man's opinion in regard to his duty and obligation to God and his creatures—with the Gospel in his hands—will excuse him in the nonfulfillment of his pleasure, in the judgment day is certainly a wild hallucination, and can only be governed or reconciled, in circumstances when God will, (if such will is an attribute of his mercy) allow his mercy to supercede his justice. Sin is of such a corroding and condemning character, and of such a variety of form and feature, that to escape its effects and influence, there is but one expiation, and that has been made in time, and amongst mortals, and with reference to sinners. And the day of probation to sinners is, "To day if you will hear my voice, harden not your hearts; for the night cometh wherein no man can work." So that all hope of mercy is cut off beyond the vale of death. For Paul says, "without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Heb. 9: 22. And I ask, does not God transcend the attribute of his mercy, when he accepts sinners and pardons them, or any other conditions of circumstances than those which he has given in the Gospel, and sealed with his own blood? Has he not said, he is unchangable, without variableness neither shadow of turning? When then shall the blood of atonement be applied for the remission of sins, and a reconciliation completed? Hence we hold, according to the Gospel, that there is but one means of reconciliation provided for sinners, and that man is left without excuse. "For it is the will of God that none should perish, but that all should come unto a knowledge of the truth, and be saved.—He will not cut off any soul without a privilege, or opportunity of sealing themselves heirs of God, and joint heirs of Christ, to that heavenly inheritance. We have circumstances to prove that God will not fail to do his part, in enabling every sinner and every person already professing godliness, who have not come up strictly to the help of the Lord against the mighty, of availing themselves of a full and complete reconciliation to the will of God.

1st. We have the example of Cornelius, who was a devout man before God, who was ready and willing to do his pleasure on having a knowledge of what the Lord demands of him, upon which willingness, and faithfulness he is ready to make any sacrifice necessary in the Divine will, to make a full surrender of himself to God; all of which I believe is demanded of every follower, under any, and all circumstances. Upon this faith, which Cornelius exercised in the loss of God, God dispatches a messenger to inform him that he has not yet been fully reconciled, and the law of Divine justice is not yet fully satisfied. Hence Peter, the servant of God, must come and tell the words whereby thou and thy house may be saved. Thus God takes pains to save the faithful seeker after the truth. And Cornelius availed himself of the opportunity offered, to become a citizen of that kingdom which cannot be moved.

2nd. We have the example of the Eunuch, who was returning from Jerusalem, having been there to worship—was earnestly seeking the kingdom of God, but could not understand of whom the prophet speaks, of himself or of some other man. While he is thus musing and consulting in his mind to know what this should mean, God sees his honest and desirous heart longing to drink in full, the love of the things which he understood not, and sends a servant who was qualified to solve the mystery to him, and what a pleasure it was to him, when the truth was unfolded to his willing mind, to accept the opportunity of entering into a more full union and fellowship with the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. So he would have been without excuse, had he failed to exercise faith in the offered means, but believing Philip to be a servant of God, suffered himself to be convinced, and while his mind is in full exercise of faith, he says, "Here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest." "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." Acts 8: 36, 37. Thus being baptized, he went on his way rejoicing, and the spirit caught away Philip, and he saw him no more, an evidence that it was sanctioned by high heaven, in having the earnest, honest seeker saved by the blood of Jesus.

3rd. We have the case of Saul of Tarsus, who was struck blind while on his way to Damascus, with power to take and bind such as believed in Jesus. We do not find that he is now seeking the kingdom, but there must be some strivings or some scruples in his heart about this matter, for when light is seen and the voice heard, it was said, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." Acts 9: 5. Now he is told to go into the City, and it shall be told thee what thou must do. It is not said to him who by, nor when. But God willing to save the honest seekers, for that he now is—he sends to his servant to go and administer his pleasure to him. Upon which instructions, he confers not with flesh and blood, but was immediately obedient to the heavenly vision. With these evidences we conclude, hoping in our next to make an appeal to those who are out of Christ.

S. MYERS.

Youth's Department.

MY FATHER.

Once we had a tender father,
But now he's dead and gone;
In the cold grave he is sleeping,
And our home is sad and lone.

When I saw him in his coffin—
Lying there so still and cold—
How I wished that my dear father
Could his arms around me fold.

O, my father loved me dearly!
He was ever kind and mild;
And he always tried to have me
Jesus' good and loving child.

M. E. H., aged 11 years.

ALWAYS SPEAK THE TRUTH.

Dear little friends. I have thought of writing to you for some time, but a great deal of work prevented me. You will forgive me I trust, and remember that I often think of you and pray for you, that you may walk in wisdom's ways while here upon earth, and after death be permitted to range the fields of light, where there is eternal joy and happiness.

My little friends need not be afraid there, for "there is no night there." You will not suffer pain nor shed tears there, for such things do not belong to that happy place. Do you not want to go there? Yes, I am sure you do, and for that very reason I thought I would write to you upon the subject of lying. Oh! what a dreadful thing it is to tell a lie! If you will turn to the twelfth chapter of Proverbs, you will find that "The lip of truth shall be established forever, but a lying tongue is but for a moment." And also, "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord: but they that deal truly are His delight." In Revelation, 21st chap., John heard a great voice speaking to him out of Heaven, and telling him a great many things, and among them was this, "And all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Please read that whole chap. and the next, and see if you can find something more about liars, or those who love and make a lie.

I have often been made to feel very sad, by hearing falsehoods told by little folks to their brothers and sisters or playmates; sometimes they did it only for fun, thinking (if they thought at all,) there could be no harm in such little lies. But dear children a lie is a lie in the sight of that Holy One "who cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance," whether it be little or big. God has not classed sins into big and little ones, but all sin is looked upon in the same light by His holy eye.

Read and consider upon the fifth chapter of Acts, and you will see how God served liars in the time of the Apostles. Now I hope none of my little readers will be guilty of telling willful lies, and if any of your little friends tell you any, I hope you will tell them how wrong it is. Brother Henry is very much interested in your spiritual and eternal well being. I hope you will profit by his words, let his writings and instructions sink deep into your hearts. And may the Lord grant us all a seat at His right hand through Jesus Christ our Redeemer, is the prayer of your affectionate friend, MARY.—Herald of Truth.

In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride: but the lips of the wise shall preserve them.

SOWING LITTLE SEEDS.

Little Bessie had got a present of a new book, and she eagerly opened it to look at the first picture. It was the picture of a boy sitting by the side of a stream and throwing seeds into the water.

"I wonder what this picture is about," said she. "Why does the boy sow seeds into the water?"

"Oh, I know," said her brother Edward, who had been looking at the book; "he is sowing the seeds of water-lilies."

"But how small the seeds look," said Bessie. "It seems strange to think that large plants should grow from such little things."

"You are sowing just such tiny seeds every day, Bessie, and they will come up large plants after awhile said her father"

"Oh, no, father, I have not planted any seeds for a long time."

"I have seen my daughter sow a number of seeds to-day."

Bessie looked puzzled, and her father smiled and said:

"Yes, I have watched you planting flowers, and trees, and weeds, to-day."

"Now I know that you are joking for I would not plant ugly weeds."

"I shall have to tell you what I mean. When you laid aside that interesting book, and attended to what your brother wished done, you were sowing seeds of kindness and love. When you broke the dish that you knew your mother valued, and came instantly and told her, you were sowing seeds of truth. When you took the cup of cold water to the poor woman at the gate, you were sowing seeds of mercy. These are all beautiful flowers, Bessie, and will grow up brightly and sweetly if you water them well by a constant repetition of these acts. But more than all, I hope that my little girl has been planting the great tree of "love to God, and that she will tend and watch it, and allow it to grow and spread until its branches reach the skies and meet before His throne."

"And the weeds father?"

"When you were impatient while baby was cross, you sowed the seeds of ill-temper, When you spoke cross to Robert, you planted seeds of anger. When you waited some time after your mother called you, you sowed disobedience and selfishness. These are all noxious weeds. Pull them up by the roots, my child. Do not suffer them to grow in your garden, or they will completely overrun it.—S. S Visitor.

Editor's Department.

WORDS TO PATRONS.

1st. Every reader of the PILGRIM is invited to contribute to its columns. Essays, Church News, Obituaries &c, are solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. If you desire a good and interesting paper, help us to make it such by furnishing the material.

2nd. Be sure and write plainly, your name, post office, county and state, in every letter, and do not expect us to credit money and change addresses, unless you tell us to whom, and where sent.

3rd. Never send money without giving name and address of those who paid it.

4th. In sending lists, mark who are old and who are new subscribers. Please remember this.

5th. Money may be safely sent in Drafts, Checks, Postal Orders drawn on Hunt'gdon P.O., or in registered letters. All amounts under $2.00 may be sent at our risk, if put in the envelope and carefully sealed and directed.

MEDITATIONS—PAST AND FUTURE.

Dear fellow pilgrims, we have had many thoughts in reference to the past, and as we have entered a new period of time, a time such as we have never before experienced, we now look forward with interest to the future. The present is such as to cause us to be boyant with hope, and we enter on our second mission with renewed zeal and energy. Many doors that were closed are now open for our reception. Our field for usefulness is extended and we feel to rejoice. We meet you with outstretched arms, and if our feeling is reciprocated, we will continue to come to you, and thank God that he has put it into your heart to receive us.

When we look upon the past we see some dark spots and some bright ones. We have had our trials, our afflictions and difficulties, and with Job we could say "Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble." We do not mean by this, that we have had more than a usual amount of the trials and vexations of this life, but we have learned that the world through which we must pass is dark and thorny. This is the experience of all who have passed from darkness unto the marvelous light. The perishable things of this life afford no real enjoyment, and it is only when we come to an occasional oasis where we may feed on the heavenly Manna that the faint, languishing soul is satisfied. Thus have we been fed, our souls have been nourished and supported. Our brethren and sisters who have contributed to our columns, are mediums through which we have received food, and while we have feasted thereon, it has given us pleasure to send it forth that others might enjoy like advantages. This work we have engaged in with a consciousness of right, and when we look back and review our efforts, to accomplish this end, they are as bright stars in the canopy of our glory, illuminating our whole soul with joy and gladness. But then again, when we review some of our doings, how often have we given way to our carnal natures, "self" gratified, and God dishonored. Oh how very dark!—Our good deeds seem but as glimering lights away out in the far distance. We are almost enshrowded in darkness, and thus we grope our way through this dark, dreary world. But there lies beyond this vale of tears, a land that flows with milk and honey, to which we are steering our ship, and we hope to land safe on the banks of happy deliverance, and there feast on "Angels food." But we must press ONWARD. This is the motto of the heaven-bound saint.—Though storms may arise even in the midnight hour of life, and the great ways of the ocean of time may toss our frail bark to and fro, yet Jesus, that lovely Jesus, who is above all, in all, and through all, whispers in accents loud and soft, "It is I, be not afraid." Grand consolation! Jesus our Father is at the helm, and if we put our trust in him, we need not fear. In the past, like Peter, our faith has not been strong enough, and we have oftimes come near sinking, but Jesus has promised to pass by our infirmities, and relying on his promises, we take courage. Hoping that our past remissness may be blotted out of God's book of remembrance, we now look to the future, and hope to spend the new year more devotedly.

The future is fraught with interest to us, and in consequence of this we have had many thoughts in reference to it. What will be our success, how many new pilgrim homes will we be permitted to enter, and what will be the result of our labors, has been foremost and uppermost in our minds, in reference to our doing in 1872. Now already our hearts have been made to rejoice in the reception of many new invitations to visit pilgrim homes, and the prospects for many more are flattering. Come on dear pilgrims, and we will assure you that no effort will be retained on our part to interest and profit you. But dear Christian friends we need your help, and we earnestly solicit your assistance in way of increasing our circulation, and contributing to our columns. Please give us the helping hand and success is sure. There are a few, apparently who are working against us. Whether their motives and the manner in which they go at it, will meet with divine acceptance, God only knows. We feel that we are engaged in a good work, and we want it distinctly understood, God being our helper, that the PILGRIM will have to pass through some fiery ordeals before it ceases to go on its mission. Perseverance in well doing is said to be the secret of success, and with this truth in view onward and upward shall be our motto, and we feel assured as long as we continue to work for the promotion of the good cause alone, the truly good will rally to our support.

These dear pilgrims are our conclusion for the future, and we earnestly desire that you remember us at a throne of grace, that we may find help in time of need. J. B. B.

ITEMS.

——The Chicago Pulpit, Vol 1, No. 1 is on our table. It is an octavo, sixteen page weekly and is to contain each week, a sermon by leading ministers of Chicago. It is to be the organ of no sectarian party, but all religious denominations will be represented. Those that wish to have the benefit of Chicago oratory, and its original brain thought, should send $ 2.50 to "The Index Company," publishers, 105 West Randolph St. Chicag Ill.

——In the obituary notice of brother J. Brindle, our figures make his age 78 years, where it should be 77, and his deaconship 45 years instead of 35. Bro. Miller says he thinks it was a mistake of the printers, but they think it was a slip of Bro. Miller's pen. We are not able to decide who made it as the copy is lost, but hope it will be satisfactory now.

P. S. MYERS. By your request we inform you that your PILGRIM, M. F. H. K's, and E. H's is paid for until May 1st 1872

——"The First Grave" will appear in our next. It breathes the pathos of a regenerated soul, and know that it will prove a "balm of Gilead" to many a heaven home sick soul.

J. W. ZIGLER:—Our books are offered for the benefit of those who raise clubs to the a nount of the affixed prices, but if any fail to get the desired number, they can still have the book by paying the balance, but in all cases should raise the amount in subscribers as near as possible. Our agents would oblige us by informing us what book they are working for, so that we may be enabled to order such books as are needed. The book you wish contains 163 pages, and is a very good one of its class.

DIED.

WILT.—At the Blair Co. infirmary, Nov. 12th, 1871, of Small Pox, JOHN WILT in the 25 year of his age.

The subject of this notice was deprived of his mother when quite small, when his grandmother and aunt took him as a member of their small family. About a year previous to his death his dear old grandmother, sister Susan Wilt, after a painful illness, was called to bid this world adieu and pass through the valley of the shadow of death, to yonder world of bliss. After this bereavement their little family circle was broken, and he entered into business in the city of Altoona, Pa., where he was taken with the loathsome disease Small Pox. From his boarding-place of that city he was removed to the Blair Co., infirmary Nov. 2nd, and Sabbath evening at 10 o'clock Nov. 12th, after an intense suffering he breathed his last. The day following at 10 A. M. his body was entered in the graveyard connected with the Blair Co. almshouse quite contrary to the wishes of his aunt, sister Annie Wilt, who wishes to have his body removed to the Brethren's graveyard near Duncansville, Pa. He was a promising young man, but the icy hand of death had marked him as a victim and called him to his home above. He had not united with any one branch of the church, but had strong faith in the church of the Brethren "Be ye also ready, for ye know not the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh." To-day, Dec. 31st 1871, his funeral sermon was preached by brother James A. Sell to those who had assembled to hear the word preached, at the church at Duncansville, Pa. He read the 14th chapter of Job. Text, Job 14: 14. "If a man die shall he live again?" We trust that while his body lies mouldering in the tomb, that his spirit dwells above, in the abode of the blest, to sing hallelujahs with those who have gone before. We trust, from his last words, that his friends need not sorrow as those who have no hope. Peace to his ashes. E. R. S.

LEINARD—In Black River Church Medina Co., Ohio, Nov. 6th 1871, sister ELIZABETH LEINARD, age not known but supposed to be about 100 years old. Funeral services by the brethren Jos. Rittenhouse and S. Garber from Gen. 13: 19.

BOLLINGER—Also same place Dec. 17th, 1871, SUSAN BOLLINGER, daughter of Bro. Gideon and sister Lydia Bollinger, aged 13 year, 10 months and 4 days. Disease, inflamation of the bowels. Funeral services by the brethren Rittenhouse and Garver, from Job 14: 1, 2.

RITTENHOUSE.—In same place December 18th 1871, EMMA JANE RITTENHOUSE, daughter of Jacob and sister Sarah Rittenhouse, aged 4 months and 18 days. Funeral services by brethren S. Garver and Gideon Bollinger, from Luke 8: 52.

TOBIAS HOOVER.

Visitor and Companion, please copy.

MILLER.—In Logan branch, Logan Co., Ohio, on the 7th of October 1871, Andrew, infant son of friend Samuel and Elizabeth MILLER, aged 1 year, 1 month and 15 days. Funeral sermon preached by brethren J. L. Frantz and M Snowberger, from Matthew 18: 3.

KAYLER.—In Washington township, Logan county, on the 21st day of November 1871, infant daughter of Oliver Kayler and wife. His wife died only a few weeks previous to the death of the child. Funeral sermon preached by J. L. Frantz, from Luke 18: 16.

PICKERING.—In the Logan branch, Logan county, Ohio, on the 30th day of November 1871, our friend ISAAC PICKERING, aged about 38 years. He leaves a kind companion, a sister in the Church, and four small children to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon preached by brethren J. N. Kauffman, J. L. Frantz and M. Swonger, from Matt. 24: 44.

HERSHBERGER.—Near Port Jefferson, Shelby county, Ohio, on the 23rd day of November 1871, our beloved brother Jonas Hershberger, aged 71 years, 1 month and 8 days.

He was was a deacon in the Church for many years. He leaves a kind companion, a sister, and several children to mourn their loss, but we hope their loss is gain Funeral sermon preached by brethren J. L. Frantz, B. Keyser and Peter Stroubel, from 3 Tim. 4: 6, 7, 8, to a large concourse of people.

YODER.—On the 28th of December 1871, in Union township, Logan county, Ohio, OLORA BELL, daughter of friend Rudy and Elizabeth YODER, aged 5 years and 28 days. Disease diphtheria. Funeral sermon preached by Eld. David Murry, of Montgomery county, Ohio, being with us at the time, and J. L. Frantz and John King, minister of the Omish Church.

J. L. FRANTZ.

Correspondence.

Dear Pilgrim:—The invitations for preaching are still multiplying, without the power to comply. A few months ago there came a women with a sick husband to Dr. Solomon (a brother) near Alaena, this county, (Vanburen). The Dr. examining him told the man he could not live here much longer, and asked him whether he was prepared to die. He replied in the negative, so the Dr. preached unto him and his wife Jesus. This proved acceptable, for says he, "This is the doctrine that I believe in, but could find no people that practice the same, and if the people that you belong to carry out what you have said, I want to be baptized." We were informed of this, and went and baptized the man, and his wife and her old parents. A very large audience looked on with solemnity, many never heard such doctrine, nor seen such baptism. This new religion was talked about wherever people met. Some hooted at it, but others advocated it and especially when it came to the ears of such from Pa., and Ohio, who were somewhat acquainted with the Church. They would describe the people called Dunkers, as the best in the world: hence the desire for preaching, but what can one or two brethren do that have to labor and toil for a living and keep up a good name? We have however agreed to go by the 1st of January about 30 miles from here, South of Kalamazoo, and spend a week in one place. That is generally the request to preach the whole of our faith and practice before dismissing the subject.

Another call is made 4 miles East of Kalamazoo. The circumstance that brought forth the request is this: A young women learned of this doctrine, whose father stood in an official capacity in the city of Kalamazoo, in one of the popular Churches, but but declared that they did not carry out the doctrine of the Gospel, and especially baptism, being convinced that it should be by Trine Immersion, withdrew himself, and so died, not knowing that there was a people in the world with whom he could unite. This daughter when finding such people, and so close at hand, (about 20 miles) felt grieved to tears. Such cases I could multiply in my acquaintance, which causes me to grieve over it, and to call on the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into the field, since we have been defeated again and again by calling on men. I should have mentioned, that sick brother was very anxious to live in the community of this new found people, and went South in the hope that the climate would help him, and so it did relieve him of the burden of this life. He wasted away gradually, and fell asleep in peace to wake at the sound of Gabriel's trump. His sorrowing wife and little ones came back, by the kindness of the people where her husband died, who had done all the kindness to them while he lived that they could, and had him buried decently and in Christian order, and then bought her a through ticket to her home. Though I cannot tell the names of these people, and even forget the town and place of their residence, yet such acts of charity are not forgotten by Him who will say "Whatsoever you have done to the least of my brethren, you have done it unto me."

F. P. LOEHR.

Bloomingdale, Mich.

MECHANICSBURG, PA.
January 4th, 72.

Dear Brethren of the Pilgrim:—

Our series of meetings are over, and we could sing with truth, "How loth I've been to leave the place, where Jesus shows His smiling face." We had not only apprised you, but also invited you to attend our then contemplated meeting at Baker's Meeting-house. Bros. Joseph Sherfy and D. Longenecker attended, and labored for us. Bro. Sherfy commenced on the 18th of Nov. and left on the morning of the 27th.—Brother Longenecker came on the 20th, and left on the morning of the 28th. Grabill Myers came on the 27th and had three meetings in Mechanicsburg. On the whole we had a season of refreshing and good meetings, and hope impressions were made that will not soon be forgotten.

We had agreed in council several months before the first meeting commenced, that we would have another in December at Mohler's M. H. So we had one meeting in town on the eve. of the 22nd, next eve. commenced at Mohler's. The brethren we had expected to labor at this time were J. D. Trostle, and G. W. Brumbaugh. The latter having failed to come, Bro. Trostle was all the stranger we had to preach for us during this last meeting. He preached sixteen times, from the 22nd to the close of the 31st,—left for home on New Year's morning.

Oh! what a blessed time, to sit under the droppings of God's rich sanctuary so oft, and to see so plainly that it is no vain thing to serve the Lord. Well a few have been made willing to say, "I want to go with you," with others we hope the door will open soon, and they too will say "I will." In short I think we have already realized a little of the truth of Jesus words where He says that "Both he that soweth and he that reapeth shall rejoice together." Much is said by some who profess to be preachers, about not muzzling the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn &c. But I can confidently say that those dear brethren who labored and tread out the corn for us, that they have not only fed the flock with us, and gave each his meat in due season, but they have shared with us and taken large supplies with them that they can feast many days. May those seasons be long remembered with us and them. Amen.

MOSES MILLER.

Dear Pilgrim:—For the satisfaction of your readers, I inform you that I was to see my dear uncle Adam Hollinger, and it was his request that I should make a statement of his condition. I was to see him on the 22nd of Dec., and found him in much pain. His sufferings are very great. The tumor is doing pretty well, but has a bad cough and is quite bed sore. His sufferings are so great that he sometimes does not sleep any for two or three nights. In his affliction he gets very lonely, and is glad to have brethren and friends come and see him. He still solicits the prayers of those who are interested in his welfare, and sends his love to all who know him.

Dear reader, if you are not a pilgrim to that better world on high, delay not. Remember the many warnings you have received, and perhaps some of them from my dear afflicted uncle who is now prostrated on his bed of affliction. You may hear his voice no more until you meet at the judgement bar of God.

Dear uncle, be encouraged, and remember there is a balm in Gilead that will certainly heal. If this body must soon dissolve, you have the promise of a more glorious body eternal in the Heavens, where we all can soon strike glad hands, where parting shall be known no more.

KATIE E. KELLER.

Dickenson, Pa.

Bro. Adam and family has our sympathies and not ours alone but of all the saints, and our prayer is that the Lord may sustain him in his day of trouble. Adopt the language of one of old, "Though the Lord slay me yet will I put my trust in him," and remember that it hath been said, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and recognizeth every son whom he receiveth.

Sister M. A. G. Ecker says: Although we are slow acknowledging an approval, we are not tired of your visits, nor weary of the weekly interviews we have had together. And as the name of one subscriber will teach you to remember that there is such a place as Walnut Bottom, and will also serve to remind us that the PILGRIM still exists, you will please continue the same.

Yes we have learned to think of Walnut Bottom, as a place where kindred spirits dwell. May we not hope that that spirit in its isolated condition will be prompted to indite some of its spiritual musings for the comfort and consolation of many bruised and weeping hearts that are longing for the crumbs that fall from the table of the saints.

NOTICE.

This informs my brethren and friends who have their names on my list for PILGRIM of 1871 and have not yet paid, I have moved to Somerset, and therefore cannot attend to it. All those that are in arrears will please send it to the publishers, instead of sending it to me. I know of some who have paid, and of others who have not. Those should attend to it at once, as I think the PILGRIM should be a welcome visitor to every Christian family.

D. G. LINT.

Somerset, Pa.

MONEY LIST.

Joseph Hoover,	3.00
Jacob Mohler,	11.25
H. J. Shellenberger,	5.00
James R. Lane,	5.00
Barbara Beshore,	1.25
B. F. Moomaw,	3.75
J. B. Replogle,	1.25
Andrew Snowberger,	1.25
John Brindle,	5.00
Wm. Panebaker,	10.00
H. Renner,	11.25
John Shank,	1.50
D. F. Good,	11.00
Mary Spanogle,	5.00
S. M. Smith,	1.25
Jonathan M. Meyers,	3.10
D. M. Foglesonner,	6.25
James L. Sears,	2.50
Dr. D. P. Fahrney,	1.25
Ella Williams,	1.25
John Pfautz,	1.25
Keelin Leonard,	2.50
Samuel Burget,	5.00
M. M. Custer,	6.25
Anna Boyer,	7.50
Peter H. Lehman,	1.50
Harrison Speck,	1.25
A. H. Kauffman,	1.25
Mrs. Lydia Snavely,	1.25
David Stayer,	1.25
Amanda J. Zimmmerman,	.75
Emanuel Hoover,	1.25
David Buckingham,	6.75
Jonas Leedy,	1.25
Peter Bechtel,	1.50
Jacob Friedly,	1.25
H. Beelman,	6.25
Philip Boyle,	3.75
S. M. Mummert,	3.75
Wm. H. Franklin,	1.25
Martha Hutton,	1.25
Fred. W. Kohler,	4.90
John Montgomery,	5.00
J. Newcomer,	2.50
E. W. Stoner,	4.50
John W. Gish,	10.00
Joseph Mohler,	.62
S. Bollinger,	3.75
Jacob C. Grossnickle,	1.50
J. S. Snider,	.75
Louisa Sappington,	1.25
John W. Zigler,	2.50
Chatham Centre,	8.75
John S. Newcomer,	3,75
Abraham Showalter,	5.63
B. Brumbaugh,	3.75
M. A. G. Ecker,	1.25
D. Heckman,	5.00
David M. Foglesonner,	1.25
Andrew Bechtel,	2.50
Annie S. Miller,	1.25
J. H. Ulrick,	.50
J. L. Frantz,	22.00
Isaac Brumbaugh,	1.25
Leonard Furry,	10.00
John R. Flohr,	1.25
Samuel Ryman,	1.50
E. B. Shaver,	1.25
George Barnhart,	3.75
Jacob Zigler,	1.25
Peter Pfoutz,	6.25
J. M. Wells,	3.75
M. Emma Rohrer,	3.75
Moses Miller,	23.00
George H. Sweigart,	1.25
Geo. Brumbaugh, for Hawa Congregation,	15.00
Wm. Malory,	1.25
Jacob Garber,	3.00
Wm. Domer,	12 50

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

SAD STATE OF THE ALABAMA CHURCHES.—A Baptist paper has the following from a correspondent: "With few exceptions, the Baptist Churches in Alabama are in a lifeless, or at least thriftless condition. Home revivals there have been during the year, but small is the number of working converts received,—and of what service are dead children added to the family? Few pastors are supported. Valuable ministers have left the State, and are yet leaving. Little money is being collected for the cause of missions. The poor students for the ministry at Howard College, or who should go there, cannot be supported. The Baptist Convention of the State recently met at Montgomery, but it did little more than speechify and resolve. Not five hundred dollars in cash, as I think, could be raised for the most pressing objects."

The Baptists of Novia Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, sustain thirty native preachers and two Bible women, who labor among the Burmese, Karens and Shans. They now propose to send two missionaries to a new field in Siam.

THE ANTI-BIBLE WAR RENEWED.—The war upon the Bible in the School at Hunter's Point, has been renewed, and now the conflict is between the Trustees who represent the Roman Catholic, and the Commissioners who represent the people. The Trustees claim authority over the building, and threaten to close it if the reading of the Bible is continued. They have forbidden the reading of the Bible. The Board of Commissioners deny the right of the Trustees to interfere in any way either with the school discipline or property. They say that the charter especially provides for the duties of both Boards, and that the duties of the Trustees are limited to the financial matters of the district. The Commissioners have notified the Principal to take no notice of the Trustees, and to continue the reading of the Bible as usual. The document has been passed over to Corporation-Attorney Stevens, and in all probability action will be commenced against the Trustees for interfering in the duties of the schools. The Roman Catholic population are very bitter against Mr. Sieberg the Principal. The exercises in the school are suspended until after the holydays, when it is apprehended the Roman Catholics will re-open hostilities.

HEAVY SNOWS IN THE WEST.—There has been unusually heavy falls of snow on the line of the Pacific Railroad and in other parts of West. A dispatch from Omaha of the 25th says:

Rawlins Station reports that no trains have passed either way since the 21st, and no prospect of any passing for two or three days. Laramie Station reports three trains lying there for the West. A despatch from Dubuque of the same date says: The recent snowstorm was very severe in Northern Iowa, blocking all the roads. With one exception, there have been no trains from the West into Dubuque since Friday last, until this evening. The snow is effectually blocking the roads, and breaking the telegraph wires in every direction. The snow is reported as ten feet deep on a level in Little Cotton-wood mining district, Utah, and it was still snowing. Freighting ore from the mines is nearly suspended. The Sun had not been seen for a week.

GALES IN THE WEST.—A heavy gale of wind passed over the Western States on Saturday last. At Toledo, Ohio, the telegraph lines were prostrated and damage was done to roofs. The spire of the First Baptist Church was blown down, falling upon and partially crushing an adjoining dwelling. At Springfield, Ills., it blew down an immense skating rink and the new rolling-mills of the Springfield Iron Company, and entirely destroyed the round-house of the Gilman, Clinton and Springfield Railroad, besides tearing off several roofs, toppling over chimneys, levelling fences, &c. The loss cannot be less than $50.000. In Indianapolis, a portion of the roof of St. John's Cathedral was crushed by the falling of the upper part of one of the front towers. At Lafayette, Ind., a large number of the buildings were unroofed, including the Second National Bank building, Post-office and telegraph buildings. Several persons were injured.

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subscribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers—many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.35.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook, being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. O. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiqnity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not Marry. For both Sexes. By S. R. wells. Plain, $1.50; Extra gilt. $2.00

1872 1872

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD.

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

USE DR. FAHRNEY'S BLOOD CLEANSER OR

PANACEA.

Established 1780 package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form, which was brought to its present high degree of perfection some years later by Dr. Peter Fahrney, Chicago, Ills., who conducts the trade West of Ohio. Unsurpassed remedy and cure, being an alterative and cathartic, or tonic and purge combined, for diseases arising from impure blood, such as sick-headache, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Erysipelas, Chills and Fever, Worms, Scrofula, Pimples Tetter &c. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Ask for that made at Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa. and Chicago, Ills. Beware of imitation. Genuine retails at $1,25 per Bottle. Druggists and others sell it. Many ministers are introducing it and give encouraging reports of its great virtues gives the history and uses of the PANACEA, testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge.

"Dr. Fahrney's Health Messenger."

Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.

J 13 tf Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr. J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

A Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.

Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Trancient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS.

Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address Monroe Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 2.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABSQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871. Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex.	Mail	Stations.	Down Trains. Ex.	Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 30
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 23
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 12
6 05	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 58	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 38
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48		7 18
Le 7 30	10 00	Saxton	7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 10	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 06
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50. Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county. Pa.

Weekly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JANUARY 16, 1872. NO 3

For the Pilgrim.

THE FIRST GRAVE.

I remember when quite a child, how far away that seems, attending the funeral of a relative. It was my first experience of death and the grave, and my soul shrank back on itself, when I saw that still pulseless form and icy brow. And when we all stood around the grave my father took my hand, and leading me forward bade me look into it. It was the first time I had to contemplate the end of all things earthly, and even now a chill of horror runs through my frame as the memory of that awful moment comes over me, and I see again the deep dark gloomy abode, in which my lovely friend was soon to be lost to me forever. I hear again the voice of the man of God saying; "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble, he cometh forth as the flowers and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not."

As a child I saw only the damp earth, the solemn procession and weeping friends, now as one older, I look beyond the things that made death terrible, and the grave dismal, to the rift in the cloud through which we see the glory of the Celestial City, and the white robed angels waiting to welcome the disembodied spirit home to fairer scenes on high. The grave is not the end of life, of hope, of peace and happiness, but the gate thrown open wide, through which mortality passes to immortality—through which corruption puts on incorruption, and in which death is swallowed up in victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Wretched indeed would be our lot were earth the all of life, and the grave the end of existence, but—

> "Life is real, life is earnest,
> And the grave is not its goal,
> Dust thou art, to dust returneth
> Was not spoken of the soul."

Could we believe in annihilation, that our lives might be given up to pleasure and things of sense, we would still be unhappy, for the restless germ—the God given spirit, will not rest satisfied with husks,—"Angel's Food" alone will satisfy its cravings; no poison however gilded will or can hush its repinings for the light and freedom of the upper skies. No matter how low and debased a man becomes, there are times when the soul awaking from its lethargy sighs for its lost estate,—its Eden of love and purity.

Hope may be buried, and happiness a stranger to our firesides, yet light will some day penetrate the darkness, and our loved and lost ones will come to us all glorious to behold. No matter how gloomy our pathway in life may be, there is always the promise, "Lo! I am with you alway even to the end of the world."

If, dear reader, you have ever known what it is to make graves in your heart, and weep unavailing tears over the perfidy of friends—if you have known what it is to have those you have loved and trusted betray you and scorn you,—then you can understand what it is to have the heart an open sepulchre, full of dead memories, hopes and friendships; and over these graves roll the stone and set the seal, for to them there is no light springing up in darkness, no future radiant with hope, and no resurrection morn filled with glad fruition. Over their portals is written "Silentio, Silentio." What bitter mockery is life when we turn from the grave of buried love to an unsympathetic work-a-day world,—God alone can comfort them—His everlasting arms are around, and all is well.

In ages long gone by, the earth on some sunny hillside slope, just beyond Eden's walls, was opened to receive the first offering in the sin of transgression, and as the vail from those twin hearts went up to Heaven over the grave of the first victim, methinks the sons of God must have veiled their faces and wept in sympathy. It was cold and desolate then, for no ray from the resurrection morn had shot athwart the gloom, and unfolded that grave, the only one in the wide world, in its glorious light. To those weeping ones had not been given the blessed words "I am the resurrection and the life."

And shall we go, as did Mary, of old to weep over that other grave where they laid our Lord and Master? No, Oh! No! He is not there, He is risen and become the first fruits of them that slept. Around that lonely tomb cluster our happiest thoughts, for the night is past, morning dawns, and Christ our life has appeared all glorious with the stamp of immortality on His brow! And taking up the angel chorus, we shout "Glory to God on High."

LAURA H. MILLER.

Easton, W. Va.

For the Pilgrim.

A REPLY TO BROTHER D. F. GOOD'S SECOND QUERY IN NO. 48.

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock."

Brother Good asks, "what door is referred to." I understand the door to be man's will. "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land." Isa. 1: 19. The Scriptures throughout teach us, that man must become willing to submit His will, to the will of God. And, although many may seem to be the hindrances to salvation, yet none so great as self-will. On the part of God all is prepared. God desires the sinners salvation. For this Christ died; to this end He rose again. For this the Gospel is preached, for this purpose the Holy Spirit "reproves the world," and what a wise plan God has adopted for our salvation, well could Paul say, "Who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption," 1st Cor. 1: 30. But this wisdom many will not receive. God's wisdom is represented as, "She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the door: Unto you, O men, I call! and my voice is to the sons of man. Prov. 8: 3, 4. "The Spirit and the bride say come." The mighty God, even the Lord hath spoken, and called unto the earth from the rising of the sun until the going down thereof. He calls by various means, and with different voices: by His spirit, His word, and many ways to stop the sinner, but it is, as it was when the Redeemer was on earth, "Eyes they have and see not, ears and hear not, hearts and understand not." And why? Simply because the DOOR is shut. We well remember the time ourselves, brethren and sisters, when our gates were all closed, the ear gates closed up, so that we were deaf to the voice of God, the eye gates closed so that we could scarcely see anything, the mouth gate closed so that we could scarcely talk about religion, yes, apparently tongue tied, but when we become willing, Oh what a change! Why the brethren now preach different. Why I have never heard such things before; and why? Simply because the ear gates were open. We also see different, and could say, "I see men as trees walking." The Bible seemed to be a new book, "and" we have seen strange things to-day, our mouth gate has also opened, and in short, "every ones bonds were loosed," and "and a new song put in our mouth," &c. All this because we have become willing. To the Jews the Savior said, "And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." John 5: 40. Their door was shut. In conclusion I will say, as long as we have a perfect will to do God's will in all things, our door will be open, and this being the case, God has placed before us an "open DOOR," which no man can shut. May God grant this, for he is able to work in us both to will and to do his good pleasure.

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

A wise son heareth his father's instruction: but a scorner heareth not rebuke.

A man shall eat good by the fruit of his mouth: but the soul of the transgressors shall eat violence.

For the Pilgrim.

SALVATION.

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation." Heb. 3 : 2.

Salvation is a preservation from destruction, or eternal death. We propose to treat it under two heads, temporal and spiritual. By a temporal salvation we want it understood that there is danger pending, and means must be used to avert that danger. We all know what it is to be in danger. When we see it we are very likely to get out of harm's way. In the first place, we must be made sensible there is danger. This may be in various ways; first by beholding it with our natural eye, or by hearing it from a friend in whom we have confidence to believe will not mislead us.

For instance, if we saw a tree about to fall where we were seated, we would make an effort to get out of the way; or if we were at a certain point, and a friend would call to us, "get out of the way that tree is falling," if we had confidence in the friend we would take heed to the warning, and by so doing we would avert the danger of being killed. Now what would be the result if we took not warning, after the kind friend had lent a helping hand by calling while he could not get to us in time to drag us away.

Heb. 11 : 7. says, "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heirs of righteousness which is by faith." Faith then is the leading principle to all action, and without faith it is impossible to please God. But faith without works is dead, being alone, we see in the chapter above named, what wonders those ancient worthies wrought by faith and works. These all died in faith not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, were persuaded of their truthfulness, which caused them to confess that they were strangers and pilgrims on earth. When Jonas was sent to the Ninevites, he went three days journey into the city and began to say unto them, "yet forty days and Nineveh shall be destroyed." Temporal destruction was awaiting them; a fearful doom hung over the city. But when they heard the man of God telling of the impending danger, fear fell upon them, having faith in what was proclaimed they repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes from the king upon the throne down to the beggar, and even to the beasts of burden. All animated nature was required to put on the habiliments of mourning, so that if possible, temporal salvation might be brought to them. God looking down from his holy habitation saw that they desired mercy, and granted their request by sparing their city. Oh! the abundant mercy of God visibly set forth to erring mortals, it will apply even now to you, poor sinner.

The news of Sodom and Gomorrah, when it reached the portals of Heaven, caused Almighty God to send messengers which came along and paid a short visit to our Father Abraham, who thought it no burden to kill a fatted calf, and cause a little water to be brought, and wash their feet, and set meat before them, and entertain them as long as practicable. But when he heard his visitors were going to Sodom to investigate the iniquity of the city, he had fearful forebodings. First because he had a brother there, and second, for fear the city would be doomed. He now began to interrogate his agreeable company by saying, "Oh! will you spare the city if there be fifty righteous found there?" His solemn appeals, no doubt, were very affecting, which caused God to remember his mercy toward the human family, and gave an affirmative answer, saying, "your request is granted." This caused Abraham to renew his request by diminishing the probable number of righteous, and continued his requests until he reduced them to the number of ten, and that request was granted. "Again I say." Oh! the mercy and long suffering of God, in sparing that great city filled with debauchery and wickedness, for the sake of ten righteous persons.—With this understanding they left Abraham and journeyed toward the destined place; then entered into the city and drew near to the house of Lot, who seeing them opened his door and kindly received them into his house. When their mission was set before him, we see Lot hastening out to his near friends telling them, our city is going to be destroyed, flee for your life! But they received the news as it were an idle tale. Why? Because they lacked faith, not even having confidence in their earthly parent who volunteered to warn them of the impending danger. They were not as noble as were those of Ninevah, and lamentable to say, there could not the number of ten be found, neither could they be induced to repent, so the fearful calamity must come, and who ever has faith in the Bible will say, Sodom and Gomorrah was burned with a fearful destruction—nothing left to mark the spot to a certainty. How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?—Many more circumstances might be brought up to show that we will not escape if we neglect to hear, even a temporal salvation, but our article would get too lengthy. We will see what benefits are afforded to us looking at it from a spiritual stand-point.

Paul when having occasion to give us his understanding about the text, no doubt looked at it with carefulness, and came to the conclusion that there is no way of escape, for he says in the verse above "for if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape?" There is no way of escape, the law of God is unalterable, and will stand both for time and eternity. The Savior says, "the words which I have spoken they shall judge you in the last days."—

Sin came into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men for all have sinned, and because of sin, he was driven out of the garden and away from God, and eternal destruction awaited him, and would have engulfed him had not Jesus Christ volunteered to redeem him.—Then the means of salvation was brought by Jesus Christ, who was mediator between God and man, so that man might be reconciled into favor and fellowship with God again. Should we not have much respect for him, seeing he has opened up a new a living way for us to enjoy the benefits of salvation, and brought to light things hidden from the foundation of the world. John wept much because there were none in Heaven or in earth that was able to open the Book or loose the Seals. But the angel consoled him by saying, the Lion of the tribe of Judah hath prevailed to open the Book and loose the Seals thereof, and it cost nothing less than the shedding of his blood upon Mount Calvary, to clear the way for us; otherwise eternal destruction would have been our doom.

Now the matter has been brought so far, that by faith we can see it, and an invitation is given to enjoy the benefit thereof. Will we now have confidence in him, who so kindly has gone to the trouble of opening the Book and giving us the invitation, or will we not? The Apostle says, "Cast not away your confidence, for it hath great recompense of reward." Again he says "we are embassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."

An embassador is a public minister of the first rank which Paul was, and in his able addresses to the people, he showed them their unreconciled condition, and those who had faith in him were benefitted. Paul's successors are still engaged in the same occupation, and they that have faith are still receiving the benefits of eternal salvation, as well as those who heard Paul preach, and those who do not have faith, (that is a practical faith,) will not receive any benefit from the labors which the embassadors performed in Christ's stead at the present day. But we rejoice to know that our labor is not all in vain, for we see there are still some who take heed to the things they hear, and do not let them slip, yet we again feel sorry that many, yea, very many, do neglect to hear, therefore according to the language of the Apostle "how shall we escape."

Now kind reader we would say to you in conclusion of this article, while God in his mercy has made it possible for us to obtain salvation for our never dying souls, let us come to the conclusion the Prodigal did, and arise and go to our father and say, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son, make me as one of thy hired servants, and show to the world a practical faith of the religion of Jesus Christ, enter into the church militant and live a godly life, and you are assured of entering into the church triumphant, and what a glorious time we will have! The poet says,

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun
We've no less days to sing God's praise,
Than when we first begun."

GEORGE WORST.

ADVANTAGES OF AFFLICTION. NO. 3.

"But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew,"—Ex. 1. 12.

In the preceding Nos. I tried to show and illustrate how that from the calling of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, God did, from obscure and small beginnings, through the patriarchs, continue his Church, making apparently slow progress at first, and sometimes to pass through intricate and afflictive dispensations of His Providence. But this only serves to establish and increase it the more, until it became very numerous under the cruel oppression of Pharaoh, "But the more he afflicted them the more they multiplied and grew," in number, strength, and power. The whole history of their oppression and affliction, under Pharaoh, is typical and figurative of the Church, oppression and persecution by Satan, the spiritual Pharaoh, and his adherents, and hence will apply in after ages to the Church and her enemies. In the history of David and his persecution, we have this subject further illustrated: I will here first notice his obscure birth place, Bethlehem, as being, "little among the thousands of Judah." It is not enumerated among the other cities of Judah. Joshua, 15th chapter. It was here that King David was born, and is still more sacred as the birth place of the King of Kings, the blessed Savior of whom he, David, was an eminent type. Such was the wonder working Providence of God, at that eventful period in the history of the Israelites, which we now proceed to consider: The career of king Saul was soon to end. His disobedience of the divine commands had caused the forfeiture of his crown. "I have rejected him from reigning over Israel," was the declaration of God to the prophet Samuel. "Fill thy horn with oil, and go. I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlehemite, for I have provided me a king among his sons." When Samuel saw Eliab, he said, "Surely the Lord's anointed is before him," but the Lord said, "Look not on his countenance, or the heighth of his stature, because I have refused him for the Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance but the Lord looketh on the heart.

David being the youngest son of Jesse, and the last and least in the estimation of his father, brethren, and the prophet, he appears to be made king. "Again Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel, and he said unto Jesse, the Lord hath not chosen these. Are here all thy children? And he said there remaineth yet the youngest, send and fetch him, and when he came the Lord said arise, and anoint him, for this is he." And the spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward, but the spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit troubled him." 1st Samuel, 16: 1-14. From this time on we may safely infer from the sacred narrative, that David and his kingdom began to increase and gather strength, and Saul and his kingdom to decrease and get weaker, so also did his trials and afflictions increase, as the opposition and persecution increased and raged through Saul. Soon after, Saul was engaged in war with the Philistines, and their champion Goliah said, "I defy the armies of Israel this day, give me a man that I may fight together. When Saul and all Israel heard those words they were dismayed and greatly afraid." On David's arrival at the camp he learned the circumstances respecting Goliah, and expressed a wish to engage with him in contest. "And David said to Saul, let no man's heart fail because of him." Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear. The Lord that delivered me out of the jaw of the lion, and out of the jaw of the bear, will deliver me out of the hand of the Philistine. And David said to the Philistine, thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear and shield, but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hosts, the God of the armies of Israel whom thou defiest, for the battle is the Lord's." A noble example of faith and trust in God, and a beautiful type of the efficacy and triumph of faith over all spiritual enemies, as Paul exhorted the Ephesians to put on the whole armor of God in their spiritual warfare, "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world and spiritual wickedness in high places."—Eph. 6: 12. 13. & 2nd Cor. 10. 4. "So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and a stone, &c. And when the Philistines saw their champion was dead, they fled, and the men of Israel and Judah arose and shouted and pursued them."

The great victory over Goliah and the whole army of the Philistines had been as a turning point in the career of king David. His noble soul and heroism like a powerful magnetic, attracted to him such like noble men as Jonathan, Saul's son, "whose soul was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." A type of the love, union, and communion which the Christian and the Church has to Christ, its head, "who sticketh closer than a brother," "whose love is strong as death." "And it came to pass when David was returned from the slaughter of the Philistines, that the women came out of all the cities of Israel singing, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands, and Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased him, and he said what can he have more than the kingdom, and Saul eyed David from that day forward." Then he began to afflict and persecute him, "but the more he afflicted them, the more he multiplied and grew." "And David behaved himself wisely in all his ways and the Lord was with him, and Saul hated him, and was afraid of him because the Lord was with him, but all Israel and Judah loved David."—1 Samuel, 18: 1-16.

D. NEGLEY.

MEN CONVINCED OF SIN BY MIRACLES.

BY EMANUEL EMBAUGH.

"So Samuel called unto the Lord; and the Lord sent thunder and rain that day; and all the people greatly feared the Lord and Samuel." 1 Sam. 12: 18.

We infer from the tenor of the above language that the hearts of the people became so much addicted to sin, and they became so self-willed that it became necessary for the man of God to resort to some supernatural power in order to cause them to repent of their evil desires and actions. The people alluded to in the above desired that a king should reign over them, but this desire possessed as a peculiarity their own self-will, and was not the will of the holy prophet, neither was it the will of God; hence inasmuch as the earnest entreaties and logical reasonings of the man of God were without avail, it became necessary for him to appeal to that power which can subdue kings and demolish kingdoms, and even rivet conviction of error upon the mind by miraculous power when more gentle means will fail. The prophet apprised the people of the fact that the Lord would intervene in this matter and then in an humble and contrite manner did not only bow the knee in adoration, but also lifted the heart in thankfulness to God and his voice ascending, he implored the acknowledged Creator and Protector of all things to intercede in behalf of these people, when lo! the sky became dark and gloomy, the fearful peals of thunder began to be heard, and the vivid flashes of lightning became so sensibly visible, that all the people began to fear the Lord, and also the holy prophet. Thus was this people brought to repentance by miraculous power. Although we do not believe that God will in this age of the world, call the wicked who are determined to willingly, plunge headlong into destruction, to repentance by miraculous power, we believe still that the times of miracles is not past. We are fully sensible of the fact that there are those in the world to-day who have been brought to repentance by the miraculous power of God. We are aware also that men and women have not only been thus caused to feel their need of Christ, and join the church of the living God, but those who have long walked with the disciples of the lowly Jesus along the path which he has marked out for them, with the blood which flowed from those gaping wounds inflicted upon Him by wicked hands, and have retained some darling sin, as an idol, or have been influenced by others to go partly back and wallow in the mire whether they have ever before wallowed in the same slough or not, have been called to repentance, either by being called to a bed of affliction themselves or by the loss or affliction of some kind friend. As jesting, idle and vain conversation, foolish talking &c., are necessary qualifications to lead men and women to endless misery or eternal death, shall those of us who engage in such things wait to see whether the Lord will wean us from them by miraculous power? If we know that these things are wrong, as we surely will if we love the Savior and read his word, we will see no miracles in this case, but if we cannot see the wrong or do not heed his word, perhaps we will.

THE GREAT OBJECT OF LIFE.

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, &c."

It is the conviction of every thinking mind that the "Sermon on the mount" of which our text is a part, expresses completely and concisely the very want of our spiritual natures. If there existed in my mind a doubt of the divinity of Jesus Christ, a perusal of this sermon would cast reproach upon me for my skepticism. "Seek first," what a lesson is here taught to parents. So bring your treasures to the Lord that he may be honored by your sacrifices; that you may teach your children by your example what their first duty is to God; that they should seek the Lord in their youth, and that you may teach that the sinner who has forgotten that he has a soul that will be either lost or saved, the existence of things of mightier importance than the accumulation of wealth. The text is very expressive. Seek implies not only a willingness to become a Christian, but a heartfelt desire, a searching anxiety for truth and righteousness. This is a work which the true christian believer never completes. There is no time when we can cease seeking. We need to practice all the means of grace to keep fires of faith burning. How vain then that man should expect to enter the Kingdom of Heaven, when he gives this subject only a casual thought. How often do we enter the abodes of those who profess the name of Christ and although we remain day after day we hear not the voice of prayer, or the words of that holy book called the Bible. That sacred volume is the compass which directs us to Heaven: and if we neglect it we will certainly lose the way. To seek the Lord is the only way to success in this life, for he promises that "all these things shall be added unto you." Why can we not believe the Lord and accept his road to success? Has he ever proved untrue? Has he ever deceived a single soul? Why then neglect his commands and follow him whom we know has ever deceived. Oh, that the Lord may open our eyes to our position, and enable us to see the danger that is threatening us. May we trust in him, obey his commands, seek his kingdom now and be saved. Herald of Truth.

DIE LIEBE.

Wie ist der Seel die Lieb so werth,
Wan sie sich hier zu Gott Bekehrt;
Nur noch ein Wunsch zu dieser zeit,
Du lieber Gott mach mich bereit.

Die Liebe glaubt, die Liebe duld'd,
Sie giebt dem andern keine Schuld,
Sie is allein was mich erfreut
So leb ich von Barmhertzigkeit.

JOSHUA HOFFER.

PAST AND THE FUTURE.

REMINISCENCES OF THE PAST.

The year just past was fraught with Providential importance, more especially so than any former one to my recollection. The raging elements, fire and water, have destroyed millions of property. Storms and tornadoes upset the plantings of Omnipotence, and Earthquakes overthrow cities constructed by man's ingenuity. Oh! how many shipwrecks, through which hundreds of living souls were swallowed up by a watery grave. The numerous accidents on railroads—the dreadful carnage caused by the smashing of cars—bodies mangled and smashed beyond recognition. The multiplied perpetrations of murder, and frequent suicides committed in our christian land, illuminated by the Gospel light, is the most regretted by the sober thinking christian character. Is it not revolting to the serious reflecting mind, that through the insinuation of the evil one, humanity will thus yield? But let us guard against his devices, and be constantly engaged in watching and prayer, lest we might be overcome by his artfulness. Disease, in its various forms, by the hand of death, has swept away thousands, made the fireside gloomy and [illegible] ded families, ties of matrimony [illegible]ved—father and mother separated from the fond embrace of their dear offspring; brothers and sisters [illegible]uted asunder, shedding gloom and sorrow over their once happy home.

Oh what distress! What misery and sorrow pervade the aching hearts, and fills the troubled souls of such who thus are left behind, without any hope of ever meeting their loved ones in a better land. Marvel not, my dear reader, when such solemn parting scenes cause the mourning relatives to be baptized in grief and tears. Solemn Reflections! if called from time to eternity out of Christ. But if prepared, though parting is grievous, yet will it be mingled with joy in the happy prospect of meeting in a world unalloyed with grief.

Young and old passed away—crossed over the valley of death in our vicinity the past year, of whom were three brethren and three sisters, in the bounds of our church; instead of these, by the gracious call of Almighty God, twenty-seven were added by baptism, and several by letter. May it please God, through the instrumentality of his ministers to double or triple that number this year. And may He who is able to subdue the most rebellious and stubborn sinner, revive his work in Zion to the conversion of thousands, is my solemn prayer. O let us, brethren and sisters, examine and see whether we have made progress in our divine life in the past year, and if not, let us speedily amend.

THOUGHTS ON THE FUTURE.

We have now entered on another year. A new era has commenced, a new scene of time begun. Let us now set out afresh for Heaven and happiness. We know what is past, at least, concerning our immediate neighborhood, but what will pass this year we know not.

How many, who now bid fair for a long life, and who are now blooming as a rose, may be mouldering in the grave ere this year is past. Perhaps your unworthy writer may be one of the number. But what of that—we know that we all must die once, and why not just as well this year as at some more future time? This is no matter of much importance. But here lies the important and solemn question, am I prepared to die? Can I rejoice seeing the day of redemption drawing nigh? Shall I meet the approbation of my Judge? Will my labors be accepted at His coming? Have I done my heavenly Father's will? If so, I am sure of reception, and shall hear the welcome plaudits, "Well done, thou faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

A word to the thoughtless. Think not while everything goes well with you, that on that account you are secure from death. Death is frequently an unexpected visitor, and often very unwelcome too. He is no respector of person nor age, neither does he look to convenience or suit himself to circumstances, nor wait until man is ready. He has met some on the celebrating altar of matrimony. He met with some, and a good many too, at the worship of the godess of fashion, while in idleness and folly, when engaged in cursing and swearing. He visits them in drinking saloons, in fits of drunkenness; while upon the stage in theatrical performances, upon the dancing floor, in gambling hells, in the prison cells, and on the gallows. Wo to that man. Wo to that woman, that meet thus with death.

But happy is he, who meets with death in the service of the Lord God Almighty. Then let us take warning and be ready, with this thought always upon our minds: May I not die this moment? Pray God for mercy, fear Him and keep His commandments, for who knoweth what God will do this present year. With this I wish you all a happy New Year. Amen.

LEONARD FURRY.

LIFE IS SHORT.

BY CHARLOTTE I. MASTERS.

Our time in this world is short, when compared with eternity—a long and endless eternity. Our grand object and great work in life, should be for the enjoyment of a fast approaching eternity. Another short year of our life has vanished away, and we know not how many more we have yet to live. Perhaps the present is the last year we shall live. The time may be shortly approaching when we will have to bid farewell to all around us, prepared or unprepared. Oh, what a solemn thought! With this New Year, then, let us resolve, that by the grace of God, we will live nearer to him than we have done heretofore. This world is not our home; we were not born to live here always. We are hastening on as fast as time can move us to our eternal home. If we are faithful, we will hear the blessed welcome, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." But if we are unfaithful we will hear the dreadful sentence, "Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

Let us then, try and be faithful servants of God, so that when the Son of Man shall come in all his glory, and all the holy angels with him, and before him shall all nations be gathered, and he shall separate them one from another, as "a shepheard divideth his sheep from the goats," we can be as the sheep at his right hand. Christ has given us a law, and that law is a perfect one, and can be easily complied with by those who are willing to deny themselves. Then let us deny ourselves, take up the cross and follow him, and stoop to the fountain of life, drink freely from the living stream that flows so freely by the heavenly path, and pluck from the tree of life a heavenly inheritance—pass calmly through the stream of Jordan—enter through the gates into the holy City, and live for ever and ever in that happy land.

May the year we've entered on,
Prove to us a happy one,
May our few remaining days,
Be well spent in prayer and praise.

Raven's Eye, W. Va.

YOUR WAGES.

A young lady who had recently given her heart to the Savior, was one day conversing with a former companion, endeavoring to persuade him to leave the path of sin and enlist with her in the service of the Lord.

"You know," said she, "that so long as you refuse to confess Christ and do his commandments, you are serving a hard master, and the wages of sin is death."

The young man listened with respectful attention, and as she paused a shade of serious thoughtfulness overspread his manly face; but, quickly throwing it off, he replied lightly,—

"Oh, I don't charge anything; he need't pay me off."

The wages he was earning were not desirable nor pleasing to contemplate; and he sought to banish from his mind all thoughts of the day of settlement, thinking, doubtless, that at some future time he would consider the matter of wages, and duly count the cost; but for the present he chose "the pleasures of sin for a season," and refused to accept a purchased pardon and the rich inheritance of eternal life through the Lord Jesus Christ.

"In less than two weeks from that time," said the lady, "I stood by the death-bed of that young man. And as I looked upon his noble face, and saw the pale lips closed in death, those words seemed to ring in my ears, 'He needn't pay me off.' Alas! he had rejected the gracious invitation once too often, and there was now no opportunity left him to make his peace with God. He died suddenly, and while his mind was wandering in delirium.

Reader, what are your wages? Are you spending "your money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not;" choosing sinful pleasures at the expense of heavenly peace; putting off all thoughts of the great reckoning day and the wages you will then receive; flattering yourself there is time enough yet, and that at some future day you will attend to your soul's eternal interest? Oh, sinner, beware! "Boast not thyself of to-morrow," for "Behold now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." And it may be that even now, in yielding to or rejecting the spirit of God pleading with you to be reconciled to Him, you are settling for time and for eternity, the matter of your wages and your destiny.

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." One is set over against the other;—sin's wages and God's gift. Which shall be yours? Will you earn death and reject life? Will you labor to be damned and refuse a free salvation? Will you not rather choose life that you may live, and live to die no more?—The Christian.

He that refuseth instruction despiseth his own soul; but he that heareth reproof getteth understanding.

MAN OF SIN.

Dear Pilgrim:—As we feel somewhat like writing to-night, we will try to get up an article for our little PILGRIM, and let our readers examine and judge for themselves, whether it is the truth of the matter or not. It is something more about Lucifer. You know we gave you some of our opinion some time ago in an article in the PILGRIM which was headed "Man of Sin." We still think about as we did then. We tried to tell you what we thought about that being. "The Son of Perdition" so far as we went, but we will try to go a little further now if we can. You know it says in the 2nd Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians, in the 2nd chap., that he sits in the temple showing himself that he is God &c. Well I'll tell you just where I think he comes in to show himself to be God. In order to come at what we want to explain about him (the devil.) suppose you undertake to be righteous, and you try every way to be good as near so as you understand any person can be, to be compared with the pattern laid down in the Bible, and after you travel along for some time, trying to improve in the divine life all you can by the help of God, but all the time, if you will notice right close, you can see there is some little imperfections, more or less daily, and if you will notice very closely, you will discover there is some little letting all the time. What I understand by this letting here, as it is called in the chapter named is, a slacking up of feeling or giving place for temptation and sin, evil thoughts entering the mind, where I think he sits, which is the temple he occupies that is spoken of in that verse where it says "He sits in the temple of God showing himself that he is God," and I think he got in that temple when our first parents transgressed. There and then is where he got in the temple. The body is the temple of God, and there is where I believe that the devil can be found sitting in the temple, as there is at all times a hindrance to getting exactly back to a desirable happy state of mind, which no doubt our first parents did enjoy before they transgressed. I think he got in the temple through or by the first transgression, and has been sitting in the temple ever since, showing and tempting all men's minds, exalting himself above all that is worshipped or that can be called God, everywhere and at all times when and wherever he can sway, control or influence the mind of man to evil, and oppose God, who cast him out of Heaven, by which he became a fallen angel, which we understand was caused by trying to be greater than God who is the greatest Being of all, and can not be superceded by any being, to whom every knee must bow—every tongue confess and acknowledge to be the only true and living God in whom lays all power to perform and create any great work He has a desire to make.

GEORGE SHOEMAKER.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

"And as many as were ordained to eternal life believed." Acts, 13: 48.

The word here translated ordained, is in Acts 15: 2, translated determined, which expresses the will of the apostle, to send certain brethren to Jerusalem. That the same word in Acts 13: 48, should be translated the same as in Acts 15: 2, I will try to show by the following reasons:—If "as many as were ordained to eternal life" expresses the will of God toward those who believed, then God had ordained that number to eternal life. The expression would signify that all the ordained in Antioch in Pisidia and throughout all that region had believed, and that there remained not another ordained soul throughout "their coasts." For "as many as were ordained" would include all the ordained. Then any further preaching or praying would be entirely useless in the way of converting souls, for the ordained number had already believed. All who had then believed were of the elect, all who had not believed were of the non-elect, whether Jew or Gentile, bond or free, if they had not yet believed they were doomed. There was no more hope for them, the line had already been drawn by the Almighty, and they found on the side which were beyond recovery. The apostles preached the gospel wherever they went.—They returned to Antioch on their first missionary journey, also that Paul was there on his second and third missionary journeys is very evident. Peter was also there (see Gal. 2: 11, 14) as the apostles did not cease to preach the Gospel there, there must have been Gospel subjects there, who had yet the power to become the sons of God. In reading what is said in connection with the language of the text we find that Paul said to the Jews, "Ye put the word of God from you." Luke says of the Gentiles, "They glorified the word of the Lord." Paul says "Ye judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life." Luke says many of the Gentiles "were determined of everlasting life." Paul makes it an act of the mind or will, on the part of the Jews to reject the word of God. In Antithesis to this, Luke makes it an act of the mind or will on the part of many of the Gentiles to believe the word of God.

The above was written in reply to a query, which appeared in the PILGRIM a short time ago.

JACOB A. SNOVER.

Greencastle, Pa.

Youth's Department.

For the Pilgrim.

TO THE LITTLE ONES.

ELD. J. S. FLORY.

Dear little ones of the PILGRIM band, it has been some time since we have had a talk with you, and now we want to tell you that we have not forgotten you, and that we love you dearly and are interested in your welfare. We sometimes think, that you as the little lambs of the Shepherd's Flock, are too much neglected by the under shepherd's whose duty it is to feed the Flock. You have often seen the beautiful lambs skip and play over the green fields, and along the banks of the pure rippling streams, and you have seen them eat of the same pasture, and drink of the same waters their mothers and the rest of the flock do, and that too while they were yet young, and not near grown. So you, little reader have the ability to eat and drink of that spiritual food, and spiritual drink that is prepared by our Heavenly Father for His Flock.

Now if we put the tender and sweet food so high up that you cannot reach it, that is, not understand it, you will be apt to eat of the poison weeds that are all around you. Such as vain and simple influences of which the world is so full of, and if you do eat of those things, you will grow up more like wolves than sheep. Now I know you do not want to be like the wolf that no one likes, nor like the goat either, and it is said that God will after a while make a separation of the sheep from the goats, the sheep he will set on his right hand, and the goats to the left, that is, He will clothe those He terms sheep with robes of bright glory in Heaven, while those termed goats, will suffer shame and contempt.

Then how important you should grow up as inoffensive sheep, with gentle ways and manners, and give to the Lord what He looks for. And what is that? It is the offering of you hearts to Him, and your love to that dear Jesus who is the great Shepherd of your souls. In fact it is your own precious self He wants dedicated to His service. You know the sheep give a fleece of wool every year to those that keep them or own them, but goats do not do this. Now would it not be a sad thing if you would not in return for God's love to you, give your heart to Him. He that has given you dear parents and friends and associates, good health and happy hearts, is the one you should love and obey, rather than the world with all its vanity. The world cannot give you an eternal home, no, no, but it is God who can give an everlasting home for us all. Such a home, as that darling little one who died not long ago said she was going to have. While living, she had a pleasant home with her parents on the mountain side, where the birds sang so sweetly, and the flowers bloom so brightly. She was happy in her childish plays with her little brothers and sisters. She learned from her parents, that there was a brighter world up above the sky, and there was where lovely Jesus was, and all the bright angels, and God was there. Sometimes in her childish way, she would ask her mother when it would be that she could go up there and be with them. Her mother told her if she would be a good girl, when she died she would go to Heaven. She wanted to know how long it would be until she would die. Her mother told her she could not tell. The beautiful spring, and bright summer passed, and the leaves turned green and yellow and fell to the ground. Winter's breath began to be felt, and then at that time the angel of death came along and called for the little girl. When she lay upon her sick bed she said, "mother I am going to die, and go that pretty home up on high," a bright smile lit up her face and gladness beamed from her eye. The thought of death was joy to her, and Oh! how calmly she fell asleep in the arms of death. She has gone from a home on earth to a home in Heaven. No longer will she gather flowers with brothers and sisters here, or hum a childish song, but she can gather never fading flowers in that beautiful clime above the stars, and sing with holy angels those sweet Heavenly songs. No more will I ever hear her in this world say in childish symplicity, "Brother Flory," no more see the bright eyes until I go the way she has gone, then I hope to meet her where summer never ends, and death never comes

Now children this is a true allusion to one that died not a great while ago. And now if you all will be good, kind and obedient children, and while in this world love God and obey a blessed Savior, when you die, death will be no terror to you, and like the little girl, you can look forward with bright and joyous hopes of going to a beautiful home in the Heavens above. And there meet with all the good and holy ones that God has called to Him, and be with Jesus and His holy angels. Oh! may God help you to be good and kind, and in the path of duty ever walk. With this earnest prayer I for this time say farewell, hoping to thus meet soon again.

Fayetteville, W. Va.

Editor's Department.

SPRING RUN MEETING.

Being kindly invited to attend the above meeting, we accordingly set out on the morning of the 30th. of Dec. for the place, in company with some friends and by much haste, we succeeded in making connection at Huntingdon, and in a short time we were landed at McVeytown station, where the little company were met with conveyance. We however stopped in town to call with a relative living in the place, but while there we were kindly invited to dine at the Bradley House, said to be one of the best regulated houses along the P. C. R. R. line, and from the appearance of the table upon this occasion, we have no reason to doubt it.

In the evening we arrived at the house of our aged Father-in-law, by whom we were taken to the Spring Run Meeting House, where the first services of this series of meetings were held, but felt surprised and disappointed in finding bro. Archy Vandyke, and ourself the only strange preachers present. It was decided, however unfavorable to ourself, that we should administer in holy things on the occasion, which we tried to do with the ability that God gave. The next morning we were taken to the Matawana S. H. near to the McVeytown Station, to fill an appointment there, after which we dined in company with friends and brethren, at the house of our hospitable brother Abraham Myers. In the evening we returned to the Meeting-house, where we were joined by bro. Wm. Howe, who delivered a feeling discourse from the narrative of Isaac securing Rebecca as his wife, to an attentive and interesting congregation. From this time on we were reinforced by other laborers, among whom were John Spanogle, and John B. Garver from Aughwick, Eld. Isaac Myers and John Beaver from Buffalo, and finally, Andrew Bashore from Lost Creek congregation, when a division of the laborers was made, and services were held at three different points. During our stay here we had opportunity to visit the families of Joseph R. Hanawalt, the presiding Elder or Bishop of this congregation, P. S. Myers, Samuel Musser, and others by whom we were kindly entertained, and with whom we enjoyed ourselves very much. On Wednesday in company with bro. John Spanogle, we visited the family of bro. Ruben T. Myers, whose wife was sick, and being unable to attend the meeting, called for religious service at their house, which we hope proved quite satisfactory and consoling to her in her afflictions.

There are a few things connected with this congregation that we think worthy of a passing notice. The quiet and good order in their meetings was praise-worthy, but what attracted our mind more particularly, was their good singing. Nowhere have we heard better, and as this is part of divine service, it is highly commendable, and it must be admitted that they excel many other congregations in this respect. On Thursday morning we were taken to the station by bro. P. S. Myers, and by 3 o'clock we arrived safely home and found all well. God be praised for His protecting care.

G. B.

DRY VALLEY MEETING.

According to arrangement, on Tuesday morning the 9th we left, for a season, the scenes and perplexities of editorial duty, to pay our brethren at the Dry Valley Congregation a visit. We arrived at Lewistown in time to take dinner with Bro. Andrew Spanogle, whose door is always open for pilgrims. After dinner we took a stroll through town, and visited the North American Tannery, owned by Spanogle, and Wm. Panebaker. This is quite an extensive affair, having in use two hundred and ten vats, and supplied with the modern conveniences of the business. They manufacture yearly, about 20.000 sides, averaging from 21 to 30 pounds, with a stock investment of $ 100.000. The proprietors informed us that on account of inferior bark, last years stock was not so good in weight and quality as formerly. From appearance, it is a paying institution, and the stock holders realize a nice profit.

In the evening Bro. Jacob Bashore took us to his home, and also to the Church, where we found the following laboring brethren present: Eld. Isaac Myers, John Beaver, and P. S. Myers. The following day brethren Myers and Beaver left for home, but was reinforced by Elder J. R. Hanawalt and J. B. Garver, Abram Myers was also present at two meetings.

The meeting commenced on the evening of the 6th, and continued until the 11th. It was well attended, and considerable interest manifested, especially towards the close, and we feel persuaded if the meeting had been continued a short time longer, a number would have been made willing to enter the Kingdom, as their souls were stirred up, and mourned the love of Jesus to know. We kindly hope, dear friends, that you will continue to study your best interests, and not put off the important work until you may be compelled to say, 'The harvest is past, and we are not saved." On Friday morning, after the meeting closed, Elder Jacob Mohler, who says it is no trouble to care for and convey the brethren, took us out to Lewistown and showed us through the principal business places of their town, then paid a short visit to our friend Panebaker, who, by the way, is building a splendid mansion for his earthly residence. He manifested considerable taste and judgment in making for himself a convenient and pleasant residence, but we fear he is forgetting his best interest, and neglecting the "One thing needful,"—a spiritual house, not made with hands eternal in the, Heavens.

On Friday evening we landed safely home and found large additions to the PILGRIM family, also an invitation to attend another series of Meetings at Back Creek, Pa., which we most respectfully decline to accept. We are expecting our new Press some time during next week and cannot possibly leave home until after that is received and in working operation. Our desire, brethren, is to be with you.

PERSONAL.

F. R. SAPINGTON: You have paid for last year.

J. H. STOUDNOUR: We will send you a book.

JOHN M. MOHLER: Both of the desired books will be sent shortly.

D. C. MOOMAW: You will please give us the address of G. W. Wells, stating whether he is an old or new subscriber.

J. L. FRANTZ: It is all right and you have our thanks for what you have done for us.

J. M. WELLS. You will owe us about 62½ cts. for your paper if you send us no more names.

ADDRESS WANTED.—Will some one give us the Post Office of Jacob Kurtz of Franklin Co. Pa?

WILLIAM SADLER: We have E. F. Good credited with $1.00. It was a typographical error. Thank you for those new subscribers.

SERIES OF MEETINGS commences at the new M. H. near Upton, Franklin Co., Pa., Jan. 20th, continue one week or more. A general invitation given.

ABRAM H. BAUM: We had not stopped your paper. They will continue to come. No hurry about the money, only try to get the new subscribers.

JOHN CULP. The book you ordered was sent and if you have not received it by this time, let us know. If you take the whole lot or a number of them we will send it again free.

JESSE CALVERT: You sent us the names Jeremiah and George Gump, Perry, Ind. We are sending the PILGRIM to that address. Is it right? We cannot find it in the Post Office Directory.

JOHN CLINGINGSMITH: The Hymn Book was sent, also J. Z. Parrick's PILGRIM in pack with your own. If the Hymn Book has not yet come to hand, let us know and we will send it again.

MARRIED.

CHEESMAN—YONTZ.—On January 6th 1872, by Eld. D. P. Sayler, at the residence of the bride, at Double Pipe Creek, Bro. RICHARD CHEESMAN of Poweshiek county, Iowa, and sister Catharine Yontz, of Carroll county, Md.

FITZ—WHITMORE.—On November 30th by the same, Mr. JOHN D. FITZ, and Miss AMANDA S. WHITMORE, all of Frederick county, Md.

EILER—KELLER.—On December 21st by the same, Mr. JOHN W. EILER, of Frederick county, Md., and Miss MARY E. KELLR, of Adams county, Pa.

FOGLE—ALBAUGH.—On January 2nd 1872 by the same, Mr. EPHRAIM FOGLE, and sister HARRIET A. V. ALBAUGH, all of Frederick county, Md.

DIESLY—HENGST.—On January 7th by Leonard Furry, at New Enterprise, Bro. JOSEPH C. DIESLY, of Bedford county and Miss MARY ANN HENGST of Blair county, Pa.

BROWN—SHOEMAKER.—By Joseph Beeghly, Elias Brown, of Alleghany county, Md. and Catharine Shoemaker, of Somerset county, Pa.

DIED.

SNIVELEY.—On the 4th inst., SAMUEL, oldest son of friend John and sister S. SNIVELEY, aged 14 years, 3 months and 12 days. Funeral services by the Brethren.

SPANOGLE.—In Lewistown, Mifflin county, Pa., January 5th 1872, sister MARGARETA, wife of A. J. SPANOGLE, aged 36 years, 4 months and 16 days. Funeral services by Wm. Howe.

STONER.—On the 9th inst., in Antietam Arm, Pa., sister SUSAN, widow of Abraham STONER, dec'd,, aged 70 years. Funeral services by the Brethren.

Sister Stoner was truly one of those devoted, affectionate sisters, full of love and good works." In her last illness she frequently desired "to be absent from the body and be present with the Lord." Hope she is now enjoying that substance through faith in Jesus, having 'died in the Lord, she is now resting from her labors."

D. F. GOOD.

JOHN.—On the 27th of December, at the residence of her husband, in the county of Roanoke, Va., LIONA JOHN, wife of Mr. Griffith John, in the 59th year of her age.

Mrs. J. had been in declining health for several years, so that her death was not unexpected, and yet her loss is no less deeply felt and mourned. In her own appropriate sphere, in the home circle and neighborhood, her life was all that could have been desired. As wife, mother, neighbor and friend, she was tender, affectionate, kind, generous and faithful. Mrs. John adorned the various positions assigned her in the providence of God in such a manner, as to leave an example to her children and numerous relatives, worthy of imitation. As a true Christian, she was sincere without ostentation, warm-hearted and full of charity, often sacrificing her health for the comfort and aid of her sick neighbors

From the commencement of her late sickness she seemed to feel that her stay on earth was brief—however expressed no doubts or fears in regard to her full acceptance with God. She had no regrets even in leaving her devoted husband and children, but simply and quietly told them to "do the best they could, and meet her in Heaven," but still expressed no repining at His will, and thus calmly, and peacefully resigned herself to Him "who doeth all things well."

Husband and children, weep not for her, though so kind and affectionate as a wife and mother, so faithful as a friend, and obliging as a neighbor. She is gone, gone, but not forever lost. She is now before the "Great White Throne," singing songs of Redeeming Love. May all the relatives and friends "be also ready" when the summons come to join her amidst that glorious happy throng, who have come up out of much tribulation and washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

May our last day be as hers, triumphant. Liona is no more, but the victory is won.

Attending Physician. S. N. L.

Correspondence.

Dear Pilgrim:—On the 23rd of December, in company with Bro. Jacob F. Oller, we went to the Broad Fording Meeting-house, Welch Run Arm, Washington Co., Md., where the brethren had made appointments for a week's meeting or more. We tried to labor with and for the brethren there. The meetings were well attended, and I trust with profit to the brotherhood and others. A number were added to the Church, and the number added, we have reason to believe were of that portion of citizens which will prove, we trust, pillars to the Church of God. And we are glad to think and believe that many others in their honest purpose of heart and mind, are discerning the grand, divine arrangement for their souls salvation, and are not far from the Kingdom. May God help them to a faithful reading, and understanding of the Holy Scriptures, and honor the cause of Jesus by a faithful obedience to the same in hope of eternal life.

Eld. Christian Keefer, the Bishop of this Arm, with the other ministering brethren, deacons, and lay-members, in the prosecution of their spiritual duties and privileges by divine help, are surely doing a good work. The ingathering is large, near a hundred within a year. May the good Lord still continue to bless their united labors to the good of souls. D. F. Good.

AN APPEAL.

Dear brethren and sisters:—I write you a few lines hoping that you may feel an interest in an unfortunate brother and sister, by the loss of property, and sickness of himself and whole family. We have lost six horses in the course of three years, and I am completely disabled to do anything, so that we could not meet with our payments, and they are pushing us, and we do not know how to manage without calling on the Church for aid. We know there are some who are able, and we believe, willing to render assistance in time of need. We have been forced with necessity to call on you for assistance. If you think proper to publish this to the Churches at large, you can do so. We are now living along the Rail Road with our children keeping boarding house. It is very disagreeable to me on account of the children, as we are among all classes of people. Any one who is willing to assist us can write an express letter and send it to Meadow Bluff P. O., Greenbriar county W. Va. I believe if I do not get my husband from public work, so that he can be more retired, he will lose his mind entirely. Sarah A. Frantz.

—We publish the above appeal not because we think it prudent to respond to such requests in all cases, without knowing something about the circumstance, but more especially to give those an opportunity of rendering present assistance, who have some knowledge of the case. There is so much imposition in the world that brethren and sisters should not expect assistance unless the request is accompanied with a guarantee from the official members of the Church to which they belong, that there is no imposition connected with it. We would advise our unfortunate sister to state the case before the Church at home, and if it thinks the case needy and cannot render the needed assistance, let the officials endorse the appeal, and we feel assured that liberal hearts will respond to the call. Our Church is liberal, and will never refuse to aid a case of real need, but its liberality has been imposed upon, hence have become a little cautious.

Dear Brethren: I will write a few lines for the Pilgrim, having been silent for some time. On the 24th of November, I in company with brother E. Anvil, now residing elder of the Shile Congregation, started to go to old brother Levi Wilmoths, to try to preach God's word. We left home early in the morning, and arrived at brother Wilmoths the same evening. Brother Wilmoth lives on what is called Shaffers Fork of Cheat River, in Randolf Co., W. Va. We had to cross over Laurel Hill, after which we came on to a very nice valley, known as Leading Creek, (for that is the name of a creek running through the valley.) Down this valley we traveled about seven miles, then we left the valley and steered our course for Cheat River, over hills, and along a very rough, narrow road, a distance of six miles when we arrived at brother Wilmoth's When we got there we found brother Wilmoth in bed, the cause of which we soon learned. About the first of August last he was building a hay stack, and after he had finished, his only son, handed him two chain-traces which had been tied together for the purpose of hauling hay.—The old man threw the chain across the stack. His son then took hold of one end of the chain, and Bro. W. began to descend holding to the chain as a means to help him down. When he got about half way down, the string which held the two chains together broke, letting him fall several feet. His left leg struck first, breaking one bone just below the knee. Bro. W. weighs over 200 pounds, is about 65 years old. He seemed very glad to see us, and conversed on religion very freely. He was not able to go to meeting, which was in a S. H. near by. So after some refreshment, we went the same evening to the S. H. for meeting, tolerable good order was manifested, stayed with Bro. W. all night. Next day, meeting at same place at 11, o'clock, good order, in the evening, meeting at same place. We think serious impressions were made on some. The people wished us to come back again. Some few of the brethren live there in that hilly country who seem to be alive to the cause, who seem to be "the salt of the earth," and if preaching was done there oftener, I am persuaded that some would be christians. Next morning 26th, we left for Leading Creek, and after a ride of three miles, found ourselves at a Church of the Brethren, preaching at 11 A. M. large congregation for the occasion,—one baptized. Here we met with Bro. Charles Burke. After meeting and baptism, went home with him and dined, which was in the direction of home. Same night, in company with Bro. Burke, went to friend James Wilson's, son of Bro. Henry, who was killed during the war at his own house. The house was crowded, good attention. I was told by friend James Wilson since, that we must come back again, that we have made a great stir. Truly did the Savior not "come to send peace, but a sword. Next day home, found all well, thank the Lord for his goodness. May the Lord bless our weak efforts that some good at least may be the result. I am happy to say that some of God's people live in that hilly country. It is true, that there, as well as in most all other parts, other persuasions have the majority, but we think that if the pure word was proclaimed there, much good could be done, therefore we solicit brethren to go there, and send forth the news of Jesus according to His arrangement, "for the time has come that judgment must begin at the house of God.

Yours in love.

J. M. Wells.

Meadowville, Va.

Dear Brethren:—Your weekly visitor continues to come regularly, with plenty of good food for pilgrims in this world of sorrow and vexations. It seems the oftener it comes, the more we love its appearance. Come brother Pilgrim, we bid thee welcome. Brethren and sisters, let us all join the Pilgrim band, for it will do us good, and help us on our way Zionward. I am still introducing it into new homes, and to-day send you the name of another pilgrim, who has opened his door for it. Be assured he will do the Pilgrim no harm.

In my young days I saw a man perform on a wire which was stretched between two posts, one end being near the ground, while the other was some fifty feet high. He held in his hands a long pole with which he balanced himself, starting from the lower end and walked towards the upper. If you will allow the comparison, the wire may represent the "narrow way" to Heaven, the pole the Bible, one end faith and the other works, the lower end of the wire the entering of the Kingdom of Jesus on Earth, and the other end the Celestial City. If, when starting on the "narrow way" we look straight forward, exercising faith and works, ever keeping in the sure path, we can travel with ease, but if we have our minds too much on the things of this world and forget the pole, the Bible, we may get the swing and fall. So brother Pilgrim, ever keep the Bible in your office and exercise faith and works together and have the City constantly in view. Then when time knows us no more, we may all meet as one pilgrim band in the City of eternal rest.

Jacob Eshleman.

Dear Pilgrim:—According to appointment we went to our December meeting in Giles county, where we met a very large congregation, and among the number were several influential ministers and other officials of the Campbellite denomination.

As we had proposed to reply in part to the Rev. M. Lucas' reply on the previous occasion, the people seemed anxious to hear what could be said in defence of the "seet everywhere spoken against," and whether or not, the aspersions so lavishly bestowed on us then, was applicable and deserving. As this part of the exercises was not intended to be more than adjunct to the meeting proper, we proceeded with the regular business of the morning.

We opened the meeting in the regular manner, and selected for our theme, the 3rd verse of the Epistle of Jude, and the latter clause. We endeavored to describe and illustrate the character of "the Faith once delivered to the Saints," and embodying our remarks in two propositions, viz: I. "Faith in the existance of God. II, Faith in the government of God." We essayed to establish the theory that the Faith taught in the Scriptures, has never undergone any essential change since the beginning of the world.

Arrangements are now progressing to meet next Spring, in defence of these ordinances on the part of the Brethren, and to negative them on the part of the Disciples.

Fully recognizing our inability to accomplish anything worthy of a cause so just and holy, we invoke the blessing of Heaven, and the prayer of the faithful on our contemplated work, that it may result favorable to the Redeemer's Kingdom.

D. C. Moomaw.

Blacksburg, Va.

Quemahoning Church, Pa.

Dear Pilgrim: We continue to to hold our meetings regularly in the Meeting House every four weeks. We have had no strange ministers this winter except Jacob Holsapple, who preached for us in both languages, German and English, with good effect. We would like if some of our brethren would visit and preach for us, for we need it very much, as I fear there is a coldness growing amongst us. We feel pursuaded, it all the members were in the condition that God wants them to be, many of the unconverted of the world would come flocking to the kingdom of Jesus. I would say, if any feel to give us a visit, let us know the time and how long you can remain, that we can make the necessary arrangements.

J. W. Blauch.

MONEY LIST.

P. Keller,	$5.00	C. Newcomer,	2.50
G. A. Hollinger,	2.50	Mich'l Bashor,	6.75
Barb'a C. Price,	1.25	H. M. Konhaus,	1.25
H. W. Shenk,	2.50	J. H. Stoudnour,	12.70
S. S. M. Snell	2.50	M. Noffsinger,	.25
A. H. Cassel,	2.50	Dr. U. M. Beachly,	1.25
Wm. Sadler,	9.60	J. R. Royer,	.25
J. M. Mohler,	22.00	Eld. J. Wise	10.00
R. Riegert,	1.25	Jacob Mohler,	2.50
D. G. Varner,	1.00	F. Hershberger	15.00
A. Brumbaugh,	1.25	Jacob Harley,	1.25
W. B. South,	1.25	P. D. Farbney,	1.25
J. D. Rosenberger,	5.00	Eli Beagle,	6.25
Catharine Cline,	1.25	S. M. Shuck,	3.75
Joseph Kough,	1.25
E. S. Miller	1.01

NEWS ITEMS.

The Loss by the Chicago Fire

The number of persons who perished in the Chicago fire is estimated to have been at least five hundred. Over one hundred bodies have been recovered, nearly all of whom have been identified, and the work of clearing away the ruins is still far from completion. In the swift rush of the flames hundreds of people were unquestionably consumed so completely as not to leave even a vestige of bone or even ashes, to tell their fate. Letters for inquiry for missing friends are pouring into the city from all quarters, and the publication of these has been the means of tracing many who were supposed to be lost. The Chicago Times published a list of those known to be missing, and says the sad probability is that the death list will considerably exceed five hundred.

Photographing the Bottom of the Sea

M. Joselly, an Italian Photographer, has hit upon a new branch of Photography. By means of a diving bell (and, no doubt, electric, magnatism, oxy-hydrogen, or other powerful illumination, we would say) this innovator has succeeded in obtaining submarine views. The idea is said to be quite practical, several experiments made on the Italian coast having been attended with a perfect success. The most fantastic images have been obtained, showing the vegetations and zoophites of the sea's bottom, which, according to spheric trigonometry, occupies five-eights of our globe, thus affording a valuable auxiliary to students. M. Joselly intends to send sample proofs of his Photographs to all the scientific establishments in Europe.

OMAHA papers furnish some interesting particulars of the effects of the cold weather recently experienced in the far West. In Nebraska the cold has been intense and protracted, and the suffering unprecedently severe.—Large number of persons were frozen to death; in one instant a whole family perished from exposure. They were out of fuel of every kind, and the man started for the timber to obtain some, and froze to death before his team. The woman burned everything she could find to burn, and finally placed her infant in the oven of the stove and burned part of her own clothing to prevent it from freezing, but without avail. The poor babe was frozen to death as well as the mother.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS IN 1871.—From a record compiled from the newspapers it appears that during the year ending October 31st, 1871, there were in the United States one hundred and seven railroad accidents, causing the death of one hundred and seventy persons and serious injury of two hundred and fifty-four. These casualties occured through collisions, the explosions of locomotives, the giving away of bridges, and the running of trains off the track. By collisions alone there were forty accidents causing the death of one hundred and eight persons, and the serious injury of two hundred and eleven. By five of the principle railroad accidents eighty-one persons were killed, and one hundred and forty-eight were wounded.

The Pope, in a recent reply to an address, gave a lamentable account of the stage of things in Rome. He said that not only was impiety spreading, but heresy was openly being taught, and men went about the streets to entice children to school with money, and instruct them in error. Was Rome, he asked, that had always been the centre of Catholicism and truth, to become now the centre of heresy? This is a view of things from the Vatican side of the Tiber. Schools and Protestant churches, and liberty to read the Bible and follow its teachings, in reference to the Pope's, are not such alarming symptons.

Tremendous storms have prevailed in the mining district of the Little and Big Cottonwood, Utah. Whole settlements are buried in the snow, and lives have been lost. The snow is from ten to fifteen feet deep, and operations in most of the mins have been suspended. The blockade is causing much distress by increasing the price of the necessaries of life.—Coal is from $10 to $20 per ton.

MISS BETSY WILLIAMS, of Providence R. I., a descendant of Roger Williams, died recently at the advanced of 82 years,—bequeathing to the city a farm located within its limits, valued at $40,000. The bequest is made on the condition that the city erect a monument to her illustrious ancestor's memory in the old Williams' Burying Ground—to cost not less than $500.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1 25.
Book paper, " "	1.50

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50. Any number above that at the same rate.

Address,

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever. Sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water St and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St Chicago, Ill. Aug 2y

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subscribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers—many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. O. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Wesner's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not Marry. For both Sexes. By S. R. wells. Plain, $1.50; Extra gilt, $2.00

1780 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S
Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,
Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr. J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

A Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Trancient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. Ex.	UP TRAINS. MAIL	STATIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. Ex.	DOWN TRAIN. MAIL.
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Lv 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 34	4 15
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 08
6 20	8 53	Markleysburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 38
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 [illegible]
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 17
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum't	7 33	3 06
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Lv 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 06
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 45	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 06	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 26	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Latzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 25	11 54	Bedford	Lv 5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

Narrow Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JANUARY 23, 1872. NO 4

ESSAYS.

For the Pilgrim.

ADVANTAGES OF AFFLICTION. NO. 8.

"But the more they afflicted them the more they multiplied and grew," "And David spake to the men that stood, by him, saying, what shall be done to the man that kills this Philistine, and taketh away the reproach from Israel." 1st Sam. 17: 26, &c, and the men of Israel said, "and it shall be for the man who killeth him, the King will enrich with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his fathers house free in Israel." Soon after David had killed Goliath, Saul accosted him with profession of great regard, having deferred the fulfilment of, at least, one part of the reward offered to the individual who should slay Goliath. Saul now would seem desirous of carrying it into effect. "Behold, said he to David, my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife, only be thou valiant for me, and fight the Lord's battles." In these engagements with the enemy, he hoped the time would not be far distant, when some one of them would deliver him from his fears by striking a deathly blow at so distinguished a combatant. David did not decline the honor, though with his characteristic modesty, he expresses his humility and diffidence in accepting it. Who am I, was his reply, and what is my life or my fathers family in Israel, that I should be son-in-law to the king?" But Saul did not fulfill the engagement, he gave his daughter Merab to Adria', "and Michael, Sauls daughter, loved David. And they told Saul, and the things pleased him, and Saul said, I will give him her that she may be a snare to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be against him," &c.

David was far from being eager to embrace the tempting offer which was made him. He preferred rather to decline it, yet in a way that should not give offence, expecting, for such was the custom of the times, that a very large dowry, or purchase money, would be required of him for his wife, she being of the highest rank. He urged this as a reason why he should not aspire to the connection, "seemeth it to you." He said, addressing those whom Saul had sent to converse with him, "seemeth it to you a light thing to be a kings son-in-law, seeing that I am a poor man and lightly esteemed," and the servants of Saul told him saying, "on this manner spake David," and Saul said, "thus shall ye say to David; the king desireth not any dowry, but a hundred foreskins of the Philistines, to be avenged of the kings enemies," Saul thought to make David fall by the hand of the Philistines. It was hypocricy of the basest and most malignant kind, to be concealed beneath the guise of the warmest affection and confidence. The principles of the Gospel of Christ are, "abstain from all appearance of evil, lying lips are an abomination, but they that deal truly, are his delight." and when Sauls servants told David these words, it pleased David well to be the kings son-in-law, wherefore David arose and went, he and his men, and slew of the Philistines two hundred men, and Saul gave him Michael his daughter to wife, and Saul saw and knew that the Lord was with David, and he was yet the more afraid of him, and he became David's enemy continually, 1st Sam. 18: 17, 30. Saul had heretofore resorted to stratagem, in order to take the life of David, but now he becomes bold in crime, he no longer effects concealment.—"And Saul spake to Jonathan his son and all his servants that they should kill David; but Jonathan delighted much in David, and told him saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee, now therefore I pray thee take heed to thyself until the morning, and abide in a secret place and hide thyself, and I will go and commune with my father of thee, and what I see that will I tell thee. And Jonathan spake good of David unto Saul his father and said unto him, let not the king sin against his servant, against David, because he hath not sinned against thee, and because his works have been to thee, work very good, for he did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine and, the Lord wrought a great salvation for all Israel. Thou sawest it and did rejoice, wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood to slay David without a cause." 19: 1. The plea prevailed, Saul for the time, seemed to come under the influence of better feelings. He even promised with an oath that the life of David should be sacred, and Jonathan had the happiness of letting his friend know that for the present the vengeance of Saul was stayed in its course. Without doubt the most tender congratulations passed between them, while they recognized with a devout gratitude, the interposition of providence in their behalf, for it must have been a night of anxious suspense to both, and especially to David. We may well believe that the latter embraced the favorable opportunity which his solitude afforded him, of pouring out his soul before God in devout supplications for guidance and protection. It is thought that this was the occasion of his composing the eleventh Psalm, to which the reader can refer, and which will be found peculiarly adapted to the trying circumstances in which the author of it was placed. The commencement of it, "In the Lord put I my trust," shows where he placed his soul reliance, while as it proceeds we find him declaring the great consoling truth that God by his providence rules the affairs of man, and will cause truth and righteousness of triumph at last. "For the righteous Lord loveth righteousness, his countenance doth behold the upright," "and Jonathan brought David to Saul and he was in his presence as in times past, and there was war again, and David went out and fought with the Philistines and slew them with a great slaughter." The triumph that thus attended the armies of David, and the still stronger hold which it gave him on the affections of the people, awakened afresh the jealousy of Saul. His malignant passions were rekindled, "as he sat in his house with his javelin in his hand, and David played with his hand, and Saul thought to smite him even to the wall with his javelin, but he slipped away out of his presence." Yet he was gaining the affections of the people, "but all Israel and Judah loved David," and as the Lord was with him, so he became stronger and stronger, and he was also getting more experience of the wiles and fiery darts of his enemy. So it can be truly said, that the more he was persecuted and afflicted, the stronger he became, the more he grew and multiplied.

D. NEGLEY.

THE DIFFERENCE.—Man looks at the head, but God looks at the heart. If you would gain the esteem of vain man, puff the head with science and all manner of top dressing and tinsel so relished by the world, and you will be somebody in your own estimation, as well as in the estimation of the world. Wit, small talk, and nonsense too, is necessary if you would sail before a good breeze. No matter as to honesty, or such dry stuff,—or religion either, though at times a glossy cloak of that kind of material comes in good play while the weather is clear, and there is something special in view,—yes if you would be well thought of, do not neglect the head. However, should you be as "simple" as to please God, you must look to the heart. See to it that your stock of wisdom has its center there, and just in proportion as your heart fills up aright, your head will come down. Do not forget then that it is man that looks at the head, but God looks at, and searches the heart.—J. S. Flory.

Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop, but a good word maketh it glad.

In the way of righteousness is life and in the pathway thereof there is no death.

OLD REMINISCENCE.

After a serious sickness of Lung Fever, and in a state of convalescence, yet still confined to my room, in the perusal of letters of old dates, and scraps of memoranda, many past events of my life were brought to my mind, and among the most important, the causes of the beginning of my pilgrimage, to the promised land of rest, and how these were produced by the reading of such passages in the New Testament, as the sayings of Christ the Redeemer. "I am the way," "I am the door," "Learn of me." "I have given you an example, that you should do as I have done to you." "If ye love me keep my commandments." "Enter into the strait gate." &c. But how to do this in my loneliness, to get into the fold, and to have company on the narrow road, to help and assist the journey to pursue, was something quite perplexing to me. Raised in a foreign land and educated in what is called a Christian church, yet not satisfied of it being a spiritual one, I searched for one among the different denominations I knew of in my neighborhood, but for nearly two years, could not get any satisfaction, each seemed to be lacking some essential part, which I believed it ought to possess. Finally, as by a kind Providence directed, I got acquainted with the first organized church of brethren in Iown, and found the life of its members, practice, worship, and rule of church government corresponding to all, as I had already observed in Scripture it should be. To these, without knowing, and without asking, whether there are many or few such churches in the land, I attached myself, and was happy in my choice ever since. After a number of years of peace, affectionate union and harmony, I changed location, and with it formed acquaintance with others of somewhat different opinions and sentiments, caused perhaps by a different schooling into our faith, yet I cannot help but hold to that first good lesson. It was nearly at the end of the first half of thirty years that I was connected with the church, that I learned of existing differences between the different churches, and especially between some of those in the East and those in the West. Still as I was aware that it was only in outward practice, and knew not of a difference in intention, and as I was confident and satisfied that according to Scripture, and as I seen those with whom I became acquainted, were independent of each other, and each to have his own duty to perform, to be acceptable to Christ the sovereign head of all. I did not mind the differences as much as others. Some I found, who thought that a union of practice to be assential for prosperity, although obtained by a mild coersion of some of the churches. I could never see the necessity of such a course, and preferred a union with Christ and his word. And this led me often to talk and inquire of the old and experienced, in regard to how these differences came, and whence they originated. I understood them, that the most weighty difference was in the observance of the ordinances of feet-washing. This did the more astonish me, as I thought that the plainness of description, and the sacredness of their object could not, in the least, contribute to prosperity, while the difference was manifest to the world and all could see on which side the right rested. However I felt happy when some were amicably arranged, and hope those causing yet contention may speedily be adjusted, and all become united and practice according to the example and intention of the Author and preceptor. Then only, when all fear and restraint is laid aside, and the boon of contention put out of the way, will, and can the true Gospel light shine, and men glorify ,God and the Churches everywhere truly prosper.

Permit me however to say here, that the plan adopted, now in progress, and the object under investigation, seems not to answer, the high and great importance the Scripture ought to be held in, I think and always regarded that what it seaches should be the first consideration, and receive the best attention. The truth thereof should, on all occasion, be regarded and appreciated, above the testimony, of how the early brethren practiced, especially as the record of that practice must be considerable obscure, and cannot be seen and understood by a great, yet otherwise sincere and honest portion, of those immediately and eminently concerned. I have no fears, and do not doubt that if the correctness of the primitive practice of the brethren in the ordinance of feet-washing is ascertained and generally adopted, that it will be hereafter done in what in now called the single mode. For I have it from the mouth of one, who lived from the year 1780 to the year of 1800, in Lancaster Co., Pa. He went with his parents, (his father being an Elder) to the communion or big meetings, as he called them, and saw those with the long apron on, wash and wipe the others feet, salute him, and then give the apron to another. I saw him do the same for many years in the West. I also have the record of churches organized in an early day in North Carolina and Kentucky, and later in Missouri, and Illinois, whose ancestors brought this same simple mode of practice from Maryland nearly one hundred years ago, and from Pennsylyania at the beginning of the present century, and who practiced so during their life without knowing of any other, or even of a change when they departed this life. In this way this practice came in the West, and is perhaps the cause it is so practiced by the churches of the descendents of two lines of ancestors, who practiced so in both the East and the West, and these, with the word so strong on their side, cannot, I think, be induced to depart from it.

From the knowledge and acquaintance I have of them, I can say, they do not hold to their practice alone, because their ancestors done so, but that they do it out of respect to the Scriptures, and obedience to the example and commandment of Christ, our Lord and Master, and to obtain the benefit of his intention. For it is evident that he aimed, that we should refresh our mind by the observance of this ordinance to the duties we each owe to one another, the same as we are to remind and refresh ourselves in the communion, or in the breaking of the bread, and the deviding of the cup, of the obligation to Him, for the atonement He made with His broken body, and His spilled blood, and all for to effect our salvation.

These are some of my views, and I think I reason from the Scriptures. I know I hold its teachings above anything else, I love it, it was my text book in the schooling of my faith, and my companion and guide for over half the days and years of my life, therefore I reverence the teachings it contains, and respect all that is done, in which it seems to have the preference. This is what made me protest against the adopted plan, and the point on which satisfaction on the practice of feet-washing might be given. I thought from the beginning that it would not be the best, nor safest way, for we are certain that the primitive brethren ate the supper before they washed feet, and this was changed in after years, and that satisfactory; besides it is not always right to look to the founders of the church, and just remain as they then started. Methodists quote Wesley. The Disciples refer to Alexander Campbell, Presbyterians look to their articles of faith, made more than 200 years ago, and even the Monastic orders of old times would in any dispute or controversy fall back on the works of their founder and patron saint, to help them out. Pardon me, therefore when I say that the contemplated proceedings, look to me something like these innumerated. Yet believe me, that what I say I mean it for the best, and in love. Be careful then dearly beloved, that if you do look back for direction, that you look back far enough, and let nothing intervene between your sight, yea look back to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. Then if the race is ended, as it soon will be, with the most of us, a crown of glory, and of righteousness will be given us by the hands of Jesus our Lord and Master. Amen.

C. S.

Lawrence, Kansas.

CONFIDENCE.

When one reflects upon the human race, he cannot but arrive at the conclusion that man is the most helpless and despicable creature living. A continual heir to calamity and misfortune, with which he is beset momentarily, and subject to danger on all sides, who may become miserable by innumerable calamities which could not be forseen, much less remedied had they been apparent. But we can console ourselves while we are so reprehensible to so many misfortunes, by remembering that One is exercising a constant guardianship over us.—One who has contingencies at his will, and by whose unerring aim they are directed to those who are deserving. One who has in His hands, the administration of everything capable of discommoding us; who is conscious of our necessities, and only waits to bestow upon those who may ask of his bountious store, and who can place confidence in Him. The natural obeysance, which such a creature should tender such an illimitable wise a being as God, is nothing short of an undeviating confidence in Him, for the conveniences of life, without which life would certainly become extinct, and a confiding reliance on him, to support and sustain us in times of trouble, and deliver us from the power of the destroyer and its attendant destructions.

He who happily lives in this predominant inclination, has not the same gloomy views of human nature, as he who thinks himself an epitome from this divine relation. When he reflects upon his own weakness and imperfections, he consoles himself by contemplating upon those godly qualities which are employed for his happiness. He is conscious of his own feebleness when he becomes acquainted with the all-powerful nature of his helper, who is the Christ. To be brief, that person who can place a resolute confidence in Jesus, is influential, judicious and happy. He secures the benefit of every divine attribute, and is deprived of his own inadiquacy in the completeness of intended perfection. To make our lives felicitous, we must place confidence in Him who will assist. Among the many motives which might be employed to encourage this duty, I will only advance a few, of which the most prominent is, those who place confidence in Him will not be forgotten. But apart from the consideration of the supernatural blessing which attends this duty, we may notice that it tends to its own reward, or more explicitly, the firm confidence reposed in the Almighty, is a powerful auxiliary to getting clear of affliction, or to the bearing of it in a manner as a Christian only can. He who thinks he has help and believes he is acting in sight of it often as is natural exerts himself to his utmost, and performs things that would afterwards amaze him. Things that cannot be equalled by one in dissimilar circumstances without such a confidence of success. Reliance in the help of Him will inevitably secure cheerfulness. Confidence I say, is all that is requisite for the things naturally to be wished for in such a state, and that which will, and only can alleviate those direful calamities which we cannot remove, is confidence.

The mind of man can only be comforted by the practice of this virtue, when overwhelmed by poverty and affliction, but most of all is that comfort given in the hour of death. With soul hovering in the last hour of its departure, when it is making its exit from one state to immediately enter into another, to become acquainted with new things, things that were never until now realized. Tell me, what can sustain it under such tremblings of thought and anxiety, but a firm and unwavering confidence in Him who is its Author.

W. H. Reed.

Marklesburg, Pa.

A SECRET SOCIETY.

A secret society is what many think of, talk of, and attempt to justify in various ways. There is but two secrets that we are to keep which have God's approbation. One is, enter our closet or retired place of devotion, and pour out our hearts desire to God in secret, with a full resignation to God's will in faith of what we petition, and a practical life, of our confession, that God may or "will reward us openly."

Next, God requires all Christians when they believe themselves offended by their brethren, to go to the one that gave the offence alone, and make known wherein the offence wounded them, and if he hears, then they have gained their brother, or brethren. I would here say if this injunction of Scripture was fully obeyed, what a multitude of sins might be hid,—never developed, and if when the parties meet in a secret place, they would bow in the presence of an All seeing God, and ask Him to help them to help each other, and then conclude with the words that Jesus taught us, would not the work be shortened, and better and show to the world that we have been with Jesus, learned of Him, and found rest to our souls; rather than meet in public, speak harshly, render evil for evil, and vex; rather than make peace, and get into that dilemma which makes the last worse than the first. Our dear children are near and see our spirit, hear our words, and we separate without a settlement. Then how can we bring them before the altar of God and make known to them the truth of God, when they can read our condemnation in the Holy Scriptures? How can we invite sinners to Jesus, when we manifest not His spirit? Can they not with propriety tell us to "cast the beam out of our own eyes?" A sad thought comes and yet it is so, I have seen, but not experienced so much yet, that frequently men are called to labor in the ministry and some find fault, but never make known the fault, but act rather cool, when often a few words out of love might set all right. It is said that "those that tell us of our faults are our best friends," those that tell us not, but plot our downfall are our enemies.

"Proclaim abroad
The honors of our Savior God,"

The rule holds good between congregations, and how can we with propriety and in truth say "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" when we will or do not forgive. Be assured that God will not forgive while we hold revenge. And how can we expect the approbation of God's law, when we violate it in the beginning by first telling to others and asking advice before we approach the brethren that gave the offence? In short I believe that should we settle when together, that the Church would have a right to call us to an account for what we publish previous to our interview. May God grant us grace to know and do his will, "that we may have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city," where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more.

Wm. Sadler.

Nankin, Ohio.

For the Pilgrim.

TAKE WARNING.

"What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not." Jonah 1: 6.

Jonah was a Hebrew, a minor prophet, and the word of the Lord came to him saying, "arise go to Nineveh that great city, and cry against it, for their wickedness is come up before the Lord." This was not a pleasant task for Jonah, and he rose up to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord. We have no doubt but that he expected a pleasant time. But it was quite different. Why so? Because he did not obey the Lord.—He could not flee from the presence of God. The Lord sent out a great wind into the sea, so that the ship was in danger of being broken. Now Jonah lay fast asleep, when they had cast forth the wares of the ship, the ship master broke forth in the language of the text, "What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise." Then the inquiry what shall we do unto thee? He said take me up and cast me forth into the sea. What a thought! I have not done my duty, cast me out, I deserve it, it is my just doom.

Friendly reader, this will be our condition, if we do not obey the Gospel. If we try to slip around it, when the judgment comes we must say, cast me into outer darkness; my sentence is just, I deserve it, God has done his part, and we have neglected our duty, we thought it was not so particular, it is too late now, if I only could live my time over again, how careful I would be. Then, "awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Do not waste your time and talents until it is too late, "To day if you hear his voice harden not your hearts." Take the word of God for the man of your counsel, and you will be admitted into the heavenly Jerusalem, where all is love, joy and peace. The very thought is enough to stir us up to our duty, for we have the promise of a hundred fold in this life, and life everlasting in the world to come. We may profess the name of Christ, and yet be asleep. We may not pray enough, or neglect some of the commandments. O let us arouse and be lively stones in the building of God, or meat for the Master's use, that we may all enter the portals of glory, and there strike glad hands, with those who have washed their robes, and made them white, in the blood of the Lamb.

J. B. Miller.

Alum Bank, Pa.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

A thing immortal; Time can not change it; Death can not quench it; Eternity cannot waste or destroy it! From th cradle to the grave it compasses us about, growing stronger when temptation besets us, becoming holier when adversity tries us, and more God-like to save when the blackness of despair gathers its horrors around us. Forsaking us not, though deserted by all others, it clings to us with a spell which no charm can dissolve, with a strength which no power can sunder.

In the morning, at noonday, and at eventide, it is always ours; and though the dear heart whose every throb was actuated by it is hushed in that bosom forever; though the once soulful eyes glow not with it now, and the mute lips breathe it no more, —yea, though the coffin and the shroud, the cold clods of the valley, and the long grasses of many a year hide from our tear-bedimmed eyes the sweet form that was ever transfigured into angelic radiance by its presence, yet from the shores of the receding Past this mother-love drifts over to us with all the vividness of the days when she was with us; and it comes back to us from the beautiful, Beyond, in its infinite tenderness still yearning over us, and bringing us hope as we struggle in the close contests of life.

Going not out forever, and setting not, 'tis a guiding-star by whose far-reaching light we may pilot our frail barks from billow on to billow across the stormy sea of Time, and anchor at last at the fadeless shore of a country whose mansions are Home indeed, hallowed and made pure by the prayerful vigils born of a mother's love.—Phrenological Journal.

ANOTHER YEAR.

"Another year," she said, "another year
These roses I have watched with so much care,
Have watched and tended without pain or fear.
Shall bud and bloom for me exceeding fair—
Another year," she said, "another year."

"Another year," she said, "another year,
My life perhaps may bud and bloom again
May bud and bloom like these red roses here,
Unlike them, tended with regret and pain
Another year, perhaps, another year."

"Another year, ah, yes! another year,
When bloom my roses, all my life shall bloom;
When summer comes, my summer too'll be here,
And I shall cease to wander in this gloom
Another year, ah, yes! another year.

"For ah! another year, another year,
I'll set my life in richer, stronger soil,
And prune the weeds away that creep too near,
And watch and tend with ceasing toil
Another year, ah, yes! another year.'

Another year, alas! another year,
The roses all lay withering ere their prime,
Poor blighted buds, with scanty leaves and sere,
Drooping and dying long before their time
Another year, alas! another year."

And ah! another year, another year,
Low, like the blighted dying buds, she lay,
Whose voice had prophesied without a fear,
Whose hand had trimmed the rose tree day by day
To bloom another year, another year.

The reason some people seem to have nothing to do is because they do nothing. Lay hold and do something and you will always have something to do. If you can not have the privilege or opportunity to be President, Conductor, or Engineer on a railroad, lay hold of a plow or hoe and be something and somebody. If you can not be a pulpit preacher be a public praying man, or Sunday-school teacher, and if that is above your station or calling do something and be something just where you are, lead such a life to the service of God that others may fall in love with Jesus. Keep your own garden clean—free from the weeds of sin, and you will always have something to do.—J. S. Flory.

OPENING ESSAY.

Delivered Before the Rising Star literary Society, of Salem College, Dec. 6th. 1871.

BY MISS EMMA CORL.

The wheels of time keep rolling onward towards eternity, impressed with the different changes as they roll along. But a short time has elapsed since we met at the College, and listened to the opening exercises of the Fall term. And now kind friends we come before you this evening with the closing exercises of our present term, and earnestly hope that each and every one present, may be highly entertained during the evening. Entertainments of this kind are frequently given, and they are of such great utility, that every attempt to give fresh productions of them, and to improve the young mind can scarcely be deemed out of order; but on the contrary, should be of such a character, as to gain the interest and hearty approval of all.

It can hardly be realized that our present term has closed, and we are called upon to separate for a short time. But so it is and will be to the end of time;—everything has its change. It was so ordained by the Allwise Being among the wonders and blessings of creation, and according to His divine laws, time is constantly presenting us with some change. The earth has its daily motion to perform; the seasons have their changes. Indeed it seems that change and alterations form the very essence of the world, nothing is perfect. It is from change that we receive all the pleasing novelties of life. The alteration of day and night furnishes us with the beautiful descriptions of pleasures and benefit we receive from changes, for ere we have grown weary with the toil and labor of the day, night draws around us and we prepare to rest; and when the beautiful morn returns we greet it with pleasure, and again resume our labor with vigor. Thus every change has a charm peculiar to itself, and affords some interesting innovations. As the beautiful summer has passed away with its golden harvest, its beautiful forests, its fields of verdure, its balmy evenings and bright sunny days, and there is but a faint shadow of its lustre and enchantments. The beautiful birds that made the forests ring with their chanting melodies and cheered the gladdened heart, have flown to fairer climes, and in their stead there is a dead stillness in the forests, except the rustle of the brown fringed leaves, or a mournful requiem of the wind, as it sighs among the branches of the deserted trees. The beautiful flowers that dotted the landscape and decorated our homes, and filled the air with their fragrant perfumes, have all fled away, and winter with its howling blasts and icy fetters has laid its stern form upon nature, and all things are changed.

There has been changes in our school, some of our highly esteemed classmates that met with us day after day in the chapel, listened to the reading of that sacred volume, mingled their voices with ours in the sweet melodies and fervent prayers that were daily offered, are gone out upon the world to discharge the duties assigned them. When the roll is called and no voices respond, we gaze around and our eye falls upon the vacant seat, and then how sadly do we miss them, and think of the familiar faces that formerly occupied them. Thus it is in daily life. We do not become acquainted with one object 'till ere we look around it has vanished away. It only remains for us to be preparing to meet the changes. We are well aware that the age we live in is a progressive one. Every day we are almost startled by the revelation of some new invention, we can hardly keep step with the progress of changes. Some help is in readiness for the simplest operation; new theories take the place of old, and every step seems nearing perfection. We pause and look back on the few past years, and see what wonderful changes have been wrought. The great progress of civilization is moving onward with the swiftness of an avalanche. Astronomers are making new discoveries, and revealing secrets that were always in darkness to past ages.

Philosophy is searching the depths of nature, and giving us deeper causes to investigate and examine. We have stood in profound awe to see the changes in nature, the terrible earthquakes that have shattered the earth, the bursting of volcanoes, the new phenomena, the great discoveries, the changing of kingdoms to free governments, and slavery for freedom, and the general advancement of society, and the human mind is ever at work, and constantly revealing the mysteries of nature, and no one can tell what changes the future will bring forth. But during all this time the progress of education is rapidly moving forward; new changes and plans are being adopted, and our great educational interests are stepping forward with a quicker pace, and a higher view than ever before. Educational institutions are springing up all over the land, and are supported as they should be, for they are the brightest diadems that crown our land. It is the culture we receive in these institutions that raises and distinguishes us from the barbarous tribes. Culture is the key that unlocks the cloudy prison of the diamond and brings forth its beautiful dazzling rays. If it were not for the culture of our intellectual faculties I doubt that we would be any better than the uneducated savage that roams the forest. Thus, in this progressive age and free land, how very important it is for the youth to educate themselves, and be fully prepared to enter upon the duties of life. Youth is the time for seed-sowing, and the season of confidence. It is only the youth that is capable of bestowing any lasting service upon the future ages of mankind. The great benefactors cease to be such as soon as they become hopeless of the youth. Many a reformer loses his zeal through what he considers the sobering influence of riper wisdom, when it is nothing more than the obscuring shadows of an age that should have been kept off by the youthful endeavors and aspirations of his spirit. God has given us minds which are capable of accomplishing high and noble designs. But it is only by cultivating and gradually expanding the mind, that we know what it is capable of producing. It is only by hard mental labor and exertion that we acquire knowledge. Therefore, how careful should the student be in improving the golden hours of youth, and storing his mind with useful knowledge. When he enters the walls of our College we should have improvement stamped upon the wing of time, and pursue our studies ardently, and remember that we have a noble object in view, for upon us depend the future welfare of society, and the general advancement of the age, for in time's changes the ones that are now filling the important duties of life, will be called away to try the realms of another world. It will then depend upon the progress we have made at school how well we discharge these duties. The mind cannot be too deeply impressed with the advantages and benefits of a thorough education. We are amply rewarded for all our labors in striving to obtain an education, when we take into consideration the pleasures and comforts it affords us. Ignorance to the curse of God, knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to Heaven.

And as our present term is closed, and we are preparing to enter upon the duties of another, let us set our aim higher and enter upon our duties with a determination of excelling the past in every respect, and becoming more proficient in the sciences we are pursuing. The acts of the past we can never expect to recall. The record is made up. But the future is before us and each and every one of us should make this a subject of thought —what shall my future record be, and act accordingly? For it remains with ourselves to decide what progress we will make; we are the builder of our fortunes, and our prosperity depends on the foundation we lay in youth. Let us then, my classmates, as we commence the labors of another term resolve to have a noble record; one that will shine in the future ages of time. And while we thank the Giver of every good and perfect gift, for blessing innumerable, which have surrounded us on every side, also, ask His divine blessings to rest upon us; and our endeavors to seek wisdom and knowledge, and brighten our faith as we glide along through life. Then shall our pursuits not be in vain, and such as will not cause us regret and sorrow. And as term after term closes and we come before you with our entertainments, you can surely say we are advancing by the works our intellectual minds have accomplished.

The present term has passed off pleasantly to all, and we are truly sorry to think it has closed. To you kind and worthy Professors we extend our sincerest thanks for the many useful instructions you have imparted to us, and the arduous labor you have performed for our benefit, and the lively zeal you have manifested in our welfare. We are highly indebted to your honors, and cannot find words to express the gratitude we feel towards you; and long after our school-days are past, we will cherish your memory, and may God bestow His blessings on you, and prosperity smile upon your path as you fill the duties of life. Let us remember that the community is watching to see whether we are advancing. The prosperity of our College depends greatly upon us. Therefore, let us make an effort to gain a fame for ourselves as well as for the College, so that in after years Salem College may rank one among the grandest Institutions of our nation; that we can look back and say, within its walls we gained our knowledge, and ever recall those hours we spent there—the happiest of our existence, and give to the future generations some of the instructions our worthy Professors taught us there. No doubt often during the coming week, we will imagine we hear the sweet pealing sounds of the College bell inviting us to come, or the sweet smiling faces that so often greeted each other. May the great God watch over us and bring us together again, and if it should be the lot of some not to meet with us again, may peace attend them through life, and flesh laurels be strewn on their way. And when life's voyage is run, may we all meet again in mansions above, prepared for the good and righteous.

Whoso despiseth the word shall be destroyed: but he that feareth the commandments shall be rewarded.

Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord: but they that deal truly are his delight.

Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

REMEMBER THY CREATOR IN THY YOUTH.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Ecclesiates 12 : 1.

In the face of this Scripture, I ask, why are our young people generally irreligious? I might reply, because they choose to be so, and the fault is with them, and so dismiss the subject. But as there necessarily must be some causes why our young people generally are irreligious, I wish to consider the subject a little farther.

I think the fact that our young people generally are irreligious, most in part at least, be ascribed to parental neglect in training their children in the way in which they should go. For if this is properly done we have the authority of the Word of inspiration, that when they are old, they will not depart from it. Man is an imitative creature. The child learns to think, speak and act by imitation. It is a question how little he would know how to say and do, had he no example to imitate. Without regard to his nationality, he will acquire the language spoken around him whether it be Greek, Hebrew, Latin or English, as well as the habits of the people, whether they be Pagans Jews, Modamedans or Christians. And so necessarily, a pure, refined, religious, or vulgar language, will form moral and religious, or immoral, and even viscious habits, according to the character of the example he has to imitate. These are facts which no correct observer will deny. Then I must conclude that there once was a time in the period of the life of every one, in which they were susceptible and impressible, from which starting point their parents might have trained them for God and religion. But that moral and religious training is generally neglected, is too painfully true. Parents not only fail to restrain their children, but even encourage them in vice by their own ungodly example. Some children would be amazed and astonished to hear their parents pray with, or talk religion to them, and we see the sad results a—generation of young men and women living in sin and pride, exerting an influence in the cause of vanity and sin, that, if properly directed, would make religion a triumph in the land. And parents forgetful in the transactions, wonder why their children are so fashionable and irreligious.

I do not mean to say that there are no good parents, who have taught their children the principles of morality and religion, and brought them up for God, for I know their are many such, and yet their children have disappointed their expectations, and brought their gray hair with sorrow to the grave. Among the worst immoral young persons we find those who had, and have, not only moral, but humble Christian parents, who have forgotten their early training. Children of many prayers and of many tears, whose dying parents took them in their arms and asked God to bless them, have turned their backs to God, and their faces to the flesh, and are not only irreligious to-day, but gross immoral sinners. But these are exceptions to the rule, and do not change the fact, that the prevailing irreligion of the young people, is the result, to a great extent, of failure on the part of parents. For had all the parents of our country for the last thirty years been religious, and had trained their children religiously, our present generation would be strong in God and truth, and temptation the gateway to sin would have been correspondiogly weakened. The failure is truly a sad one. How is the evil to be arrested, may well be asked? Will those professing Christian parents, who have trained their children from the cradle, up in vanity and pride, answer how?

I mention this to arrest, if possible, the attention of those parents who have in their hands the formation of the next generation. These professing Christian parents, who have indulged their children in every vanity and pride that a sinful and irreligious people could conceive and invent, those parents who, perhaps with their own fingers pierced the tender ears of their own innocent children not yet ten years old, preparatory to having thrust into them, the book that holds the forbidden jewel, so that their children may appear in sinful company, like sinners appear. And you parents, who have furnished your children with means to outstrip the irreligious in style and dress; you who have furnished them with all the means they wanted to furnish the basket of daintie for the Pic-nic table and dance. All, all of you stop and think. You know what your children now are, you know how they appear, you yourselves have trained them to what they are, and your money has furnished them with all they have. Some of them are already fathers and mothers, and others will be such. Did you ever think what kind of a generation your grandchildren will be?

Children, I address you. Many of you are where you are to-day, out of the Church, and hemmed in with sinful associations, because you determined to be there. You would not be contented by your religious parents, and rather than your fond indulgent parents have broils, contentions and strife in the family, they let you have your own way. Now think, if you, under the advantages of a Christian parentage, have failed to remember your Creator, and have gone so far in the fashions and customs of the world; what do you think your children will do? Can you give them Christian training? Can you bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, when you are not in the Lord yourselves? And you young men and women, brethren and sisters, who are not yet parents, I address along with those above. Will you go on in the way of sin and folly, forgetting your Creator in the days of your youth? There are weighty reasons why you should remember your Creator in your young days.

1st. It is important that you should do so because God said you should, and this alone should overrule every carnal reasoning urged against it.

2nd. It is important to do so, because the young age is the learning age, and we have already seen above that we must learn everything, and so the love and fear of God, with every Christian grace must be learned and there is no time to learn so well as in the days of our youth, before those evil days come, or the years draw nigh in which we have observed trouble and sorrow in others, days and years in which they had no pleasure. These are not times to learn. A young sister, mother, in great family afflictions, once wrote me of her trouble and trials. She said, I thank God that I paid some attention to religion when I was young, I now have somewhat to lean on, and if I had it not, I would not likely now obtain it.

3rd. It is very important you should remember your Creator in the days of your youth, because you do not know whether you will live to get old. The probability is, you will not. If you go into an adjoing grave-yard and read the epitaphs on the stones, you will be shocked to read so many sleeping there younger in years than yourselves.

To all this you answer, I have often thought over these things, and I hope it will all get right. My dear friends I know you have done so, and that you even hope so. Some of you who will read this, and I, have talked this matter over together. But as I then told you, so I tell you again, it will never get right until you help to make it right, and I grieve over the thought that some of you may never get right. I will tell you why I have such fears, I really do not believe that you are of those who have a proud look which God hates. But you have chosen your company and associates among the irreligious, and you went after the world, and to please them, as well as your own vanity, you have piled up a pile of vanity between you and your God, that you do not know how to get removed, and it is this that keeps you out of the Church, it is not debauchery, nor infidelity that put you where you now are, and this is what you still hope will get right. But two things I fear much: first, I fear that you will not live long enough for it to get right by desires failing. And second, I am much afraid you will be made to feel as you often do, that you are out of Christ, as well as out of His Church, when that thing called religion will be imposed upon you, which will take you as you are, and flatter you with the assurance on their part you are all right, whether gay and in fashion with the irreligious or not, or whether you patronize the ball, the theatre, or pic-nic dance or not, all one if you only go with them. They are so liberal they will meet you on your own conditions. Churches who in their dedicatory sermon, will, on the Organ, in the Church sing and play Hail Columbia, Yankee Doodle, and Praise God from whom all blessings flow, all together under the sacred name of religion, will not require you to dispense with your superfluities. That they in their proselyting efforts may deceive you, I fear much, very much indeed. A young lady of my acquaintance having united herself with one of them, was asked why she did so, she answered that in the Church to which her parents belonged she would not be permitted to loop up her dress in loops. This one I suppose now realizes her hope, and thinks it has got right at last. Poor creature, how many are just like you? I know a number. Dear friends, be warned of your danger, and remember your Creator now, and obey Him in all His commandments.

But you say, I don't know how to get rid of all this mass of matter that hinders me, it is so hard to leave my friends &c. To this I answer, who are the friends you think you must leave? Why one that will despise you on account of being an humble christian is not your friend, and if you, to please such, will neglect a religious duty, you are robbing God, and murdering your own soul. But why do you think it is so hard to leave these, and not to go with them? I do not think you felt much trouble to leave your true friend when you first went with sinners. Some of you have pious parents, and even brothers and sisters, both older and younger than you. Do you not think these are your friends, do you not know they are your true friends? Did you ever feel it to be hard to leave them? When your father and mother, your brothers and sisters go to church in humility, and associate with the godly, and you see them in the evening seated with the saints at the Lord's table, showing forth the death of their Savior. Do you find it very hard to separate yourself from them, and to go with those who fear not God unto obedience, making yourself appear the greatest stranger in the house. And you whose parents may be out of the church because they did as you are now doing, as well, as your brothers and sisters, neglecting to remember their Creator, you are all going together in one large company away from your best friends, the Christians, you go away from Jesus the friend that sticketh closer than a brother, away from God the giver of all you have, from heaven and eternal life, without ever once feeling it is hard to do so.

My dear reading friends, although you have left me in common with all true Christians in going the way you have chosen, and never once thought it hard to do so, yet will I not abandon you, though I cannot follow you to all the places where you go, I will stand in the way and call after you to see, and ask for the old paths, the good way, and urge you to walk in it, and you will find rest for your souls. D. P. SAYLER.

Correspondence.

SAD ACCIDENT.

Dear Pilgrim:—While I was in attendance at the "Dry Valley" series of meetings, a request was made for some brethren to attend an appointment in Kishacoquillas Valley, on Tuesday eve. January 9th. The lot fell upon brother George Myers, and myself. We started upon our journey in a sleigh, at 3 o'clock P. M. when reaching the bridge that spans Honey Creek, near Wm. Mann's "Ax Factory" sleighing being rather poor, I walked to the clerk's office, where I met John Hoyt the chief clerk of the establishment. He was very much in haste, but he spoke to me smilingly as I e hurried on. I had never seen him before, and his pleasant intelligent looking face, at the age of about fifty years, was a peculiarity well calculated to leave favorable impressions and friendly sentiments toward him. In a moment after he passed me I was seated in the sleigh, and looking round saw a train of cars passing the little village very rapidly.

We passed on to our stopping place and after being lodged about an hour, the sad intelligence came to our ears that John Hoyt was killed. While attempting to cross the R. R. when he had almost made his escape, the locomotive caught his foot and threw him on the track, tearing and mangling his body in a shocking manner, killing him instantly. His mutilated remains were immediately gathered into a coffin, preparatory to their burial. We went on and tried to conduct the meeting in the fear of the Lord. There was quite a number of children present, they paid particular attention to the announcement of the sad casuality.

The next morning, when arriving at the Dry Valley Meeting-house, we learned that the sad affair had been publicly referred to there also.

This unfortunate man was engaged as clerk in the place for twenty years. He was evidently deceived in his judgment of the speed of the locomotive compared with his own. Such are the uncertainties of life, in one moment all our earthly pleasures and hopes are blasted. Hence the propriety of being more particularly concerned about things that pertain to happiness beyond this vale of tears.

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, P.

SALEM COLLEGE, BOURBON IND. January 8th, 72.

To the readers of the PILGRIM:—Not long since there was a full statement given of the history of Salem College, being properly understood that the brethren obligated themselves to locate at Bourbon, and nowhere else. It is then past being a question whether it shall be located here or somewhere else. It cannot be removed from here without a detriment to the Brotherhood because of the obligation they have taken. They would first have to make full compensation for all that the citizens might claim as a loss by its being removed. Then since it cannot remain a question any longer whether it shall be located here, we heartily solicit the co-operation of the Brethren everywhere, to aid us in establishing this institution expressly designed for our children. We implore your aid in every direction. We ask our brethren, friends of education, to awake from their drowsiness and take an active part in this one great cause Is it not evident to the minds of our dear brethren, that this matter of education in the Brotherhood has been neglected long enough? How many of our children are now attending other institutions of learning simply because we have none? How hazardous it is also to their well being to attend those schools where they cannot help but be cultivated or taught contrary to our views of Gospel right or wrong?

Brethren the great necessity of such an institution amongst us cannot be too boldly vindicated. An institution amongst the Brethren would be heartily appreciated by the world, for many are only waiting to see such an institution erected, to which they can send their children, with full confidence that they will receive moral training and not be taught to become aristocratic and haughty. The outsiders in this section of the country exhibit a willingness on their part to donate liberally. There are scarcely any that refuse, but we do not want them to build the school alone. We ask the Brethren to unite in doing this work, and if you have children to send to school, patronize the Brethren's School. We hope the brethren will thoroughly consider this matter, and be prepared to aid in this cause when they are called upon. We hope our Editors will use a mild influence in behalf of the school, as their opportunities are ever at hand.

Our present term began Dec. 9th, 1871, and will end March 15th, Spring term opens March 20th. We expect quite a number in the Spring term, and now extend an invitation to our brethren's children, and all who wish to come, they will be heartily received. Yours in the bonds of Christian love.

DAVID HECKMAN.
Treasurer.

[C. F. C. please copy]

Editors Pilgrim:—As you request contributions from your reader, and as I have made several attempts heretofore, I will try again, knowing at the same time there are others in this neighborhood who are taking the PILGRIM, that would be more able to give Church news than I am, but I do not think I have ever seen an article written by any of them in the PILGRIM. Why this is I do not know. There are many brethren and sisters in the West, that went from this country, who would be glad to hear from us sometimes, if they are readers of the PILGRIM. With this I send you one new subscriber, one that is as well acquainted with Church matters as any brother that I am acquainted with or any we have among us. I hope he will sometimes let the brethren hear from us, (We hope so too, contributions, &c., are thankfully received from all.) As far as I know, the Church here is in a healthy condition, and there has been quite a number added to the Church the past Summer. The brethren whose duty it is to go and preach the Gospel to a dying world, have branched out along the out-skirts, and have gathered some into the fold, but while this is so, and we are made to rejoice, we also sometimes have cause to feel sad and made to weep on account of some who have become unruly. It has become the duty of the Church of late, painful as it is, to expel two of its members, and another one has left the Church on account of Mormonism, which has been preached among us some for the last two years, by men who claim to come from Utah. Some have been baptized by them and expect to go to Utah next Spring. How people can be led away by such a doctrine, I cannot tell, but they they are those, or some of them at least, that had been carried away by Thurmanism a few years ago, and I think, discredit the Bible, and are ready to take hold of anything.

S. J. GARBER.

New Hope, Va.

Dear Pilgrim:—This informs you that myself, my wife and sister Etter, are the only members within thirty-five miles of this place, but the people are very kind and sociable. Elder George Wine paid us a visit, with four other brethren, last month. We had three meetings, with good attention, and from what I can learn since they have left, the people were well pleased, and one neighbor told us that the people are very anxious to get this country settled up with Dunkards. We were the first that were ever seen by many in this country, and brother Wine was the first that ever preached here. Now seeing that the brethren are kindly received, and the people wishing them to locate here, would it not be much more in accordance with the Word of God, for brethren, when they say that they go on missions of love, to go where souls need food, instead of going where they are fed weekly, and almost daily? If they are going for the love of souls, which would show the most love? Brethren that are not able to travel, can settle here and will have plenty to do at home, and as for homes, they can buy from five to ten thousand acres here all joining. Prices range from five to ten dollars per acre. We live within two miles of the James River Canal.

Yours in love.

WM. MALLORY.

Cartervill, Va.

QUERY.

Dear brother Brumbaugh:—Will you or some of the brethren give an exposition through the PILGRIM of the 4th-5th- and 6th verses of the 6th chapter of Hebrews, which reads as follows: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the Heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame."

DANIEL BOCK.

Miamisburg, O.

Dear Brother: Please answer the following query:

If a brother or sister has done wrong, and they are willing to come forward and acknowledge their fault to the church, can they be held at a distance, or in a position that they are neither in nor out of the church?

Yours to oblige.

JOSEPH DRURY.

In church government there is a rule of universal application, a rule in which we are all instructed when received into the church, and that is, "If she or he confess their faults, the church must forgive," but as in all other rules, so in this; there appears to be exceptions. Among those exceptions we will mention the man given to intemperance. On Saturday evening he lingers long over the intoxicating cup—Sabbath morning he awakens full of repentance, and goes to the church, makes an humble and full acknowledgment—promises never to do so any more, and before another week is ended, he is again seen staggering in the street or lying in the ditch. Acknowledgements are ever on the end of his tongue, but without any disposition to avoid the temptation and reform. Such, and similar cases are considered by some of our brethren as proper subjects to be held in a state of probation to test their motives. Such are held as members, but not in full communion with the church. Such a rule of action has no precedent in the Scriptures, and is of doubtful propriety. In all cases where offending members make a full acknowledgment to the church, the church should forgive and reinstate them, unless it has good reason to doubt their sincerity.

Editors Pilgrim: Dear brethren, will you permit one anxious to know, to ask a question to be answered by you, or all the editors of the Brethren's Periodicals, as the query is to all.

The question is this: Why is it that our editors never copy any articles from one another, yet frequently do so from other denominational papers? Is it because there is no merit in the brethren's writings? This subject has been talked over by brethren, but could give no satisfactory reasons. Some supposed, that some brethren reading, and paying for more than one paper might be a reason. Be this as it may, it is no sufficient reason, as many of our brethren also read some of the other denominational papers from which selections are made. And it will certainly not be more inconvenient for a brother to pay twice for a brother's writing, than it is for a strangers. It is said by some brethren, that if a brother, friend or stranger, would read any one of the Brethren s periodicals, and knew nothing of the Brethren but what he learned in it, he would never know that they have any other paper, as one never mentions, or refers to the other. Brethren, is this as it ought to be? Some of the members think that some of the brethren's articles ought not only have been copied by all our papers, but thousands of copies struck off in "Tract" form for gratuitous distribution. In the love of God, and for the spread of His Truth an answer is awaited. ENQUIRER.

As the above query includes us, we will give our answer and the others can do so ad libitum. We have, in all cases, copied from all our periodicals when requested to do so, beyond this we do not feel at liberty out of respect for the writer, neither do we deem it prudent unless it would be articles of special importance, and they should be accompanied with a request to have them copied, and those requests should be honored by the editor. We have also made it a rule when contributors wish to have their productions copied, to publish the request and then our brother editors can exercise their liberties. As to noticing our periodicals, we think that we have exercised our good share of liberality, and have received the missiles of envy thrown at us, in a spirit of true christian courtesy, for which many of our brethren have highly commended us, and we are now receiving our reward in a largely increased circulatioo. We are more than ever persuaded that there is nothing gained by trying to destroy each others influence, and that God will bless the efforts of those who endeavor to do right, therefore we shall hail the day with special joy when we, as publishers and editors, can recognize each other as fellow laborers and be a unit in advancing the true religion of Jesus in the world.

Editor's Department.

GOOD WORDS.

We here present a few extracts, out of the hundreds we might give; containing "good words" for the PILGRIM family. Those that were not intended for publication we only give the initials.

Dear Pilgrim: I have been absent from home for some time. I held a meeting in Knox county and one in Stark county, and one in Coshocton county. Just got home last night. I am advocating the cause of the PILGRIM and will continue to do so. And feel assured it will meet with success. I now close. My respects to you and the PILGRIM family. Yours in hope of eternal life. J. N.

Dear Brethren: I have 31 names on my list, old and new. Eighteen new ones and 13 old, more than double my old list Now if all your agents double their lists, which they can easily do by trying, you will be sustained as you ought to be. So go on brethren in the good work. I hope you will be rewarded for it. I wish you God speed. Your unworthy brother D. H. B.

Dear Brethren: I send you three more subscribers for the PILGRIM. There are calls made for preaching at the outskirts of our District, on the Perry county side of our District to which we cannot attend often. I am trying to introduce the PILGRIM in those places. I think they will not be so likely to forget what has been preached, neither be so apt to be led astray. I think it would be well if our ministering brethren would introduce the PILGRIM and especially in such places. Yours in the bonds of love. A. B.

Dear Brethren of the Pilgrim: I now drop you a few lines more, to inform you that I have procured four more names for the PILGRIM. I am trying to get all the names for your paper that I can. Two of these names are brethren, and the others are husbands of sisters.

Our district of church is a new one, and we are but few and scattering, but we have added to our little number since last June, 14 by baptism, and there is still a prospect for more.

May God bless our labors to the salvation of souls is the prayer of your unworthy brother

D. R. FREEMAN.

Brethren Editors of the Pilgrim: I have received the two first numbers of the PILGRIM and I can say I love it. It contains wholesome instructions, and I love to read a paper that avoids controversy. Pilgrims do not contend, they are a meek and lowly people, willing to be taught and willing to receive admonitions. Pilgrims let us hold fast to the things we have heard, lest at any time we should let it slip and might not obtain the promise of being where he is. May we all strive to be more perfected by obeying the truth and try and be without spot or blemish before the Lord. Then we can sing:

Oh happy pilgrims, spotless, fair,
What makes your robes so white appear?
Our robes are washed in Jesus' blood,
And we are traveling home to God.

Yours in love,
D. B. CONORIE.

Dear Pilgrim:—Enclosed please find $ 1.25 to welcome your visits during 1872. Had you been so fearful as to stop coming just as soon as your pay for 1871 was run out, you perhaps would not have been made welcome for 1872, with your new dress all white and clean. You are welcome. I want you to remember this hereafter. Dear PILGRIM, I think you will get more visits by your kindness, than you would if you would stop coming as soon as the paid term expired. Some of your patrons may not have the money at the time, but still the PILGRIM comes, and it will not lose its reward. I am sure no good brother or sister will forget you because you came in advance of your pay, and if they do, they are not worthy of the name. I remain yours in Christian fellowship.

J. H. GARMAN.

Sinking Springs, Ohio.

DISTRICT MEETING.

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Buck Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Pyrmont, Ind.

GEORGE WOOD. John Zellar's papers were sent, and we send them again. Hope he may get them this time.

D. R. FREEMAN. Yes when your club is completed, your whole list will be sent at club rates and all over that, 10 per cent off.

MARRIED.

CONDRIE—CLINE.—On the 21st of Dec. 1871, at the residence of the brides parents in Monroe Township, Cumberland Co. Pa. by Elder Moses Miller, brother D. B. CONDRIE, to sister LIZZIE CLINE.

DIED.

SEMLER—In Sellsport District, Alleghany Co., Md., Nov. the 8th 1871, MARTIN SEMLER, aged 71 years, 11 month, and 28 days. He belonged to the Lutheran Faith, Funeral exercises by Mr. Brininger, the Lutheran Minister, and the writer, from 60th Psalm

ESHLEMAN.—In the Yellow Creek branch Bedford county, Pa., Jan. 16th, 1872, sister SUSANNAH ESHLEMAN, daughter of brother John and sister Susannah Eshleman. Disease, Consumption. Her afflictions were first Inflammatory Rheumatism which she bore patiently for three years, and finally turned to Consumption. She was baptized some three weeks before her death, and by her request complied with the ordinance instituted by our Lord in the night of his betrayal, according to order, at her father's house, and was, also, 36 hours previous to her departure, anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, thus dying in the full assurance of faith. Occasion improved by the Brethren from John's Gospel, 5th chapter, 24–29 verse, to a large audience. Aged 29 years, 5 months, and 21 days. LEONARD FURRY.

[Visitor and Companion please copy.]

HARVENCAMP—Accident Alleghany Co. Md., Nov. 6th 1871, JOHN HARVENCAMP, aged 63 years, 1 month, and 20 days. Funeral exercises by Jeremiah Beeghly and the writer, from Matt., 24: 44. "Be ye also ready."

He was in meeting the day before, Sunday, in usual health, and next day he fell dead in his yard, a few steps from his house, his daughter saw him a few minutes before coming to the house. Let this be a warning to us, that we have no abiding city here. JOSIAH BEEGLY.

DETRICK.—In the Lost Creek church, Juniata county, Pa., June 28th, 1871, sister MARY DETRICK, formerly Legenton; aged 71 years, 7 months and 8 days.

Her disease was cancer and dropsy. She was a faithful member for many years. The religious services were performed by brother Ezra Smith and others. She was the mother-in law of the writer.

D. G. VARNER.

HAMMER—In the Beaver Creek Congregation, Va, brother JOHN HAMMER, aged 67 years 7 month and 12 days. Funeral occasion improved by Elder Jacob Thomas and others

HOOKS—In the same Congregation, Jan. 13th 1872, sister MARY M. HOOKS, aged 49 years, 6 month, and 17 days. Funeral exercises by the same.

She lived a quiet and peaceable life for many years, but had never joined herself with the children of God until consumption had seized her body, and she lying on her death bed. She then made her wants known to the brethren which was a hard task in the winter season, for a person almost unable to be up, but the Lord promised to be mighty in the weak, and by His help she was able to undergo the task. In a few weeks she grew worse, and now she has left a troublesome world and is in the hands of a just and merciful God, who will do her no injustice.

SHANK—In the same Congregation, sister ELIZEBATH SHANK, aged 80 years 8 month and 17 days. Funeral services by Elder George Wine and others, from 1st Peter 1st chapter 24th verse. She leaves a large family and many relatives to mourn their loss. S. N. WINE.

RITTENHOUSE—December the 18th 1871 in the Black River Church, EMMA RITTENHOUSE, daughter of Jacob and sister Sarah Rittenhouse, aged 4 months and 18 days. Funeral services by S Garver and G. Bollinger, from Luke 8th chapter and 52 verse, "She is not dead, but sleepeth."

Weep not for me, my suffering's o,er
My sufferings all have ceased;
My daily smile with you is done,
My body rests in peace.

Our little Emma is no more,
Her little voice we hear no more,
Her little eye-lids now are closed,
And there she sleeps in calm repose.

Our Emma so dear has left us,
And why I as she left us so soon,
The Savior no doubt must have loved her
And He has taken her home.

(Money list crowded out.)

NEWS ITEMS.

OBJECTIONS TO MODE OF BAPTISM.—The Baptist Union objects to the custom of baptizing persons backwards. It says that "it certainly is not the most convenient mode. It was adopted for the purpose of making the rite conform to our ideas of burial, but the mode of burial has not in all ages been uniform. Baptism was formerly administered by having the candidate kneel and then pushing the head forward until immersion was complete. Many object to immersion solely on account of the mode of administration. There is a very thoughtful and sensible article in the Baptist Magazine, in favor of changing the mode from a backward to a foreward movement. The subject deserves careful consideration.—We know of but one serious objection to a change, namely, prejudice, or tenacity for mere accidents which do not in any manner affect the substance or significance of the rite."

THE DISCIPLES of Christ are most numerous in the Middle States, numbering in Ohio 30,000, in Indiana 80,000, in Illinois 60,000, and in Kentucky 90,000, and in other states in less proportion. They have churches in Canada, Jamaica, California, Oregon, England, and Australia.—They have 1.000 regular ordained ministers of the Gospel. Their leading periodicals are, the American Christian Review, the Christian Standard, and the Christian Quarterly, Cincinnati; the Apostolic Times, Lexington, Ky.; the Christian, Kansas City, Mo.; the Gospel Echo, Macomb, Ill. In all above twenty-five weeklies and monthlies devoted to the interests of the Church, the Sunday School, and domestic government. Besides which they patronize many religious journals outside of their own denominational ranks.

The Mennonites have had an existence as a Church in this country, one hundred and fifty years. During the coming year they anticipate a large emigration from Prussia and Russia. In the latter empire they number about forty thousand. This rapid emigration to this country is principally owing to the stringent military regulations which prevail in Prussia and Russia.

ONE of the old poets ventured upon the following predictions respecting the year when Christmas comes on Monday:

If Christmas day on Monday be,
A great winter that year you'll see,
And full of winds both loud and shrill,
But in the summer truth to tell,
Stern winds shall there be and strong,
Full of tempests and lasting long;
While battles they shall multiply,
And great plenty of beasts shall die;
He shall be found that stealeth aught,
Though thou be sick, thou diest not.

Harvey Thacker, a son-in-law of Daniel Boone, died a few weeks ago in California at the ripe age of 128 years. He is supposed to have been the oldest man in the United States, if not in the world. No mention is made of his life record during the Revolutionary war, though he was just 33 years old when the war broke out, but he is said to have served after he was 70 under general Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, and under Harrison at the battle of Tippecanoe and also in the Black Hawk war in Illinois.

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subcribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers —many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement; comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not Marry. For both Sexes. By S. R. wells. Plain, $1.50; Extra gilt, $2.00.

1780 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 18. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr. J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy, post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen, - - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy, post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen, " - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy, post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen, " - - -	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid -	$ 1 00
Per Dozen - - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	1.00
Turkey morocco, - - -	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen, - - -	5 50

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex. P. M.	Mail A. M.	STAIONS.	Down Trains. Ex. A. M.	Mail P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 33
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 16
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 28	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 39
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 23	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'lt	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 57	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 38	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water St. and Maiden Lane N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug 2t.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,				10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,				8 cts.
Six months,	do	do	do,	6 cts.
One Year,	do	do	do,	5 cts.

☞ Trancient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	5.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1 65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.90
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.50
" Hill "	1.45
" Winter red "	1.50
CORN.	.00
OATS.	.38
RYE.	.85
BARLEY.	.65

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.

Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1 25.
Book paper, " "	1 50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate.

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa.

Milky Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JANUARY 30, 1872. NO 5

ESSAYS.

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

[From Longfellows' New Poem.]

Repent! repent! repent!
For the kingdom of God is at hand,
And all the land
Full of the knowledge of the Lord shall be
As the waters fill the sea,
And encircle the continent!

Repent! repent! repent!
For lo, the hour appointed,
The hour so long foretold
By the Prophets of old,
Of the coming of the Anointed,
The Messiah, the Paraclete,
The desire of the Nations, is nigh!
He shall not strive nor cry
Nor his voice be heard in the street;
Nor the bruised reed shall he break
Nor quench the smoking flax!
And many of them that sleep
In the dust of earth shall awake,
On that great and terrible day,
And the wicked shall wail and weep,
And be blown like smoke away,
And be melted away like wax.
Repent! repent! repent!

O Priest, and Pharisee,
Who hath warned you to flee
From the wrath that is to be!
From the coming anguish and ire?
The axe is laid at the root
Of the trees, and every tree
That bringeth not forth good fruit,
Is hewn down and cast into the fire!

Ye Scribes, why come ye hither?
In the hour that is uncertain,
In the day of anguish and trouble,
He that stretcheth the heavens as a curtain
And spreadeth them out as a tent,
Shall blow upon you, and ye shall wither,
And the whirlwind shall take you away as stubble!
Repent! repent! repent!

O, SINNER, SINNER!

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing, and ye would not." Matt. 23 : 37.

Jesus Christ the Son of God came into the world to seek, and to save that which was lost by transgression and sin. Man being the transgressor, entailed the penalty of death annexed to the law upon the whole human family; and if not saved from it will be an eternal separation from God. None but God himself in his own way can save him. Hence He sends His Son in the likeness of sinful flesh on this mission to seek and to save that which was lost. The earnestness of his mission is manifest in the scripture which heads this article.

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, implies an earnest concern; sympathy as well as lamentation, and is characteristic of the Lord Jesus Christ, who looking not only over but through the inhabitants of this sinful city, and knowing all the efforts God had made toward their reformation without any good results, exclaims, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem." Her sins were very grievous. They were not only sinners by transgression and debauchery, but their hands were full of blood. And what aggravated these sins and made them the more soul-damning is, they determine to continue in them, and will not be reformed. They killed the prophets and stoned them that were sent unto them for their correction, instruction, and reformation. Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm, saith God. But these wicked sinners disregard all law, and to rid themselves of any restraint the prophets of God might bring them under, kill the preacher of righteousness, and so run unrestrained into ruin and hell. Jesus seeing the end from the beginning, stands ready to save them notwithstanding the enormity of their sins; and with lamentation and regret says to them, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that were sent unto thee." Your sins are of the deepest dye; yet notwithstanding the heinousness of them "How often would I have gathered thee, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under wings."

O ye Jerusalem sinners stop and think. Think over it. Can you tell how often I have offered to gather and save you? Can you tell how often I have wept over you, and prayed for you? Can you tell how many sermons of repentance and reformation I have preached to you? Can you tell how many miracles I have performed among you in order to convince you that I have power on earth to forgive sin? O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and you. What could have been done more than I have done? And yet you are neither gathered nor saved. When Nineveh, like you, became very sinful, my Father sent them a prophet with but one short sermon: "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown," without any offers of mercy; yet they tried repentance and reformation, and obtained pardon and were saved from the threatened overthrow. But you, O Jerusalem, think how many prophets has the Lord sent to you, whom you stoned and killed, and repented not; and now I the God incarnate am come to gather you, and save you, and how often would I have done it, can you tell?

"BUT YE WOULD NOT." Can the mind of man conceive greater ingratitude? Those intolerable bloody sinners, will not be saved. Can it be possible that any people can be so depraved in sin as to refuse to accept mercy and pardon. Yes, it is the characteristic of man's fallen nature, as well as to see sin in others before we see it in ourselves. We at once judge, and condemn the Jerusalem sinners with ingratitude towards God, and with injustice towards themselves in thus rejecting the offered mercies of Jesus.

My dear friends judge not hastily according to the appearance, but judge righteously. "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." King David once said in haste, "The man that has done this thing shall surely die." But how much his heart was rent when the prophet of God answered him, "Thou art the man, king David," may be appreciated when we read the 51st Psalm. Is it not even so with you, dear unconverted reader? And is not your Savior's anxiety as intense for your salvation as it was for the Jerusalem sinners? Think you he wept only over Jerusalem? You irreligious and unconverted fathers and mothers and children; neighbors and associates, living together without God and without hope in the world, what are your hopes beyond this fleeting life? To purchase your salvation Jesus wept, and prayed, and suffered and sweated blood, groaned and died on the cross, shedding his blood that we might have the forgiveness of sins. Was buried and rose again that repentance and remission of sins might be preached among all nations. And why are you unconverted and out of the church to-day? Is it because you can not do otherwise? You will not assume this position, because you know you are a moral or free agent, and that you can, and in every other thing, do as you please, if you but will. Is it because no one has importuned you? This you will not admit, because you know many tears and prayers, and sermons and admonitions have been spent in your behalf. And in addition to all this, your own conscience tells you that Jesus by the spirit of God has often convinced you that to die in the life you are now living you will be lost, lost, lost! Can you tell how often Jesus has offered to gather you into his fold, the church, and save you from your sins. Your sins may be many and grievous, but surely not more so than were the sins of the Jerusalem sinners, but his love and sympathy is as strong for you as it ever was for them, and stands ready with outstretched arms to gather you even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, and save you from all your sins, if you only will be saved and gathered.

And not only is Jesus willing and anxious to gather you, and save you, but the ardent wish and desire of all the good and faithful on earth is that you may be gathered into His church and be saved; while the angelic hosts of heaven rejoice if but one soul is gathered and saved. "The spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely, as heaven's will to you. And while Jesus and the Spirit, and the Bride, the church, all, all, earnestly entreat you to be gathered, your private and individual friends sympathize with you, and in their anxious concern for you weep over you, and feel like the prophet. "Oh that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." This is the feeling of every child of God toward an ungathered and unsaved people. How many anxious exclamations of fond, pious parents have gone to God.

Oh! that my children were gathered into the church, and saved from sin. One thought would comfort me on my dying bed. And such is the anxious concern of humble, pious children for the ungathered and unsaved parents. As an illustration I will give a case which came to my notice during the year 1871. A very zealous, humble, pious young sister, yet in her teens paid me a visit from an adjoining Church last summer. The object of her visit was to prevail with me to pay them a visit soon, as it seemed manifest that her father was going into a decline, and he was ungathered, unconverted, and unsaved. And oh, the thought of his dying in this condition lay a ponderous weight on the child's heart. She thought I might say something that would awake him to a sense of his condition. I promised the dear anxious sister I would do so. But before I could do so, the father came to see me, not, however about religion, but to arrange his worldly matters. To write his will, &c. The sister daughter came along. The arranging his worldly matters opened up a clear way for the introduction of spiritual condition. I availed myself of the opportunity the occasion afforded. I did all I could, and I felt my defects were made perfect by the sister child's prayer. About a month after I heard the good news that he was gathered into the fold. He was a brother. So much for a child's concern. The scene now changes.

About six weeks after his conversion he visited me again. I was not in the house when he came. On my coming in I found him seated by he stove. I addressed him. How are you brother, give me a kiss for the first time. He arose and said, I thank God that I can kiss you as a brother. He remained with me over night. We talked and prayed together, and a more marked change I never saw in any man. In the morning he said, 'Brother Sayler, I had an ardent desire to see you, and spend a night with you, for I know I can not live long. For myself I am willing to die; I have hope in my Savior, but I have three grown up children, and one son-in-law, who are not gathered, and the thought of dying while they are out of the church distresses my soul. I believe that out of our church they can not be saved, and if I could see them converted and gathered into the church I could die without a single regret, but the thought that they are out of the church burdens my soul. I wished to see you and try to enlist your sympathies and prayers in their behalf. Oh, brother Sayler, do labor for them; they are dear to me, and lie a heavy burden on my heart.

My dear reader, I have given you this circumstance in detail. Look at it and ponder it well. Don't you see the concern of the godly towards you. Look here and see first the concern of the godly child for an unconverted father; and second, as soon as that father suffered his Savior to gather him into the fold, his anxious concern is for his unconverted children. You, dear children, when you read these lines in the PILGRIM and recognize them as applicable to you, can you persist to refuse the offered mercies of your dear Savior?

Dear reader, the above recited case is only one among the many similar ones which become known to us. While there are unnumbered thousands of parents and children, and Christian friends who live out days and years of sorrow and sighs, tears and prayers, because of unconverted children; parents and friends who bear the burden on their hearts in secret, while their gray hairs go in sorrow to the grave. Oh, think what a scene it will be when heaven's records will be laid open before you. When the sighs and tears, the groans and cries, the wounds and blood of your rejected Savior, will appear against you, but the tears and prayers, and anxious concern of your Christian friends will all be against you. Can you meet and stand before such a tribunal?

Why then are you not gathered and saved? It is not because your Savior will not save you, for he asks you, how often would I have gathered you. It is not because your Christian friends do not aid and assist you, weep over you, and pray for you. Neither is it because you don't know you ought to be saved. There is but one reason why you are not, and it is the same reason why the Jerusalem sinners were not gathered. YE WILL NOT.

Why is it that you follow every fashion and vain thing? Because you will do it. Why do you go to the ball, the picnic, and theatre? Because you will go. Why do you forsake religious company and choose the irreligious and fashionable for your society, but because you will do so? And why do you not repent and forsake sin and sinful society but because you will not. Why do you not believe the gospel and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins, and become a member in the church? Because you will not. Why are you not a child of God by faith in Christ Jesus and baptized into Christ, and so put him on and live a life of humble obedience to all his commandments? Only because you will not. My dear friends be assured that while you will not be saved, although Jesus is ready and willing, and has all power in heaven and in earth, and has power on earth to forgive, he cannot save you. Neither will the anxiety, sympathy, tears and prayers, of the church with all your Christian friends combined, avail you anything while you will not be gathered and saved. But if you will, notwithstanding sin lies at your door, and his desire is to have you, yet you will reign over him.

D. P. SAYLER.

HOME.

Home is a place of abode. When we view this word from a natural standpoint it causes gratifying and pleasing sensations in our breasts, and if made known, often alarms the profligate.

Home, when resting on our minds, causes long and deep meditations, and if not removed, might lead to an irrecoverable and irretrievable end. Home cannot be compared with any other word in regard to its brilliant grandeur, natural and spiritual.

"Home when it is all that nature and grace can make it, has a blessedness and beauty of reality, that imagination in its fairest pictures would find nothing to excel." Home, murmur but its name, and our minds will be animated and aspired by the sound, and memories will start around which put fire into our brain, and benevolence takes place and uproots every obstacle;

Home when made beautiful, attractive, and excellent, is a very solicitous place indeed. It draws our minds entirely to that when our thoughts are engaged about it. When persons are abroad, and they receive some intelligence about home, you will perceive a change in the countenance, and if good news, their countenance is as bright as a diamond that glitters upon a ladies ring. Their hearts are gladdened, and they are full of mirth and exultation. Soon you will see them in pursuit of their mates to inform them of the illustrious and benignant tidings which they have received. But on the contrary, when a home is made desolate and wretched, O! what a solemn sight; everything wrong and desperate, nothing but acrimony and extinction, and why all this? Let the reader ponder and answer. Look at the poor and deplorable children, nearly frozen to death, and hearing nothing but imprecations and profane language. Language cannot dictate or express its wretchedness. Vile anger and destruction will be the result of such homes. May civilization and Christianity soon, soon wipe all such in oblivion.

But what are all our earthly homes with all their beauties, attractions, excellencies, pomp and glory, when compared with the home of the saints in glory? We must say no comparison in the least. The home of the saints is a home of rest that will last through all eternity. Its beauties, pleasures, and grandeur can not be seen by any human being while in this stage of action, "For eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither has it entered into the heart of man, the things that God has prepared for them that love Him." We need not doubt the existence of such a home, Christ says: "In my Father's house are many mansions." We should one and all strive to get possession of that holy home while grace is in our reach. The time will come when the offers of mercy will be no longer, "My spirit shall not always strive with man."—Gen. 6. 3. May we all say with the poet:

"Mid scenes of confusion, and creature complaints,
How sweet to my soul is communion with saints;
To find at the banquet of mercy there's room,
And feel in the presence of Jesus at home.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home;
Prepare me dear Savior, for glory my, home.

C. H. WALKER.

Berlin, Pa.

A CALL TO THE UNCONVERTED.

As you love your souls, take heed that you go not against the loud calls of God, and against your own knowledge and conscience, lest it should go worse with you in the day of judgment, than with Sodom and Gomorah.

Enquire of God as a man that is willing to know the truth, and not be a wilful destroyer of your own soul. Search the Holy Scriptures daily and see whether these things be so. Try impartially whether it be safer to trust heaven or earth, and whether it be better to follow God or man, the spirit or the flesh, better to live in holiness or sin, and whether an unsanctified state be safe for you to abide in one day longer. When you have found out which is best, resolve accordingly, and make your choice without any more ado. If you will be true to your own souls, and do not love everlasting torments, I beseech you as from the Lord that you will but take this reasonable advice. Then at your death bed, how boldly may we comfort and encourage your departing souls, and at your burial, how hopefully may we leave you in the grave, in the expectation of meeting your souls in heaven, and to see your bodies raised to glory. But if you will go on in a careless, ignorant, fleshly, worldly and unholy life, and all our desires and labors can not so far prevail as to keep you from the wilful damning of yourselves, we must then imitate our Lord who delighteth in those few that are jewels, and in that "little flock" which shall receive the kingdom, when the ungodly shall reap the misery which they sowed during life. Oh! wilful and miserable sinners, it is not God that is cruel to you, but you are cruel to yourselves. You have been told that you must turn or burn, and yet you turn not, but the time will come, and is not far distant when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

Oh sinners, if only you could see in what a dangerous place you are standing, I think it would cause you to turn immediately. When you have the opportunity to turn, then is the time to make peace with your God, and to prepare yourself for a better world to come. We are all well aware that we have no abiding place here, only a short time, and a few more of yonder setting Sun, and we may be numbered with the pale nations of the dead. Then all is too late; you can no more make peace with your God. Then is the time that you will have to bend your knees and want your God to have mercy upon you, but why did you not call upon Him when he was near, when he showered his blessings upon you and called you to turn? But you would not. Disobedient, and vile as you are, if you will but turn, the Lord will have mercy upon you. If you will but truly turn, even the angels in Heaven are willing to receive you. If thou wilt but cast satan behind thee, and let the laws of high heaven have dominion over you, the Father will receive you as a prodigal son, and give you one of his best robes.

Oh! sinners, I beseech you once more, as it were upon my bended knees, to take this advice home to yourselves, and may the God of High Heaven not let you rest, neither day nor night, 'till you repent. Though many a night your pillows may be wetted with tears, unless you turn and make a true confession, it will avail but little. Let us try to work out our soul's salvation with great fear and trembling. Your bodies will shortly lie in the dust, and angels or devils will seize upon your souls, and all will be taken to associate with the society which they loved most while in this life.

"I would rather be a door keeper in the house of God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." My prayer to one and all is, Heaven and happiness. May the Lord sanctify this to the good of all, and bring them into the Fold of Christ.

ELIAS GROFF.

Cerro Gorda, Ill.

EPISTOLARY.

Brethren pray for us. 1 Thes. 5: 25.

To the members of the Church of God in general. Grace be unto you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. Unto us, who are by one spirit baptized into one body, and consequently, together fellow-heirs of the grace of life. Let us stand firm in the Christian fellowship, cemented together in love and union; striving earnestly in prayer to God for one another. "Brethren pray for us." Paul made this request to the brethren, but in scripture language the sisters are included in a general appeal. Inasmuch, then, as Paul requested the prayers of the saints for himself, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, ministers in the primitive age of Christianity, who shared a larger portion of the Holy Spirit than we do in this distant age, in which darkness covereth the land, and gross darkness the people; iniquity abounds, and the love of many is growing cold, surely, necessity compels us to make this solemn appeal: "Brethren, pray for us."

The holy apostles felt the responsibility of their mission, hence their frequent appeals, "Pray for us." Do you think, my dear members, that we are less sensitive of our high calling? Suppose ye that we are less concerned about the welfare of your and your children's souls? Do you imagine that we feel no importance in our mission, and not feel the ponderous weight, the mighty responsibility bearing upon us by preaching the Word of life? I hope you do not. Then my repeated, earnest appeal is, brethren, "pray for us"; sisters, "pray for us," that the word of the Lord may have free course, and that it may be glorified, knowing that "the effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much." Let that love abound among us, and within us, that we can feel for one another, and sympathize with one another in our weaknesses, in our infirmities, and in our imperfections. If we learn this more properly, and cultivate our minds accordingly thereto, we thereby can make a vast improvement in our characteristics as a Christian people, and in the sanctified relationship we, as brethren and sisters, sustain to each other. For nothing is more detestable in the sight of God and man than evil-speaking, faultfinding and evil surmisings, through which comes contentions, envy, malice and animosity, to the destruction of that peace, love, and sweet enjoyment which we necessarily should have, and can have if no such things do exist. Let love be the ruling principle in our hearts, for "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."

Oh! think what mischief, what trouble, and what very unhappy feelings will it cause the soul that yields to evil insinuations. Such a spirit once imbibed is sure to find fault with everything that does not comport with his views, and makes him believe that everything is done in opposition to him, and for his injury. O, let us banish such thoughts from our hearts, and from our minds forever, and have them filled with love Divine, which excels every other love. That love which endureth all things, beareth all things, and makes the soul feel happy even in disappointments, in distresses, in afflictions, in persecutions, in temptations, in crosses, and in fiery trials. Knowing that these trials and tribulations "work for us patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given us." O, what happy seasons: What blessed enjoyments! And, O, what sweet communion! where all is love, all is peace, all is joy, and where all are engaged to make one another happy, and where the sweet nectar, love, reverberates from heart to heart. Brethren, let us watch and pray that we may realize such a heaven upon earth, where God dwells, and where in the sweet presence of Jesus is fullness of joy, and at His right hand are pleasures forevermore. This we can realize while together in God's sanctuary, in our social meetings, at home while surrounding our own family altar, or in an isolated condition. For this we labor, for this we aim, and this we are permitted to obtain, if we love God and keep his commandments. Brethren and sisters, if we feel any lack in doing this, let us speedily amend.

A new scene of time has commenced, let us with it commence a new life, more devoted to God, more assimilated to Jesus, and earnestly pray together for a double portion of His Spirit, for soon, soon the tide of life is ebbed away and we pass through the dark valley of death, and we shall reap the reward of our labors; if sown in tears, we shall reap with joy.

"A few more rolling days and years,
Shall bring a period to our tears;
Then we shall reach that happy shore,
Where parting shall be known no more.

Finally, brethren pray for us.

Yours in the bonds of the Gospel

LEONARD FURRY.

New Enterprise, Pa.

For the Pilgrim.

COME LET US REASON TOGETHER.

Logic, we are told, is the art of reasoning. Reason exists everywhere, and logic is the development of it in the mind.

A logical process is an agreement or disagreement of the elements which act upon each other in the formation of an object or in the cause of a result. Logic acts a part generically in every performance, but there are special definitions of it which limit its existence in many activities

There are, therefore, two distinct classes of operations with respect to the powers of logical arrangement. The first is generic or natural, and the second is a restriction upon natural and unnatural performances changing them sometimes from real and sometimes from supposed confusion into imagined or real harmony. A full comprehension of perfect natural or logical order in anything is an achievment, the consummation of which belongs only to God. There can be no stronger or more comprehensive evidence given in favor of logical arrangement than that given by Christ where he says, "first cast out the beam that is in thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." This is the simplest definition of logic; each step throwing light upon that which follows or precedes. The man who hears that there are tidings of salvation proclaimed, is forced either take a step toward heaven or in an opposite direction. If he steps forward new light flashes upon him at every advancement until he reaches the full stature of manhood in Christ Jesus; which is the object or result logically accomplished or realized. But if he steps backward the light recedes from him just as far as it would have advanced had he gone toward it, and thus he is the better prepared to take another step backwards into darkness and so on until he reaches the goal, plunging into eternal destruction, a result in which logic bears a conspicuous part, where the reason is developed. But man being depraved and sinful, his soul is in such a disorganized condition that the designed use of the senses is not enjoyed by him. He may exert all his power to see perfect order in natural or spiritual things, yet he fails to do so, though he believes he has seen the end and reached perfection. I do not wish to quarrel with the activity of modern science. Neither do I wish to see it less fruitful in distinguishing truth from error; but I do contend that all its conjectures and conclusions are subordinate to a perfect law of liberty, namely, the Gospel, in which the will of God is clearly and logically spoken and revealed. The teachings of the Gospel must not be considered inharmonious or stigmatized as unpractical, because they appear so to men, for the senses and consequently the judgments of men are known to be in a disorganized condition, hence, man's best methods of reasoning are foolishness with God, and by this foolishness which is the best thing in man, it has pleased God to save them that believe. If the case be so with our best efforts, what is the result of neglected ones? Who can tell?

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

THE GOSPEL.—The Gospel was sent into the world to save the world,—to save it from sinking! But from present appearance, it looks as though the world was going to sink the Gospel,—sink it into oblivion! Man, if you are not saved by the Gospel,—God's word will grind you to powder. It was said of the first preachers of the Gospel that they were turning the world upside down. It is worthy of remark that the preachers these days are trying to turn the Gospel upsidedown. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe, but the power of God unto damnation to them that believeth not. The Gospel has a Savior in it! And there is a devil outside of it seeking to rob the Gospel of its Savior. Which will you do, link arms with Christ to hold up the Gospel, or with satan to tear it down? In short will you have the Gospel and Heaven, or no Gospel and hell? —J. S. Flory.

WEAR A SMILE.—Which will you do? Smile and make others happy, or be crabbed and make everybody around miserable? You can live among flowers and singing birds, or in the mire among fogs and frogs. The amount of happiness you can produce is incalculable, if you will only show a smiling face, a kind heart, and speak pleasant words. On the other hand, by sour looks, cross words, fretful disposition, you can make hundreds unhappy almost beyond endurance. Which will you do? Wear a smiling countenance; let joy beam in your eye and love glow on your forehead. There is no joy so great as that which springs from a kind act or pleasant deed, and you may feel it at night when you rest, and at morning when you rise, and throughout the day when about your daily business.

ADVANTAGES OF AFFLICTION. NO. 4.

David a type of Jesus.

That David and his kingdom literally, to which he was chosen and established by the Lord, and the consequent persecution that followed, is typical of Jesus, and the spiritual kingdom He came to establish in the hearts of His followers, and the consequent persecution that generally follows, appears from what the angel who announced Jesus' birth said to His mother. —Luke 1. 32. For in what sense could Christ's spiritual dominion be called the kingdom of his father David, unless David's kingdom was a type thereof? That David was a type of Jesus appears from this also, that the prophets who foretold to the Israelites the coming of Jesus, named him David, and David their king. See Jeremiah 30:9. Ezekiel, 34:23-37:24. Hosea, 3, 4-5. Isaiah, 55:3. Acts, 13:34. In the last passage, the benefits which the spiritual seed derive from the government of Christ, in particular their safety from their enemies, are termed "The sure mercies of David." Saul also sent messengers unto David's house to watch him, and slay him in the morning."—1 Samuel 19 11. "And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill Jesus." But David escapes, being warned and assisted by his wife who makes use of a stratagem to deceive Saul. "So David fled and escaped, and came to Samuel to Ramah and told him all that Saul had done to him." Samuel no doubt felt deeply for the welfare of David, whom he saw exposed to such imminent danger, commending him to the care of the Almighty, and giving him that advice which he deemed best suited to his situation, and they both went and dwelt at Naioth, where it is supposed there was a school of the prophets of which Samuel was the head. Saul heard of this and sent messengers to take David. As they approached Naioth they met the company of the prophets prophesying, and the same divine influence came upon the messengers of Saul, and they also prophesied, and when it was told Saul, he sent others again, and again the third time, and they did the same. Saul now resolved to go himself and make sure of the object of his revenge, "and the spirit of God was upon him also, and he went on and prophesied." The Scripture does not inform us what Saul prophesied, but like Balaam who went with the princes of Balak, against the will of God. God afterwards told him to go with them "but yet the word which I shall say unto thee that shalt thou do," which resulted in blessing the Israelites instead of cursing them. So Saul's designs were frustrated in like manner. These signal interpositions of Providence interrupted his attempts to take the life of David. About this time, probably on the occasion of his escaping to Samuel at Ramah, David wrote the 59th Psalm, as the title doth signify, in the conclusion of which he utters these devout sentiments so befitting his condition. "But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning; for thou hast been my defense and refuge in the day of trouble. Unto thee, O, my strength, will I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy." God is my defense, happy is he who can cherish this trust in the Almighty amid the trials and dangers of life. If we are under the Divine protection, what have we to fear? Nothing that can injure us. The adversary of souls may assail us, wicked men may be allowed to inflict temporal evils, if possible even death itself, but the immortal spirit remains secure. "And David fled from Naioth and came and said before Jonathan what have I done, what is my iniquity, and what is my sin before thy father that he seeketh my life." Then Jonathan as a true friend and brother endeavors to allay the fears of David, and to comfort him and said unto him, "Whatsoever thy soul desireth, I will even do it for thee," Jonathan's plan to ascertain how Saul feels towards David, whereupon Saul becomes enraged and tries to kill him Then Jonathan lets David know the enmity of Saul towards him. Their interview was most affecting, they "kissed each other, and wept one with another until David exceeded, and Jonathan said to David go in peace."

How valuable is a faithful friend, especially when the affection which thus binds one to us is attended with religious principles. Human friendships alas! are too often like all the other affairs of this life, uncertain, and transitory. When they are formed between the sincere followers of Jesus, from the desire of encouraging each others hearts, and strengthening each others hands in the promotion of His cause, they are among the choicest blessings that God bestows upon His children. They serve to inspire the noblest sentiments, they rouse to action and call into exercise the purest affections. They cherish hope, and strengthen every wise and good resolution.

Let us try their dear reader, to be worthy of such friendship, and when formed, be true to their sacred observance even unto death. "And David arose and fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish the king of Gath, and the servants of Achish said unto him, is not this David the king of the land? And David laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the king of Gath." See 56th Psalm, which describes his great trials, temptations, and fears; as also his hope and confidence in God to deliver him, as this was a critical time, and one of peculiar trial to David. Being sore afraid of Achish the king, he assumed the appearance of one bereft of reason, at which we need not be astonished.—Imagine ourselves placed in his situation, as an exile, being driven by persecution from his own country, kindred &c., to seek refuge among the Philistines, his most bitter enemies. He had received the sword of Goliath, whom he had slain, from the priest at Nob, unto whom he said, "there is none like that," which he had taken with him, but now, no doubt, had hid or thrown away being cumbersome and dangerous, instead of which he applies the sword of the Spirit, for the weapon of his warfare, to fight against the enemies, and a glorious victory he did achieve.—Read the 33th Psalm. This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his troubles. The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them. "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry." The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth. The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, and saveth such that are of a contrite spirit. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."—Through this great trial and persecution, the Psalmist was enabled to rejoice, giving God the praise and honor for his great deliverence. The afflictive dispensation of God's providence was blessed, not only to himself, but his experience and admirable balm, he has given for the benefit of the church for all time to come. "David therefore departed thence, and escaped to the cave Adullam, and when his brethren and all his father's house heard it, they went down thither to him, and every one that was in distress, gathered themselves unto David and he became captain over them, and there were with him above 400 men. "And of the Gadites these seperated themselves unto David into the whole to the wilderness men of might, and men of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were as swift as the roes upon the mountain." 1 Chron. 12:

Abundant proof both of their courage and of their devotion to the cause of David was given, by them crossing the Jordan at the most dangerous period, when it had overflown its banks, and by putting to flight all in the valleys. The tribes of Benjamin and Judah, furnished considerable accession to the band at the cave of Adullam. David as he saw the men approaching, had at first some fears lest they might prove to be the enemies of Saul, addressing them in the following language, "If ye become peaceably unto me, to help me, my heart shall be knit unto you, but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing their is no wrong in my hands, the God of our fathers look there and rebuke it."—Their pious and patriotic reply soon put his heart at rest, and inspired him with fresh confidence in the overruling providence of God. The spirit came upon Amasia who was chief of the captians, and he said, "Thine are we, David, and on thy side thou son of Jesse, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thy helpers for thy God helpeth thee." "Seeing there is no wrong in my hands." "But and if ye suffer for righteousness sake happy are ye for it is better if the will of God be so that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing." 1 Pet. 3: 14, 17. 4: 12, 13. "And they departed from the presence of the council rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name." Acts 5: 41. So David through his afflictions and experience was growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, being also greatly strengthened and encouraged by the accession of such brethren who came in demonstration of the Spirit and of power to comfort him, by saying, "Peace, peace be unto thee, peace be unto thy helpers, for the God helpeth thee." "But the more they afflicted them the more they multiplied and grew."

D. Negley.

Welch Run, Pa.

REST.

Rest is highly appreciated by every being that knows what rest is. Man travels from place to place seeking this enjoyment and findeth not, although there is a rest that God alone can give, and is rest to the soul. Our bodies also need rest from the toils of the day, and how refreshing is a few hours of rest when the body becomes wearied by hard labor. The mind becomes wearied and needs rest also. The body, the soul, and the mind have rest, but they must be governed by the laws that are calculated to govern them. The body can enjoy this rest by ceasing from labor a certain length of time. The mind can rest by coming to Christ. The soul can have rest by taking up the yoke of Jesus, and following Him through the journey of life.

The rest beyond the grave is the most desirable, and to enjoy it, we suffer ourselves to be governed by the law that can alone give that rest. No more can we enjoy that rest without being obedient to Him who can give, and has prepared such enjoyments, than we can live without partaking of the things needful for the body. Then we must not only labor once a week, but every day. This is a work that must not cease while in this sinful world. The mind, soul, and body must be engaged in this noble work. Our hearts must be sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water, and without this it is impossible to enjoy eternal rest. God has prepared this noble enjoyment for His children. Brethren, this is a great inducement to continue steadfast in "the faith once delivered to the saints." Let us cast our minds back on days that are passed and gone, and review the course we have pursued, and examine the first step in search of that rest. Have we ever continued faithful to that promise we made before God and many witnesses? Have we ever wavered from that promise? If not we count them happy which endure. We have entered the Vineyard of the Lord, and have agreed with Him for a penny a day, which is eternal rest, and when our work is done, and time is no longer, we will enter the joys of the Lord. Though sometimes we get a little tired and the cares of this world and its vain pleasures, hinder our progress for a while, is there anything in the world that is worth more than eternal rest? Is there any friend by whose influence we are caused to stray away from our first love? God forbid that any one should draw us from our first love,—to forsake those true principles which we have inherited in our first start towards everlasting rest.

Dear brethren and sisters, you who who have enlisted as soldiers of the cross, and who are trying to inherit a home in Heaven, do not let any one of satan's friends get the advantage of you. He presents many nice things before our eyes, and bids us partake, and how many have been deceived by his cunning device. We fear oftimes we neglect our duty, and come short of laboring as we should. Let us go on to perfection, looking forward to that rest that is beyond the Jordan of death, where we will be fully compensated for all our trials, and afflictions. Happy thought! we will meet above, "Where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

BENJAMIN BASHOR.
Whitesville, Mo.

Youth's Department.

DON'T KILL TIME.

"Spare a copper, sir; I'm starving," said a poor, half-clad man to a gentleman who was hastening homeward through the streets in the great city one bitter cold night. "Spare a copper, sir; and God will bless you."

Struck with the fellow's manner and appearance, the gentleman replied:

"You look as if you had seen better days. If you will tell me candidly what has been your greatest failure through life, I'll give you enough money to pay for your lodgings."

"I am afraid I could hardly do that," the beggar answered with a mournful smile.

"Try, man, try," added the gentleman. "Here's a shilling to sharpen your memory; only be sure you speak the truth.

The man pressed the coin tightly in his hand, and after thinking for nearly a minute, he said:

"To be honest with you, then, I believe my greatest fault has been in learning to 'kill time.' When I was a youngster, I had kind, loving parents, who let me do pretty much as I liked; so I became idle and careless, and never once thought of the change which was in store for me. In the hope that I should one day make my mark in the world, I was sent to college; but there I wasted my time in idle dreamings and expensive amusements. If I had been a poor boy, with necessity straining me in the face, I think I should have done better. But somehow I fell into the notion that life was one continued holiday; I gradually became fond of wine and company. In a few years my parents both died; and you can guess the rest. I soon wasted what little they left me, and now it is too late to combat with my old habits. Yes sir, idleness ruined me."

"I believe your story," replied the gentleman, "and when I get home, I'll tell it to my boys as a warning. I am sorry for you; indeed I am.—But it is never too late to reform. Come to my office to-morrow and let me try to inspire you with fresh courage."

And giving the man another piece of money, and indicating where he could be found, he hurried away.

Never "kill time," boys. It is your best friend. Use it well. Don't let it slip through your fingers when you are young, as the beggar did.—The days of your boyhood are the most precious you will ever see. The habits you will get into will stick to you like wax. If they are good ones, life will be a pleasure, and above all, a success—I mean a true success.—You may not grow rich, but your life will be a real success, nevertheless.

If, on the contrary, you waste your early years, live for fun only, trifle with your opportunities, you will find after a while, that your life is a failure—yes, even you should be as rich as Cresus.

One of the saddest things is to meet a man who has let golden opportunities go by him, just entering the battle of life, yet entirely unfitted for his position. He is to be pitied, and yet blamed. In this favored land every one can learn to read and write, for instance. But how often do we meet young men utterly unable to write a dozen lines without mistakes! Be assured, young friends, it will be a source of shame to you as men, if you do not pay attention to education as boys.

The world is full of books to read. You are surrounded with friends and relatives. Be warned in time, and coin happiness and honor in the future, from the industry of the present, and you will not have read this page in vain.

WHAT CHRIST HATH DONE FOR US.

"Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law." Gal. 3: 13.

Many years ago it was customary in some lands—indeed it was done in our own land during colonial days—to sell people for a certain length of time to pay their debts which they could not otherwise pay. At that time there was a man who had been unfortunate in his business, and had got very deeply in debt, and his creditors obtained permission of the court to sell him that his labors might pay said debt. He had a wife and children whom he loved very much, and it grieved him greatly to think that he would be separated from them, but he had come under the curse of the law, or, as we might say, its penalty, which was that he should be sold for a certain number of years; and there was no escape from this to him a bitter curse but by paying the debt. But this he could not do; so he was sold and taken to work in a mine far away from his old home and his dear wife and children; and oh! how he felt, day by day, the bitterness of that curse which had come upon him as he thought of his former home, its happiness, and those he loved now in sorrow and suffering. One day a gentleman visited the place where he worked, and noticed his sad, tearful face, and his patient labor, and inquired into his case, and became so interested in him that he paid the money that his master had paid the creditors for his services, and so he was released. This kind friend redeemed him from the curse of the law, and now with glad heart he is permitted to come back to his home and his friends. Now, dear children, this is what our text says Jesus did for us. He redeemed us from the curse of the law.

We are all in debt to God; for every sin is a debt, and we have nothing to pay, and the judgment of the law is, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them; and "the soul that sinneth it shall die."

So you see our curse is far worse than that of the man we have been speaking about, for it brings death, eternal death; but the Lord Jesus Christ paid our debt for us. He has redeemed us with his precious blood, for silver and gold could not pay the debt. It required the death of the spotless Lamb of God, and that was the price he paid.

Correspondence.

BY LOVE SERVE ONE ANOTHER.

Dear and much beloved brethren and friends: As I feel interested in the cause of my Master, and the prosperity of the Pilgrim, I thought I would pen a few lines for its readers. As I have not been accustomed to write much I felt a delicacy in doing so, but a certain expression, made by our Bro. Editor, in the last article of 1871, gave me some encouragement. The words referred to are these: "Brethren, we should all feel interested, we are laboring for the good of the Church." This is just my feelings. It should be the feeling of those especially who are set apart as watchmen upon the walls of Zion, for according to the Prophet, if the people chose a man for their watchman, and he saw the sword come, and took any man away, his blood would be required at the watchman's hand.

What induced me to write at present, is not to be faultfinding, but because I read something in the Pilgrim not long since, which, in my humble opinion, was not edifying, neither calculated to advance the cause of Christ. The point in view is, in coming over a great many evils and inconsistencies, and then to name out the class of people which were engaged in them. Now, dear brethren, that kind of writing certainly can do no good, but to the contrary. It is because I love you, brethren, love the advancement of Christ's Kingdom, that I labor to write this evening, as the Apostle says, "by love serve one another." I desire the brethren to know, as well as all who read the PILGRIM, that this is not the general principle of our fraternity. I think brethren who labor in the word, ought never to name out any one in preaching, in connection with evil, while only heard by a small congregation, let alone writing the same for the press, to send it broadcast over the land. I have no objection to naming out the evils of the world, but always leave the people to judge who is guilty. We are to "reprove, rebuke, exhort," &c., and sometimes sharply, but we ought to be careful how we do it. The Savior, when he called Peter and Andrew to his service, (being fishermen) He said He would make them fishers of men. Now a wise fisherman will not go to the water slashing and throwing clubs, knowing that he would scare the fish, and meet with but little or no success, but he will go forth slyly and quietly, using caution, and such means as are best calculated to bring them under his control. So should be the spiritual fisherman, mild and lovely, and try to persuade people over on the Lord's side. We can by gentle people do what is right. If we cannot persuade them, we are done. I would say this much yet, as I feel interested, and wish to labor for the good of the Church; to preach the gospel is a positive command, but yet sometimes we hear preaching that is not edifying, but rather an injury to the cause, but that is no reason that we should reject it all. So if we read a piece once in a while in our periodicals that is not edifying, that is no reason why we should dispense with them. No doubt, brethren, if we look back in the past, we can all see where we have missed it, but now for the future, should we not make more exertion to live preach and write still more according to the spirit of the Lord and his word, since "by love we should serve one another." I have tried to write from that motive and I hope it may be received in the same manner. May God add His blessing to what I have written, according to his will and pardon the reverse for the Redeemer's sake.

SAMUEL NEHER.

Blue Lick, Ohio.

ALMENA, MICH., Jan. 22nd., 1872.

Bro. Brumbaugh: Being a stranger to you on earth as yet, but hoping to meet you in a better world, I take the privilege of addressing you. We are living out here in the West, and some distance from speakers; so you see we are lonely, but by the help of God, we hold prayer meetings and enjoy ourselves as well as we can, considering that we are but babes in Christ. Well thank God for the evidience that we do know, that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

On the 24th day of last June my wife, my daughter, myself and three of my neighbors, after reading and studying the Word of God for our instruction, resolved by the help of God that we would live a different life on earth and strive for the reward in heaven. So we harnessed our team and started for Elder F. P. Loehr, a distance of about fifteen miles, and was baptized, and thanks be to God for the goodness of his mercies. Since that time there has been fifteen more that have taken up the cross. You see we are blessed in the cause of Christ. Yesterday, Elder M. F. Baer preached for us and had the attendance of a large audience, which was a great feast for us. Feeling it a duty that I owe to my fellow man and to my God to spread the gospel light, I solicited a few more names for the PILGRIM.

You will please send me as many sample copies as you can for distribution. J. J. SOLOMON, M. D.

Dear Brethren of the Pilgrim:—Our series of meetings are over, and we could sing with truth, "How loth I've been to leave the place, where Jesus shows His smiling face." The first meeting commenced Dec. 23rd, 1871, in the Church near Sipesville. It continued 11 days. We had meeting day and night. The brethren that labored for us are named as follows: C. G. Lint, Ephraim Cover, Tobias Myers, V. Blough, John Cover, and Wm. Switz. Ten souls were buried with Christ in baptism.

Our second meeting commenced January 17th 1872, in the Church near Stantons Mills. We closed today, the 21st, by singing the 684th hymn. We had a season of refreshing and good meetings, and hope impressions were made that will not soon be forgotten. The brethren that labored for us were Jacob Blough, Stephen Hildebrand, E. Cover, V. Blough, Tobias Myers, and George Schrock. At this meeting, four souls were added to the Church by baptism. In the past nine months, 24 souls were added to the Church. Our Church is prospering well. I read in the PILGRIM that a brother in our Congregation thinks there is a coldness growing amongst us. Now brethren I leave the matter to you to judge for yourselves. Yours in the bonds of charity.

TOBIAS BLOUGH.

Quemahoning Church.

CERRO GORDA, ILL.

Dear Brethren: As the welcome PILGRIM makes its weekly visits to our home and is gladly received, I will do a little towards filling its columns by giving an account of a tragedy committed not long since which is an outrage to civil community. It occurred during services on Sunday night, at Fairview Church, Macon Co., Ill.

The parties were Benjamin Musselman, Henry Forrest and Areb Walton. The parties went out during services, when Musselman was accosted by Forrest. Musselman said he did not wish to have any difficulties with him, but the other told him that he must have whether he wished it or not, and knocked him down with a pair of brass knuckles, then Walton, who was standing by, stepped forward and handed the latter a knife which he immediately proceeded to use, striking at his antagonist who threw up his left arm to ward off the blow, and the knife struck him on the wrist and severed the main artery. Musselman then fell, when Forrest rushed upon him and dealt him an underhand stab in the side. Either of the wounds would have proven fatal. Forrest then re-entered the church, sat on the lap of an associate and deliberately wiped the blood from his knife in the presence of the whole audience. By this time his victim was dead, and the announcement broke up the meeting. Forrest and Walton then mounted their horses, but were arrested the same night. Musselman was 25 years old, Forrest 19, and Walton 20.

Yours truly.

J. R. RITTLOUGH.

How sad to contemplate on the present condition of humanity. Here are three young men just entering the prime of life whose influence for good is forever destroyed. To make the crime doubly heinous, they make the house of God the theatre to carry out their murderous design. In hearing of the message of salvation, they ignore its sacred principles and spill their brother's blood, and now lie in the felon's cell awaiting the just penalty of the law which in its fullest extent will be as nothing compared to that which awaits them at the great tribunal of God. This should truly be a warning to our young men to take heed unto their ways, as the way of the transgressor is hard and the end thereof is death eternal.

Dear Editors of Pilgrim:—I was requested by some of the brethren while on a mission of love to Upper Cumberland, Ridge, and Falling Spring Churches, to report when I got home. I left home on Friday the 5th of January for Shippensburg, preached in the evening in the United Brethren Meeting-house,—remained three days with the brethren in the Ridge Church, where I expected Bro. John Brindle to meet me, to accompany me to Falling Springs. But he took sick, so by the assistance of Bro. J. R. Foglesanger, we had five meetings with the brethren of the Falling Spring District. Then I came to Lower Cumberland and had three meetings, left for home Monday 15th found all well, for which we feel to thank the good Lord. We had some 12 meetings, with good attendance, and good attention to the word spoken. May the Lord reward them, and especially the brethren who showed so much kindness in conveying me from place to place.

A. L. BOWMAN.

Griers Point, Pa.

Dear Brother: In reference to Church news I have not much to say, but I will yet say, that holding several series of meetings did us good. The members seem to be warmed up, and we also had several additions, two four weeks weeks ago, and three a week ago yesterday. Several others were willing to come, and hope they may be an inducement for others to consider their ways, and to cast their lot with the people of God. How mysterious are the providences of God. Some became converted that we had scarcely looked for, and others we have looked for, and hoped for years that they would come, and are still not willing. Why is it so? Who can tell? Yours in love.

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.,

CHURCH NEWS.

We have had since Jan. 1st, 1871, an addition of 21 by immersion, and 3 by letter, and we have prospects for more. Although there is not quite as much self-denial as we would wish, there still seems to be a desire on the part of most of the brethren and sisters for an improvement, but seem to lack courage to face the enemy just as we would like to see. But however we will not complain, but hope for the better. We would like very well to have some meetings here if some of our dear brethren who are able to handle the Word skillfully would come and help us.

W. ARNOLD.

Somerset, Ohio.

DISTRICT MEETING.

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the under-signed.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Delphi, Ind.

Editor's Department.

TO OUR AGENTS.

Many of our agents are doing quite well, and they have our thanks There are many who said, "we think we can still get more." Now we hope you will not be disappointed, and you will not if you do not become negligent. Those who have raised clubs should continue to look around and if there are any who should read the PILGRIM do not fail to ask them to subscribe. A brother in writing to us says, "we are but few in number, but we will work among our neighbors and friends." That is right, the PILGRIM may do them good. Our agents everywhere should adopt this plan, and our field for usefulness might be greatly enlarged. They that are whole need not the physician so badly as they that are sick. When well—spiritually—we should look to the "Great Physician" in order that we retain our health, but they that are sick are in more immediate danger. We therefore should have the greater concern for those who are sin-sick, and as the mission of the PILGRIM is to do all such good, may we not hope that our agents will make an effort to circulate it among persons of that class as well as among church members.

BAD CHIROGRAPHY.

We are not very desirous that our correspondents shall make beauty of penmanship a specialty. Flourishes of the pen may be well enough when learning to write, simply for practice, but when this is attained, one should come down to the simplest and plainest style. This is the style for printers, and our correspondents would save us much time and vexation by adopting this method. There is one error prevalent among our correspondents to which we wish to direct special attention. The majority write a plain, legible hand, but when writing the names of persons, places, Latin and Greek words, or phrases, we are annoyed with hieroglyphics that makes them almost past interpretation. Such words and phrases should be written very plainly. There is no rule for spelling names, and unless acquainted with them, are as likely to spell them wrong as right. Also words quoted from the languages, if not acquainted with them, we are necessitated to go and examine, which is often an annoyance and consumes time. We call the attention of our contributors to these things from the fact that we have noticed that such words were especially poorly written. We are willing to bear with any kind of penmanship when the writer cannot do better. but those who can write plainly we kindly ask to be careful in writing words like the ones mentioned

GOOD WORDS.

No matter how conscious we may be of performing a good work, unless appreciated by others, we cannot go at it with the same degree of pleasure. We, of late, have more than ever felt the power of appreciated labor in the cause of salvation. Many of our brethren and sisters have highly applauded us, while a few other good souls have severely reproved us, we scarcely know which to love most, as we believe that all did it with the best of intentions, and our hearts raise heavenward with the exclamation, God bless you brethren and sisters, for your love and zeal in promoting the good cause.

OUR OFFICE

Our office is in a topsy turvy condition on account of the reception of our new Power Press, of which we will say something in our next,—will also account for our tardiness. We are some three days behind time, but if everything works well we will soon be out with our usual promptness. Please exercise a little patience.

LITERARY NOTICES.

VICKS ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE AND FLORAL GUIDE.for 1872 is on our table and of all the pretty things of its class it takes the palm. It contains 120 pages beautifully illustrated with flowers of rare beauty and of every variety that the most fastideous florist could desire. It also contains a vegetable department, complete with every desirable plant that is intended for food With the different varieties of flowers and vegetables and instructions for planting and culture, making it both a book for selections and instructions, the fact is the book is worth double its cost for the beautiful illustrations alone, and to crown the whole run of excellencies, the frontispiece is embellished with an excellent Photo of author, James Vick, the most extensive seeds man in the United States. Every lover of pretty flowers and good vegetables should enclose 10 cents to James Vick, Rochester, New York, and obtain one by return mail.

The LITTLE CORPERAL for January makes his salute in a handsome new uniform, having laid aside his military dress and donned the garb of peace. We are pleased to note this new departure and deem it timely and proper. This number contains the first PRIZE STORY, which opens out in a very interesting manner. The illustrations are fine, and not excelled by any other similar periodical in the land. While parents and children are looking for something nice for the New Year, let us suggest a trial of THE LITTLE CORPORAL. TERMS—$1.50 a year. JOHN E. MILLER, Publisher, CHICAGO, ILL.

The New York Weekly Witness is an eight-page paper, full of interesting matter, including news, markets, and copious extracts form leading journals. It has also the commencement of a serial story of deep interest.

The specimen number will be sent to all subscribers in addition to the volume, which will begin with the first Saturday of the new year The subscription is one dollar per annum, to be sent to John Dougall, DAILY WITNESS 162 Nassau Street, New York.

FARMERS' MONTHLY.

This is a new paper devoted to the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, published monthly, 32 pages, at Dayton, Ohio, by H. J. Kurtz. The January No. is before us and we are much pleased with its appearance and contents. As our people are largely land tillers and that among the best in the country, we bespeak for it a handsome patronage. Terms $1.00

PERSONAL.

S. M. PRETSMAN. Miss. Annie Frantz's PILGRIM is paid until March 1st, 1873.

RUDOLPH B. RIEGART. Nos. 2 & 3 will be sent, also No. 10, Vol. 2, if we have any.

C. S. Your contributions are received and accepted—will appear in due season.

J. S. GARBER. Your favor is received with thanks. Your copy free—all right.

ANTHONY MILLER. All right, the $1.00 will be credited to the poor list.

J. TROXEL. Never too late to send us new names. New invitations are always gladly received at the PILGRIM office. You have done quite well—please accept our thanks.

NAME WANTED. Somebody of Onberg, Ind. Co., Pa. sends $1.25 for PILGRIM, but neglected to give his name. Brother David Ober will please inform him of his mistake, and tell him to send his name immediately.

J. B. MILLER. Benjamin Trostman's name was overlooked in transfering to our new books, and Susan Rouzers was overlooked, we do not know how. Nathan Millers PILGRIM is sent all right—the change of address is made.

BRO. MILLER. Have no fears about your list for PILGRIMS getting too large, if one page will not contain them all, we have a number of blank ones that would look much better if they were filled. Send them on, we always have room for a fair more.

ELD. ABRAHAM NOFF. The names you sent us, with money, were received, and the PILGRIM has been sent regularly to A. Noff, Jr. and Elias Kessler, Boons Mills, Franklin Co., Va. ever since. Why they do not get them we cannot tell. If they inform us of the missing Nos. of the volume we will send them again.

CONTRIBUTORS will please bear with us if some of their articles do not appear—as we have been very throng since the New Year—and all manuscript is placed in our box as received, and when needed, that is generally taken which is nearest the top and ready for the hook. We expect soon to get things in better shape when we will give our contributors better attention, in the meanwhile do not cease writing as you can rest assured that nothing good will be lost.

D. C. MOOMAW.—The Emphatic Diaglot can be made available to any person who has a good English education. It is one of the best works that we ever examined for such as wish to get some knowledge of the Greek language. The pages have two columns. On the left side of the page is the Greek in Greek character, and underneath each word is the English rendering, without any regard to smoothness of reading, so that we have the correct translation of every word. On the right hand side of the page is a new version for general reading by men of talent and acknowledged biblical critics. In the beginning of the book is given rudamentary instruction for those who wish to study the language, giving the alphabet with the power of each letter, also some introductory remarks on grammar.

The best work on the Lord's Supper and Feetwashing is the debate between bro. Quinter and McConnell of the Disciple Church.

On the Salutation we know of no work that we would like to recommend except the New Testament. That is about as plain as language can make it.

BOOKS SENT OUT JAN. 24TH, 1872.

Life at Home; Sudie Oller.
Oratory: J. H Stoudnour.
Trine Immersion: Anthony Miller.
Fruit Cultivation for the Million: Jacob Benedict.
The Right Word in the Right Place: Mrs Anna Boyer.
Handbook for Home Improvement & The Right Word in the Right Place: J. M. Mobler.

MARRIED.

HOWE—ZELLERS.—On Jan. 23rd, 1872 by Eld. George Wood, at the residence of, the bride's father, in Clarion county, Pa., Mr. N. B. HOWE to Miss CLARISSA E ZELLERS. GEO. WOOD.

HESTON—TEETER.—On the 31st day of December, 1871, at the residence of the bride's parents, brother LEWIS HESTON, of Harrison county, Iowa, to Miss MARY TEETER, by J. H. Filmore.

DIED.

EAKLE—In the Manor Church Md., Dec. 10, 1871, our aged sister, ELIZABETH EAKLE, in the 79th year of her age. She was a member of the Church over 50 years. Funeral services by Elders Joseph M. Wolf and David Long, from 1 Thes. 4 : 14, 15.

FRITCH—In the same church, after a short illness, on the 4th of Jan., sister MARY FRITCH, in the 56th year of her age. She was a widow. Left four children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by Eld. David Long from John 11 : 25; 26.

POFFENBERGER—In the same church, on the 13th of Jan., our aged sister, AMELIA POFFENBERGER, after a protracted illness, in the 68th year of her age. Her remains were followed to their resting place by a large concourse of relatives and friends. Funeral services by the same, from 2 Kings, 20th chapter, latter part of 1st verse.

FRITCH.—On the 22nd of Jan., HENRY FRITCH, eldest son of our deceased sister, Mary Fritch, in the 25th year of his age. He was sick only two days; thus suddenly called away in the bloom of life, oh what a solemn warning to the young! His remains were follwed to the Manor Church grave yard by many relatives and friends, and laid by the side of his departed mother. Funeral sermon preached by Elder David Long, from Eccl. 9 : 11, to a large and attentive congregation.
J. RICHARD.

MERTZ.—In the Dry Valley Congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., Tuesday, Jan., 23rd 1872, MINNIE, wife of—MERTZ, aged about 24 years. Funeral occasion improved by Bro Wm. Howe, from the 1st verse of the 58th chapter of Isaiah.

She was penitent in her last hours, and called for Bro. Howe to come and pray for her. She only lived about six weeks in matrimony, but she is now gone, and we, hope is at rest. JACOB MOHLER.

MONEY LIST.

Moses Miller,	$1.25
Mary H. Sprankle,	2.50
Wm. Workman,	3.75
J. H. Garman,	1.25
Adam Appleton,	1.25
Moses Miller,	2.50
Joseph Drury,	1.00
Henry Gephart,	1.25
Katie Brumbaugh,	1.25
Christian Ness,	3.75
C. Shank,	2.00
B. F. Darst,	1.25
Susan Brumbaugh,	1.25
Sarah Trostel,	1.25
Philip Boyle,	1.25
John Zook,	10.50
Samuel Nehr, Jr.	22.50
D. R. Sayler,	10.00
Jacob Hollinger,	1.25
John H. Caylor,	12.50
John Nickelson,	2. 50
J. S. Bechtal,	2·00
M. M Custer,	1.25.
L. S. Snyder,	3.75
Gabriel Frame,	1.25
Martin Bowers,	1.25
S. M. Pretsman,	3.25
D. Fogelsanger,	5.00
George Sperline,	1.25
John Newcomer,	3.75
Edward Raffe,	10.80
A. L. Bowman,	1.25
Leonard Furry,	20.00

NEWS COLUMN.

THE GREAT FAMINE IN PERSIA.

In Persia there has been for two successive years, an almost entire failure of crops, and when last year closed without rain, it became evident that no relief could be expected until next summer, when the first crops of the year will be harvested. It is also considered doubtful whether even these will be sufficiently abundant to relieve the dearth in any important degree. In any case, up to that time the severity of the famine can hardly abate. The news received yesterday seems to show that it is steadily increasing.

The people in their extremity have been compelled to satisfy the cravings of their hunger by feeding upon husks, refuse and even carrion. They have in consequence become the prey of a great epidemic, which is scarcely less destructive of life than the famine itself. The number of persons who have actually perished from starvation and disease it is impossible in the present confusion to estimate accurately, but reports from some of the great cities, where estimates are possible, say that a quarter of the population are already dead, and that many of the villagers are entirely dispopulated. The whole population of Persia was not far from 8,000,000, and the famine extends throughout the country. From these facts we may form some idea of the mortality which has prevailed.—N. Y. Evening Post.

FRIENDS.

The Sixth Biennial Conference of teachers and delegates from the Friends (Orthodox) First-day schools in the United States and Canada, met at Wilmington, Ohio, on the 23rd of November. The proceedings show that a rapid developement has taken place among the friends of interest in Sunday-schools. In the discussion of the question, "What special blessings rest upon the First-day school cause in our respective localities?" The inattention and carelessness formerly exhibited by friends on the subject were deplored. But satisfactory and encouraging reports were made of active efforts to instruct the children in religious truths. The example set by the Methodists in this direction, and the success of their efforts to bring up their children to religious principles, and in reclaiming other vicious children, were particularly commented on and commended. The conference adjourned on the 25th, to meet at Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1872.—Evangelical Messenger.

MORTALITY IN PHILADA.

The number of deaths in Philadelphia for the week ending Saturday, was 508, being a decrease of 3 from those of last week, and 192 more than those of the corresponding year. Of these 244 were adults, and 294 were minors, 381 were born in the United States, 116 were foreign, 40 were people of color, and 5 were from the country. Two hundred and sixty-nine was the result of small pox.

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subscribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers—many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

1780 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2,50

Address

DANIEL KAOARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr. J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy, post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	11 25
Arabesque plain,	1.00
Turkey morocco,	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,	5 50

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871. Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex. P. M.	Mail A. M.	STAIONS.	Down Train. Ex. A. M.	Mail. P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 11	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum't	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 25	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 35	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 25	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Sup.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, corner W... St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or ... Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan. 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,			10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,			8 cts.
Six months,	do	do	6 cts.
One Year,	do	do	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

☞ GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 80cts, to all who may wish them.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7 00
" Superfine.	5.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5 00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1 45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.60
" Hill "	1.45
" Winter red "	1.50
CORN.	.50
OATS.	.38
RYE.	.85
BARLEY.	65

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.

Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25
Book paper, " "	1.50
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50

Any number above that at the same rate.

Address,

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county. Pa

Working Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, FEBRUARY 6, 1872. NO 6

ESSAYS.

Selected by S. G. KELLER.

TRUTH.

'Tis sweet to feel in all our paths
That grim, unfailing trust
Which gives us full assurance that
Our Father's ways are just.

It soothes us on the couch of pain,
It brings us peaceful rest,
And whispers, what our Father gives,
Is always for the best.

It is a balm for every care,
It softens bitter grief,
And says, our Fathers love alone
Can give us sure relief.

It bids us freely go to Him
When weary and oppressed,
For, in His love all-merciful,
He says he'll give us rest.

It lifts the dreary clouds of gloom,
It bids us know no fear,
And tell us, in the darkest night,
Our Father's arm is near.

Oh! let us ever truthful be
In all our griefs and pains,
And truly feel what'ere betide,
Our Heavenly Father reigns.

BE NOT DECEIVED

Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6 7.

To whom does Paul speak? Evidently to the Galatian Church, and to the people there generally. Whether he was the instrument in God's providence, in establishing the said church or not, we may not at this time be able to determine, yet we are certain he had been their minister at some previous time. "And temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected, but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus." Why does the Apostle so solemnly warn those people? Because it will be perceived that they were about to depart from duty; about to forsake their first love—notwithstanding they had run well for a season. They were about to discard much of the teachings which they had received of the apostle, which he had received "by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Hear him, "O foolish Galatian, who hath bewitched you that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth crucified among you." One more proof of their inclinations to forsake their former teaching. "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

Here then we have here a Church about to apostatize, and therefore we see the propriety of the use of the words at the head of our article. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked," He will not be trifled with. Ye who received me "as an angel" would have given your eyes to me if demanded, not so much in consequence of your admiration for my person, but because of the value of the doctrines you received at my mouth, which I was appointed to declare unto you, "Even as Christ Jesus. Beware what you are about, ye who have declared that you have known God, or rather are known of Him, whether your profession was real or feigned, it is all the same, if you will now again return to the beggardly elements of the world, you will most certainly incur the displeasure of God, "For God is not mocked."

Ye who are the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ, all ye who have been "baptized into Christ" and thereby have put on Christ, whether ye be Jew or Greek, bond or free, male or female, if ye relapse either into Judaism, or into Paganism, you are displeasing God, and better heed the warning I give, "God is not mocked." "I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." What is it to mock God? It can be done in many ways. Indeed in every way that is contrary to His will. You my Galatian brethren have been affected—yea, zealously affected, (which is all right in a good thing) but I fear your zeal is destitute of that knowledge which cometh down from above. "Your persuasion cometh not from him that calleth you." I would that they were even cut off who trouble you. Those who have troubled you, have not substituted another Gospel, but have perverted the one ye received from my preaching.—What should be their doom? Let them "be accursed," But be not thou deceived "God is not mocked."

Thus Paul reasoned, and my brethren and sisters, do you ask what has all that to do with us? I ask in return, do you not all claim heirship through "faith in Christ Jesus?" Do you not all rejoice inasmuch as you have been "bought with the precious blood of Christ?" Have you not all been "baptized into Christ?" Are you not then "sons and daughters of God?" Do you not claim to have the spirit of God shed abroad in your hearts, whereby you profess to have the power to cry "Abba Father?". If so, then you are as much the church of God in the locality where you live, as was the Galatians in their locality, hence you stand in precisely the same relationship to God as did the Galatians. You also stand similarly related to the Apostle Paul, for he is as much our teacher, as he was theirs, and this idea we do not gather by mere inference, but from some of his Epistles. After naming those to whom he especially addresses himself, adds, "With all that in every place called upon Jesus Christ, our Lord, both theirs and ours."

It is true we may not attempt to deceive or mock God in the manner or form the Galatians did, for I suppose none of us have any disposition to add to our present beliefs any Jewish custom, whether it be of ancient or modern origin, yet may we not often adopt customs equally displeasing to God. We, like they, have been called unto liberty; but we no more than they are at liberty to use the privilege afforded us, of using such liberty for an occasion to the flesh, for what we sow, as well as they, shall we also reap.

The works of the flesh are manifest, and may be found in Gal. 5: 19 to 21st verse inclusive. A continuance in the perpetration of any one of these there enumerated will debar us from the kingdom of heaven. So then those who thus "sow to the flesh will reap corruption," and the perpetration of any one of these heinous sins should teach us that we are contemning God; also show the fact that we are deceiving ourselves, and should also realize the fact that God is not mocked, from the assurance that the practice of them, or any one of them, persisted in, will debar us from heaven.

The church needs caution now as well as in the time when Paul lived. "Let us take heed to the things we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." We should not overlook the fact that all Paul's Epistles were addressed to the persons constituting the church of God. And hence we discover how necessary it was to reprove the church then, and is it not equally necessary that the church should now be warned against similar practices that had obtained in Paul's time.

But if we do not "mock God" we will not deceive ourselves, and the consequent fruit of our lives will be as set forth by the same Apostle, in the latter part of his Epistle of Gal. end of 5th chapter. Possessing these qualities there is no law against us for we are living above all law—surrounded by a sort of divinity itself exhibiting the principles which were practiced by Christ himself when on earth. Whilst being governed by those principles we are not "mocking God," neither will we sin, and then are we indeed the sons and daughters of God Almighty.

It may be asked by some, why are you thus exposing the church and making good the charges of some, that the church is not what it professes to be? I answer in the language of the Savior, "Let your light so shine that others, seeing your good works, may also glorify your Father which is in heaven." Nor am I giving any encouragement to non-professors, because they will learn what a Christian should be, to be approbated by our heavenly Father. At the same time will discover what the standard of Christianity is, and then they cannot help but see how deficient they are, and how far they are from the Kingdom. And it may possibly operate them to make an effort to throw off the yoke of satan, whose slave they have been for many years, which may God grant.

EDMUND SMITH.

A good conscience is better than two witnesses—it will consume grief as the sun dissolves ice. It is a spring when you are thirsty, a staff when you are weary, a warm cloak when the rain beats, and a pillow in death.

CHRIST THE WAY.

"Jesus saith unto Him, I am the way, and the truth and the life, and no man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

There is no way of access to the Father but through His Son Jesus Christ. Therefore they that wilfully reject Him have no Scriptural communion with God, and if they continue in the way of sin and iniquity until death overtakes them, they cannot find admittance into those Heavenly Mansions, but will be banished from the presence of God and from the glory of His power. The Savior would then have us "enter in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat, but strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Why is it that so few find the way of everlasting life? It is because those that walk therein must deny themselves of all that is in opposition to the will of God. Because the way is so narrow that we cannot travel therein unless the carnal mind is subdued and brought in subjection to the will of God. "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who has chosen him to be a soldier. And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully."—2d Tim 2: 4,5. Jesus says "I am the way," not the ways, the truth and the life. He is the author and revealer of truth. Then we rejoice to know that a way has been opened by the Savior, though it cost Him a great many stripes and even death upon the cross, yet it was opened.

The Prophet Isaiah could look forward with an eye of faith, for he says, "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools shall not err therein"—Isaiah, 35: 8. Then since a way has been opened from earth to the Celestial city, we say to our dear readers who have not yet chosen the way of truth and holines, He who has exemplified the way is calling unto you to enter therein, and promises a glorious reward at the end of the way. When men and women become desirous of going to the Father, they begin to inquire about the way, they search the Scriptures and therein find directions of the way, they find that to travel on that way a preparation is necessary, "That they must put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lust, and be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."—Eph. 4: 22,23,24. They that are under conviction begin to see their condition, that they are away from God, and entirely destitute of His grace. They feel the need of a Savior, they now remember that Jesus has said "he that cometh unto Me, I will in no wise cast out," and that through Him they have access to the Father. But we find in order to come to the Father there are certain things to comply with. The first principles of the doctrine of Christ, Repentance, Faith, and Baptism. The sinner must feel that he must repent of his sins. A godly sorrow worketh a repentance not to be repented of, and by the grace of God resolve to sin no more.

He must be in possession of Faith, a faith that works by love, "For without faith it is impossible to please God." "He that cometh to God must believe that God is, and that He is a rewarder of all that diligently seek Him." It is also necessary for the true penitent to be on his guard, that he is not deceived, for a great many are ready to tell us that if you are only converted and believe, you shall be saved. We are told that many spirits are gone out and men and women are all under the influence of some spirit. "But if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of His." We should try those spirits by the Word of God. The spirit of God will not dictate to us that only part of the commands are essential to salvation, and the rest not, and to another man that they are all necessary to observe. Certainly not, if we are under the influence of that Holy and Divine Spirit, it will guide us into all truth. We may repent all the days of our lives of past sins, and have faith, but all availeth nothing if not put into action. Faith without works is dead, as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without our works is dead. Hence he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. The Savior after He had completed His Father's will, and sealed it with His own blood, just before He ascended to Heaven He could say, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth, go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Now we find that on the day of Pentecost the Word was preached with power, and they began to say to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren what shall we do," undoubtedly what shall we do to be saved. Peter very readily answers, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." What for? Why for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." We infer then from the sayings of Peter, that short of baptism there is no remission of sins, and consequently are not under the promise. Read the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, who was a great persecutor of the Church, and while on his way to Damascus, he was stricken down and was made to say, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do." It was said unto him, "Go into the city, and there it shall be told thee what thou must do." And when Ananias came to him he said, "Why tarriest thou brother Saul, arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." Baptism then is the initiatory rite into the Christian Church. The Apostle says, "As many of us as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." By the believer being baptized, the services of Christ are undertaken, and the privileges of the Gospel claimed.

Much more testimony might be produced to prove that all things that are written are calculated for our benefit, and salvation, for all Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine &c. But let this suffice, and let us become willing to take the whole plan of salvation for the man of our counsel, and follow our Divine Master in all His appointed ways. Those that have been united to Christ, and have entered in by the door into the fold, and follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth, are on the way to the Father, and being in possession of those Christian graces can go on their way rejoicing. Having in view that immortal crown that fadeth not away, we can with an eye of faith look beyond this vale of tears to that lovely country where the joys and felicities are great, and where we can forever live.

Now, dear reader, let me ask the question, do we not all desire to live? Life is sweet but uncertain. Death is certain, and when we hear of death it causes solemnity, and is calculated to draw a gloom over our mind. If some kind friend would bring us intelligence of some country where people never die, and where the climate is always pleasant, neither too cold nor too hot, but where it is just right, where pleasures never die and summers never end, and where we can always live, oh, how willing you would be to go. Yes, you would want to go right away. Being well aware that death is in this land, we perhaps, have an aged father and mother, and by reason of old age cannot live long here, but if we can get to that glorious country we can always live together as an unbroken family. We would not only wan to go ourselves, but we want all our friends to go. We tell them of the joyful news of that delightful place; we tell them the danger of staying here, and that they ought to go at once.

We have also got the directions of the way, and there is no danger about getting there if we follow the directions. Jesus is our friend and tells us He is the way to that beautiful land, and if we follow Him as he has directed, there is no danger, we can enter therein and live forever. Oh what a happy thought! Is it not enough to induce us all to go where we can dwell together as an unbroken family? Then we say to you go right away. Do not wait another week, for there is danger in staying away. Sickness may overtake you, and even death, and if you die in your sins where Christ is you cannot go. You cannot enjoy that everlasting life. Then as one that loves your souls we say to you that have not yet made peace with God, commence the work to-day, for you have no promise for to-morrow, for the night cometh wherein no man can work. Then come to Jesus who is ever ready to receive you. He says, "I am the way, the truth and the life." If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin, and when our race is ended we can say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and can rejoice in the God of our salvation. Oh, may we all be prepared to enter the portals of eternal glory where we can ever sing the song of Redeeming love, is the prayer of your unworthy servant.

"I am, saith Christ, the way,
Now if we credit him,
All other paths must lead astray,
How fair soe'er they seem."

DANIEL BOCK

For the Pilgrim.

A WARNING.

"For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments." John 5: 3.

It is evident from the above, and more testimonies which I might produce, that all those who do keep the commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ have the love of God shed abroad in their hearts, and that all those who do not keep his commands it matters not what they may profess, they are not the children of God. They have not the love of God in their hearts, for no one can have the love of God in his heart and not observe the precepts of Jesus. How often do we hear professors say, there is no necessity to be so particular in observing this and that command, if the man or woman is only converted it is enough. What a mixture of error! I admit that a good heart or a true conversion to God is as much as we can expect in this life, and it will keep us very industrious to maintain it to the end of our days, but we have no evidence to believe that a man may have a good heart or be truly converted unto God and speak lightly of any of the commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Again, we hear people say, sometimes, in supporting or establishing their conduct for not observing certain Gospel precepts, that they have a good mind or meaning in proceeding in the way they do. But I contend that if their good mind or meaning be not to observe the whole will of God, that they are no better than king Saul, for he seemed to have a very plausible excuse for not fully prosecuting the word of the Lord which had been delivered unto him by the prophet Samuel. The word of God says, "take unto you the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God."—Paul says, "but though we or an angel from heaven preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Awful will it be if we disobey our Heavenly Father's will. The word of God says, I judge no man but the word shall judge him at the last day. Then my fellow travelers with me to the bar of God, should we be the opposers and neglecters of this great salvation, our state will be a miserable one. What awful feelings will erode our minds, when sickness comes, medicines fail, and the icy arms of death encircle us round, and when the soul, that immortal part, will have to enter the prison of torment, where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.—Reader! oh reader! whoever you be, I entreat you to take warning and seek the Lord while he is near, that your poor soul may be saved. It matters not whether you be young or old, now is the day of salvation, the accepted time. To-morrow may be too late, for there is no state, no age in life that is exempted from death. Yes, the infant in the cradle, the young man and the young woman, the middle aged and the old gray headed man or woman, are all liable to death, "for it is appointed unto man once to die and after that the judgment." "Dust thou art and onto dust thou shalt return." These delicate bodies of ours will ere long become food for worms. What folly! What madness to spend so much money and precious time in decorating these mortal bodies! Crucify, oh reader! I entreat you to crucify the old man, that corrupt nature, which you, myself, and the whole human family have inherited from a fallen Adam. Though it may cost you the frowns of the world, the persecutions of the wicked, and all those things which are so highly esteemed by the children of this world. Yet the crown, the immortal crown of life that is in reservation for the faithful followers of the Lamb, is worth more than all the glittering toys and glories of this vain world. Yes, this world with all its pleasures and enjoyments, is not worthy to be compared to the eternal weight of glory that awaits the righteous in the other world. Our Savior declared, "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what can a man give in exchange for his soul? for it is more valuable than all the world." Therefore let us daily lay up treasures in heaven that our hearts may be there also.

Oh the great danger there is in the many different faiths that are preached in these last days. We sometimes hear it said, what virtue is there in water? Baptism cannot purge from sin. What folly to believe that mere baptism can save us. The virtue lies in keeping the word of God, and if begotten of God we can have our sins washed away in baptism. The true Church does not believe that mere baptism saves us, but faith, repentance and baptism is the order appointed for salvation, and this order must be obeyed. We read, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," that is, saved from his sins. The Apostle Peter, in the first epistle and first chapter, reminds the believer of his present and future salvation, when he says, "who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." Here he has reference both to the present and the future salvation of the believer. He writes thus, "receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls."

The necessity of a preached Gospel must be apparent to all, therefore we find that this work occupies a prominent place in the Christian Constitution, "for the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God, for after that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom know not God." It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believed. Reader, if you desire to be saved study the Testament well, and do not go to work until you know how or what God would have you to perform. A great many people think they have got religion when, alas! they are ignorant of the first rudiments of the christian religion. If they really have got religion they did not get it in the ordinary way of the Gospel. They must have found, or received another Gospel.—But give me the ancient Gospel in preference to all the schemes and inventions of men, and that thou my soul mayest be found in readiness whenever the summons comes to enter into mansions of bliss, see that thou adherest strictly to the voice of Jesus Christ, the good Shepherd of the sheep. How astonishing it is that the children of men are so much inclined to extremes. One part contend that prayer is not necessary for the remission of sins. Another think that prayer is the thing to be observed for the remission of sins. In praying to God the sinner must not look for an irresistible power in answer to prayer, for such power would not be consistent with God and the free agency of man. The spirit of God will only aid so far as man is willing to go. According to the doctrine of Christ, which is the word of God, and if the sinner proceeds as above stated, he will find himself in the narrow way, the King's high way of holiness. Now he must travel the way with holiness of heart. There is no standing still but a continual pressing forward, as the Apostle has written, "I press towards the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." It is sometimes said, that we do not believe in the rise and progress of religion in the soul. For this we wish to keep the sayings of the great Head of the Church, the world's Redeemer.

JAMES L. SEARS.

For the Pilgrim.

PILGRIM HOME.

Gentle PILGRIM reader, now is the time allotted to you to see that better land! Let your earthly home be a preparation for a pilgrimage to a home in heaven. You are now in a wilderness beset on every side by enemies. You are now in the deep vale of sin and sorrow, in the low retreats of a pilgrim's life.

Friend do not stop but go up higher. "Be thou faithful unto death, and you shall receive a crown of life." Be patient in tribulation, the storms that swell around you will soon subside, and a cloudless sky will burst upon you. The winter gloom and desolation will soon pass away, and sweet fields arrayed in living green, and rivers of delight will spread out themselves before your enraptured visions.

Remember that the sufferings of the present time, are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. In a few years, at most, the conflict shall end, and sighing grief shall weep no more. The wormwood and the gall, will be exchanged for the cup of salvation; the warrior's armor will be exchanged for the white garment. Soon your earthly homestead shall be exchanged for your eternal home, and shall unite in singing the song of everlasting joy, to him that loved us, and washed us in his own blood. Let the hope of soon entering that happy home stimulate your zeal in the cause of your Master. I think some who will read these pages have snow-white locks, and wrinkled brows, and faded cheeks, and these tell you that soon your pilgrim journey will be ended, your tent-home dissolved, and your staff laid aside. Oh, if you have made God the strength of your heart and your portion forever, you shall welcome death with joy, yea, you will now be anxious to lay aside these garments of toil and conflict, and soar away to that better country where the "wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

AMELIA V. SOUTH.

Jones X Roads, Md.

GIVING THE SIGN OF LOVE.

Let us begin in the nursery, and there teach our children the pleasure of giving. Let it be to them as much a matter of course, each in his small way, to give as to receive. How much simpler and more natural, as well as more Christian-like, is this training than its converse! Even from a mere outside world view, how lovely and attractive is this grace of giving; how it adorns and enriches the character! Then, how much more is it, from the Christian standpoint, both a duty and a privilege!

The family mission-box, in which the children, as well as the elders, have an interest, is one good way of developing the love of giving; and a little hearty ingenuity on the part of fathers and mothers will be sufficient to vary and amplify this means. But it must be made a live interest to them, with some tangible meaning and result; something that shall take hold of them, and that they can take hold of, too. Then they will not be likely to think of the mission-box as something that only swallows up their grudgingly given pennies, without ever making a return which they can appreciate.

"Who loved me and gave Himself for me,"—this is the key-note of all true giving, whether of money, of personal effort, or of the heart's love. If Jesus loved, and therefore gave, can we do aught else? There is an old saying, that the child that is born on a Friday will be "loving and giving." It is a good putting of the doctrine; the two go always together as root and branch; and it is from one great giving on the Cross, that all true "loving and giving" is learned. Let us prayerfully cultivate the spirit of our Master—giving, and teaching our children to give, the services of grateful self-denying hearts and lives, "until we come into His everlasting kingdom."

Love ever lives beneath the Cross,
Ready for sacrifice and loss—
Still proving by this seal divine
That giving is love's only sign.

FORGIVENESS.

Error has ever been the companion of right in this world of ours. "To err is human, but to forgive is divine." The human heart presents in its inclinations, a strange mingling together of elements, good and evil, and like oil and water triturated ever so much in a transparent glass, they will not form together, but each is seen to its level.

Probably there never lived a soul so dead to honor, decency and propriety, but that far down in some obscure corner of the heart, there lay concealed or uncultivated, the vital germ of true and noble manhood,—concealed for a time by the untimely growth of circumstances and perhaps persecutions. 'Tis a bright little spot in the head, that properly influenced, would animate the soul with joy unspeakable, and illumine the countenance with benignity. 'Tis a precious seed fallen in unpropitious soil, and not likely to be found unless sought. And again, there probably never lived a soul so pure but error tarnished it. The mind of man is finite, and exceedingly fallible in its judgment and estimation of character. God alone is infinite and infallible in His decrees. His words are just and true. He has placed us here for His own good pleasure, and by our daily contact with each other for our mutual good, and has left us not alone to be drifted by each breeze of fancies blowing, but to remain in His word to lead us in green pastures, and by the still waters.

Peace in its most comprehensive sense, is Heaven's richest boon to fallen man, and he is enjoined to secure it under penalty of everlasting banishment from His presence, and the Redeemer has graciously given us the infallible rule for its attainments, followed by the warning in the selfsame breath, Hear Him, "If ye forgive not others their trespasses, neither will your Father which is in Heaven forgive you your trespasses." Again, when we pray, we are taught to say, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

Reader, have you named the name of Christ? Are these words and their terrible import plain to your understanding? Do you believe them true, or are you only a hearer and not a doer of it, in other words a pharisee or a hypocrite?

Again, if thou bringest this gift to the altar, and there findest thou hast aught against thy brother, darest thou offer that gift to the God of thy destiny, without first being or trying to be, reconciled to thy brother, or can a just God who is true receive such a gift? Is not the offering a mockery? Verily so, and none but a hypocrite would make it, else his word is false. When hanging on the accursed tree, a crown of thorns upon His head, a thief at each side, inscription the most contemptous over head, and blood and water flowing from the smitten side. He writhes in the agonies of death the most ignominious, made even more bitter by the fury, the taunts, the jeers and hurrahs of malicious soldiery. Hearken to those sweet words that penetrated the vaulted Heavens, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do." Was ever love like this?

Reader, is your life unhappy thro' an unforgiving spirit? Emulate the Savior. Is it possible for Christ to forgive as he did upon the cross, and yet for man to exercise the unforgiving heart for offences far less grave, or perhaps not grave at all, but only little Christian prejudices. Brother, the injunction to forgive has been given by him who is just—by him that never uttered an unnecessary word, by him who has given the most glorious example of forgiveness that the world has ever seen, by him that knows our nature and our wants, by him that will judge the world by his word. Forgive thy brother if thou expect thy brother to forgive thee, and armed with such a spirit, look with pity, love, charity, upon all mankind, upon that poor outcast. Seek the avenue to the tender spot in his heart. Watch for time and opportunity, and when they come approach him with the frank, ingenious tone of Christianity, and soon admittance will be gained. Then that germ heretofore uncultivated may be wattered by the soft dews of heaven, and nourished by the warm smiles of a gracious Redeemer. Then the precious jewel may be ground and polished to shine as a rich gem in his crown through all eternity. Eat not of his broken body, drink not of his shed blood, like the Pharisees, while unforgiveness, may hap, toward bone of thy bone, and flesh of thy flesh, rankles in thy bosom, lest by so doing thou pour contempt upon his word and on his holy temple here below, for the eyes of the world are upon thee, and by thee they judge the church. The tree is known by its fruit. He that has never openly, frankly, made a confession and asked forgiveness, let him do it just once to find it the sweetest morsel the soul ever fared upon. Brethren let us have a forgiving spirit and then only can we find acceptance with God. May the Lord enable us so to live that we may once join glad hands on the sunny banks of sweet deliverance, is my prayer. Yours in love,

D. B. CONDRIE.

Allen, Pa.

PASSING AWAY.

BY C. H. HAWBECKER.

When taking a retrospective view of the past, from the earliest period of our recollection until the present, how short time seems; so many of our dear friends have passed away. Life seems as a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. The snow that now lies upon the ground, so pure and white, sparkling like so many diamonds, will soon pass away, and then flowers that so beautify the earth, will come forth again, and ere long they will have passed away. Must friends and flowers and all that is lovely pass away? No, there is One whose loving kindness is better than them all. His name is Jesus. Where He is, no change can come, no friend can die; he shall live thoug Heaven and earth pass away.

The Lord grant that the reader of these observations may find mercy in that day, and be addressed in these gracious words, "Come ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for yoo from the foundation of the world."

Seasons will change:—we cannot say
Of brightest skies in summer day,
That they shall last without decay,
Always the same.

Nature will change,—the loveliest flower
That blooms around the vernal bower,
Will not survive its little hour,
Always the same.

Our age will change:—'tis flying fast,
And childhood's years will soon be past,
Youth's joyous moment cannot last,
Always the same.

Our friends will change:—they pass away
As fade the tints of closing day;
And those bright things that will not stay
Always the same.

Our loved ones change:—the silent tear
Falls often for the friend so dear,
Because we cannot keep them here,
Always the same.

Must all thus change? All thus remove,
'Till nothing more is left to love?
No; There's a changeless One above,
Always the same.

Jesus still lives;—and we may say,
Though earth itself shall pass away,
He ever shall be as to-day,
Always the same.

When Jesus reigns beyond the sky,
No change can come, no friends can die;
Joy, love, and peace are found on High,
Always the same.

Upton, Pa.

Understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it; but the instruction of fools is folly.

The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips.

Pleasant words are as a honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones.

LIVE FOR SOMETHING.

Live for something! Life is the divinest of Heaven's gifts to man, and something divine should be got out of it. Put upon the mode of the divine, and endowed with such God-like capabilities and powers, how inappreciably grand are life's possibilities in the way of achievement for earth and Heaven!

In the order of Providence, life's ministry is indeed lofty and sublime. Every man and every woman has his or her particular assignment in the duties of responsibilities of daily life. We are in the world to make the world better; to lift it up to higher summits of happiness and progress; to make its hearts and homes brighter and happier, by devoting to fellowmen our best thoughts and activities. It is the motto of every true heart, and the genius of every noble life, that "no man liveth to himself;" lives chiefly for his own selfish good. By a law of our intellectual and moral being, we promote our own happiness in the exact proportion we contribute to the enjoyment of others. Nothing worthy of the name of happiness is possible in the experience of those who live only for themselves, all oblivious of the welfare of their fellows. That only is the true philosophy which recognizes and work out the principle in daily action, that ——"Life was lent

For noble duties, not for selfishness;
Not to be wiled away for aimless dreams,
But to improve ourselves, and serve mankind."

But to live for something, involves the necessity of an intelligent and definite plan of action. More than splendid dreaming, or even magnificent resolves, is necessary to success in the objects and ambitions of life. Men come to the best results in either department of effort, only as they thoughtfully plan, and earnestly toil in giving directions. Those who have made money, acquired learning, won fame, or wielded power in the world, have always, in every age, and among all people, done so by embodying a well defined purpose in earnest living action. The reason that thousands fail in their work in life, is the want of a specific plan in laying out their energies; they work hard for nothing, because there is no actual result possible to their mode of action. The means are adjusted to the end, hence failure is the inevitable result.

Live for something definite and practical. Take hold of things with a method and a will, and they must yield to you, and become the ministers of your own happiness and that of others. Nothing within the realm of the possible can withstand the man or woman who is intelligently and determinedly bent on success. A great action is always preceded by a great purpose. History and daily life are full of examples to show us that the measure of human achievement has always been proportioned to the amount of human daring and doing. If not always, yet at least often,

——"The attempt
Is all the wedge that splits its knotty way
Betwixt the impossible and possible."

Be practical. Deal with the questions and facts of life as they really are. What can be done, and is worth doing, do with dispatch; what can not be done, and would be worthless, if it could, leave to the dreamers and idlers along the walks of life. Discard the idea that little things are unimportant, and that great occasions only are worthy of your best thoughts and endeavors. It is the little things of life that makes up its happiness or misery, its joy or its sorrow, and surely nothing is trivial that bears on questions so vital and personal as these. A kind look is a little thing, but it may fall like a sunbeam on a sad heart, and chase away its sadness. A pleasant word is a small thing, but it may brighten the spirits, and revive the hopes of some poor despondent soul about to give up in despair, before the conflicts and trials of life. —Rev. F. S. Cassidy.

FAITH.

It is said that one day when Bonaparte was reviewing some troops, the bridle of his horse slipped from his hand, and the horse galloped off. A common soldier ran, and laying hold of the bridle, brought back the horse to the Emperor's hand, when he said to the man:

"Well done, captain."

"Of what regiment, sire?" inquired the soldier.

"Of the guards," answered Napoleon, pleased with his instant belief in his word.

The Emperor rode off; the soldier threw down his musket, and though he had no epaulets on his shoulders, no sword by his side, nor any other mark of advancement, he ran and joined the staff of commanding officers. They laughed at him, and said:

"What have you to do here?"

"I am captain of the guards," he replied.

They were amazed, but he said; "The Emperor has said so, and therefore I am."

In like manner, through the word of God: "He that believeth hath everlasting life," is not confirmed by the feelings of the believer; he ought to take the word of God as true, because he said it, and thus honor Him as a God of truth, and rejoice with joy unspeakable.

Great effort from great motives is the best definition of a happy life.—The easiest labor is a burthen to him who has no motives for performing it.

Youth's Department.

COME HOME, FATHER.

Father, dear father, come home with me now!
The clock in the steeple strikes one;
You said you would come right home from the shop
As soon as your day's work was done.
Our fire has gone out—our house is all dark—
And mother's been watching since tea,
With poor brother Benny, so sick in her arms,
And no one to help her but me.

Come home! come home! come home!
Please father, dear father, come home.
Hear the sweet voice of the child,
Which the night winds repeat as they roam!
Oh, who could resist this most plaintive of prayers?
"Please father, dear father, come home!"

Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes two
The night has grown colder, and Benny is worse—
But he has been calling for you.
Indeed he is worse—Ma says he will die,
Perhaps before morning shall dawn;
And this is the message she sent me to bring,
"Come quickly, or he will be gone."

Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes three;
The house is so lonely—the hours are so long
For poor weeping mother and me.
Yes, we are alone—poor Benny is dead,
And gone with the angels of light;
And these were the very last words that he said—
"I want to kiss papa good-night."

IT GOT A-GOING.

One bright Fourth of July morning, I was driving to town. As I came to the top of the hill just above the bridge on the outskirts of the place, a little boy from a cottage on the north side of the road fired off a small cannon. He was so near the road, the cannon made so big a noise, and the whole thing came so unexpectedly, that my little bay pony took fright and shied, with a spring, to the other side of the road. He not only overturned the carriage in doing so, but was, with great difficulty, reined in and prevented from running away.

"You should not fire your cannon so near the road," said I to the little boy, after I had gotten the pony somewhat quiet; "you frightened my horse badly, and nearly made him run away."

"I didn't mean to," said the little boy; "but it got a-going before I saw the horse, and then I couldn't stop it."

I said no more; but drove on, thinking of the boy's answer as I have often thought of it since, though all this happened years ago.

What I have thought is this. I wish I could make every boy think of it and feel it. It would do him ever so much good, especially if he would try to apply it to all his actions. That little boy's cannon was just like his habits, just like everybody's habits. Habits, like the cannon, are not easy to stop, when once they get started. They are pretty sure to keep going on until, if they are bad habits, they do mischief it spite of all we can do to stop them. If you get a habit of meddling dishonestly with what don't belong to you, it is apt to go on until it does you some terrible mischief. If you get in the habit of being idle and wasting your time and opportunities, be assured it will not stop and change to a good habit just when you see how bad it is and wish to get out of it.

Look out, then, for the beginning of a bad habit. Remember they are things that, like the cannon, you can't easily stop when you once set them a going.—Pulpit and Gazette.

Correspondence.

Editors of Pilgrim: Perhaps a little church news would be interesting to the readers of your periodical, therefore I will state that brother P. J. Brown and I left home on the 29th of December, on a mission of love to the churches throughout northeastern Ohio. We took the train at West Salem on the morning of December 30th, for Trumbull county. Arrived at Warren in due time, and was met and conveyed 12 miles to the Brethren's meeting-house, where there is a small colony of saints without a shepherd. We truly sympathise with them in their forlorn situation. It would be good if they could have a speaker living there. They belong to the Sandy church, which body is, perhaps, forty miles away, yet are visited once in four weeks by the Brethren and others who have volunteered to assist them in holding forth the word of life. From there to Bristolville, where we commenced meeting on Saturday evening and continued until Tuesday evening. The people gave good attention to the word spoken. On Monday, New Year, we had the pleasure of being present at a reunion at sister Barb's. Her mother, a widow, her brothers and sisters, their children and grand-children, to the number of forty-two, were present. Spent the day in social conversation, in singing, &c., which we enjoyed very much. Hope the Lord may prosper them that they may hold their annual feasts until their great reunion in heaven, where they can spend an eternity in praise to God. On Wednesday morning took the train for Youngstown; was met by brother Kohler and conveyed to his house. In the evening commenced meeting in the Brethren's meeting-house in Mahoning, and continued over Sunday. Had eleven meetings in this arm, which we hope will hereafter show good results. We were then taken to Columbiana where we had a short interview with old brother Henry Kurtz for the first time for me, found him in tolerable good health for a man of his age. Then took the train for Beloit, where we were met by brother David Bowman and conveyed to his house, and in the evening to the Brethren's house of worship where we continued until Thursday evening. Had 7 meetings. We found the Brethren here alive to their best interest, and the church in a very prosperous condition. From here we were conveyed by private conveyance to the Canton church, Stark county, who were lately bereft of their shepherd, D. J. Peck. We, remained with them over Sunday had five meetings with good attention. This church is healthy and prosperous. On Monday we took the train for Massillon, was met by brother Ephraim Swinehart who took us to his house. Had meeting at a school-house near by in the evening, passed up through the west Nimishillin church, had five meetings at four different places; then passed into the east Nimishillin church, had four meetings in that arm; then into the Springfield church, Summit county. Had four meetings, which ended our labors. Were then taken to Akron by brother George Casper, where we took the train for home, and arrived safely and found our families well and glad to see us return, for which we feel thankful to God who preserved us.

In conclusion we would say we found the brethren everywhere kind, condescending and benevolent. In all we filled 41 appointments, and a general good feeling prevailed. Had no accessions but hope the fruits of our labors will be seen in the morning of the resurrection.

GEORGE WORST.

Editors of the Pilgrim;—We have just closed a series of meetings in the Red Bank Congregation, Armstrong Co., Pa. Bro. Jesse Calvert of Milford Ind. came to pay us a visit of love, and remained with us from the 12th to the 25th of January 1872, during which time we had many seasons of refreshing from the word of God, as spoken to us by our brother. We may truly say, that as far as we were able to judge, he spoke the Word in its simplicity, and did not respect the person of men, but taught the ways of the Lord in truth. During our meeting, some who were sinners were made to feel that God was good, and desired to be saved by grace through the instrumentality of God. We baptized some, and some are yet waiting to be received by baptism, and we hope they will not wait too long. On Friday morning we bade our Bro. farewell, to go and labor in other places, and may God speed him is our devoted prayer.

J. P. HETRIC

Oakland, Pa.

Dear Pilgrim:—This morning I am alone in my chamber. Our dear brethren C. G. Lint, and J. P. Cover have been with us a few days. I enjoyed myself very much, now they are gone, and my mind is somewhat aroused. Oh, what careless creatures we are! I often wonder why we are so afraid to pray; whether we love the Lord as much as we do our friends. We can tell our friends and neighbors what we want, why not talk to God in prayer the same way. Just tell Him what we want in plain simple language, as we do our friends. God does not want high flowing expressions from us, He is meek and lowly, therefore He will hear the lowly. We go together and talk and sing, and if some one would ask us to pray, we can not pray. Why not? Can not pray. Dear sisters, are we ashamed of God, that we cannot pray to Him? We need not be ashamed of God, nor we need not be afraid to pray to Him. We can talk of everything else, but when asked to pray, we cannot pray. If we are ashamed to tell God what we want, He will be ashamed of us. The Poet says, "Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees." Let us often make the devil tremble. Your sister.

NANCY WISE.

UPTON, PA., }
Jan. 29th, '72. }

Beloved Bro. Henry: Please announce through the PILGRIM that our series of meetings at Upton are over. We commenced our meeting on the evening of the 20th of January, and closed on the evening of the 28th. The interest of the meeting seemed to increase from beginning to the end. Although there was only one baptized during the meeting, still we believe there were many more solemnly impressed. So much so that we hope and pray that they will not be able to shake off conviction, but become obedient to the teachings of the Lord Jesus as delivered by the brethren. Dear brethren and sisters and all who were present during the meeting, let us all be careful not to be forgetful hearers of the word and not doers, lest we be deceived. What a great pity to think of our being deceived after enjoying the glorious privilege that we enjoyed of sitting together in Heavenly places and having the glorious Gospel proclaimed unto us. We, at the commencement of our meeting, were a little disappointed, as brethren David Long and Daniel Stouffer expected to be present, but on account of brother Long becoming somewhat afflicted with Rheumatism, and brother Stouffer's wife took sick, so we were left alone at first at some of the appointments, though there were only three appointments that we were entirely alone, as some of our neighboring brethren came and preached for us. On the 24th brethren Daniel Keller and Daniel Hollinger came and stayed until Saturday, brother Keller went home and brother Hollinger stayed until the close of the meetings. Ministering brethren in attendance during the meeting were Daniel Keller, Daniel Hollinger, Jacob Stover, John Zook and Geo. Bricker.

If you please you may also announce through the PILGRIM that brother Daniel Hollinger and I had a trip through the upper Conawago arm of the church, Adams county, Pa., and preached 13 times. Had interesting meetings. We had quite a time of rejoicing together in the service of the Lord, and also during our trip we were made to feel sorry on account of meeting two of our dear brethren sorely afflicted, namely, bro. Adam Hollinger and brother Samuel Hollinger, minister and deacon. It seems as if neither of them could handily be spared, but the will of the Lord be done, as they both seemed to be resigned to the Lord's will. Our sympathies were very much drawn out while with brother Adam. We were with him over night on Sunday, 14th of Jan., and also on Monday, 15th, after preaching spent the afternoon with him. On Monday morning brother Harbolt made request to have us over dinner, but brother Adam urged for our company, and so we went there as above stated. And now brethren and sisters, I will name a short prayer of brother Adam's after going through with a severe operation made by the doctor on his abcess. Being under the influence of ether, and in the act of falling into a dose, his prayer was, "O God be merciful to me a poor sufferer, but I know thou art a kind God, and that thou wilt not give me one stroke too many, and also know that five minutes in the glory of Heaven all my pain will be forgotten;" and then still yet seemed to be engaged in prayer to God for a considerable time, but so low in tone that I could not understand him. I was setting by his bed side holding his hand in mine while he was thus engaged, and I can tell you of a truth if I ever tried to be engaged for a poor sufferer in a silent way, it was on this heart-rending occasion. In perhaps a quarter, or half an hour, he opened his eyes and looked me right in the face, and I then said to him, I wish I could take part of your suffering on myself and relieve you. His answer was, "brother George, I must go through with this suffering myself, by the help of the Lord I can overcome, neither would I want you to endure my pain." My eyes are filled with tears while penning these lines, and I would feel like writing considerable by way of comfort to brother Adam and family, but I must come to a close for fear of getting too lengthy. So I will say in conclusion dear children of brother Adam, I think this is a loud call to you to enter into the service of the Lord, as I understand that one of you are shortly going to enter the service of the Lord. All of you do likewise, and this would be my advice unto whosesoever hands this may come that are outside of the service of the Lord. My love to all the dear brethren and sisters and friends into whose hands this may come. May God bless us all is my prayer.

GEORGE MOHLER.

H. B. Brumbaugh. Dear brother:—Inclosed please find $ 1.25 for the PILGRIM for 1872. We want it to still visit us and tell us of the prosperity of Zion. I also send a little Church news from Tenn. that may be of interest to some of your readers.

The writer of this article has an appointment to preach at Bells M., commencing Saturday night before Christmas, accompanied by Bro. Isaac Bilhimer. On our arrival at the place, we found a large congregation in attendance, and on Sabbath was met by Bro. Jesse Crosswhite, had a pleasant day and a large congregation, good order, and quite a feeling manifested among the people, and a prospect of doing good. We agreed to continue until Monday if the brethren would remain with us. Bro. Crosswhite said he would. Bro. Bilhimer had to return home,—had meeting Monday morning and eve. and Tuesday morn. and evening, then four were added to the Church. By this time our congregation was stirred up and seemed to enjoy themselves well, so we concluded to continue during the week, as it was the holidays thinking we could spend it no better than to preach the Word. The longer we continued, the larger our congregations. This was a new feature in this country for the Brethren to hold meeting for a week. We still had additions to the Church. On Saturday we were reinforced by Bro. S. S. Sherfey, and on Sabbath baptized eleven souls that were made willing to take the yoke of Christ. We then closed our meeting at this place, leaving the people in a hungry condition, and all that we could hear, was of the Brethren's meeting. The people seemed still to hunger for the truth, accordingly on the second Sabbath of Jan. we commenced a meeting at Bashor's Meeting-house in Cherokee,—was met by Bro. Jesse Crosswhite, who is an Elder with me of that congregation. Also Bro. Isaac Bilhimer, Elder Joseph Wise, Elder Henry Gans, Christian Deal, and S. S. Sherfy reinforced us from the adjoining congregations. We had a good meeting, continued during the week, and on Sabbath there was seven more made willing to take the yoke of Jesus and learn of Him,—was baptized and went on their way rejoicing. Among the 18 that came to the Church, was 6 that were members of the Baptist Church. May the good Lord carry on this work over the head of all opposition is our prayer. F. W. DOVE.

Jonesboro, Tenn

CASSTOWN, OHIO. }
Jan. 26th, 1871. }

Dear Pilgrim: You have been a welcome visitor to my fathers family for some time, for which you have our sincere thanks, and as there are many letters coming from the brethren, some for meeting, some for a series of meetings, and some for church business, and none receiving any answers, they will wonder why it is. We will take this method of answering all. Please inform your readers that my father has been confined to his bed for five weeks with the Erysipelas or the St. Anthonys fire, and at this time is very low, he wishes the prayers of the Church at large in his behalf.

HENRY D. DAVY, JR.

MEMORIAM.

Elder JACOB KURTZ, of Wayne Co., Ohio, deceased, was born in Chester county, Pa., Jan. 24th, 1796. When 7 years old his parents removed to Kishacoquillas Valley, in Mifflin Co., Pa., and when 23 years old he emigrated to Stark Co., Ohio, as a school teacher. Here he was joined in holy matrimony to Anna Gans, daughter of Elder John Gans, one of the pioneer preachers of the Brethren in that part of Ohio. They lived in holy wedlock until his death. They had 7 children. Four are living and three dead.

He came to the church of the Brethren in early life: served as a deacon or visiting brother some eight years, when he was called to the ministry of the Gospel of Christ. He served in the ministry nearly 35 years; 18 years of which he served as ordained elder. He was not, like Apollos, a great orator, but he was "mighty in the Scriptures." He lived as he was taught of God. He dared to do right, or what he judged to be right, in all the relations of life. He was an affectionate husband, a kind father, a true friend, a worthy citizen, and a devoted christian. His place was never vacant in the church without a just cause. I heard a friend say, "I don't know what it would take to keep him from the meetings." It may be justly said of him: "None knew him but to love him, none named him but to praise." He died as he lived, an honest man.

He was several miles from home, at the Beech Grove meeting-house, on the 2nd and 3rd of Dec., attending meetings in his own congregation, and on the 4th he was going home. When about 5 miles north of Wooster the "Angel of Death" met him. His horse, usually docile, took fright and ran away, upsetting the buggy and throwing him out, breaking his leg and otherwise injuring him. The next day he was taken to his son's, J. C. Kurtz, in Wooster, where he lingered until the morning of Jan. 6th, 1872, when he heard a voice from afar saying, "It is enough, come up higher." Being unable to speak, he raised his eyes heavenward and pointing upward with his hand as a commander pointing to victory, while a sweet smile rested upon his face. He bade the world adieu, and passed away to enjoy the rest that remaineth to the people of God. "Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." And here we say, dear saint, farewell.

May we meet thee,
May we greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

JOHN WISE.

Scenery Hill, Pa.

QUERY.

Will some of our dear brethren give us an explanation of the full meaning of the apostle in Col. 1: 24. "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church." D. NEGLEY.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Pyrmont, Ind.

Please announce that we intend holding our District Meeting, of the North East District of Ohio, on Tuesday 7th of May 1875, at the big meeting house of the Mohecan church, Wayne Co., Ohio, five miles South of West Salem, on the Atlantic and Great Western Rail Road, and 12 miles North West of Wooster, on the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne Rail Road. We fondly hope that every branch composing this District will be represented, and especially those branches that did not represent themselves heretofore. Those coming by the Atlantic and Great Western, will please notify brother Jacob Garver at Lattasburg, who will see that conveyances will be furnished to convey all from West Salem to place of meeting. Those coming by Pittsburg and Fort Wayne Rail Road, will please notify the undersigned at New Pittsburg, who will see that they be conveyed to place of meeting, by order of the church.

GEORGE WORST.

Editor's Department.

THE FAIRHAVEN.

As our business increases, our facilities for performing it must also be enlarged. Almost daily we are adding new material to our office. For a long time, and with great labor we worked off our edition of PILGRIM on a Hand Press, but as it became more generally known the circulation increased until it became impractica ble and we were necessitated to procure a Power Press. We examined a number of Presses and found none that pleased us so well for our business as the Fairhaven, being adapted to either hand or steam power, and also a little cheaper than many others and yet will do the same amount of work with less expense.

By the time we get it in good running order, it will cost us $1.000. This extra expense falls heavily upon us, especially as our terms are so low that our profits are quite small. We just thought, the other day, how much our dear brethren, sisters and friends could aid us if they would make a little effort in behalf of the PILGRIM. Almost every brother and sister could send us another subscriber if they would try. Will you not, brother? Will you not, sister? Just one more. It woul l cost you only a small amount of time and trooble, and be of great service to os. In order thut you may be the more successful we will give the easiest terms possible. ANY TIME DURING THE YEAR the pay may be sent, only so we are sure of getting it. Now, dear brethren and sisters, on such terms we think yon can greatly increase our list, and there are few so poor but that can raise $1.25 during the year.

Sun-criptions may commence at any time and run a year from date of commencement. SEND FOR SAMPLE COPIES AND PROSPECTUS FREE.

OUR JOB DEPARTMENT.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of Job work on the most reasonable terms Sale Bills, Letter Heads, Cards, Envelopes, or anything desired in our line of business will be executed with neatness and dispatch. We are now supplied with a new Power Press, one of acknowledged merit, capable of running eff from 1.000 to 1.500 papers per hour, and even more than that according to power attached to it. We have alse a good Hand Press and a Jobber, we are therefore prepared to execute all kinds of work that may be demanded of us. Any persoos wishing Letter Heads, Sale Bills &c, will ploase give us a trial. Send us a copy of what you wish done, and size of bills or letter beads, and we will attend to it immediately, and will send it by return mail free of charge, and do it cheaper than elsewhere. Specimens of our work sent on application. GIVE US A CALL.

PERSONAL.

E. J. W. Short articles on Apis culture will be acceptable

J. S. FLORY. All right Books will be sent as soon as a fresh supply is received.

A. L. BOWMAN and others. The Hymn Books will be sent as soon as we receive theta—none on hands—but have ordered.

—JACOB PYSELL. Your notice is respectfully declined.—not in place for a religious paper. "Instruction" will appear.

—ELD. JACOB WAGONER'S address is changed from Petit to Cerro Gorda, Piatt county Illinois. Those wishing to correspond with him, will please notice.

—BRO. JESSE CALVERT is holding a series of meetings with the brethren at Red Bank, Pa. The meeting is reported as interesting, and attended with good results.

—E R. MAHLE. The stopping of your PILGRIM was accidental, as we certainly are not afraid to trust any of our brethren. It will come all right now.

WM. A. MURRAY. If you have sent us $1.25 too much, please send us another subscriber and reserve the money, or let us know what to do with it.

—BRO. JOSEPH SHERFY from near Gettysburg, Pa., gave us a short call, and two sermons. Bro. Sherfy is a lively talker, and makes himself at home both in the family circle and the Church His stay with us was short but pleasant,—call again.

JACOB WEAVER. The poor blind brother's 50cts are received, and his name placed on the book for one year. Though blind to the scenes of this life, we hope that his spiritual eyes may be feasted upon the good things given through the PILGRIM during the year.

—ISAAC BRIGHT. The letter you speak of, was received and names entered, but not marked paid. If you put the money in the letter, we must have received it and was overlooked. We have now marked them paid, and the $ 1.25 last sent us, credited to the poor list by request.

Bro. JOSEPH AMICH of Burnettsville, Ind. Jan. 26th, says, "The Lord is doing a good work among us now, through the instrumentality of brethren Leedy and Cripe, who are laboring for us at present. There are fiftoen applicants for baptism to-morrow, and prospects for more."

ELD. H. D. DAVY, we are informed by his son, is quite ill, his letter being dated Jan. 26th. On Jan. 30th, we received intelligence from him again, and his case is reported changed for the better. We fondly hope that by the time we hear from him again, he may be out of danger—as brother Davy holds a position in the church that few can fill so acceptably, and we know that all throughout the brotherhood will be engaged in prayer for him.

DIED.

BOWERS.—In Middle Fork Congregation Clinton county, Ind., January 3rd, 1872, our beloved sister MAGDALENA BOWERS, aged 74 years, 10 months and 25 days. Disease of the heart Occasion improved by Elder Daniel Neher, Allen Mohler and others, from Tim 4.

METZGER.—In the same place, January 4th, 1872, our much beloved sister HANNAH METZGER, wife of Samuel Metzger, aged 57 years, 4 months and 14 days.

She leaves a husband and 7 children to mourn her loss, and a dear mother they have lost and the Church a worthy sister, but we have a good hope for her that she is at rest. Her disease was Lung Fever. Occasion improved by Elder Daniel Neher and others, from the words "Sorrow not even as others which have no hope."

I. N. ONIFF.

PERRY.—On the 24th of January, in Middle River arm of the Church, Va., Bro. DAVID PERRY, aged 48 years, 7 mo. and 9 days. Funeral services by the brethren from Matt. 24: 44.

Bro. Perry came to his death by a very sad and distressing accident. He took his axe in the morning and started for the woods by himself, which was a short distance from his house, to do some chopping, and in fell ing a tree, from all appearances it lodged against some other trees, and it is supposed in cutting off a limb to let it down, the tree fell suddenly and crushed him to death. One of his neighbors passing by accidentally found him. He was lying on his face with his breast on a small stump and the tree across his back, which evidently crushed him to death instantly. He leaves a widow a sister, and two daughters to mourn their loss. His remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of people, and there appeared to be sadness on every countenance. The bereaved family have the sympathies of the whole community. In 1852, Bro. Perry met with an accident which broke one leg and otherwise injured him, and in 1862 he met with another that broke one leg, and singular as it may appear, he spoke of those two accidents on several occasions of late to his friends and said, he wondered what would happen him in 1872. He seemed to express himself as though he thought there would be something, and so it has pleased the All-wise in His providence to remove him from time to eternity thus early in 1872. S. J. G.

WELLBAUM.—In Union Church, Marshall county, Ind., our dear old sister MARY WELLBAUM, wife of Henry Wellbaum, though she did not live with her husband for 37 years. She was a daughter of brother John and sister Barbara Root. She was a good and consistent sister until her death. She died on the 20th of November, 1871, aged 68 years, 7 months and 18 days. Disease Lung Fever.

She bore her sickness with Christian fortitude. She called for the Elders and was anointed before she left this world. She said she was willing to go, but that some would soon follow after. She died at her son-in-law's, G. F. Snell, leaving her children and grand-children to mourn her loss. Funeral services by Bro. John Hoover, Adam Appleman and the writer.

JOHN KNISLEY.

KURTZ—Fell asleep in Jesus, our beloved brother, Elder JACOB KURTZ, of Wayne Co., Ohio, aged 75 years, 11 mo. and 12 days. He leaves an aged companion, a sister, four children, with a large circle of relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. But our loss is his great gain.

He was thrown from his carriage on the 4th day of Dec., 1871, by which his leg was broken, and caused his death. He died Jan. 6th 1872, at the residence of his son, Jacob C. Kurtz, in Wooster, Ohio. Was buried Jan. 9th, 1872. Funeral services on day of interment by Elder John Wise, of Pa., in English, and Eld. J. B. Shoemaker of Ohio, in German, from Rev. 14: 13.

W.

[Gospel Visitor please copy.]

MONEY LIST.

Daniel Hendricks,	$ 1.25
Benjamin Ellis,	1.25
P. S. Myers,	1.60
Leah Eicher,	1.25
Samuel Nehr,	1.25
S. J. Garber,	17.50
Onberg, Ind Co. Pa.,	1.25
S. A. Moore,	9.00
D. H. Bonebrake.	16.00
Samuel Welty,	1.25
J. H. Brumbaugh,	5.00
Anthony Miller,	1.50
David Miller,	1·25
J J. Solomon,	2.75
David Swinehart,	1.25
F. W. Dove,	1.25
Daniel Bechtal,	1.25
Moses Miller,	1.15
G. W. Bricker,	2.50
Abram Kunkle,	1.25
J. W. Fisher	1.25
Eld. Jacob Mohler,	1.25
E R. Mahle,	1.25
H. D. Davy Jr,	.45
John H Caylor.	1.25
John Arnold,	1 25
Fahrney's Bro. & Co.	60 50
Eld. Jacob Wagoner,	1 25
John Goodyear,	1.25
Joseph Amich,	1 50
David Bechtal,	10.00
J. B Wolf,	.75
Jacob Weaver,	.50
John H Brumbaugh,	1 50
A. L Bowman,	5.50
J. S. Flory,	12 25
Wm A. Murray,	12 50
David Grossnickle,	1 25
S. Bollinger,	1.25
A. C. Neff,	1.25
Jocob Pysell,	1.25
Isaac Bright,	1.25
Henry Brumbaugh,	1.25

NEWS COLUMN.

The sympathizers with the Old Catholic movement at Rome have started a weekly paper in French, called the Esperance de Rome. Dr. Frederick Nery is the editor, and the prospectus states that Dr. Dollinger, Father Hyacinthe, and Professors Friedrich, Reinkens, and Michelis have promised their support and co-operation. 'Our religious programme,' the editor says, "is resumed thus: Church reform—no schism—but spiritual union, in a church truly catholic, with all those who believe in Christ and hold to the Apostles' Creed. In politics we advocate universal peace. We desire the unity, development and prosperity of Italy, that she may become the true representative of political and religious liberty."

Fifteen pious, enterprising Scotchmen, chiefly agriculturists and skilled workmen, with their families, besides several ladies, not without means, have volunteered to initiate an industrial Christian Mission, upon the Moravian plan, in behalf of and among the Circassian refugees in Turkey, whenever arrangements are made for them to go out, while many more are looked for to present themselves for the object. This is a movement that ought to become more general. There is no reason to be found in the word of God why ordained ministers of the Gospel should be the only ones to go out on foreign missions. It is the duty of laymen as well as ministers to devote themselves to the work, and a great field of usefulness is before them in many foreign lands.

Dr. Cummings, of London, who is more successful in writing history than he was in interpreting prophecy, in a recent "Retrospect," makes the following telling hit at the sinister effect of the Pope's blessing: "It was strange, but nevertheless true, that if the Pope blessed anybody, such a person was sure to come to grief, whereas if he cursed anybody he was sure to prosper. The Emperor of Austria, for instance, warned against Prussia, and before he set out he and his army were especially blessed by the Pope; the blessing resulted in Sadowa! The Queen of Spain received the golden rose and the Pope's special blessing; but scarcely had the blessing settled upon her head than she was a fugitive from her country. Maximilian received the blessing of the Pope, and was murdered. The Pope cursed Victor Emanuel in the most terrific terms—in terms which even uneducated people would stigmatize as coarse invective. What followed the curse? Victor Emanuel is now King of Italy! His son is King of Spain, and his daughter is Queen of Portugal. All three were cursed by the Pope, and all three are among the most enviable Sovereigns in Europe. Wherever the Pope's blessing fell there thorns and briars seemed to spring up."

It is reported that the small pox is raging terribly at Hayer, Iowa, on the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad. In a population of less than 1,000, over sixty deaths have occurred within four weeks. No trains are allowed to stop there.

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subscribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers—many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittinger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address,
DANIEL KAGARICE.
New Enterprise,
Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Sabbath, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO.

One copy, post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	11 25
Arabesque plain.	1.00
Turkey morocco,	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,	5 50

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX. P. M.	MAIL. A. M.	STATIONS.	DOWN TRAINS. EX. A. M.	MAIL. P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 30
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 34	4 15
6 05	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 25	4 05
6 20	8 58	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 35	9 08	Coffee Run	8 02	3 35
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 56	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 34	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Summit	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15 / Le 7 30	9 58 / 10 00	Saxton	7 18 / 7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 28	Hopewell	6 37	2 25
8 12	10 48	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 40	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 38	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 10	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 15	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR GENTS.
Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand White Wire Clothes Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, corner Wall st. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan. 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

☞ GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.03
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.30
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.50
" Hill "	1.45
" Winter red "	1.50
CORN.	.50
OATS.	.35
RYE.	.84
BARLEY.	.65

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

T E R M S.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50.
Any number above that at the same rate,

Address,

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county, Pa

Herald of Truth.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, FEBRUARY 13, 1872. NO 7

VALUABLE HINTS.

PSALMS, 119:1. ALEPH.

To my dear reader. The time has arrived, the opportunity is at hand to try, with the assistance and grace of God's enlightening Spirit, to investigate and answer the weighty, but long delayed questions. Questions of such importance as the existence and being of our Creator, and our present and future relationship to Him involves, should foremost and before any other consideration engage every reflecting mind. The reading and meditation of the Holy Scriptures should be diligently pursued. The various texts which treat on the questions, must be faithfully compared, and the conclusive ideas should only be grounded on the unison and relationship they have to each other. Scripture is a self interpreter, that is to say, to get the meaning of one passage from another is a correct way, and better than running after commentators and theological authors, for if we read them to form an idea, or to get an established opinion or faith, our own judgment has to be used, before a proper conclusion can be had. A careful comparison with their advanced opinion and the Scripture is needful, if we do not want to build our faith on the say so, or opinion of men, and worship the God of our temporal and future existence, according to their dictates. Even when we hear preaching, we should not place explicit confidence in their words, if we are not fully acquainted with the Scriptures, then we should have recourse to it afterwards, and take nothing for granted without knowing the things we hear it to be so. Preachers have no more knowledge as to what was taught by the Apostles, and not written, than any other Bible reader. Attention, carefulness, and study, is therefore highly necessary, for it is a fearful thing to be deluded in this most weighty and important subject of our all. Our actions here are regulated according to our ideas or opinion of the future state of existence, and in our future state we will surely experience whether our action and faith here were for our benefit or not. How careful therefore ought we to be in selecting of the now various and numerous orders of worship that have found their way in the so-called Church militant, the one order given by Divine authority, ordained and sanctioned by the Spirit of God, according to the teachings of the Gospel of Christ. We can not judge ourself, neither will we be judged according to what this or that man has taught us by preaching or writing, however honest and sincere their intentions, or how eloquent their speech and fluent their language, and great their experience, and extensive their learning, none of these will do us any good, if we do not live, act and obey from our hearts and free will, that form of doctrine taught by word and precept, by Christ the Redeemer of men, and Son of God Himself, as also by His chosen Apostles, which were endued with that power which only can emanate and come from God the fountain of all perfection. The words that Christ spoke are, and will be our judge, and if we judge ourselves by these words here, we will not come into judgment hereafter. How careful and diligent therefore we ought to be, to acquire a true and correct knowledge and understanding of that Word, for if we do not understand and see the true object and intention of the spoken Word, we have not the capability of deciding correctly. We should by all means know whether the teaching of Christ and His Apostles were for a temporal or spiritual purpose, and whether they should be only literal, or spiritually understood, whether His commanding to observe His ordinances literal, were or were not to have a spiritual signification, and confer temporal satisfaction, or future blessings and happiness. Also, whether His immaculate conception, His literal birth, growing up to full stature of manhood, His blameless life, His Heavenly teachings, His obedience to His Father's will, His sufferings, His literal death, burial and resurrection, and visible ascension, did not typify the full regeneration of the children of men, in all the various changes and stages of progression, each child of God has to experience before arriving at the happy end, and the consummation of the time when the purpose of God for creating men, and all things to their benefit and His own glory and honor has its fulfillment.

An insight into these things is beneficial to the Christian as also to the creature, for if we do see what the Creator has done for us, we can not withhold the admiration of that Being or Power that has arranged things so to come to pass. But who can describe these ways and advents better than they are described in the Holy Scriptures?

If there was not so much diversity of understanding among even those who profess to be, one in mind, one in heart, and one in action, and pretend to be travelling the same road of faith together, then would it not be worth while to caution, yet in a great measure the contrary is the case, and while such diversity can not be conducted to lead to the honor and glory of God, so also it can not be beneficial to the creature, who being in this class or condition is kept at least in doubt, if not delusion, what, and whom he adores and worships.

True and willing obedience and veneration, God only accepts from His creatures, and these we can only learn if we study the Scripture for that end and purpose. But too much do we have to see in these days, as it were by force to worship God, as the leading preachers think it proper, and in many cases it is done by the multitudes, to please men and honor them. This should not be. God requires all the praise and honor that men can give. All power in heaven and on earth is given to Christ, yet we see is too much used by the clergy. If we look around us and behold the various denominations and their doctrine, we will invariably find that the more power is conferred on the ministers, the more they take, the further their doctrine and faith is from the Scriptures. Let this example be a warning if thou hast the purity of that faith at heart, which was once delivered to the saints.

Another item of great importance to the full comprehension of the Scripture should be considered, and that is a faithful study of the Divine attributes of its author. Without some knowledge of them, the Scriptures are but imperfectly understood, for as long as our understanding of the Scriptures does not harmonize with the attributes of God, that long there must be a doubt of our correctness, and therefore an inability of a true idea in regard to the existence of the Deity, and therefore an inability of faithful obedience and a proper worship on our part.

As an introduction, a few of these attributes may be named. The first,

Out of love, God created the Universe for the benefit of men.

He is good, His goodness leads to repentance.

He is holy, God can not sin.

He is merciful. To all His creatures.

He is just. He will not make the least allowance for transgression.

He is mighty. He has created the Universe.

He is powerful, He upholds all things.

He is wise. As the creation of the world and all things belonging thereto, testify.

He is full of knowledge. To God are known all His ways, and ours.

He is omnipresent, and therefore sees all things. In short, He is all in all, to enumerate would fail.

The attributes of God are without number, degree or measure, and perfect in themselves, they are the attributes of a God, and too infinite for finite creature fully to comprehend.

To pass on to the object before us would be perhaps the most proper, but as this is the first of a series of letters, and merely an introduction to the intention of the subjects, that it might be understood what the principle of the subject is before us, in order that a full understanding may be had when alluded to. Thy friend would therefore say, that he does not seek anything of any nature which might bring him favor or popularity among men, no, he does not wish for such perishable objects, but in all sincerity he has but the glory, honor, and exaltation among men on earth of that Name in view, which is higher than the Heaven, and the benefit that our poor, fallen, and in many cases deluded fellow mortals may derive. Cheerfully therefore does he use the one little talent by a benevolent Parent bestowed, to throw in his mite in the way here proposed, and if the labor of this investigation should cast only a small ray of light, and enlighten one inquiring mind, or stimulate to a thorough and candid examination in the work of Creation and Redemption, planned, wrought by the love of our Heavenly Father, that joy, that consolation, be instrumental of doing good and benefit others, is meekly entertained, hoped, and desired.

Then we will begin in our next, and continue on from time to time to state our views derived from the testimony of the teachers and writers of the Holy Word of God, as to what man is, and his destiny will be. But as the latter work is the work of Christ, and is a work of Redemption, it is evident that a state of distress, ruin, and loss is or was beforehand, and from this state and condition, it was and is Christ's mission into the world to disengage and translate into another. Therefore it seems necessary that we should first see the origin of that lost and depraved state, or how man got into it, or it always in. For to ascertain this, we will look into the three first chapters of Genesis. In the first we have the generation of Heaven and earth, or the order in which all material things were created. In the second, the mode of their creation, of man and his help. And in the third, their united transgression, fall and departure from that state and condition where Creation had placed them. To which it is the prayer of your unworthy friend, that according to the will and purpose of the Creator, all may return and be raised again.. C. S.

RELIGION. WHAT IS IT?

By Brother Ridgely.

It is rather a strange question to ask the popular mind: "What is religion?" Still were we to question all mankind, the various answers that would be returned would startle, if not confound, us. It matters not who we are, nor under what circumstances we are placed, the subject of religion and its atributes are ever presented to our ears, and always in some new form, so that it does not become wearisome, but is ever new, and assumes some more fascinating form each time that we hear the name. The most aristocratic circles of Fifth Avenue are discussing the subject: "Would it be consistent with our religion to attend this ball?" "Can we, with propriety, entertain this visitor who openly proclaims his deism, and flaunts defiance in the face of his God." If we look deep beneath the surface, and there is a spark of true womanly feeling left, the answer, away down there is "no." But as we gaze upon the smiling surface we do not realize the deep feeling that pervades the soul at the moment, for it is cloaked beneath a perfidious mask, and the lips give an assent, and the still small voice is stifled in its infancy, and is no more heard.

The same grave subject is as eagerly discussed in the Five Points, the haunts of the lowest, vilest, most crime-hardened creatures upon God's footstool. But oh! how differently, how strangely dissonant the discussion. Mingled with coarse, libelous jibes, and harsh, unfeeling thoughts comes the word "religion," a word we (and, perhaps, many of them,) have been taught to revere, as representing the holiest thoughts, the most sacred wishes of the inner man, that man who only gives glances of his true self to the outer world, the cold, hard, unfeeling world which cannot realize the depth of feeling such as these. With a shudder of agonizing horror we turn from the spectacle, and clasping our hands to our ears to shut out the horrible sounds that cannot but grate harshly upon the refined ear, it matters not how indifferently the mind may be trained.

And what is the christian's application of the term? We know that it must have a strong influence upon the mind of men, or it would not be so universally discussed. It must stir the depths of men's natures, it matters not how vile they may be, or would we hear the word pronounced in the brothels and robber-dens of the land? Then what is it? Is it the profession of on sect or another? Is it the feeling that induces some to worship on their knees and others upon their feet? Is it the cause that compels some to praise in sacred songs and hallelujahs, while others with upturned faces and silent tongues pour out their souls to their God? No, it is the innate, inborn feeling that compels, more strongly than chains, or even death, the worship of a Superior Being; that forces upon us the knowlenge of a power which we must acknowledge and obey, and disobedience to which will be subject to punishment, more or less severe, according to the spirit in which the transgression is effected.

What a calm, holy peace is spread over the soul when true religion, a religion that shows itself in every act, that displays itself in every word, governs us and rules our lives. How bright and joyous all things seem when viewed through the eyes of a christian's bright experience. It were worth almost a world of petty grievances and vexations to experience even for a moment the great joy of perfect peace, calm content, forgiveness of all injuries, no matter how deep, and an awe-pervading inspiration that such is heaven, hightened by the presence of myriads of others, and all the same happy band, living in perfect peace, without one doubt or fear. Oh reader, would it not be well to secure such a religion? To bind it to the heart and imbue it into the soul? To make it a part of our lives—our whole being? Think well of the harsh treatment that sin gives us. It cannot give us peace, we can not there find rest, for the sin-hardened soul gives the face the expression of its own dreadful experience, and the haggard expression tells only too plainly of the suffering within.

Come then, embrace the present opportunity to cast forever behind the harassing doubts, the dread uncertainty of a life of wickedness, and take up an existence of peace, of never-fearing hopefulness, of religion.

Chicago, Ill.

For the Pilgrim.

LEARNING TO BE HAPPY.

At least millions of persons are this hour seeking or wishing for a more perfect happiness than they have attained to or can attain to in this world. Many enquire asking each other to point out a way whereby they may achieve their end. Some point to, and run after wealth, and when they have by much self-denial, tribulation, patience and long perseverance, honestly obtained the coveted treasure, they find to their sorrow that happiness consists not merely in the abundance of worldly possessions. They become wearisome. As the child passes into manhood or womanhood, leaving behind all its childish enjoyments, or as it soon becomes wearied and sleepy by the sight and noise of its playthings, so man is troubled by the vanity of riches, if he has hoped to find true happiness in them. He retires to his long home declaring that it is not found in an abundance of worldly possessions. And so it is whenever the heart is wholly fixed upon anything that is earthly. Avarice, or a desire to be styled wealthy, generates fraud and various other mischiefs and snares. Pride makes us self-willed, boastful, unwilling to be taught by, or to listen to others. Pride is an overwhelming, unbounded selfishness, a self-esteem that does not always need ornaments to authenticate its existence, or to preserve it. A man may certainly be too proud to be vain; and in this condition he will very likely mistake vanity for pride. The sin of vanity is distinctively a desire to have the esteem of others It is an abstract accompaniment of a degree of pride. Let me be particular, and let me be understood. The fruits of vanity are continued and various attempts to attain to conceited or imagined happiness. When the giddy, vain youth has by much anxiety, time and expense, gained the desired object, or even a point in the way, he finds it to be, not true happiness, but a loathsome disgust. Vanity makes men try to leap over their own shadow; haughtiness makes them believe they have got over it, and pride makes them believe and contend that they have run away from it. If they do these things they are surely very unhappy—unconsciously unhappy—which makes their condition infinitely more miserable than if they were aware of it. "But you have not indicated a way to attain to real lasting happiness in this world."

No; I contend that man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." I have sought only to show that there is no real lasting happiness in the perishable and sinful pleasures of earth, and that they tend to destroy our peace in this life and in the world which is to come. But there is a way which leads from earth to heaven, where perfect joy and happiness abound. Jesus is that way. To walk in it, and to continue therein is the happiest triumph of life.

J. B. Garver.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

"Borrow not a few," saith the Lord to every believer. Go, thou sorrowing one; borrow empty vessels in which to receive abundant consolations from Christ. What magnificent grace shines in the world empty. God will not pour into vessels filled with creature supplies. Thus it is manifest that the oil comes direct from God. The word 'empty" shuts out the creature. The words "not a few' have room for God to enter in. The heart's deep furrows are so many deep vessels to receive streams of comfort. The heart that has many is furnished with vessels "not a few." Faith's warrant is, "Borrow not a few."

TEMPERANCE.

What a beautiful word, what happy thoughts like flowers spring unbidden into existence along life's pathway, as the music of that word falls from our lips. Poetry has wreathed it with the most fragrant garlands. Beauty and wealth have pressed it to their lips with all the silent eloquence of love. Care and disappointments, it is true, have sometimes fled from it to seek a refuge in that deceptive web of enchantment. The arch seducer and opposer of all that is pure and holy in mankind.

This smiling deceiver has made the customs of our social life, and the genial habits of the domestic circle his servants; he addresses young men in the most seductive manner, and at times he gathers to his side all the force of wit, beauty, age, learning and high position. It it is then he argues with all the demon-like sophistry of a fallen spirit, his appeals are made at festival and political excitement, and in the gilded saloons of the wealthy, and in the lowest haunts of infamy and vice. Oh, young man, for the sake of the mother who loves you and has nurtured you, and the father who has watched over you, and for the hopes you cherish of earth and Heaven trust not yourself within the power of this tempter.

Society drugged into an appalling torpor, beholds with indifference the mightiest and noblest of its sons falling before his insidious arts. The history of this arch tempter no man can read without unutterable loathing and horror. That which is written forms the darkest and saddest chapter in the records of a fallen humanity, while that which is unwritten, which is stamped on the memory of the unhappy victims, will eventually startle the assembled millions of another world and darken the vaults of Heaven with horror.

The pathway of this deceiver has ever been strewn with blasted, haggard, filthy, riotous multitude, vocal with obscenity and blasphemy; the the ravings of despair and the songs of the delirious; bedewed with the tears of heart-broken wives and parents and half-starved children. Who can picture the grief of a despairing father, the tearful anguish of a mother, or the heart-breaking agony of a wife, as she gazes upon a man suffering under the torments of delirium tremens; his reason dethroned, his memory gone, his imagination peopled with demons, his nerves quivering and crawling, while the poor sufferer pleads for the intoxicating bowl with all the anguish of terror and despair.

Alcohol is a poison. You need but to open any medical book that treats of poisons, and you will find this classed among a list too numerous to mention. The testimony of science is clear and unequivocal. It unfolds to us the fact that alcohol is created by fermentation, or putrefaction, and not by distilation. And when taken in a concentrated form and in large quantities it often destroys life instantaneously. Received into the stomach in smaller quantities and in a more diluted state it acts directly upon the stomach as an irritant, precisely like arsenic and cantharides. The fact that a small quantity of arsenic may be taken daily for years without producing any sensible effect, does not prove that it is not the nature of arsenic to poison. A man might burn a part of his body slightly every day, and the reciprative energy of his system might heal it again, and under such a process he might live a hundred years, but that would not prove that fire when applied to the human body is not a powerful agent to destroy its organization, and finally produce death.

(To be continued.)

INSTRUCTION.

All Christian gifts and graces come from the Holy Spirit. Different measures of grace and means of influence are bestowed upon different individuals, but always for a wise purpose. In bestowing miraculous powers upon the apostles and first teachers of Christianity, in calling them to their office, assigning them their fields of labor, fitting them for their work, and giving them success, the Holy Ghost has shown itself to be God, and with the Father, and the Son, and entitled to divine honors.

As God assigns to Christians their talents and opportunities, their condition and measure of influence as will best promote his glory and the good of his kingdom, there is no more reason for strife among them, as to which shall be the greatest than among the members of the human body.—The perfection and highest usefulness of each, consists not in his possessing the talents, exerting the influence, or doing the duties of another, but in rightly discharging his own. As all have a common interest, and are parts of one great whole, all should have a common sympathy, and by fidelity to Christ, in the discharge of appropriate duties, labor for the general good. JACOB PYSELL.

Accident, Md.

Selected by S. G. KELLER.

A SHORT SERMON.

"No one ever spoke to me of my salvation." A man who had been led to see his sinfulness and his fearful doom, being surprised that he was allowed to go on quietly, in impatience exclaimed: "No one ever spoke to me of my salvation." There were in the place many Christains who professed to long for the conversion of souls. If he had been starving some one would have given him bread. If he had been sick, some one would have sent for a physician. If he had been naked, some one would have clothed him. But his soul was wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked, yet no one pitied him. He was blamed, he was shunned, but he was not treated like a fellow-creature, whose soul was exposed to eternal wrath, ought to be treated. Is there no one living near you that can say, "no one ever spoke to me of my salvation?" You talk about the weather and the crops, and births, accidents, and deaths, do you ever speak to any one of Jesus? Do you ever affectionately tell any one to flee from the wrath to come? If not, is it kind? is it faithful? Is it honest to your Christian profession? Does it accord with your prayers? Can you consistently pray for a revival of religion? Can you have any compassion for souls or any love for Christ? Never let any one die in your neighborhood or live there long, and be able to say, "no one ever spoke to me of my salvation." A tear, a sigh, a kind word, a pressure of the hand of Christian sympathy, a verse of the Bible, a page of pious reading, with the blessing of the Holy Spirit, may save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins.

THE SINGING CURE.

We can sing away our cares easier than we can reason them away. The birds are the earliest to sing in the morning; the birds are more without care than anything else. Sing in the evening. Singing is the last thing that robins do. When they have done their daily work—when they have flown their last flight, and picked up their last morsel of food, and cleansed their bills on a napkin of a bough, then on a top twig they sing one song of praise. I know they sleep sweeter for it. They dream music; for sometimes in the night they break forth in singing, and stop suddenly after the first note, startled by their own voice. Oh! that we might sing evening and morning, and let song touch song all the way through.

As I was returning from the country, the other evening, between six and seven o'clock, bearing a basket of flowers, I met a man who was apparently the tender of a mason. He looked brick and mortar all over. He had worked the entire day, and had the appearance of a man that would not be afraid to work. He was walking on with a light step, and singing to himself as he passed down the street, though he had been working all the day, and nearly the whole week. Were it not that my good thoughts always come too late, I should have given him a large allotment of my flowers. If he had not been out of sight when the idea occurred to me I should have hailed him and said:

"Have you worked all day?"

"Of course I have," he would have said.

"Are you singing?"

"Of course I am."

"Then take these flowers home and give them to your wife, and tell her what a blessing she has in you."

Oh! that we could put songs under our burdens. Oh! that we could extract the sense of sorrow by song. Then these things would not poison so much. Sing in the house. Teach your children to sing. When griefs arise, sing them down. Lift the voice of praise against cares. Praise God by singing that will lift you above trials of every sort. They sing in Heaven; and among God's people upon earth; song is the appropriate language of Christian feeling.

A DIFFICULT TEXT.

A man who had the reputation of being "mighty in the Scriptures," was once called upon for a contribution to a certain worthy object. He was a man of considerable means, but just then happened to be out of business. His reply was, "This is a noble cause. I wish I could give you something for it, but I cannot. I am not making any money, and can hardly manage to live on the interest of what I have salted down."

"Brother," said the solicitor, "we have often asked your opinion as to the meaning of some passage of Scripture, and never failed to get an intelligent answer. What does the Savior mean, when He says, "Sell that ye have, and give alms."

The good brother was silent. The passage seemed "hard to be understood" It would have cost him a hundred dollars to have explained it satisfactorily, and the applicant was obliged to leave without either exposition or money.

This text deserves careful study. It certainly means something, and those who are continually investing, and buying, adding farm to farm, and house to house, and laying up treasures on earth, and all the while contriving to keep themselves poor, and pinched, and penurious; and pleading their indebtedness as an excuse for their covetousness; would do well to examine this Scripture most carefully, as it is one of those words which Christ has spoken and which, whether received or rejected, shall judge us "in the last day —The Christian.

NO PERSON IS WITHOUT INFLUENCE.

Some persons fall discouraged on the highway of life, because they cannot be this or that great or eminent person. Why not be willing to be themselves? No person who ever lived, or ever will live, is without influence. Why not make the most of that? Since you cannot grasp that which you wish, why let what you have slip through your fingers? No person in the world is exactly like you. You have your own faults, but you have also your own excellencies individual to yourself. Give them air. Because you are not a poet, should you not be a good merchant? Because you cannot go to college, should you therefore foreswear the alphabet? Because you cannot build a palace, should you not rejoice in your own humble roof, and that because it is your own? Will not the sun also shine into your window if you do not obstinately persist in shutting it out? If you cannot have a whole hothouse full of flowers, may you not have one sweet rose?

Truth is immortal; the sword cannot pierce it, fire cannot consume it prisons cannot incarcerate it, famine cannot starve it.

For the Pilgrim.

God's Spirit Striving With Man.

"What is man that thou art mindful of him, and the Son of man that thou visitest him." Psalm 8: 4.

When David considered the heavens, the works of the fingers of God, the moon and the stars which he had made and ordained, he was led to say, what is man? If we contrast man with God we are constrained to exclaim, "Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him!" For although God made man in His own image and likeness, and pronounced him in common with all that He had made good, yea very good, yet has the effect of his disobeying the word of God, destroyed all God's likeness and image in him, and he is of himself incapible of doing anything but evil Having in him the elements of self destruction, and if left alone will work out his own destruction both soul and body, and that God in His greatness, surrounded with the holy intelligences in Heaven, should condescend to be mindful of such a creature, who made himself such as he is by his own act, is a marvel wonderful to contemplate.

God is mindful of man not only in remembering that he is in existence somewhere in the vast domain of his creation, but he visits him to do him good, not only by giving him the light of the sun, moon and stars but also by giving him fruitful seasons, that he may have food for his support, and raiment for shelter and protection, &c. He visited man by His own dear Son, whom he made a little lower than the angels by reason of suffering, that He might bring him back to God, from whence he has, and is by sin departed. And now by His Holy Spirit does he visit man, that he may convince him of sin, of righteousness and of a judgment to come, to lead him to truth and holiness, that he may by repentance, faith and obedience, he may be converted and born again by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever, that he may have eternal life. Oh the condescending love and goodness of God, in thus being mindful of man, and so to visit him.

What is man when not influenced by the visits of the Holy Spirit of God, working in him to do good? Of himself he is incapable of doing any good. If there be any trace of good in man, it is the Spirit of God working in him, and if that trace be found in the untutored heathen, it is the Spirit of God working in him, and when the working of that Spirit is obeyed in the light of revelation, it will work until it brings the soul back to God, sanctified and cleansed, purified through the blood of Christ, which in His visit to man was shed for the remission of sins, and now purifies the soul from all sin.

God is mindful of man, and visits him by the strivings of His Spirit to effect his salvation, and deliverance from sin. God declares He will not always do it. "My Spirit shall not always strive with man," says God, then hearken to-day, while you hear his voice, harden not your heart. When the strivings of the Spirit ceases, when he visits man no more, then is he forsaken of God. And Oh the impending doom, who will or can indure it? In illustration I will here give a case from the City News column in the Baltimore American of January 24th 1872.

An Illnatured Individual.—There appeared at the Southern Police Station, yesterday afternoon, a wretched specimen of what was formerly a man, but now a wreck of humanity, and requested lodgings until this morning. When asked if he had no home, he replied, what! do I want a home? The street is my home. What's the use of being respectable? You'll only be cheated by your friends, they'll rob you, but if you are a poor man and have no home or friends, it matters but little how you live."

"But, said Capt. Delanty, if you had a family, would it not be a pleasure for you to go to your home when the work of the day is over, and spend the night with your wife and children? Home—wife and children, I had them all, savagely answered the wretched man. My wife proved false to me and my two sons were drowned. I resorted to drink, and here I am to-day without a care for the future, and I would not have come here to-day for shelter, only I fear that it will rain or snow to-night, and my clothing is too thin for me to lie out of doors."

"It was suggested by Capt. Delanty that something might be done to better the condition of the man, but the subject of the remark turned about and sullenly refused any aid whatever, remarking that he was happy in his rags and misery, and had no desire of bettering his situation. Capt. Delauty then informed him that he would be confined in the Station House until this morning, when he would be committed to the Alms House as a vagrant. The outcast replied, I don't care where you send me. With this he suffered himself to be locked up for the night."

Dear reader, here is the picture of one with whom the Spirit ceased to strive. Look at it and draw your own conclusions. He has had perhaps as fair and bright prospects before him in earlier life, as you now have. He says he had a home, a wife and two sons. Do you not suppose when he led that woman to the hymenial altar, to make her his wife, he was as happy as yourself, when you did the same thing. Alas what is he now? Look at him and learn to be truly wise. You live in the same world of temptation, and are of the same human nature. He refused to be led by the Spirit of God when trials and temptations came. His temptation was his wife's unfaithfulness to him, and the drowning of his two sons. He says, "I resorted to drink, and here I am to-day without a care for the future." This a true specimen of a man forsaken of the Spirit of God.

You may flatter yourself with the thought that this is an extreme case both in the trials and final result, and that similar cases rarely occur, &c. Be not deceived, dear friends; there is nothing in this man's trials and temptations that could have harmed him if he had suffered himself to be led by the Spirit of God, which, no doubt, visited him again and again, and did not forsake him until he hardened his heart, and shut Him out, and drove Him away by strong drink. When David's child died he could by the Spirit of God say: he is gone and will not return to me; but I must go to him. And so might this man have been made to realize. And in reference to the alleged unfaithfulness of his wife; that may have been, and it may not have been, true. When the devil gets the control of man, he is a liar and the father of all lies; and if he can prevail on the husband to believe she is unfaithful, though she be as innocent as an angel, the result will be the same as though she were guilty. But suppose it was even as the man said, was that a reason why he should thus destroy himself. The Spirit of God would have taught him that God is true, if all men be liars; and that he may be saved if others are lost. Sin is congenial to the depraved human nature, and its way is downward, and once it has an inlet no one can tell where it leads to, and if the Spirit takes his sad flight then, O, wretched man that he is, who, oh who, can deliver him from the body of such a death. He is helpless, past feeling. The man in question had no desire even to have his physical condition bettered, while his soul is dead within him and will only realize its condition when death and hell must deliver up the dead that are within them.

Man need not go as far in degradation and sin to lose his soul's salvation as this man has gone. God not only visited man in delivering onto him a great salvation through Christ Jesus by the gospel, but He visits him by the Spirit to convince him of the necessity of obeying the scriptures in order to obtain salvation. Faith in the Gospel alone will not save the soul. "He that believes and is baptized shall be saved" is the promise of the Son of God; and outside of this He gave no promise. Now witness the thousands upon thousands who say they believe, and live a moral and respectable lives, and when they die their personal friends expect the preacher to comfort them in the belief that the deceased enjoys all the blessings of Christianity; yet they never were baptized on their own personal faith as the scriptures require, and some seem to manifest no more concern about it than this wretched man did in reference to his physical and moral condition. Some are candid enough to acknowledge that in years past they felt more or less on the subject, and had some trouble about it, &c., but they had learned to know it was only an outward sign or ceremony, and that if they had the inward work the outward sign was unnecessary; that water can never wash away sin, &c., &c. While the whole truth of the matter is, they by their disobedience to the truth, and readiness of mind to receive the false doctrine of the serpent, have barred out the Spirit of God and truth, and He visits them no more; and are not only as dead to the truth as this man is to all sense of honor and morality, but are given over to a reprobate (abandoned) mind to believe a lie.

This being the true, natural condition of man, the effect of the fall of Adam, whose nature is entailed upon all his posterity; yet wretched and deplorable as his condition is, the Lord is mindful of him and visits him to do him good. Many thanks to His holy name for His unspeakable love and mercy; and oh that we may heed His visits, and the day we hear His voice harden not our hearts, but hear and obey His voice and do His will. Do it now.

D. P. Sayler.

Infidelity.—He that saith he believeth that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and teacheth that obedience to the commands of said Son is not essential to our salvation is an infidel of the most dangerous stamp! An out and out infidel makes bare his bosom that he that runs may read who and what he is. But to mask the bosom in which burns the fires of infidelity, with a cloak of professed faith in Christ is truly satan "transformed into an angel of light"!—J. S. Flory.

Youth's Department.

For the Pilgrim.

GOING HOME.

"Will you come with me, my pretty one?"
I asked a little child—
Will you go with me and gather flowers?
She looked on me and smiled,
Then, in a low, sweet, gentle voice,
She said, I cannot come;
I must not leave this narrow path,
For I am going home.

But will you not? I asked again;
The sun is shining bright,
And you might twine a lily wreath
To carry home at night,
And I could show you pleasant things
If you would only come.
But still she answered as before,
No; I am going home.

But look, my child, the fields are green,
And near 'neath the leafy trees
Children are playing merrily,
Or resting at their ease.
Does it not hurt your tender feet
This stony path to tread?
Sometimes; but I am going home!
Once more she sweetly said.

My father bade me keep this path,
Nor ever turn aside;
The road which leads away from him
Is very smooth and wide,
The fields are fresh and cool and green;
Pleasant the shady trees;
But those around my own dear home
Are lovelier far than these.

I must not loiter on the road,
For I have far to go;
And I should like to reach the door
Before the Sun is low.
I must not stay; but will you not—
Oh will not you come too?
My home is vey beautiful,
And there is room for you.

I took her little hand in mine;
Together we went on;
Brighter and brighter o'er our path
The blessed sunbeams shone.
At length we saw the distant towers;
But ere we reached the gate,
The child outstripped my lingering feet,
Too overjoyed to wait
And, as she turned her radient face
Once more to bid me come,
I heard a chorus of glad songs,
A burst of welcome Home.

My dear young readers of the PILGRIM, I have selected the above beautiful lines for you, because they breathe such lessons of warning and encouragement, and harmonize so charmingly with Bible truths. The first voice seems to represent the voice of worldly influence, such as come from the vain, proud, and pleasure seekers. Do they not often say to you, "Come with us and gather flowers." Tell you "the sun is shining brightly," that is, enjoy your young lives in the sunshine or glare of sinful fashion and folly. Yes, "twine a lily-wreath to carry home at night," and they say we can "show you pleasant things if you would only come." And hear also the voice, "Look my child, the fields are green, children are playing merrily or resting at ease beneath the leafy trees." That is, they would have you walk in the bowers or places of sin because other children are there. But just listen to the other voice, which says to all these entreaties, "I am going home, therefore cannot leave the narrow path." Her "Father bade her keep this path nor ever turn aside." Why not? Because the road that leads away from Him is very smooth and wide." That is the broad road that leads to death, It seems to the vain and proud smooth and pleasant, but the road to our heavenly home they think rough and rugged. It may be so, but be assured it leads to a lovely home where flowers never fade.

It may, sometimes, hurt the pilgrim's feet to tread the stony path, but then we are going home. I hope you all, dear young readers, will heed the voice. "Oh, will not you come too? My hyom is very beautiful, and there is room for you." Yes there are "many mansions," room for all, all that are willing to tread the narrow way. Don't, oh for Jesus sake don't go out on the broad way that leads to ruin. Think of the 'distant towers" of that heavenly home. Think of those voices—"glad songs," outbursts of "welcome home." I hope there are many of my young readers that can say to the "charmer" no! no! I cannot leave the way that leads to my home. Fashion bids me come to her arms, but I must not go, pleasure smiles and invites me to her bowers, but nay, nay, I must not leave, the "kings highway" because I am going home. My Father bids me come, Jesus invites me to his embrace, angels beckon me on to heaven my home, Oh how pleasant to say, in youth, I am "going home," to give evidence in after life that you are "going home," and then to close your eyes in death with the last dying words, "going home," home to heaven, to God and Jesus Christ—blessed Savior!

J. S. Flory.

A TALK WITH OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

We will talk a little while to the young readers of the PILGRIM, and in doing so, we wish our conversation to be profitable, entertaining and instructive. As a subject we can think of no one just now better than that of prayer, or asking God for what we need, and the confidence we should have in Him.

The disciples once asked Jesus to teach them how to pray, and he did. His instructions you will find in the sixth chapter of Mathew. You, no doubt are all well acquainted with it, and you, perhaps, call it "Our Father," as that is the name often applied by children, but by older persons it is called the "Lord's Prayer."

Now children what does this prayer ask for? Does it say give us all we ask for. Does it say give me everything I wish? Oh no! It only asks for what we need. "Give us this day our daily bread." We need daily bread, and that is all it asks for, anything more is not strictly necessary to keep us alive. Jesus lived by bread alone, and if he did, we should be satisfied with it too. We should pray only for what we need. The rest of the prayer teaches us to pray for what will make us good and prepare us to live in heaven, when our time comes to leave this world. It teaches us to pray God to forgive us our debts. Do we owe God? Yes boys and girls we do. We are indebted to him all the time, and can never pay all, but he has promised to forgive us all if we will only forgive our debtors. But the word debtor as used in this prayer, does not imply the idea that we generally have of a debtor. It properly means offenses or sins. If God would not forgive you your sins, you could never become fit subjects to enter heaven, and we hope none of our readers will ever let a day pass by without asking God to forgive their sins. But you must remember that if you ask God to forgive, you must be willing to forgive yourselves. "Forgive us our sins or offenses, as we are willing to forgive those who sin or offend us." Now boys and girls if your playmates offend you, and you are not willing to forgive them, you should not repeat this prayer, for you would be asking God to do what you are not willing to do yourself. And if you are not fit to ask God to pardon your sins, you are not good, and consequently not fit to die. We hope the young readers of the PILGRIM will think of these things. If you do wrong, which you do every day, we hope you will be willing to ask God to forgive, and if others have offended you, you will not let a day pass without a reconciliation in your own mind at least. There is nothing so lovely as a forgiving spirit, and the boy or girl in possession of it is fitted to enjoy life, and what is far better, Heaven.

In the beginning of our conversation we noticed that we should ask for what we need. We may not always know what we need or what is best for us.

"Thy will be done" is another sentence in this prayer. What does it mean? Why, that whatever God thinks best for us with that we should be satisfied. This is the way Paul prayed. He was in peril, in pain and in distress. He prayed that his sufferings might be abated, but when he found that it was the will of God that he should suffer, he was resigned to his lot. Here we see that the Lord did not grant the prayers of Paul who was a good man. This was not because the Lord did not love Paul, for he did, and had changed him from a wicked man into one of the best men that ever lived. We would have supposed that God would have heard his prayer and taken away his pain. But for some reason known only to God, it was best that he should suffer, and Paul ceased praying to have it taken away. God's grace was sufficient for him, and he was upheld and supported in his trials and afflictions. From this boys and girls may learn a useful lesson. If you are sick, lame, or blind, you should, like that good man, bear your trouble. You may ask God to relieve you of your sufferings, but if your prayer is not answered you should not lack confidence in God.—There is some good reason for it, or he would not have permitted it. So instead of praying "take away my sufferings," you should pray him to help you bear it, and "Thy will be done."

But, perhaps some boys and girls will say I don't like that, I want to have my own way, and be happy all the time. Of course that is what we all want, but it is not best for us to have all we want. We have known boys and girls to want things that would destroy their health, or indulge in things that would ruin their character, and they would complain very much to their parents because they would not grant their desires. Just so it is with God, we are all his children, and are apt to want and ask for things that He knows that we should not have. Therefore we should not expect him to give us everything we ask far. When we pray we should feel to utter truthfully "Thy will be done," and if he sees proper to not grant our requests we should not lose confidence in Him, for He will give us all that is for our good.

Our dear Savior prayed when he was in agony, shortly before he was nailed to the cross, "Father if it be possible let this cup pass from me." He knew all that he was to suffer, and it was his will to be released.—But what does he say? "Nevertheless, not my will but thine be done." It was God's will that he should suffer and he endured willingly. But afterwards we find angels came and ministered unto him, and gave him strength to endure his suffering.

Now, dear children, we hope you will learn from these things to put your trust in God, and be resigned to his will. We should have much more to say, but we may be too lengthy and weary you. We may talk with you soon again.

J. B. B.

Correspondence.

Dear Pilgrim: As this is the first Sabbath of the New Year, we are prompted to relate something of how we spent it. Part of the golden hours we were employed in perusing the contents of the first PILGRIM and Companion received in the New Year. What friendly admonitions from dear brethren and sisters, and also what soul-revivi g words of truth are found upon their well-filled pages.

At the appointed hour attended divine service at the school-house at Eldorado, about two and a half miles distant. Found a number of God's people that had assembled to receive the droppings of divine truth, and many more assembled shortly. We were touchingly addressed by our beloved brother, James A. Sell, from the portion of Scripture, "The Lord hath need of him:" Mark 11:3, latter clause. Propounded to us how necessary it was for us to be instrumental in the service of our blessed Master, daily, yea hourly and continually laboring in His moral vineyard, for He "hath great need of us." If we cannot be as eloquent as our ancient brother Paul, who from the pinnacles of lofty mountains proclaimed the glorious news of salvation to a lost and ruined world, we can, in the va'lies below, be instrumental in bearing the precious words of Jesus to those poor mortals, seemingly degraded, by speaking a few words of cheer to their benighted souls. Invite them to accompany us to the Lord's house and receive with us the droppings of the sanctuary. Especially we, who are in the prime of life, let us be "instant in season, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Be diligent in advancing the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ. But I am digressing. After services our pastor, with us, called to see our aged grandmother, who is almost eighty-four years of age. Is at times in reasonable health. Those of us who should be spared to such an advanced age, let us not bury our talents in the earth, but let us improve them to the best of our ability. Work while it is day, that we be not overtaken by the night of death ere our labor be completed, for the night of death is approaching when no man can work.

"Let us then be up and doing
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

E. R. S.

SOCIAL MEETING.

During the time that Bro. Calvert was laboring among us in the Red Bank branch for the upbuilding of Zion, we spent a Sabbath afternoon at the house of Bro. Robert and sister Susan Furgason, in company with their pleasant family and a few others invited on the occasion. We had some quite good singing which cheered us very much. And the reading of the Scripture was so instructive, then we had a very solemn and interesting exortation, which made our hearts flame and feel that we should all meet again, on the other side of the narrow stream of death, and we all felt that we would like to meet on the heavenly shore. Then we had a season of solemn prayer before a throne of grace. What tears there fell, I feel were bottled in Heaven, and they were not a few.

I think social seasons like these in the families of our brethren would always be interesting and benificial to both saint and sinner. "Neglect not then the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is."

J. P. HEIRIC.

Oakland, Pa.

CERRO GORDA, ILL., Feb. 6th, '72.

Dear Pilgrim: We held a series of meetings in our arm of the church, Cerro Gorda District, with good success, and much interest was awakened in the good cause. Twenty-two were added to the church by baptism. Eld. Robert Miller, of Ladoga, assisted by Eld. John Metzgar, of Clinton Co., Ind., were our chief speakers. Truly we enjoyed a feast of good things during these meetings.

QUERIES.

"And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elects sake those days shall be shortened."—Matt. 24:22.

"Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world why as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances."—Col. 3:20 Explanations desired through the PILGRIM.

In this connection, I would ask, why is it that our querist departments are so much neglected? The cry is going forth, more missionaries, more missionaries, and when a babe in Christ asks for information on some point through our periodicals, he has to despair for want of light,—and why? Because his query is not answered. I could readily overlook all this, if I was not aware that we have age, experience, and ability in the Church to meet all these wants. Now brethren, arise to a sense of your duty, and feed the babes on the sincere milk of the Word.

C. H. WALKER.

Berlin, Pa.

Dear Brother: Will you or some of the brethren give an exposition, through the PILGRIM, of the 2nd 3rd and 4th verses of the 5th chapter of the first Epistle General of John? An explanation desired.

SARAH A. WISLER.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Pyrmont, Ind.

Editor's Department.

CONTROVERSY.

Our object has been, and is yet, to avoid controversy as much as possible, but the other week, when our office was in a topsy turvy condition, on the reception of our new press, and our whole attention given to it, there was an article slipped in touching that sensitive subject "mode" in Feetwashing, and as a result, we have a number more controverting some of the ideas advanced therein. We committed a blunder by inserting it at this time, and to start up a train of controversy about it, would still be a greater one, therefore with due respect to our worthy contributors, we decline all, thus avoiding partiality. We hope our dear brethren will exercise a little patience with us, and also in regard to the subject of Feetwashing. Bro. Sayler informs us that the Committee chosen by last A. M. have made a pretty extensive search, and have now a report which will be read before the Elders of next A. M., and probably before the whole meeting. It will also be published in the PILGRIM if the Committee and A. M. think it prudent. Therefore we kindly drop the subject until after that time, as we think that the matter will be disposed of in such a manner as to give general satisfaction, and stop the necessity of any further controversy, as most our brethren of both views can rest assured that they will have no measures forced upon them, denying them of the exercising of that liberty of conscience which God has vouchsafed to all.

Brethren, when we look around us and see the world lying in darkness, and untold thousands yet spiritually unborn, it should cause us to forget these hair-splitting questions, and devote our energies and talents to the conversion of the world.

PERSONALITIES.

Some of our brethren take exceptions to some of our contributors on account of being too personal, and manifesting an uncharitable disposition towards other denominations. This custom of emulating a long string of outbreaking sins, and then heaping it upon some particular sect or denomination, is an unhealthy process of reasoning, and is not destined to convert the world. Neither have we a right to judge any Church by its exceptions, but by the principles held forth. All Churches have members that dishonor their profession, therefore such members should not be made the basis of judgment. Brethren and sisters, let us fight under the glorious banner of love, and be careful that the slandering tongue is not ours. We are accomplishing a good work, a glorious work, and we have the happy assurance that our God has made the humble PILGRIM an instrument in calling a number of souls from darkness to light. God be praised.

MARRIAGE NOTICES.

We are glad that our brethren are seeing the propriety of having marriages published in our periodicals. There are several of our young friends write us, that they never took any notice of our papers until they commenced publishing marriage notices. In looking for them, they saw other things tha interested them, and were thus led from one thing to another until they became so interesting that they told father they could not do without them. Thus, sometimes, small things produce great results.

One great object should be to get our children interested in the proceedings of the church, and in good religious reading. This we can do, by giving them such information as will directly interest them. There is no people whose children have a more extensive acquaintance and mutual interest for each others welfare, as those of the Brethren. Therefore we need not wonder that they are anxious to know with whom they cast their lot in life's voyage, and we do think that they should be gratified in this respect as well as in all other things that are just and proper. We hope our ministering brethren will note these things and report those on whom they pronounce the connubial blessing.

VALUABLE HINTS.

THINGS TO BE ASHAMED OF.

Parents who indulge their children in vulgar habits when alone, and then chide and complain of them being especially bad, when strangers are present.

Children who are allowed by parents to speak in, when older persons are engaged with them in conversation.

To have the family Bible hid away beneath a pile of trashy newspapers, novels, and fictitious books; so that it is difficult to get at, if the minister happens to call.

For the father to be unable to preside at the family altar, or to invoke the blessings at table, before meals are taken.

Take a back seat in church, be especially attracted to some object across the house, and when services are over, find fault with the preachers discourse, because it lacked energy.

THINGS THAT ARE DISGUSTING.

Parent who make their children the subject of conversation, and praise them in their presence, in the company of strangers.

Children who are taught by their parents to assume habits, and customs, and to aspire after positions in advance of their age.

A house where contention and strife are the ruling elements, and where peace and happiness are strangers.

To have the family Bible filled with photographs and other pictures, and then laid in front for exhibition, when gay friends are expected to call.

To be over sanctimonious when away from home, while engaged in family service; using written prayer for display.

G. B.

BAD WORK.

We feel to offer an apology for the appearance of our several last PILGRIMS. This is not to be attributed to our new Press, but to our inexperience in setting it up. Never having worked with a power press, nor saw one set up, we had considerable difficulty in setting it up, and did not succeed at first, in getting everything in its proper place, but we are now happy to announce that bad print is about over, and henceforth our readers can look for first class work.

Presses are generally set up by the manufacturers, but the distance being great, and the expenses heavy, we concluded to risk it ourselves, and after a series of experimenting we have finally succeeded.

PERSONAL.

D. G. VARNER. Your money was received, do not note anything under 50 cents.

ELD. SAMUEL MURRAY. Your notice of series of meetings, came too late for insertion.

JOHN ZUCK. We lose it. All in one pack now.

E. R. S. Not in a hurry about it. Back Nos. are sent.

ERROR. In John Wilt's obituary, PILGRIM No. 2. It should be the 21st instead of 25th.

Also in PILGRIM No. 3, Marriage notice should read "by Josiah Beeghly," instead of Joseph.

C. H. WALKER. Jacob Musser's paper is sent regularly. We agree with you, that some of our articles are too lengthy, and would kindly ask our contributors to study brevity, as short articles like short sermons, make good friends.

WM. B. SOUTH. The $2.50 was received, and your PILGRIM is marked paid for 1872. Cannot tell how the mistake occurred.

QUERIES. There are a number of queries delayed for want of time to give them the attention demanded,—will appear in our next.

JOSEPH RITTENHOUSE. S. C. R's. PILGRIM is marked paid—all right now. Please accept thanks for your trouble—Books will be sent as soon as we get some more on hand.

LITERARY NOTICES.

THE ALDINE for February is a masterpiece of typographical art. Its greatest achievements are in its illustrations which, for life and beauty, are beyond competition. The frontiecepiece "Zekle's Courtin" would seem to class itself among the ludicrous, but old times and scenes are so vividly portrayed that we are forced to call it instructive and beautiful. We next have "The Song Sparrow," "The Monks Oak," "Music in the Alps," "An Old Mill in Wyoming Valley," "Manifest Destiny," "The Truants," and the "Adriondac Scenery," "Morning on the Ausible, with some smaller plates of rare beauty. Published by James Sutton & Co., New York.

—THE GOSPEL VISITOR, for Jan. is on our table, and as usual, full of interesting and carefully selected matter. It is now in its twenty-first year, and according to the old adage, can speak for itself.

—THE CHILDREN'S PAPER for January is before us. It is a pretty little illustrated sheet published monthly by H. J. Kurtz of Dayton, Ohio. We love its appearance, but think it contains too much selected matter. There is no necessity for this, as we have writers enough to supply a dozen of such papers. We hope the friends of the juveniles will contribute to its columns, and thus make it more original.

Please announce that we intend holding our District Meeting, of the North East District of Ohio, on Tuesday 7th of May, 1872, at the big meeting house of the Mohecan church, Wayne Co., Ohio, five miles South of West Salem, on the Atlantic and Great Western Rail Road, and 12 miles northwest of Wooster, on the Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road. We fondly hope that every branch composing this District will be represented, and especially those branches that did not represent themselves heretofore. Those coming by the Atlantic and Great Western, will please notify brother Jacob Garver at Lattasburg, who will see that conveyances will be furnished to convey all from West Salem to place of meeting. Those coming by Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road, will please notify the undersigned at New Pittsburg, who will see that they be conveyed to place of meeting. By order of the church.

GEORGE WORST.

DIED.

GLASS.—At Accident, Alleghany county, Md., January 30th, 1872, WILLIAM EMERY GLASS, son of brother Joseph, and sister Polly Glass, aged 3 years, 2 months and 14 days Funeral exercises by Jeremiah Beeghly and the writer, from Mark 10: 14, 15, 16. The basis of writer's discourse was on the 15th verse.

[Companion please copy.]

JOSIAH BEEGHLY.

FORNEY —In Berlin Branch, Somerset county, Pa., January 25th, 1872, brother J. S. FORNEY, aged 28 years, 2 months and —days. Occasion improved by brethren J. D. Trostle and J. Brown, of Md., from the words of Paul to the Philippians, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." C. H. WALKER.

WILEY.—On the 3rd of February, 1872, in Mechanicsburg, Lower Cumberland Church, Pa., sister SUSAN WILEY, aged about 64 years. She had lived a single life. Funeral services by the brethren from Matt. 24: 44. M. MILLER.

MITCHEL—Fell asleep in Jesus, near Hollidaysburg, Pa., Jan. 12th, 1872, dear little James, infant son of G. S. and Hannah MITCHEL, aged 3 months and 2 days.

He was a healthy child until more than a week previous to his death he was attacked with violent vomiting. Shortly after the disease settled in the brain. A physician was called for who thought the child free of danger. His last visit was on Friday. He had left the house but a short time when, at 4 P. M., the angel spirit took its flight. The day following, at 2:30 P. M., the lifeless remains were conveyed to the Brethren's place of interment and consigned to the silent tomb, to await the resurrection of the dead. How sad for these dear parents to part with their infant babe, and these brothers and sisters to be bereft of their darling brother. We never witnessed a more distressed scene. But Christ hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The icy hand of death has previously visited these dear parents and bereft them of loving children, but they have the consolation that their darling lambs are now enjoying the presence of Christ and his holy angels in the glorious abode above. Weep not dear parents, for you have hope of meeting dear little Jimmie, with those who have gone before, in that Celestial City, the City of our King, where angels and archangels dwell, sounding the trumpet, and singing sweet hallelujahs to God and the Lamb.

Dear Jimmie we will not weep for thee,
For we know thou art gone to rest.
Thou art gone to dwell with the angels above
In the glorious home of the blest.

E. R. STIFLER.

STIFLER.—Fell asleep in Jesus, in the Duncansville branch of the church, at his residence near Duncansville, Pa., Dec. 11th, 1871, brother JACOB H. STIFLER, aged 65 years, 7 months and 17 days. Disease, dropsy.

The subject of this notice was born in Huntingdon county, Pa., April 24th, 18[illegible]6. About fourteen years previous to his death he was severely injured by his horses running away, throwing him from his wagon, which passed over him, and he was brought almost to the brink of the grave. A year previous to his death he contracted a severe cold, from which he suffered very much Ten weeks previous to his departure from this world, the physicians pronounced his disease dropsy. Four physicians were called, but they could only relieve, and not cure him. He had rather neglected to attend to the good part which Mary had chosen, until Sept. 29th, when he cast himself into the arms of Jesus, and was led into the watery grave near by his house, and buried with Christ by baptism. On the evening of Oct. 9th a lovefeast was held at his house that he might fully obey the Lord in all His ordinances, blameless. At this time his pain was intense, and really beyond description. Many who witnessed it said they never beheld more intense suffering, and yet he bore it all with Christian resignation. Nearly all the time he was obliged to sit erect in his arm chair or upon the lounge. Seldom, for several weeks, dared he sink into slumbers. The pain was so intense that it had some effect upon his memory. For nearly two days before his death he was unable to speak, or recognize his friends, but when his end was near he smiled and then fell asleep only to awake in the resurrection morn. His body was conveyed to the Brethren's graveyard near by and placed beneath the cold clay. Many friends paid their last tribute of respect by following his remains to their last resting place. Only one brother and sister could be present to witness the solemn scene. At the time of his death his other remaining brother was lying very ill. His father, mother, two brothers and one sister, had already crossed to the other side. He has left a dear companion, many relatives and friends who deeply feel his departure. If he is lost to us here, we hope he is gained in Heaven. He expressed a great willingness to depart and be with the Father. Funeral sermon by brother J. W. Brumbaugh from Rev. 14: 13. We trust that his suffering and patient endurance here has worked for him a far more and eternal weight of glory beyond this vale of tears. Since we are deprived of his society here may we all prepare to meet him in that blessed abode where we can always enjoy the presence of God and His holy angels.

E. R. STIFLER.

MARRIED.

FURNEY—McHENRY.—On the evening of the 6th inst., at Double Pipe Creek, Md., by Eld. D. R. Sayler, Mr. ALFRED FURNEY to Miss KATE McHENRY, both of Carrol County, Md.

D. R. SAYLER.

BENEDICK—STONER. — On the 18th of January, by the undersigned at his residence, SAMUEL BENEDICK to Miss ANNIE A. STONER, all of Franklin county, Pa. JOHN ZUCK.

WHITMORE—NEWCOMER.—On February 1st, by Eld D. P. Sayler, at his residence, Double Pipe Creek, Md., Mr. GEORGE R. WHITMORE, of Frederick county, and Miss MARY J. NEWCOMER, of Carroll county, Md.

WITTER—RASP.— On December 14th, 1871, by Eld. John Shank, SAMUEL WITTER, and LEAH RASP, all of Franklin county, Pa.

FROUNFELTER—HAWS.—On the same day, by the same, SAMUEL D. FROUNFELTER to ANNA C. HAWS, all of Washington county, Md.

MAUGENS—DONELSON.—On February 1st, 1872, by the same, JOHN C. MAUGENS, of Washington county, Md. to MARGARET DONELSON, of Franklin Co., Pa.

GORDEN—MAUGENS.—On the same day, by the same, JAMES C. GORDEN, of Franklin Co., Pa., to ALICE A. MAUGENS, of Washington Co., Md.

MOHLER—WISE.On the same day, by the same, brother DANIEL MOHLER. of Clinton Co., Ind., to sister KATE WISE of Franklin Co., Pa.

MONEY LIST.

John Shank,	.50
C. Newcomer,	2.50
A. H. Baum,	2.50
Isaac Etter,	1.00
Moses Miller,	1.25
Joseph Widders,	1.25
John A. Clement,	5.00
John Zuck,	2.70
D. F. Good,	5.00
D. Bosserman,	10.75
Wm. Angle,	9.00
Isaac Book,	1.25
Jesse Calvert,	2.50
Eli Beagle,	7.50
Martin Campbell,	.50
Joseph Connel,	3.75
Annie E. Nead,	1.25
A. L. Bowman,	1.25
Joseph Rittenhouse,	3.40
Wm. H. Miller,	4.50
E. W. Stoner,	1.15
Jacob Troxel,	12.60

THE ITALIAN OR SIGURIAN BEE.

Never until the introduction of the Italian bee on this continent have there been such marks of improvement in rural economy, that at this time so greatly thronges the public attention of bee-keepers in America. A species of bees that so greatly excels the common native bee, in contrast of color and graceful form, which renders them objects of interest to every person of taste. They being less inclined to sting is one grand feature which they possess, that even the inexperienced may handle them with perfect ease. The queens being more prolific, swarms issue earlier and more frequently, thus taking the advantage of the honey season, like a school boy when taking his first lessons, they begin to swarm at the beginning of the season. These bees being more constant workers, they are able to produce double the amount of honey in one season than the native bees.

The Italian bee was first discovered amid the Alps in Switzerland and portions of northern Italy, where the tall, snow-capped mountains prevented their passage over them. Captain Baldenstein, who discovered them, carried the first colony across the Alps in 1813. From that time up to 1860 they were tested by German apiarians and others, who recommends them a success and far superior to the natives. In 1860 they were brought to America, and by careful investigation they were found to fully sustain their European reputation, and since their introduction here the demand for them is becoming very great, while the native bee for years have been gradually decreasing in merits like so many chickens which have been kept on one farm for many years have, by in and in breeding degenerated from their former degree of prolificness to a more worthless and unprofitable race. This can never be said of the Italian bee so long as such an interest is manifested in crossing them with their own species in order to keep them to the highest degree of purity.

E. J. WORST.

New Pittsburg, Pa.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT. A sad railroad accident is reported to have occurred in Lehigh Valley, Pa., between Mud Run and Rockport. The accident was caused by a broken rail. The engine and two first carriages passed over safely, while the others struck against the end of the broken rail and was precipitated down a fearful chasm forty feet deep. Eight are reported killed and sixteen wounded.

REV. THEO. L. CUYLER, D. D., Presbyterian, is brought before church council for the offence of inviting Miss Smiley, an orthodox Quaker minister, to preach in his pulpit. Woman preaching is a contradiction of Presbyterian usage and directly prohibited by Presbyterian law. Well, indeed we cannot see that the doctor did wrong, especially if the Quakeress preached the truth.

TO AGENTS.

The following annexed list of good books we offer as premiums for subscribers for the PILGRIM. They are all excellent works, intended as a guide to self-improvements and free from sectarian bias. If our children were furnished with such books to read in connection with the Bible, instead of novels and trashy newspapers—many might be saved from a felon's cell and a drunkards hell. We will send post paid any book in the list to all who will raise the price annexed, in subscriptions. We allow 10 per cent or 12½ cents for each subscriber at $1.25 and 15 cents for each one at $1.50. The books will be sent as soon as the money is received for the subscriptions intended for premium.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding. $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	MAIL	STATIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 10	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 58
5 17	8 23	Long Siding	8 49	4 20
6 09	8 24	McConnellstown	8 34	4 13
6 05	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18
Le 7 20	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 17	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 41	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 34	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 11
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	11 25
Arabesque plain,	1.00
Turkey morocco,	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,	5 50

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 13, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family	$7 00
" Superfine	7.50
" fancy brands	8.00
" Rye	5.00
CORN MEAL	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN	.80
RYE	1.05
OATS	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands	$7.25
" Family	6.85
" Extra	6.65
" Lowgrades	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel	1.50
" Hill "	1.45
" Winter red "	1.50
CORN	.50
OATS	.38
RYE	.85
BARLEY	.65

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

GREAT CHANCE FOR GENTS.

Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address Stonce Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.

Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the 'Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. 1f. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address,

DANIEL KAGARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh. & Co.

Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa

Weekly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, FEBRUARY 20, 1872. NO 8

ESSAYS.

FOR WHAT ARE YOU WAITING.

BY GRACE MELBOURNE.

For what are you waiting, my sister?
As you journey through life 's vale of tears,
You are wasting the glorious sunshine,
In youth it most brightly appears;
O! why stand you idle and waiting?
Your hands have a work to perform,
Your Master will come, are you ready,
And sheltered from every rude storm?

For what are you waiting, my sister?
The journey is toilsome and long,
What have you accomplished to brighten
The path for the numberless throng?
All of them your brothers and sisters,
And heirs to their six feet of sod;
All erring and wandering and falling,
Yet journeying onward to God.

For what are you waiting, my sister?
The great things in life may not be
The star that so brightly shall glisten
For you o'er the mystical sea.
There are deeds to be done without waiting,
Each day in the journey of life,
And the mind that looks after the small things
Is the one that aids most in the strife.

For what are you waiting, my sister?
The morning for you dawneth bright.
O! work while the day is before you,
You soon may be buried in night;
Reach out to the fallen and fainting
A hand ever ready to aid,
Speak softly and cheeringly to them,
But never in coldness upbraid.

For what are you waiting, my brother?
I see you are waiting in vain,
For others are working in patience,
And reaping and binding the grain.
O! when they are gathered, and empty
You stand at the wide open gate,
While others are carrying the bundles
You will murmur, "O! why did I wait?"

For the Father keeps watch o'er his children,
And he knows who have brought in the grain,
His voice will be sad when he tells you
"I fear you have waited in vain."
O! go while the harvest is ready
And work with a hearty good will:
The eyes of companions are on you,
Why alone are you idle and still?

For what are you waiting my brother?
He who would be first in his place,
And join in the song of the workers,
Drinks deep at the fountain of grace.
Go aid in the work that's before you,
Perchance you'll be hindered by rain,
Lest when by the gate He will tell you,
"I fear you have waited in vain."

False happines renders men stern and proud, and that happiness is never communicated. True happiness renders them kind and sensible, and that happiness is always shared.

Selected by Moses Miller.

CHRIST A SERVANT.

BY C. SPEAR.

"Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased; I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles." Matt. 12: 18.

This word is applied to the Savior in ten instances. It is the same word that is used for slave; but then a servant differs materially from a slave, for the one performs the work assigned to him with the concurrence of his own will, but the other must fulfil his task whether he will or not. His was absorbed in that of his master, without a right of calling it in question. Of course we are not to view our Savior in that sense, for though he came to perform the will of the Father, yet there was a perfect harmony between them, and such a union as the world never has seen in any instance whatever. The motto is taken from a passage in Isaiah quoted by our Lord himself. This whole subject may be embraced under three heads.

I. A servant must not create his message.

II. He must be properly qualified for his work.

III. He must do his duty whether his message is received or not.

1. A servant must not create his message, Jesus said, "For I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will, that of all which He hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." When standing before Pilate, in the Judgment hall, he said, "to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." The message of this servant was prepared for him long before he came into the world. And what a message! It was full of love and tenderness to the human family; full of grace and truth. "God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son, not to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." 'Herein is love.' The universe is crowded with proofs of the benevolence of God, but here is a proof that outweighs them all! How much he loved us, we can never know; we have no line with which to fathom, no standard with which to compare; but he so loved us that He gave His only begotten Son that the world through Him might be saved. Such, then, was the message which this servant brought to man.

2. A servant must be properly qualified for his work. And how eminent were the qualifications of this servant of God! "He knew what was in man." He could weigh every motive, and see every desire within the chambers of the soul. Therefore he could penetrate every heart, reveal every hidden plan, and adapt His instructions to the mass of minds by which he was surrounded. To the ignorant he could impart knowledge; to the wayward, stability; to the mourner, consolation; to the despairing, hope His nature was sweet; His manners humble; His words wise; His comportment grave, His questions deep; His reproofs severe and charitable; His pity great and merciful. His qualifications are admirably and beautifully express in the tender language connected with our motto: "A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till He send forth judgment unto victory" Bishop Pearce says, "His expression means that He shall be so gentle as not to hurt even that which is of itself ready to perish. The Jews used flax, as we now do cotton, for candles, or in lamps. This, a little before it is quite extinguished, gives more smoke than flame, and, therefore, this sense seems a proper one." How much tenderness is comprised in these few words as applied to the servant of God! "He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds."

3. The servant must perform his duty, whether his message is received or not. This is so obvious that a few remarks only will be necessary. And what a variety of incidents in the life of this Servant, illustrative of this point, could we bring, if our limits would permit. We see him going on from day to day in the discharge of his duty. No obstacle retarding him. Plans were formed by his enmies and difficulties presented, but he heeded them not. At the very commencement of his ministry "he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up for to read. The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted." And we are told "All they in the synagogue were filled with wrath, and rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong. But he, passing through the midst of them, went his way." At another time "the Jews took up stones to stone him." Finally, they brought the cross, the cruel nails, and the soldiers, and yet was faithful to the last, and, even in the agonies of death, he prayed, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." There is great moral truth connected with our subject which must not be overlooked; for it is a part of the message of this servant to the world: "Whosoever be chief among you, let him be your servant." What a message for the ambitious to receive! What! is that the way to be great, first to become a servant? Is that the road to true greatness? Then what becomes of the Alexanders, the Hannibals, and the Napoleons? They are the least among men, for they aspired to universal conquest. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city." How slowly the world learns the great essential truths of Christianity! How desirous men are to lower its standard to their own narrow views and sordid feelings. But this cannot be done. The mind must be brought up to the standard; that will never be brought down to the mind. Christianity came to elevate man; and it does this by teaching him humility as the first lesson. "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Men are led away by show. They are always ready to pay homage to wealth, fame, and honor. These are the Gods they worship. But he who would resemble this servant must renounce them all, and enter the school of Christianity. It was said of him, "He shall not strive nor cry; neither was any man to hear his voice in the street.' He was to pass unostentatiously through the world, and leave his works to bear their own testimony. So, if we would be like him, we must be content to pass through life in an humble and quiet manner, without ostentation, without show, and without parade. In closing, we cannot but admire the mercy, love and goodness of God in sending His Son in "the form of a servant." It is, indeed, a spectacle for the universe to behold and admire. He came in the condition of a poor, despised, rejected man. He came to lay down his life for an alienated world. Oh, what manner of love is this!

"Was it for crimes that I had done
He groaned upon the tree!
Amazing pity! grace unknown!
And love beyond degree!

JUSTIFYING FAITH.

BY JOHN P. STAMY.

For as much as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which they believed, it seems good to me also having some knowledge of the Scriptures, to write unto thee an article on justifying faith.

In the first place, faith may be said to be a dependence on the veracity of another. Thus truth is called faith because it relies upon a promise. Faith in the propriety of expression is an assent on account of the veracity of the speaker. Accordingly, divine faith is a firm assent of the mind to things upon the authority of Divine revelation. But in order to do justice to the subject of faith, and to reconcile the apostles we must divide, or in other words distinguish it into four kinds. Namely, Historical, Temporary, Faith of Miracles, and Justifying, or Saving Faith.

Historical Faith, is a speculative knowledge of, and bare assent to the truth revealed in the Scriptures. Of this kind, the apostle James writes in the 2d chapter of his epistle, from the 17th to the 24th verses. Even "Devils believe and tremble." They are fully persuaded that there is a God, and that He shall be their judge, as they acknowledge in Matt. 8th chapter and 29th verse.

Temporary Faith, together with the knowledge of, and assent to revealed truth, has likewise in it an approbation of, and joy in receiving and hearing those truths But this joy arises from some worldly consideration, it soon vanishes and comes to nothing. Of this kind of Faith, our Savior speaks in the parable of the sower: "They received it in stony ground," or places and it produced joy. So now, people hear the word with joy, and understand it; assent to, and gladly consider and approve of it. It springs up and becomes visible, or in other words makes an outward profession and reformation; yet have they not root within themselves, but endure for a while. But because it wants the soil of a sincere heart, and true affections, firm and fixed resolutions, and habitual dispositions of grace; it soon withers and dies. They have some good purposes and desires, but are soon overpowered by unmortified corruption and the force of temptation. For when tribulation, or persecution ariseth, because of words, by and by they become offended, then stumble, and finally fall off from all their former professions of religion.

The Faith of Miracles, is a firm assent of the mind to some particular promise concerning any miraculous event, which if performed by it, is called an active miraculous faith of which our Savior speaks in Matt. 17th chap. 20th verse. The Apostle Paul also speaks of it in 1 Cor. 13th chap. 2nd verse. But if it be wrought upon us it is called a passive miraculous faith. Thus the lame man had a firm, persuasive mind that Paul and Barnabas were able to cure him. Acts 14th chap. 9th verse. But, Oh! my beloved brethren, these Faiths are far short of that Faith that Paul says produces justification. This Faith was typified by the children of Israel in their looking upon the serpent of brass. For our Savior says, John 3: 14, 15, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Justification is either Legal or Evangelical.

Legal justification implies a full acquittal from charges, upon the ground of innocency.

Evangelical Justification implies the pardon of sin, upon the ground of Christ's atonement. We cannot be justified before God on the ground of innocency; because we have broken His holy law, and were it not for Divine mercy, one transgression would bring us into a state of everlasting condemnation. The law of God requires perfect obedience, neither sorrow for the past, nor amendment in the future, can justify a sinner. What would a judge say to a criminal in a court of justice, who should claim justification on either of these grounds? The law does not look upon future conduct, but keeps a steady eye upon the past, punishing the transgressor for what he has already done. The same remark we make upon the law of God; for future obedience, however perfect, cannot remove the guilt of past offences. Hence we infer, that "By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified." Rom. 3: 20.—Justification stands directly opposed to condemnation; and therefore to say that a believer has no condemnation is the same thing as to say that he is justified. But how do we obtain a freedom from condemnation? Certainly by a free and full pardon. The following passage is a direct proof that forgiveness and justification are the same thing. "Through this man," Jesus Christ, "is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. Acts 13: 38, 39.

(To be continued.)

For the Pilgrim.

THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL.

"But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost. To whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ who is the image of God, should shine unto them." 2nd Cor. 4: 3, 4.

The inspired Apostle having, by the grace of God, without a vail, seen into the mystical body of Christ (the church, the kingdom of God here on earth, the dispensation of grace,) and learned the Gospel to be so far superior to the law, as we may learn from the preceding chapter, which says: therefore seeing we have this ministry, office, agency, to hold forth the word of life, to reveal, make known, to the dying sons and daughters of Adam God's own divine arrangement for the salvation of the immortal souls of the children of men. And notwithstanding the persecutions and tribulations they were exposed to, yet having received mercy they faint not, but do renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, and do not handle the Word of God deceitfully, but holding forth the truth as it is in Jesus. Therefore, if that Gospel they proclaimed was hid to any of the sons and daughters of Adam it would be to them that would be lost, their mind being blinded by the god of this world, vain amusements, fashions, follies, foolish and sinful practices of this life, in short, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, like old mother Eve.

And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she now was blinded by the things belonging to time and sense, and did no more believe the word of God, namely: By such a transgression thou shalt surely die. See Genesis, 3: 6.

So now, under the glorious dispensation of grace, many being eager and covetous for the things that gratify the carnal mind which is not subject to the law of God neither can be, will not believe, and handle the Word of God deceitfully and thus hinder the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, to shine unto them, inasmuch as there is none other name given under heaven whereby men may be saved but alone the name of Jesus. Now if those blind and unbelieving sons and daughters of Adam cannot be persuaded to see and believe so that the mind may be enlightened by that Gospel that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, they must abide the consequences of being lost. Oh, brethren and sisters let us, as the poet says,

"Weep for the lost! the lost will weep
In that long night of woe,
On which no star of hope will rise,
And tears in vain will flow.

Weep for the lost! Lord make us weep
And toil with ceaseless care,
To save our friends ere yet they pass
That point of deep despair."

To those under whose notice this may fall I would say: Remember that the Apostle says, "Know ye not that to whomsoever you yield yourselves servants to obey his servants you are to whom you obey, whether of sin unto death or obedience unto righteousness." Remember I declare unto you that all of Adam's children who have arrived to the age of accountability, capable of choosing or refusing, are of the above named servants. There is no neutrality in the case. Consequently I would say to you as the Apostle says, without faith it is impossible to please God. Therefore as mother Eve doubted and disbelieved the word of God and then carried out the principles of her disbelief and infidelity, and thereby forfeited our heirship with Christ of eternal life, we must, by the exercise of our minds and reasoning powers, which is the gift of God, let the light of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ shine into our hearts and thus obtain that most precious faith that God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever would believe on Him should not perish but have eternal life, and then carrying out the principles of your faith by obeying the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe it.

Dear fellow-travelers, let us see that we have that genuine and same precious faith and add to the same virtue, boldness, not impudence, but firmness and endurance, for the wicked fleeth when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion. And to virtue knowledge, not the wisdom of this world, for that is foolishness with God, but the discerning power which can only be obtained by being spiritually minded, for the carnal mind cannot comprehend the things of the spirit, they must be spiritually discerned. And to knowledge, temperance, moderation in all things, in eating, drinking, working, talking, sleeping, adorning, buying, selling, &c., &c. And to temperence, patience, long suffering, forbearance, tenderness, and such like. And to patience, Godliness, holiness, goodness. And to Godliness brotherly kindness, not selfish kindness, but kindness to others. And to brotherly kindness charity, love to God and man. For if these things be in you and abound they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. And by an honest and earnest perseverance it may finally be said of us, "we have fought a good fight, we have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for us a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge will give to us in that day, and not to us only, but to all them that love His appearing.

D. BOSSERMAN.

Gettysburg, Pa.

PLAIN DRESSING FOR MEETING.

The house of prayer is a poor place to exhibit beads, ribbons, ruffles, gewgaws and trinkets. The evils of such vanity and extravagance are many. It keeps people from meeting when they have not apparel as gorgeous as their neighbors. It loads the poor with burdens too heavy to be borne, to procure fashionable clothing. It leads many into temptation, debt, dishonesty and sin. It causes many a poor shop-girl to work nearly all of Saturday night, that some customer's fine clothes may be ready for the Sunday show. It keeps people at home in cloudy or stormy weather, when if they wore plain clothing they could defy clouds and storms. It consumes the morning hour in dressing, crimping, and fussing, keeping people away from worship, wasting time, exhausting strength, hindering the reading of the Scriptures, and making the day of rest a day of toil and folly. It makes the poor emulous, malicious, and envious; and sows many a bitter thought in the minds of children and others, when they see their neighbors decked in finery,—often not paid for, and feel that people are respected, not for the value of their characters, but for the vanity of their clothes. It causes many a frivilous, trifling mind to forget God, and Christ, and the Gospel, and to spend the hour appointed for religious service in comparing garments, studying fashions, and arranging their own gay attire. It causes vanity in the rich, and murmuring in the poor. It wastes the Lord's money that is needed for other uses and should be applied to more noble and important ends. It leads the young in the path of pride, gratifying the lust of the eye, cultivating an extravagant taste, justifying the vilest women in all their flaunting attire, and seducing to the paths of shame and ruin. many a poor girl who might have lived an honored and virtuous life, had she never known that she was beautiful, nor desired more finery than she could honestly earn, nor decked herself out in such a way as would attract the attention of libertines and seducers. This style of dress degrades the taste of society toward the level of those Hottentots, wild Indians, and African savages, whose chief delights are war-paint, feathers, rings, spangles, rag-roses, buttons, beads, and bugles, things which are as repugnant to a refined and cultivated taste as they are contrary to the spirit and letter of the Holy Scriptures.

Let us dress plainly before the Lord, for economy's sake, for example's sake, for decency's sake, —for Christ's sake.—The Christian.

MEMORIUM OF MARY HERRING.

Mary Herring was the oldest child, and the only daughter of elder Daniel Sayler, who was, with his parents, among the first brethren, if not the first in what is so far and wide known as the Beaverdam church. To this place they emigrated from Lancaster county, Pa., in 1772, and in course of time built the house is which elder Daniel and afterwards his son elder Jacob Sayler lived, and entertained the brethren for 90 years. And here Mary was born, and became a member in the church when young. (I believe in her 16th year.) She married Henry Herring who was not a member in the church, and at that time it was the discipline of the church, to demand an acknowledgment of the member so marrying of having done wrong, and that they are sorry for having so done, and to ask the forgiveness of the church &c. &c. This sister Mary could not, and would not do. She urged the case before the church which decided in her favor, which annulled that discipline in the Md. church at least. Henry Herring soon after became a brother in the church, and was afterwards heard to say that God had to bring him from Switzerland to Beaverdam to learn to know the truth. He died a faithful brother 43 years ago. His widow, sister Mary, by his will occupied his homestead until death, thus living in sight of her fathers home all her life.

Sister, or aunt Mary was a member in the church about 82 years, and of her it can truthfully be said, she was a living member. Her grand father, who was the writers great grand father, emigrated to America from Switzerland, and was immersed by Michael Pfontz in Connestoga church, Lancaster county, Pa., in 1752, and her grand mother in 1753 She was the mother of eight children one died in childhood, and seven survive her, four of these, with, I believe, all their children have espoused the religion of their noble ancestors and for which her father so faithfully labored 56 years to promulgate. The other three, with, I believe all then children have chosen other faiths, not valueing the faith their father thanked God that he brought him from Switzerland to learn. Sister Mary was buried by the side of her husband in the old family burying ground, on the farm which her father made his home 100 years ago, and wherein her grand father was buried in 1778, her father in 1840, and her brother the writer's father in the last day of 1850, and a nephew at an early date, and she in 1872. Four generations of Saylers lie in this small enclosure, and if the writer had buried his daughter here in 1852, there would be five generations buried on this homestead in 96 years.

Although sister Mary lived to so great an age, she died without sickness, as her son Joseph said: "We could see at the end of the week, that she was weaker than one weak ago, and so on until at last without the moving of a muscle, stopped breathing." Yet she suffered a full share of the ills flesh is heir to. In her younger years she was sorely allicted with the dropsy, which brought her to the verge of the grave, but was finally cured by some family remedies, the recipe of which is now lost. Some of her children were born after her cure from this disease. Some 35 years ago she became blind from the effect of cataract in her eyes, she underwent a surgical operation, and received her sight, so that by the aid of glasses she could attend to all the duties of life, and read large print. About 28 or 29 years ago she had cancer in her breast, she went to Baltimore to professor Baxter who cut out one half of the breast, it soon healed and was considered cured, but in one years time it began to grow rapidly, —when she returned to the same professor, who in his second operation laid the skin open from the center of her chest bone, diagonally to the back bone at the point of the corner rib, fourteen inches in length, and peeled out the entire breast, it soon healed and gave her no more trouble. All this painful operation she endured without being bound or put under the influence of any stupefying druge, freely conversing with the professor while his knife was cutting deep into her flesh. Some nine years ago she had a very severe attack of bloody flux from which no one thought she could revive. One of her devoted daughter-in-laws came some distance to assist nursing grandmother (as she was want to be called) in her last illness. But how different the sequel, the daughters-in-law took the infection and died, while sister Mary revived her health, and at last died without any disease at all. She never became what is commonly termed childish, but a few years ago her mental faculties gave way that she could not recognize any one, and finally appeared as if she had no mind to comprehend at all. Thus the strain of ninety odd years bent and warped that active and giant mind, and thus ended the life of sister Mary Herring, of whom a Methodist minister present voluntarily said, "One so aged, so pure, so good, so righteous, is a saint of God." In her death, the family of elder Daniel Sayler closes on earth, (her three brothers having preceeded her to their eternal rest,) from his birth to the death of Mary, his last living child, embraced a period of 121 years, (Visitor please copy this, and oblige the writer.)

D. P. SAYLER.

AN INFANT—Beautiful as the dawn of a bright morning. Beautiful as a flushed rose bud opening to the gentle breeze of Spring. Beautiful in a parents arms or in its tiny crib. Beautiful at play upon the carpet or green grass. Beautiful in peaceful slumber or happy wakefulness. Beautiful in the embraces of death beneath the coffin lid! Yes beautiful even there in that last sleep; lovely as a lamb in the Savior's arms. Hands folded so peacefully—brow so like chiseled marble or molded wax and eyes closed in sleeep—"perchance to dream!" Lips so gracefully closed as if to say "I murmur not; all is well!" Face "radient with a smile, which is the imprint of its dying vision!" As the last flush of death passed over its pallid features the bright rays of opening heaven touched its brow and left a mark of peace? In the last flutterings of an innocent soul plunging its pinions for heaven, a parting ray of joy lingered as death sealed the substance for the grave! The material caught a slight tinge of the glory awaiting the immaterial, and all was over! over, until the trumpet of God shall sound, and mortal shall put on immortality, then, oh then, shall that infant form be truly beautiful!—LIKE JESUS AND WITH JESUS.—J. S. Flory.

THE GRAVES OF MY HOUSEHOLD.

Our children grew side by side, and there were three who, to us, indeed filled our home with joy. But alas! one bright Sunday morning in early Autumn, the least, a babe of seven months, became suddenly very ill. Everything that medical skill was capable of, was immediately done to relieve her and save her life, but as the hours wore heavily away, her pulse beat faster; her face became redder and her breathing quicker, by reason of fever. After noon, when I held her in my arms, she put her little hand to my face and smiled as she had often done before, but there was a peculiar grasp of the hand, and a strange mixture of expression in that smile,—a commingling of grief, pity, love and pain upon her countenance, that made me shudder, and fear that she must indeed soon die. We thought we had sinned. We prayed God to forgive us, and spare our dear child. At night she became suddenly worse. The twitching of the muscles, and movement of the limbs were signs of agony and spasms, when these subsided, she lay unconscious, breathing only at intervals with short convulsive gasps. The physician said she must be dying, which caused moments of grief that I shall never forget. But he was mistaken, her time had not yet come, she rallied from what was supposed to be death, and with her revival, hope revived in our breasts.

She grew better and worse, clinging tenaciously to life for many days. We watched, prayed, hoped and feared. As day after day thus passed away, she lingered as 'twere at a point just between earth and Heaven until the last hour, when all who were watching around her could see that the end was at hand. The mysterious change was upon her. The contortion of her once smiling face, showed that life was ebbing away, and just at break of day our ESTELLA was dead. The lifeless tenement of clay was soon consigned to the silent tomb.

Since then, another, and another, have gone the same way. Their work on earth is done. Their graves are side by side. Their spirits are with God. Though all the world forget them, God will not. Though I forget them, He does not. Though all others forget them, He causes His Sun to look upon their graves all day long. Each clear night when all animated nature sleeps, He causes the stars to shine upon them. Will He not much more remember their spirits, and lift them away above the starry skies into Heaven? Where are all the spirits of the just made perfect.

"How peaceful the grave" when meditating upon the glory of the saints that rest there, but how solemn and doleful the moments when I look forward to the gradual completion of the graves of my household.

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

ADVICE TO THE YOUNG.

Wherewith shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word.—Psalm 119: 9

It appears that king David had a good deal of concern about the rising generation, and so should every God-fearing man and woman be about the spiritual welfare of our loving youth, those tender branches whose duty it will be to fill our station in life, hence this advice, how shall the young men and the young women cleanse their way? The world is corrupted, the natural condition of man is depraved and under the control of the evil one, hence you cannot cleanse your way by following the advice of those who can teach you from experience.

Avoid the associations of the wicked, the ungodly, the lewd and profligate, who are sure to lead you into sin, and the earlier you shun those characters the better. "Blessed is he that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." Your natural inclinations will, if you are not very careful, lead you fast enough from God, without taking lessons from loose characters which are sure to defile your ways in life, and carry you with railroad speed the downward road to destruction. But I, as a lover of your souls, beseech you to take lessons only from those you see have learned of Christ, to walk in the ways of virtue, temperance and godliness. Above all, shun levity, filthy conversation, profane and unchaste language, which is an abomination in the sight of God. Be not found in company with proud and uplifted characters, whose foppish appearance is disgusting to a genteel and sensible mind. Young ladies, if you wish to gain the respect of the thoughtful, and intelligent part of your community, beware of flippancy or light and flattering speech, deformance of body, putting on gaudy apparel surrounded with fringes and ribbons, thus strutting about with haughtiness as if they were able to command the behests of Heaven. Oh, do not thus deface the beautiful image of God. Do not be corrupted by associating with godless characters, for "evil communications corrupt good manner," but love to be with those who are concerned about your salvation, and whose persevering prayers in your behalf, ascend up to the throne of God. Cherish their devotions. Respect their company. Love to be with them in the house of prayer Unite your hearts with them in their supplications in your behalf, and the God of Heaven will bless you with power to overcome the evil insinuations of the devil, the attractive and destructive baits set before you by wicked men; and the contaminating influence of your own depraved nature, and Jesus Christ, the friend of sinners, will love you by thus cleansing your way, and with God's grace you will be made willing to take heed thereunto according to His word.

You need not, my young friends show disrespect to any bad people, be friendly, but grave. Show good manners wherever you are. Command respect from all. Be in the right place at the right time, but never pry into matter that does not belong to you. Show respect to old age, and never look with disdain upon a beggar or cripple, or one who is deprived of a sound mind; and above all, do not make fun of a drunken man or woman, who at the time, is bereft of their rational mind; but show a pitiful affection mingled with abhorrence of their evil deeds. Pray God to assist you in bridling your tongue against tale-bearing, untruths, and slander. Speak evil of no man, and especially meddle not with other men's affairs. Take heed to your ways according to the Word of God, by living an honorable life, commended by all sensible men. No reproach will be hurled at you by any intelligent man or woman, for attaching yourself to the Church of God that keeps all the commandments of our Savior, however humiliating they may appear in the eyes of the unconverted. Oh, how we love to see you in your young days, dedicate yourselves to God and His service. We delight to see the Church adorned with angelic images, beautified by lambs gathered by the arms of the shepherds, and carried into the bosom of the great Shepherd and bishop of souls, who gently leads them to His throne, feeds them and brings them unto living fountains of water, where God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. Does it not embellish the sacred hill of Zion to see angelic youth adorned with plain apparel, cleansed from all defilement of sin, and ornamented by a quiet and meek spirit, the embodiment of a Christian character? O thou, young man, young woman, cleanse your way by taking heed to God's Word, and the God of grace shall be with you and keep you holy unto the patient waiting for Christ.

LEONARD FURRY.

ADVICE TO YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

You who have espoused the cause of Christ, let me urge you to be faithful—be faithful until death, and the promise is, you shall receive a crown of life. To do this, you must watch and pray that you enter not into temptation I would urge on you the necessity of prayer. Prayer is the life and soul of a Christian. Have stated seasons for prayer; at least twice a day approach the throne of grace, and call upon your Savior to help you overcome sin, and be a true Christian, he will strengthen you, and cause you to triumph over your foes. Seek to be useful. God has given us talents; do not bury them in the earth, but employ them in trying to win souls to Him. He has redeemed you with His own precious blood, and will you not give Him the service of your life?

Every one has an influence in the world for good or evil. Will you cast yours on the side of God and Heaven? We have nothing worth living for in this dark, unfeeling world, if we have no hope beyond the grave. Heaven is truly worth striving for. If we have no inheritance in that beautiful city in Heaven, how can or will we stand before the bar of God with a seared conscience, and hear the great God say, "depart, I never knew you." What agony, what torture to our souls!

Let us as Christians journey together to that celestial city, and when we stand before the great tribunal of right and wrong, it will be, "well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." Could I bring the whole world into the church of the living God, I would, but some will not take warning until death places his cold, icy fingers on them. Then it is too late, they have rejected God's Holy Spirit, and will have to endure the tortures of a misspent life.

Work, therefore, while it is called to-day, for the night cometh when no man can work. I feel that I have an inheritance with God, that my name is written in the Lamb's book of life. I feel if I was called upon to render up my stewardship here below, I would be resigned to yield all, for the sake of one who suffered everything, even death, that I through His death might be saved.

OCCUPATION.

What a glorious thing it is for the human heart. Those who work hard seldom yield to fancied or real sorrow. When grief sits down, folds its hands, and mournfully feeds upon its own tears, weaving the dim shadows, that a little exertion might sweep away, into a funeral pall, the strong spirit is shorn of its might, and sorrow becomes our master. When troubles flow upon you dark and heavy, toil not with the waves, and wrestle not with the torrent; rather seek by occupation to divert the dark waters that threaten to overwhelm you, with a thousand channels which the duties of life always present. Before you dream of it, those waters will fertilize the present and give birth to fresh flowers that will become pure and holy in the sunshine which penetrates to the path of duty, in spite of every obstacle. Grief, after all, is but a selfish feeling, and most selfish to the man who yields himself to the indulgence of any passion which brings no joy to his fellow men.

Youth's Department.

BACKING.

["We clip the following from the editorial department of the Little Corporal. We think it good, and bespeak for it an interesting reading by the young readers of the PILGRIM.]

BACKING IN.—You remember the story in your Latin Reader of the man who stole a drove of oxen, and pulled them into a cave by their tails, so that their tracts should seem to lead the other way; but their lowing exposed the trick and brought vengeance upon the thief. Now, we know men who think they are deceiving society by facing one way and going the other. They take great pains to make their tracks point towards virtue and honesty, while they are really backing into vice and rascality. We know children who are continually backing into all sorts of mischief, and yet contrive to make their tracks look all right to their parents. But the trick is sure to come out at last, and to bring its authors to grief.—There are, to be sure, rare occasions when backing in is just the thing. A farmer often backs his oxen into the barn for a load, because it is easier to back an empty cart than to back a ton of hay. We have some merchants here in Chicago, who, whatever transaction they go into, always contrive to back in, in such a way as to keep their heads towards the door. We have others who always plunge into a matter head-foremost, till they get such a load to carry that they cannot back at all. Perhaps you can think of boys who get themselves into all sorts of tight places, with a bigger load than they can manage, because they never learned the art of backing in.

BACKING OUT.—This is a sort of backing which is exceedingly unpopular, being regarded as a species of cowardice and meanness. 'Squire Mullen accused 'Squire Burdock of backing out of his bargain about that chestnut colt. Tom Peters called Pete Thomas a sneak for backing out of his agreement to go skating with him on Saturday. The Hercules base ball club turns up its nine noses at the Vulcans for backing out of the game for the pewter ball.

Now, we are not going to recommend the breaking of promises or engagements, as a rule; but we do want to say a word or two in favor of the natural and inalienable right of backing out. When you get stuck in the mud, don't wade in deeper; back out. When you get into the wrong road, don't try to go out through the farther end; back out.—When you have made a mistake, don't stick to it just out of pride; back out. When you become involved in a silly quarrel, and think it necessary to fight it through, back out. When you have committed yourself to an affair that proves to be dishonorable, the sooner you drop it the better; back out. When you have promised to do a wicked thing, you have no right to keep your word; back out.

BACKING DOWN.—Some people think that this is the same as backing out, but it is easy enough to see the difference. Backing out may be creditable and discreditable according to what you back out from. Backing down is always discreditable. It always implies that the backer has descended from a higher position to a lower. Mr. Wilkins got into difficulty with Mr. Jenkins, and vowed to have revenge. He knew that he was in the wrong, and he might have backed out honorably; but he went to law, got beaten, and in the end had to back down. Great Bill Sloeum boasted to his schoolmates that he proposed to give little Mr. Stepquick, the teacher, a thrashing. He tried it, and—backed down, a wiser, sadder, and to some extent redder, young man. Col. Oldscrip, under the influence of the sermon, surprised everybody by subscribing a hundred dollars toward the new meeting-house; but afterwards, as everybody expected, pleaded poverty, and backed down. When Charly Ledeasy went to the city, he promised his mother not to smoke; but "all the fellows smoked," and he backed down. Boys and girls, never back down. When you are wrong, back out; but when you are right, and know you are right, stick to it in spite of everything; never back down.

BACKING UP.—This ought to mean just the opposite of backing down, and it often does. You hear it said of a certain man: "He talks well, but he can't back it up," meaning that he promised more than he can perform. You hear it said of another: "He don't brag, but whatever he says, he'll back it up," meaning that he will do just as he agrees. "So John has signed the pledge?" "Yes, and he'll back it up too." "Harry has made a profession of religion." "Has he? Then you'll see he'll back it up."

But there is another sort of backing up which we want to speak of to parents more particularly. There is a kind of backing up which you need to do. We don't mean backing up your own promises to the children themselves. It is often said of a business man, or author, or politician, "He is not very capable himself, but he has good backers," That is, he has friends abler than himself, financially or otherwise, who put their strength behind his weak enterprise, and so back him up. Now, there is nobody in the world who needs more backing up than your children; and there is nobody who can back them up so well as you. When Robert says, "I mean to turn over a new leaf, and get up an hour before breakfast every day," don't say, "That's old, I've heard that about once a week for the last year or two," but say, "That's a good resolution, Robert. Stick to it; and we'll see what we can do to make that hour the pleasantest one in the day." When little May musters up courage to whisper, "I'm trying to be a Christian," don't look the other way and say, "Well, well, we'll see how long it will last," but just put your arms around her, and look right into her eyes, and say, "God bless you dear May! I'm trying to be one too, and we'll help each other all we can."

In a word, if you don,t want the children to back into mischief, or to have occasion to back out o' wrong positions, or to back down from right ones, then back them up.

THE COMPASS FLOWER.

"In the great prairies of the Far West, there grows a little flower called the 'compass plant.' You have seen a compass, have you not, with its needle always pointing northward"

"Like the needle of the compass, the flower of this little plant turns always to the north, never failing to guide the traveller safely home. No matter how thick the clouds may be, if he can but find one little compass flower, he will be sure to find his way.

"Do you think it very nice,—this little, silent, pretty guide? I think so; and I think it very nice that you and I have a compass flower too; not just like the one I have been telling you about, to be sure, but a better one,—better because we have it always with us, while it guides us just as truly.

"We don't call it 'compass flower:' we call it conscience.' But then it tells us very surely what way to go. Then, if we go where it guides, our little friendly flower smilingly nods its approval, and somehow makes us quite happy; and so, if we go away from where it points, the little flower will droop, and we are sad.

"Let us take good care of conscience, our compass flower, my little friends, that it may not be hurt and die, and so we lose our faithful guide that ever points to the right way,—the way our heavenly Father wishes us to walk in."

Many false things have more appearance of truth, than things that be most true.

Justice consists in doing no injury to men; decency in giving them no offense.

Correspondence.

MARSH CREEK,
ADAMS CO., PA.

Dear Pilgrim:—With pleasure we report a series of meetings held in our arm of Church, Marsh Creek, Adams Co., Pa., the latter part of January. A few days previous to the 13th, we received a note from Bro. D. F. Good, of Franklin Co., Pa., stating that he would be with us on the evening of the 18th, enroute for Lancaster Co., and would preach for us a few times, if appointments were made, which were hastily made, and met by Bro. Good. The meetings to us proved so refreshing, that we constrained Bro. Good to remain until the evening of the 18th. We had nine meetings at different points, which truly only increased our hungering after the rich "manna." We provailed on brother Good to return again and labor with us, after meeting his engagements in Lancaster Co. The meetings however were continued in the absence of Bro. Good, by brother Ephraim Stoner of Carroll Co., Md., whose zeal and energy in the cause, fully sustained the interest of the meetings. On the 22d, brother Good returned again, brother Stoner remaining until the 24th. The meeting was continued until the evening of the 29th.

The advantages and benefits of this united effort in the vindicating of the cause of Jesus, is best understood by those who hear, see, and feel it. In hearing, to understand and believe the truth. In seeing, see the mighty power of God wrought by the preached Word of truth. In feeling, to feel the love of God shed abroad in the heart. Many of us can truly say that these meetings will long be remembered as a rich feast, a "feast of fat things."

While the rich blessing of grace was profusely showered around us, joy mingled with fear would steal around our hearts, and tears often fill our eyes, the soul expanding with holy desires, with the hope of a glorious reward, and a blessed immortality at the right hand of God. Many mourned their sins and wept Jesus' love to know. "Many were called, but few chosen." Those who were baptized on the occasion, we trust have truly put on Christ. Our dear brother Hummer was made the subject of unrestrained joy, in this that the wife of his bosom, and dear daughter, (whose heart had already became well filled with vanity,) both meekly bowed to the feet of Jesus, and with a Mary of old, "chose the good part, which shall not be taken away from them." Hope the joy of the dear brother and sisters may still be further increased by other members of the family, sons and daughters, being gathered into the Fold of Jesus. Hope the seed sown during these meetings may produce a copious harvest.

P. S. Since the above has been written, three more precious souls have been made willing to follow Jesus in the way. Among the number was my dear brother Jacob and his companion. Our souls were made to rejoice in the God of our salvation, in his coming to Jesus. We as a family, are now all in the Fold of God, five brothers and four sisters. Thank the Lord that he put it into the hearts of our dear brethren, Ephraim and Daniel, to pay us a visit of love, to spend and be spent for Christ's sake, and for the saving of precious souls. ISAAC PFOUTZ.

BEALINGTON, W. VA., Feb. 5th, 1872.

Dear Pilgrim: I thought I would cantribute a few lines to your paper, and then if you think proper you can correct them and send them forth to your numerous readers. I am not a reader of your paper by subscription, neither am I of any of our periodicals. The reason is, I am not able to pay, having a family to support. I spend my leisure moments in pernsing the word and testifying to the people, but when an opportunity presents itself, I swallow the contents of your sweet instructions.

I will now say that on the morning of the 29th of December I left my family, and in company with brother Solomon Garver, a young and promising minister of this place, started out on a mission of love to try and call or persuade some to accept of the terms of reconciliation. First day traveled 25 miles and reached the brethren on Indian Camp. Found the members generally well but in a lukewarm state, had meeting Saturday and Sunday. This place needs the attention of our able brethren. From thence we journeyed to Bulltown, Braxton Co., a distance of 27 miles. Had five meetings at the house of brother David Bosely, at the conclusion of which there were two who presented themselves for baptism —thank the Lord. From hence we journeyed to a place called Duck Camp, a small stream in Gilmer Co., distance from Bulltown 25 miles. Had meeting same evening. This was the first time they ever heard the Brethren. By request we left an appointment and pursued our journey to Pine Creek, Calhoun county, a distance, from Duck Camp, of 26 miles. Arrived at brother Wilson's same evening; no appointment that night, so we enjoyed ourselves around the fireside in a social chat, and encouraging one another on our journey to the Celestial City. Next morning, Saturday, the 6th, of January, commenced our meeting in a school-house, speaking to a congregation that never heard the brethren before. Brother Wilson and wife were the only members of our fraternity residing in that locality of country. He moved from Barbour eleven years ago, and never could get any of the brethren to preach for him before. During this meeting which lasted three days, we made urgent appeals to the people to come to the Gospel light, and to walk in all the laws, statutes and judgments of God blameless, and to draw them to the words of our adorable Savior, the necessity of faith and repentance. We spoke on Trine Immersion, Feetwashing, the Lord's Supper, the Communion of the saints, the resurrection of the dead and of eternal judgment, and how that the powers that made Pharaoh's soothsayers rods crawl like serpents, would draw their minds from the simplicity of the Gospel. These false spirits show fourth great signs and wonders. And whenever we suffer ourselves to be deluded, like Saul, the first king of Israel, who went to these bewitching powers to seek consolation, the Kingdom is rent out of our hands, the gods of the earth ascending, we prostrate ourselves lengthwise on the ground, refuse to eat the meet of eternal life, and thus we must forever perish. Oh, brethren be on your gaurd, watch and pray that you enter not into temptation.

Our meeting closed with one applicant for baptism Tears flowed freely, and strong appeals for more meeting There were two or three from a place called Tanner, about 20 miles distant from Pine Creek, said if we would go there and hold a meeting, they would join with us. Brethren, cannot some of you go? Remember the price of a soul is worth more than the whole world. Any of our ministers desiring to visit that locality, can write to Bro. Solomon Wilson, Grantsville, Calhoun Co., W. Va.

On the morning of the 7th we retraced our steps to Duck Camp, had meeting same night, a Baptist minister being present, we had the pleasure of staying all night with him. He surrendered every point at issue, and said he wished his Church would cease preaching non-essentials, and preach as we do. Had meeting the next day, spoke from the text, "What is that to thee, follow thou me."—John 21: 22. We thought this would be well adapted to the occasion. At the conclusion, it proved that the core was penetrated, and strong appeals were made for more preaching, some desiring the salutation of the kiss. From here we journeyed to Braxton county, remained all night with brother Samuel Galasha, next morning went to Salt Lick, had meeting in a school-house. Two Methodist circuit riders being present, we thought it best to speak from the Commission. At the conclusion, two came forward for baptism. After the usual instructions, which took place at the water, brother Edwards asked permission to speak. He then said, "Wonder and amazement hath brought you here to see me and my wife baptized, why is this? I have been a professor for 21 years, and I thought I was all right, but when I heard the Word preached I found I was wrong. Why was it? Because my teacher taught me wrong, and now I have found the way and I intend to enter in at the door." After baptism the meeting closed, and I stayed all night with Bro. Wesley Hecter,—next day went to brother David Bosely's —had meeting, baptized one and restored two. Thus our meeting closed, and we returned home, after an absence of fourteen days.—found all well—thank the Lord.

Yours in love.

JOHN W. FITZERALD.

WAYNE-BORO, PA.

OUR VISIT TO LANCASTER AND ADAMS CO., PA.

We left home on the 13th of January and spent five days with the brethren in Adams Co., then to Lancaster Co., spent three days, had quite a pleasant interview with Bro. Jacob Reinhold, Joseph and Samuel Myers, and many other members. Also spent one day at the State Normal School, (Millersville.) Attended several meetings with the brethren in Lancaster Co.,—should have been happy to have spent more time with them, but previous arrangements made me return again to Adams Co., to resume our labors there with the brethren. Returned the 22d, and the meetings were continued seven days more, and we trust with a good result. This Church (Marsh Creek) is presided by Eld. David Bosserman, and Joseph Sherfy, Michael Bushman, and David Blocher are co-laborers. I think I am safe in saying, that the brotherhood there, as well as many others, enjoyed and appreciated the meetings, and with a few exceptions, this Arm seems to be a praiseworthy one, and by a little more careful pruning, may bear much fruit. Hope our dear brethren and sisters at Marsh Creek, will not think us presumptous, if we say that the time we spent with you, was spent very pleasantly, and we fondly hope the good Lord will reward you for the labor of love, and interest in the cause of Jesus. D. F. GOOD.

EASTON, W. VA. Feb. 6th '72.

Dear Pilgrim: —You came knocking at my door for admittance one calm Sabbath morning, I took you in and bade you welcome, and since that time you have been moving around from door to door, from cottage to cottage, and from city to city, carrying the glad tidings of good news, and cheering many a fainting soul on its way from the city of Destruction to that glorious home over Jordan's cold waters. You came to me as a stranger, but now that I have seen and known, I would that you might tarry with me. I could not turn you away from my door for your pleading voice said, "I am one whom it is well to welcome," and on your face is the stamp of purity and uprightness, therefore come.

Night, with her many shadows has fallen around me: but she has no terrors To me there is a voice speaking, and a power running through and pervading everything, that robs her of her phantoms, and peoples her with myriad forms of beauty, through which the soul can commune with its Maker. Separated as we are from the people of our choice, we must listen to nature's teaching, and draw our sermons from inanimate rather than animate creatures. Isolated, yet God is near us to hear, to comfort and to cheer. We have the grand mountains, the peaceful flowing river and quiet pastoral scenes, from which to draw our "lessons in life," but more than all these we have the blessed Word, and from thence obtain that living water, whose spring is fast by the throne of God. Still sometimes we long for the feet of those who bear healing to the weary, and sometimes think it long 'till the servant comes to deliver the Master's message. Pray for us that our light may not go out in darkness, neither may we grope in the thorny path.

In the one hope. L. H. M.

Editor's Department.

AT HOME.

At home! What a sweet sound there is in these words? How comforting to the mind, and how refreshing to the weary soul! A place on earth that we may call our present or temporary home, what charms gather around the Christian home. How sweet the memories of the past, how sacred the tie that has kept them alive, how pure the love that grows stronger while days and years are passing by, how happy to dwell with those whom we dearly love, whose very existence becomes blended with our own,—who help us to bear our burdens of sorrow and disappointments, and share with us in times of pleasure and enjoyments; sympathize with us in our weakness, encourage us in faithfulness, mourn with us in our afflictions and distresses, and rejoice with us when we are delivered from them. Who love us, who pray for us, who weep over our misfortunes, and rejoice over our triumphs, who lift us up when we fall, and stand by us when we stand; and gently reprove us when we err, and teach us how to do right.

Then there is one place at least, on this sin-cursed earth, that we may delight to call our home, but there is still sweeter music in the word home. It vibrates over the vast ocean of time into the eternal mansions of the blessed, and sweetly reverberates back into the soul of the weary pilgrim on earth, and imparts an encouraging impulse to his spiritual life, and inspires his drooping soul with a bright and lively hope, that lifts him above the mean things of earth, and fixes his heart in God.

We are at our home this pleasant afternoon; the outside world to us is quiet, with the exception of an occasional faint chirping of some lonely winter bird, and the feeble humming of bees that have been invited out, by the sudden change in the atmosphere.—The Sun shines brightly, and the warm breath of Spring seems to have gone out over the land. The ice-bound river is being freed from its fetters, and all nature seems to rejoice quietly at being liberated from the cold embrace of stern winter.———But we are to-day "at home." How long this will continue to be our home we do not know, and when these time associations will be broken up, is also unknown to us, neither does that trouble us now, as we believe we have another and a better home, away in the eternal world.

Having returned an hour ago, from one of our places of Sabbath service, called the Corner S. H., and being comfortably entertained at home, our mind was led to the foregoing reflections, and now reverts to the sermon of this morning, delivered by the office Editor, H. B. B., from the words "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble"—46 Psalm There is much beauty and comfort in this text, and the manner and style in which it was shown up to the congregation, was well calculated to awaken a general interest in the minds of all present. The figures contained in the Mosaic law were brought to bear upon the subject, which made it a dainty feast to those who had already fled to that refuge, the Church of the living God, and served as an important warning lesson to those who are yet away from the "City of refuge," with their hands stained with murderous blood, and their souls polluted with sin and guilt, exposed to the vengeance of God at the hands of the great arch-enemy of souls.

We now close our reflections for the present, hoping that all PILGRIM readers have not only pleasant and happy homes on earth, but that they have secured a home in Heaven, in the city of the eternal God, our only sure and safe refuge. G. B.

QUERIES.

Will some brother give information through the PILGRIM upon the following query: 1 John 5: 8. "And there are three, that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water and the blood, and these three agree in one."

What spirit and what blood has the apostle reference to? In the previous verse we read of the Holy Ghost bearing witness with the Word and the Father. Is there any difference between the spirit and the Holy Ghost? C. NESS.

Dear Brethren: I wish to have your opinion on the following passage of scripture: "And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house."

REMARKS. The wide world has been ransacked, and language construed into every imaginable shape or signification in order to get a few "household" baptisms, but the Bible has proven so unprolific that they could not do better than settle down on the case of the jailor, but this proves very unfortunate to the theory as will appear to every candid mind, after a careful reading.

The jailor "came trembling and fell down before Paul and Silas" in the prison. Thirtieth verse. "And brought them out." They are now out of the prison.

Thirty-second verse. "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house." Paul and Silas are now in the jailor's house, speaking to him and his household the words of the Lord, and no doubt but what among other things they told them, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Thirty-third verse. "And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes and was baptized, he and all his, straightway." They are now out of the house and during this time the jailor and his household were baptized

Thirty fourth verse. "And when he had brought them into his house." They are now baptized and brought back again into the house when meat was set before them, and the jailor and all his are rejoicing in that, that they have been "born of water and of the spirit."

REHEARSAL. Through the powerful manifestations of God the jailor is convicted of his own sinfulness, and that Paul and Silas are the servants of God. Having a desire to be saved, and also his family, he takes them into his house and they there speak unto him the word of the Lord, and he spake to all that were in the house the word of the Lord, showing that they were all capable of hearing and believing the word. They all became converted and wished to be baptized. They take them out and baptize them, after which they all return again to the house—meat is set before them and all rejoice. "Were they baptized in the house or not?" As there is nothing said about taking them in the house to baptize them, but that they were taken out as the language plainly implies, we conclude, very rationally too, that they were not baptized in the house, but at some suitable place where the ordinance could be attended to according to Divine appointment.

Will some one of the brethren give an explanation of Acts 16: 14, 15. Also Acts 2: 41.

DANIEL WAGAMAN.

As we have been giving our views in regard to the jailor we will also briefly notice the above, with the understanding that the views of others will also be acceptable.

With due respect to those who differ from us, we candidly believe that, were it not for the carnal disposition of avoiding the cross in genuine baptism, or burial with Christ, and a desire to substantiate infant baptism in household baptisms, the Christian world would not be troubled with such questions.

All the figures and circumstances attending recorded instances of Christian baptism are strongly in favor of Immersion, which beautifully coincides with "being born of water," and illustrates the figure of being buried with Christ in baptism. This is also what the original term for baptism signifies, and what all honest men of all denominations acknowledge to be a true and valid baptism. As Lydia was at the "river side" at the time, it is quite rational to believe that she was buried in baptism or immersed.

Acts 2: 41. You ask, "Could twelve men immerse three thousand in one day?" We never liked the idea of making calculations in regard to the word of the Lord, but if it was written that the twelve apostles baptized three thousand in one day we would say that the same number could be immersed because the terms are equivalent, but it says, "The same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Now adding and baptizing are quite two things. It is very evident that a goodly number of that vast assemblage were of John's converts and therefore had been baptized. "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan." All of such as were now convinced that Jesus was the Christ did not need to be re-baptized, but were added to the church. This we think to be a rational conclusion, but if any wish to gainsay this theory, we would inform them that in addition to the "Twelve" there were other seventy who, under the direction of the Apostles would be lawful administrators, making in all eighty-two, which would make an average of only about thirty-six for each administrator, making it possible for three thousand to be immersed in less than one hour, but as before, we say, we do not believe that there were that number baptized on that occasion, neither does the word so teach.

This is one of the skeptical arguments brought to bear against immersion. When all others fail they then fall back on impossibilities, but every reflecting mind must see that there is no impossibilities about the penticostal baptism when viewed from a rational standpoint, and was it not needed to prop up a baseless dogma it would never be advanced.

PERSONAL.

WM. B. SELL. The postage on single copy of the PILGRIM is 5 cents per quarter, and no post-master can collect any more. When more are sent in a pack to one address the postage will be at the rate of 5 cents for each four ounces per quarter. Four PILGRIMS do not weigh quite four ounces, therefore that number can be sent in a pack to one address at five cents per quarter or twenty cents per year. No post-master should charge more or less. If they do they should be reported.

BACK NUMBERS. Our supply of No. 1 is entirely exhausted. We can still supply from No. 2. Subscriptions may commence at date and run one year or to the end of the year at the rate of 11 cents per month.

MARRIED.

WAGONER—WOLFE—At the residence of the bride, Jan. 11th, 1872, by Martin Neher, Elder JACOB WAGONER of Clinton county, Ind., to sister HANNAH WOLFE, of Piatt county, Ill.

EDGECOMB—WINE—At the residence of the bride's parents, in Piatt county, Ill., Feb. 1st, 1872, by Menno Stouffer, brother WILLIAM EDGECOMB to sister ANNA WINE.

D. D. SHIVELY.

DIED.

MARY HERRING. Born March 25th, 1774, died Feb. 7th 1872; aged 97 years, 10 months, and 13 days, was the brief notice read by elder D. R. Stilley after the close of his funeral sermon in the Beaverdam meeting-house, Fredrick county, Md.

D. P. SAYLER.

LYDAY.—On Tuesday Feb. 6th 1872, sister LYDAY, wife of Eld. Samuel Lyday of the Manor congregation, Indiana county, Pa., aged 80 years.

S. S. CRESSWELL.

DESHONG.—In the Maple Grove coogregation, Ashland county, Ohio, Nov. 16th 1871; brother PETER M. DESHONG; aged 67 years, 11 months, and 28 days. Funeral services by D. Workman the writer and others, from Col. 3: 1, 2.

WM. SADLER.

POFFENBERGER.—In the Lower Fall Creek Church, Madison county, Ind., sister CATHARINE wife of brother Eli POFFENBERGER. Sister Catharine was born in Rockingham county, Va. Sept. 18th, 1809, and died Feb. 4th, 1872; aged 67 years, 4 months, and 17 days.—Funeral services by brother J. W. McClure and others, from Matt. 24: 44.

Visitor please copy.

M. J. MCCLURE.

MONEY LIST.

A. P. Miller	$1.25
A. S. Bechtal	1.25
Moses Miller	2.35
Mary M Brindle	1.25
George Kinny	2.50
Jesse Ohmert	2.50
E. W. Stoner	1.15
A B. Brumbaugh	6.75
U. M. Beachly	2.50
David Miller	17.00
S. M. Pretzman	1.25
Peter Knavel	4.00
D. R. Sayler	2.50
Wm. H. Reber	1.25

MARRIAGE IN RUSSIA.

A Russian marriage is always a weighty affair, the ceremony at the church consuming at least two hours; but that part being the climax of the happy event, it is no wise considered irksome, Not so, however with the preparatory arrangements. The trousseau and the collecting of household goods are affairs of serious moment to the young lady's family. Not only garments of every discription by the dozen are required, but all manner of crockery, silver ware and household furniture in the bargain. For a young couple, as in this country, to wait until after their marriage to furnish the house would never be countenanced. The bride must bring everything with her as nearly as she can. Among the indispensable articles are: the house linen, kitchen utensils, table services and a piano, and in order to provide these articles parents of limited means commence from their girls' earliest childhood to lay aside articles for that purpose, and often long before any attention whatever has occured, undergarments are made at odd times and reserved for the hoped for event.

Among the wealthy the outfit is tremendous, the quantity of clothing, linen and table ware being sufficiently large to last throughout the lady's own life, and give some of her daughters, when their turn comes, a comfortabl "setting up." The husbands elect, however, contributes his share, in the way of jewels, ornaments, &c. After the marriage festivities are over the young pair retire to their new home, the chattles following in the lumber wagons peculiar to the country.—Eighteen for the bridegroom and sixteen for the bride are the earliest ages at which a couple may be married, and eighty for a man and sixty for a woman the latest. Fourth marriages are not allowed, and a third is considered anything but proper. To belong to the orthodox church is almost compulsory in Russia, and consequently every act of a Russian's life is more or less connected with his religion. Therefore a marriage must be religiously legal to be legal at all. A second marriage places the parties under a penance of two years. Marriage between kindred, however far distant, even unto so called "forty-second cousins" is against the law, and considered by all Russians as an abomination. Neither may a young person marry a God-parent, the latter coming under the head of "spiritual relations." Priests marry but once, and although there is no law forbidding a priest's widow marrying a second time, it is by no means considered "the thing," and should the lady persist in becoming engaged, she may be sure of making a sensation among the clergy, if not in society generally. Divorces are unheard of, and secret marriages, that are nine out of ten cases bigamies, are null and void, and also but seldom heard of.

The Salt Lake Mormons Victorious.

SALT LAKE, Feb. 12.—To-day, at the election of city officers, the whole Mormon ticket was elected. Mormon women and girls voted. It is believed the female vote was far in excess of the male.

In the early part of the day the Liberals worked hard, challenging the Mormons on the question of citizenship, and preventing hundreds of votes, but they soon found their labor was useless, even children voting. The Liberals finally abandoned the election as a farce.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale, We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition,75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robioson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Grigiual Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word Eoglish Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. Ex.	UP TRAINS. Mail	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. Ex.	DOWN TRAIN. Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00 Ar	1 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 20
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 12
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18
Le 7 20	10 00		7 00 Le	2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 13	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABSQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 00

Ger'n & Engl'sh, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR,	Extra family.	$7 00
"	Superfine.	7.50
"	fancy brands.	8.00
"	Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.		4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.		1.65
"	red. "	1.45
CORN.		.80
RYE.		1.05
OATS.		.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR,	Fancy Brands.	$7.25
"	Family.	6.85
"	Extra.	6.65
"	Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.		1.50
"	Hill "	1.45
"	Winter red "	1.50
CORN.		.50
OATS.		.38
RYE.		.85
BARLEY.		.65

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

A GREAT CHNCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the 'Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address.

DANIEL KAGARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.

Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa

Narkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, FEBRUARY 27, 1872. NO 9

Selected by W. A. C.

THE BETTER HOME.

We have heard a blessed story,
Of a home from sorrow free,
In a realm of wondrous glory,
Just beyond life's troubled sea.

There the fields are ever vernal,
Free from winter's withering blight;
Spring time ever, youth eternal,
Golden harps and raiment white.

There the loved, who wait to greet us,
Sing for joy the Lamb's sweet song;
There the pure will smile to see us,
Safe among their angel throng.

That sweet home is never broken,
Never clouded by a tear,
There no parting words are spoken,
Nor of death the slightest fear.

Shall we spend our life in gaining,
Only transient earthly toys?
Rather than where Christ is reigning,
Seek for Heaven's eternal joys.

Turn we then to joys immortal,
Where earth's sorrows come no more;
Glad to pass through death's dark portals,
To that fair celestial shore.

VALUABLE HINTS.

PSALMS, 1.19, 6, BETH.

Dear Friend: —According to previous announcement, we proceed to the explanation of the weighty and all important question, the happiness of God's fallen creatures, and the plan He has adopted to bring out again the glorious and happy state and condition in which men in the creation were placed, and from which disobedience, transgression and sin has deprived him. We will therefore candidly look to the Testimony. We may be somewhat lengthy and desultory on the points connected, but hope you will with a good degree of patience, bear with us and follow to the result.

The first point in order seems to be the existence of the Deity, or the existing Power, or combination of Powers, to call into being the things originating and constituting the creation.

From the account we have in Holy Writ, nothing of Heaven and earth existed before the beginning, nor any of the vain objects which we behold. God alone, self-existing, with all Power, might, strength, wisdom, knowledge, foresight, justice, love and mercy, these and many more qualities of a Divine and infinite nature, organized and united together constituted that Power, by which the universe was created and brought into existence. When we take this vast work into consideration, and view the formation of the many different objects on this earth, and look, even with an inexperienced eye, and an unenlightened understanding in science, at the firmament, and behold the order of the planetary system, the harmony of the Sun, moon and innumerable stars in their own designated course. Also on the order given and prescribed to the vegetable and animal creation, for their perpetual continuance, each filling its own designated purpose, then the conclusion must be, that He, or that Being or Power that has brought all this into existence and upholds the same in such perfect order, without clash or disturbance, cannot be else than God supreme,—higher than any creature can attain, and to which none of the works of His Creation can be compared. Although men created after His image and likeness are so inferior, that even in their first created state, no reasonable comparison can consistently be made.—But here we are at an item which from the popularity it has, should be noticed and not overlooked. It is that men are created after the image of God and in His likeness; that God is also fashioned in the likeness of men, or in other words that God has a body, like the body of men. Some hold that man lost the likeness of His Creator by his fall. We have a doubt on this point. For the testimony that God is a spirit, and not in the form of men, we take Christ's own words, "God is a spirit, and they that worship Him, must worship Him in spirit and in truth."—John 4:24. Also, "For a spirit has not flesh and bone as ye see me have."—Luke, 24:39. It therefore seems unreasonable to conclude that God is a body, or in a bodily shape like men. The words in Genesis, 1:26, "Let us make man in our image and likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth," has no allusion to likeness of body, but rather to a likeness of power and dominion under God, as the words clearly imply, when it says that man should have dominion over fish and fowl &c. The body by itself cannot act, but the spirit and body united, can do all things of an earthly nature. So men possess a limited creative power, but this acts or operates only through the spirit, or what we call the mind, which acts through every member in the body, the same as God acts through every part of the universe by His combined attributes. We cannot see the mind, no more than we can see God, yet we can perceive its actions the same as we can notice those of God. Every pain, every touch, light as it may be that the body comes in contact with, is felt through the mind. So it is in the universe, whatever transpires is known to God, who is the life of its existence, the same as the mind or spirit is the life, being, and regulator of the action of the body. If God were a body, then He would also be a person, and would be visible and present only at one place at a time, He could therefore not be Omnipresent, and be short of other perfect attributes wherewith He upholds all things. The words "Let us make man in our image," would indicate that more than one Creator and person were present and assisted in creating and forming the universe, yet as this cannot be the case, the conclusion must be that the one and only Creator consists of united parts, and these parts to be separately named, to be termed attributes. The God of creation, the God of Redemption, and the God of sanctification, is admitted on all sides to be only one God. So it will be equally admitted that the God of love, of goodness, of mercy, of power of might, of wisdom, of benevolence, of justice, of righteousness, of foreknowledge, &c, is the only true God. And as these attributes of God, the same as our five senses are no bodies, nor united make a body, but are invisible powers and form a perfect organization, and constitute the mind, soul and spirit, and being of man, so also the Divine attributes form and constitutes a perfect God, or the being of God.

That God had allusion when He said "Let us make man in our image" to His own combined powerful organization is evident. He is a spirit, and in order to make or create His likeness, He had to call into being another powerful organization such as the spiritual system in man. The formation of the body, and the connection of the spirit formed another part in the progress of the creation. Also when the Creator called the animals into existence, bodies of great similarity to the body of man, were created. In comparing them with the body of men, we find in them natural endowments of life, and its returning again into decay and non-existence a strong resemblance. Should the same resemblance or likeness also exist between man and God? No, this may not be.

Again, after man had sinned, had eaten of the Tree of knowledge of good and evil, and lost his former estate, God said, "Behold the man is become as one of us, (as one of His attributes) to know good and evil, and now least he put forth his hand and take also of the Tree of life, and eat and live forever."—Gen. 2:22. In this we see that man had not attained in the creation to the full likeness of the Creator, but that he through disobedience attained to fuller perfection in the likeness and image of God. This would have to be the the conclusion according to that theory, for what likeness means in one place, it also means in an other. But here it is spoken of as pertaing to a likeness in knowledge, one of God's attributes. So also should the likeness and image in the other place be understood as pertaining to God's attributes, and not to a likeness, image, and similarity of being, person, or body of either the Creator or creature.

With these remarks, we proceed on the subject to the different periods where God manifested Himself in various ways and for different purposes. But it should be noticed that in the old dispensation, and before the advent of Christ, God had not fully revealed Himself to His creatures, because it was even before the creation of the world, ordained, that Christ, God's only Son, should fill that office, and accomplish this mission in God's own appointed time and way. Hence the proper and reasonable conclusion, that according as the ancient writers had the understanding of God, so they described Him in His nature and action. The historical description of the creation is given to us in that sense, and is by many understood in too literal a sense, or misunderstood altogether, and as the understanding of the nature, disposition, existence, and being of both God and man, is the grand work of all succeeding ideas or opinions, it is not much wonder that so many conflicting sentiments and different beliefs are afloat in the world. If a strict search and regard for their correctness were made, and a faithful and honest study for observance only pursued, conflicting sentiments could not find their way in the hearts of men. Yet some study more the works of men, and the science of interpretation of the works of God for their faith, and loose sight of the sacred Word itself. In such cases it can hardly be possible that the Son of of God is more understood now, than He was when on His mission on earth, to reveal and make known His Father'swill. To know the Father as He is, we must learn of the Son, who was sent and came to reveal Him. To all this we have Christ's own Word for testimony, "All things are delivered unto me of my Father, and no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son, and to whom the Son will reveal Him." We may infer from this also that the knowledge of each other, as Father and Son, has not allusion to personal acquaintance, for the Son, or Jesus Christ personally or bodily was known extensively while on His mission on earth, but as to His nature, as the Son of God, or His spiritual capacity, He was as little known as the Father. Therefore the conclusion is, that by God the Father, and His Son Jesus Christ, no two different persons are to be understood, as we understand our earthly father and his son to be two But a harmonious relationship of a spiritual nature, an affinity in nature, power and disposition united for the welfare of the human family, and their regeneration the same as the efforts of an honest earthly father and his dutiful and faithful son, in trying to provide for the maintainance and comforts of the father's family. In conclusion, we will say that we do not progress on the subject as expected, we will therefore continue a little further in our next. R. I.

ON THE ROOK.

Once upon a time there lived a powerful king, who reigned over a large and fertile country. He had crowns of gold and pearls, and sceptres of ivory and precious stones.—His treasury was full of the costly things of the earth; tens of thousands of armed men were ready to obey his bidding, and his dominion extended from sea to sea. But without God's blessing worldly possessions are but an increase of care, and as this mighty monarch feared not God he was dissatisfied and unhappy.

In the dominions of the king there lived a certain dervice, famed for abstinence, sanctity, wisdom, and piety; and the king, willing to profit by the instruction of the holy man, paid him a visit. He found him in sackcloth, lying in a cave surrounded by high rocks on the borders of a wilderness.

"Holy man," said the king, "I come to learn how I may be happy."

Without giving any reply, the dervise led the king to the rugged pathway to the place, till he brought him in front of a high rock, near the top of which the eagle had built her aerie.

"Why has the eagle built her nest yonder?"

"Doubtless," said the king, "that it may be out of the way of danger."

"Then imitate the bird," said the dervise; "build thy throne in heaven, and thou shalt reign there unmolested and in peace."

Now the king would have given the dervise a hundred pieces of gold, if he would have accepted it, for this pricious piece of advice. It may be as useful to you as to the king, for you are all as much interested in being happy as he was. As the eagle built her nest on the rugged rock, build your hope on the "Rock of Ages." As the devise told the king to erect his throne in heaven, so I tell you to "seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on the things of the earth." Do this, and you will be above the reach of danger for time and eternity.—S. S. Journal.

JUSTIFYING FAITH.

[Concluded from last week.]

In one place it is said, "We have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of our sins." in another place that "we are justified by His blood." When God pardons our sins through the merit of His Son, there is no more charge against us than if we had never sinned. "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died."—Rom. 8:33:34. We are justified by Faith, and justifying Faith implies two things: First, a full persuasion, upon proper evidence that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, and secondly, a complete dependence upon Him as our Savior. Without this persuasion, we shall never apply to our blessed Lord; and without this dependence, we shall never feel His power to save. (This accounts for the difference of opinion on experimental religion.) Faith does not justify as a meritorial act; but as a term or condition, which God requires of man. To illustrate, we take a penitent sinner, who desires pardon. He cannot be pardoned without a sacrifice. Christ, (his passover,) was sacrificed for him. He believes the report, and firmly depends upon Him as his sacrifice. Then God who was angry is reconciled, sin is pardoned, and he is justified. This method harmonizes the whole Scripture, and every condition, as well as every position, that poor man may be in, is plain, simple, and easily understood by any one who is not already prejudiced against experimental religion, or like the Jews of old, depend entirely on their own works. Are we not all to be saved by an attonement, and should not God require a dependence upon that atonement as a condition of salvation? The great objection by some to this doctrine is, that it sets aside the necessity of practical religion; but when it is understood, that justifying Faith necessarily produces good works, their objections are at once removed. No doctrine can possibly be true, which sets aside practical religion; but this establishes practical religion, and places it upon a firm foundation. Faith produces love, and love produces obedience.

Now the Apostle Paul teaches, that justifying Faith is a saving grace, wrought in the soul by the spirit of God; whereby we receive Christ as He is revealed in the Gospel to be our Prophet, Priest, and King. Trust in and rely upon Him and His righteousness alone for justification, and salvation. Paul says in Heb. 11: 1., "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." And oh, I remember well what I hoped for, when I was mourning on account of my sins, and I remember well that it was only after I had decided to serve the Lord while I lived, let me be lost or saved, that God spoke peace to my soul. I had hoped for a reconciliation, and was on the very eve of despondency, when lo, to the joy of my happy heart, I received the evidence of which Paul speaks. I was assured of the reality and worth of eternal and iovisible things, and it produces a satisfaction and assured confidence, that God will infallibly perform what He has promised, whereby the believer is as confident of them as if they were seen by his eyes, and in his actual possession. The object of Faith is the Word of God, in general, especially the doctrines and promises, that respect the salvation of men, through Christ, which reason cannot discover by its own light, nor perfectly understand when revealed. It is true, that Faith is held out in the Scriptures as a condition on the part of man; and is a condition, but if man with reason and light, and all he is in possession of, cannot comply with the condition, he must have help from some other source, hence he must appeal to one who is able to assist him, and that is God, the author and finisher of every Christian's Faith. "It is faith that works by love."—Gal. 5:6 It is not an idle inactive grace, but shows itself by producing in us love to God and our neighbors. Yes, it purifies the heart, Acts, 15; 9. It is called the Faith of God's elect, Titus 1:1, because it in on them. Thus grace increases from one degree to another. Rom. 1:17, being strong in some, in others weak. Matt. 8:10, also, 14:31. And lastly, this grace is the special gift of God, Eph. 2:8. That is that your believing through your own ability, and that your reconciliation to God and eventual salvation, is not for any merit or worth of your own. Then, having obtained justifying Faith in this our day of grace, let us recollect that there is a day coming, in which we shall be justified by the deeds done in the body. Yes, Matt. 12:57, says, "By our words we shall be justified, and by our words we shall be condemned."

Lees N. Roads, Pa.

ASKING, SEEKING, KNOCKING. AND ENTERING.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Matt. 7:7.

The verse under consideration is naturally divided into three parts, and if I were disposed, I could make either division sufficient matter to descant upon, yet I prefer not to multiply words.

Says the Savior, "Ask." Who? Certainly not a finite creature like ourselves, but God, who is the creator of all things, whose store-house is inexhaustible, and though he may give lavishly, yet it will not fail. For what are we to ask? "God is the giver of every good and perfect gift." The Saviour here in this text has a specific object in view. He does not mean that we shall ask for health, though so very desirable, nor for wealth, which often drowns men's souls in sorrow and woe, nor worldly wisdom, which will fail us at the day of judgment, no matter how desirable now. What then is the object we are to ask for? I apprehend the meaning of the Savior to be, that ye ask for an honest heart, an inquiring disposition, a teachable mind, and an obedient heart. These are the qualities a sinner must have when inquiring after the "things that make for our peace," both present and future. These things must be asked for, with full purpose of mind, in an abiding faith, and when so asked for they are ours, for it is said, "And it shall be given you." The next injunction of the Savior is, "Seek and ye shall find. Find what? Why, the things sought after. And what are they? They are things that please God, and as a consequence prove advantageous to ourselves. It is said that the Father draws all men, but they must ask to be drawn, and we cannot be successfully drawn, until we possess the Christian graces already enumerated. "An honest heart, a teachable disposition, and a willing mind. Possessing these, we are ready to "seek" to to some effect. The first thing to be sought for is the Kingdom of Heaven and its righteousness. Do you ask, where is that to be found? That is a question not so easily answered. I can point you to the principles that govern the Kingdom of Heaven. They are to be found in the New Testament, the Revelation of God, by Jesus Christ.

The command under consideration is to "seek" that Kingdom, with the assurance that you "shall find," and though you may not find the lives and conduct of those professing to be governed by the laws and precepts of of that Kingdom, do not conclude there is no such Kingdom. The Kingdom does exist, because it is said, ye "shall find." Are you at a loss how to find it? Go to Jesus who invites you to come unto Him, and promises in no wise to cast you off. The place to find Him is in His Word. If you are disposed to doubt, hear the Savior. "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in Heaven give good things to them that ask Him."

We find the way, by first asking for the power to seek, effectually and successfully.

The next duty imposed upon you is, that you "knock and it shall be opened unto you." Now what is meant by knocking? It certainly means nothing more than that you make application to be admitted within the visible Kingdom of God upon earth. It is your privilege to be thus admitted. None dare refuse you, for it is said that you are to "Knock and it shall be opened unto you."

We will now presume that you are at the door of the Kingdom, and have knocked, the door wide open, and yet you refuse to enter. Why do such things happen? Very often indeed the reasons are, that those who knock attempt to propose terms of entrance. The Shepherd having entered, posted the porter at his position, who cannot entertain any terms other than those accepted by others who had entered before the period when you knocked. Have a care for your conduct at this point. Oh, do not hesitate now, after having proceeded thus far both legitimately, and right. Do not now make a false step, as hundreds and thousand have done. Do not attempt to climb up some other way, and subject yonself to the name of a "thief and robber." And here dear reader, I cannot perhaps do better than introduce a conversation by Bunyan's Christian, who had gone in at the door or gate, and others who had got in by the wall beside the gate.

"Christian. Gentleman whence came you, and whither do you go?"

Answer. "We were born in the land of vain glory, and are going for praise to Mount Zion."

Christian. "Why came you not in at the gate which standeth at the beginning of the way? Know you not that it is written that "He that cometh not in by the door but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber?"—John 10: 1.

Answer. "They said that to go to the gate for entrance was by all then considered too far about, and therefore the usual way was to make a short cut of it, and to climb over the wall as they had done."

Christian. But will it not be counted a trespass against the Lord of the City whither we are bound, thus to violate his revealed will?

Answer. They told him, that as for that, he need not trouble his head thereabout; that they had the custom of a thousand years and many witnesses to justify their action.

Dear readers, who were these persons? Bunyan says their names were "Formalist" and "Hypocrit." But do you ask what constitutes the entering of the door after knocking? I answer, Baptism. The Scriptures are full of incidents to attest the fact. Remission of sins are nowhere promised to an impenitent sinner short of Baptism. When you have attended to it then you, like others, can go your way rejoicing. Then it is you can "Go in and out and find pasture," that is, do good both in and out of the church.

EMANUEL SLIFER.

I WISH.

How often do we hear people say, "I wish I had never done it," referring to something which they did in their childhood, or youth. Or "I wish I had known to what it would lead me;" or, "if I had known in my young days what I now know I never should have done thus and so."

Among the many things done by young people, which almost every one regrets in old age, are the following. One of the first, and one which is most regretted, is disobedience to parents. It leaves a sting in the heart which can never be removed. When our parents admonish and plead with us to avoid bad company, or to stay away from places of worldly amusement, or to leave off some bad habits which we practice, and often with tears in their eyes, and a painful heart on account of the great concern they feel for our welfare, and we turn away from them indifferently, and heedless of their earnest admonitions, they will, at some future day, when our parents shall have passed away, irresistibly force themselves upon our minds, and cause us pain and sorrow, perhaps more painful than that of our parents, at the time we refused their admonitions.

Think not, dear young friends, that this is only supposition, it is truth; and if you thus disobey your parents, whom God, in his word commands us to obey and honor, he will not leave you unpunished; and as sure as his divine word is truth, so sure will every pain and sorrow you cause your parents, come back to your own hearts at some time and punish you all your days.

Another thing which every one who once forsakes sin, and strives to walk in the commands of God, will regret, and which often hinders his progress to holiness and purity, and which can never be driven or banished from the mind, but will be unpleasant, and annoy them all through life, is the reading of worthless, foolish books, such as novels, comic stories, and other trashy reading. It is to the mind, as poison to the body, which destroys its healthy action for life. It makes as impression on the mind, and leaves a stain which can never be erased or fully eradicated.

When old age comes upon us, and we desire to meditate upon the goodness of God, and desire to have our hearts prepared for a temple and dwelling place for God's Holy Spirit, and for the Savior to abide and sup; these improper thoughts with which the mind was filled in youth, often unavoidedly crowd upon us, and the thoughts which we desire, are crowded out; and often, yea, many times we say, "Oh that I had never seen or touched such worthless stuff! Now it is continually on my mind, and is very unpleasant; I would give all I possess if I could only get rid of these thoughts.

Not long since a mother informed me that a teacher told her daughter to read anything and everything that came in her way; that it would make her intelligent. O, what horrible advice! Terrible to think about! A teacher to advise a child to fill her mind with matter, which in after years would prove a curse instead of a blessing, is an idea too ridiculous to be entertained for a moment!

It is good for young people to read, and store their minds with knowledge; but let it be such as will tend to make pure; such as will refine the thoughts, and raise them above vulgarity; lead them into a higher and purer sphere than that of the base and worldly honor seekers.

Beware, my dear young friends, and as you value purity of thought, as you value a clear conscience, and future peace of mind and undisturbed happiness, and nearness to God, avoid reading foolish, worthless trash.—Fear it as you would poison; for it is even worse than poison to the body; it poisons the mind all through life. Touch it not, therefore, and you will never have to say, I wish I had never read such light matter.

There are yet many other things practiced in youth, which are often regretted in old age, all of which I cannot present to my readers at present; but I will mention that of foolish talking and jesting. This habit when once formed, is very hard to brake off; and it is certainly very unbecoming for professors of christianity to use vain, idle language, and is also forbidden in God's word. We are told that for every idle word we speak, we must give an account in the day of judgment. Read Eph. 4: 5.

Much more might be said on this subject, and many more unnecessary habits which young people get into might be mentioned, which they will regret in maturer years; but I do hope my young friends, after reading what I have written, you will try to avoid all habits which are contrary to the word of God, and which are unbecoming to intelligent men and women; and remember that habits are much easier formed than removed. Form such habits in youth as you will not regret when you get older. "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Phil. 4: 6.—Herald of Truth

LOVE.—"God is love" and love in the soul is the in-dwelling of Divinity,—the essence of that heavenly holiness that illuminates man and fits him for the enjoyment of the celestial world. Yea, love is the very quintessence of the sum and substance of the Christian religion; the ameliorating principle that causes man to lift his feet from the miry clay of sin and set his feet upon the "rock." It is the great and grand nutralizing element that brings every opposing thought into subjection to the will of God. The philosopher's stone that turned everything into gold that it touches. Filling the very soul full of the richness that is in Christ. The brilliant star around which all other Christian graces revolve in union and harmony. The glorious sun that has its center in the immaterial man and around which all the constellations of the indwelling moral world keep pace.

The heaven-born magnet that attracts the innate principle from the regions of misery and woe to the realms of heavenly bliss. The most magnificent of the Divine attributes—the all in all of the great I AM.

O Love! thou priceless gem, for thee I sigh. Come, O come, and find a resting place within my heaving bosom. Trample thine enemies under thy feet and sit as supreme ruler upon the throne, in all the majesty of thy peaceful power and reign. Wield thy powerful sceptre so that the kingdom of satan may crumble to naught, and may victory perch high upon thy banner now and forever.—J. S. FLORY

AN EVERYDAY RELIGION WANTED.

"As quite a number of clergymen have undertaken to carry religion and religious sentiment into the counting-room, the workshop, the office and the family circle, we commend to their consideration the following schedule of a very desirable character of religion, advertised some years since by The Congregationalist." — Baltimore Daily American, Jan. 20th, 1872.

"We want a religion that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late, and keeps the dinner from being late—keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and keeps the baby pleasant; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs; projects the honey-moon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the Eastern fig-tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit. We want a religion that bears heavily, not on the exceeding sinfulness of sin, but on the exceeding rascality of lying and stealing; a religion that banishes small measures from the counters, small baskets from the stalls, pebbles from the cotton bags, clay from pepper, sand from sugar, chicory from coffee, water from butter, beet juice from vinegar, alum from bread, strychnine from wine, water from milk cans, and buttons from the contribution-box. The religion that is to save the world will not put all the big strawberries at the top and all the bad ones at the bottom. It will not offer more baskets of foreign wine than the vineyards ever produce bottles, and more barrels of Genesee flour than all the wheat fields of New York grow and all her mills grind. It will not make one-half of a pair of shoes of good leather and the other of poor leather, so that the first shall redound to the maker's credit and the other to his cash.

It will not put Jouvin's stamp on Jenkins' kid gloves, nor make Paris bonnets in the back room of a Boston milliner's shop, nor let a piece of velvet that professes to measure twelve yards come to an untimely end in the tenth, or a spool of sewing silk that vouches for twenty yards be nipped in the bud at fourteen and a half, nor the cotton thread spool break to the yard-stick fifty of the two hundred yards of promise that was given to the eye, nor yard-wide cloth measure less than thirty-six inches from selvedge to selvedge, nor all wool delains and all linen handkerchiefs be amalgamized with clandestine cotton, nor coats made of woollen rags pressed together be sold to the unsuspecting public for legal broadcloth. It does not put bricks at five dollars a thousand into chimneys it contracted to build of seven-dollar materials, nor smuggle white pine floors that have paid for hard pine, nor leave yawning cracks in closets where boards ought to join, nor daub ceilings that ought to be smoothly plastered, nor make windows-blinds of slats that can not stand the wind, and paint that cannot stand the sun, and fastenings that may be looked at but are on no account to be touched. The religion that is to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider that forty cents returned for one hundred cents given is according to the Gospel, though it may be according to law. It looks upon a man who has failed in trade and who continues to live in luxury as a thief. It looks upon a man who promises to pay fifty dollars on demand, with interest, and who neglects to pay it on demand, with or without interest, as a liar."

The advertiser offers no reward for the religion which produces all the enumerated effects, and bears all these Christian fruits. Yet will I volunteer to inform him and the reader where it may be found. And where it will not be found.

First. The religion which Jesus the Son of God, delivered to man, through the Gospel, will produce all the effects, and bear all the fruits advertized for. And in every heart where that religion is established will they all be found, with every other thing that is true, that is honest, that is just, that is pure, that is lovely, or that is good. That religion is taught in the New Testament Scriptures; and is found in, and realized by, everyone that is born again. That is "born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever," is the doctrine taught by the Son of God, and all who believe and obey it are the children of God. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 26, 27. These live in Christ and bear all the Christian fruits advertized for. And the church which teaches and observes this doctrine is the church of God, which is built upon the rock. "The foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." And this church is the one which teaches the doctrine of Christ, that man must be born again. Spiritually regenerated by the influence of the spirit of God working in him to will and do the will of God before he can see the kingdom of God, the true church of God, on earth, and that he must be born of water and of the Spirit before he can enter into it. That is, the individual must personally in himself have faith to be baptized, immersed in water in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, in order to be buried with Christ in baptism into death. And so being born of the water, to walk in the newness of life in entering into the kingdom of God, the Church. To these the advertiser may look for the fruits he advertizes for.

Second. Where he will not find them, and hence he need not look for them. He will not find them in the man-made religions, who were sprinkled in their innocent, unconscious, infantile state, and afterwards, when they could read, were made commit to memory, and recite to a preacher, certain answers to questions, as a Sabbath school child answers questions out of the question and answer book, and then made to believe they are made Christians by the laying on of the hands of the bishop, or minister high in office in the church, without ever having experienced the work of the grace of God in their souls. Who in their common, unprejudiced senses will fail to see that this is all man-made religion, and is termed in the Scriptures as being born of blood, or the will of the flesh, or of the will of man. And as it is the will and work of man altogether, no one need look for any results higher than human nature can produce. "For no one can bring a clean thing out of an unclean," the fruits of the Spirit of God advertized for will not be found.

The writer once witnessed the sprinkling of an infant boy on a very warm August day; the little fellow was sound asleep, and would not be awakened. The minister asked the child's name. It was John. The minister let some little fresh pump water trickle from his fingers on his innocent, sleeping face, saying at the time, "John, I baptize you in the name," &c. But all the visible impression it produced on John, was a slight drawing up of his little ruby lips. Will sleeping John ever remember and have brought to his mind again and again the covenant he made with his God to live a holy life when he dedicated himself to Him in his holy baptism?

Neither will he find it when men are proclaimed, declared, and made to believe they are converted under the exciting influence and noise of praying, shouting and singing in the church, as well as playing on an instrument, the Star Spangled Banner, Hail Columbia, Yankee Doodle, and "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," all in the sacred name of religion. Neither will he find it in the churches which bear the hallowed name of the home of God, but which are made dens of thieves by selling all manner of fancy and vain things for lucre's gain in what are popularly termed fairs, for the repair of the home, or for a sofa for the pulpit, and not unfrequently a Bible for the use of the church. Nor, where in their Christmas festivities, held in the church, the children are invited to come up to the man robed in a buffalo robe, or skin, to receive presents from the child-made-believe Santa Claus.

But my soul revolts, and shrinks from a further recital of what is carried on in our land of Gospel liberty by the so-called Christian Church, under the sacred name of religion. Well may The Congregationalist advertise for the religion which produces the fruits of it. Oh Lord Jesus, how long wilt thou tarry while man is thus traducing and blaspheming thy holy and sacred cause? Wilt thou not come speedily and drive out, and cleanse thy church as thou didst the temple in Jerusalem? Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. D. P. SAYLER.

A HOME IN HEAVEN.

BY MARY E. GOOD.

Who does not desire a home in Heaven, when they are done with the troubles and trials of a sin-stained world? But we have a work to do before we can realize that Heavenly home. We cannot begin that work too early. Go in the morning of life before the evil days come when you will have to exclaim, "Had I but yielded to my Savior's gentle calling while young, it would not go so hard." Learn early to be wise. Let not the pleasures of this world stand between thee and thy God. If you do, you cannot be Christ's disciple.

Jesus is your best friend. Lean on His strong arm for support. All other friends may forsake you, but He will never. He will stand by you amid every trouble and trial, He will comfort you and go with you through the "dark vally and shadow of death," and land you safely on fair Canaan's happy shore. Would you wish for a truer and nobler friend? His word you can rely upon.

A word to you whose locks are blooming for the grave—standing as it were upon the threshold of the grave. How rapidly you are hurrying down the stream of life! One day nearer your journey's end than e'er you have been before. You feel that age is coming upon you: you are not as active in life as you once were, still you neglect the one thing most needful to complete your happiness. Yet a little longer, and all will be over with you, how can you be so unconcerned about your soul's salvation? Are you ashamed of Jesus, "that dear friend, on whom your hopes of Heaven depend?" "To-day if you will hear His voice harden not your hearts, as in the days of provocation, for what will it profit you if you gain the whole world, and lose your own soul?"

Strive to gain a home in Heaven, where there will be no separation of friends, no tears, no troubles, no trials, no sighing, no disappointments, no untrue associates. All will be calm, serene and holy. What glorious promises He has given us! All the world cannot afford such promises. Are they not worth seeking for?

Come then, put not off 'till to-morrow. Christ stands with outstretched arms to receive you. Do you think you have sinned so much that they cannot be forgiven? "Though they be as scarlet, they shall be made white as wool." Your whole life depends on Christ. How quickly could He bid you cease to live, yet He permits you to live a little longer. You may be in the enjoyment of your usual good health to-day, but ere the setting of the Sun tomorrow, you may be known no more as one of the living,—may be called to try the realities of another world. Every beat of the pulse some one is called from time to eternity. We are almost made to wonder sometimes that our time has not yet come. Prepare to dwell with Him who saith, "I am the way."

Waynesboro, Pa.

He that swims in sin must sink in sorrow.

Youth's Department.

FOR THE YOUNG.

To the children and the young generally. I will address myself, in love, to you whom I never saw in the flesh, and also to those I have often seen, I truly can say I love you all, but it often causes me to feel sorry to see so many of our young people who do not take the advice of our dear Jesus, and the apostles, and do not take warning of one who loves your soul, namely: He who has suffered and died for you, as well as for your father and mother. Oh look unto Jesus who has taken children up in his arms and blessed them. He will take you up in his church and kingdom, to-day if you will come and give up your will. Why that is easily done, just try it, and the Lord will assist and help you, as long as you will not forsake him. You that have pious parents that are in the Lord enjoy a great blessing. O how kind and obedient you should be to them; for they will try and bring you to Jesus. Now if your parents are in the Lord they will give you such instructions, as are beneficial to your souls, therefore I say with the apostle, "honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise, and that thou mayest live long on the earth, and that it may be well with thee." It appears according to what the apostle says to you, that there is a long life promised to those that love, obey and honor, the Lord, and their parents, if they tell you to stay out of bad company do so, and that is one honor, and if they tell you not to follow the vain fashions of the world and the pride of life, will be another, &c.

Oh could be said of all, the christian parent's children, that they have resisted the syren song of pleasure, and are out in pursuit of never dying pleasures, and that they are looking unto Jesus in faith and hope. Dear young reader, let me give you a good advice. In the prime of life, say with the prophet, "Lord thou wilt show to me the path of life, in thy presence is the fullness of joy and pleasure at thy right hand forevermore." Then my dear young friends, let us all take Jesus for our leader, and let us try to follow close to him, when I say him, I mean his Word. Well, says one, how shall we come unto him with divine acceptance. Gentle reader, let me tell you. Take the Word of God for the man of your counsel, and obey from the heart, the form of doctrine delivered unto us by Christ; and by this means you will gain Jesus for your friend, and he has blessed us with that principle which bears us the likeness of God, and causes us to be but a litt'e lower than the angels. It is this part that must endure through all ages, yet still we turn this immortal against him who gave it, while we should render our heartfelt gratitude to him who has blessed us so abundantly.—Do you, in your heart, return your thanks unto God who sends the rain in proper season, in order that you may have bread to eat? And when you come to consider the many other temporal blessings which you enjoy, do you feel thankful for all those blessings? Should you be laid on your sick bed, what would be your plea then?. JOSIAH BEECHLY.

LITTLE JOHNNY.—For twelve years, Johnny had been a pilgrim in life's wilderness, and now he had reached the silent river of death.

His dear mother sits by his bedside to smoothe his dying pillow, and give him the farewell kiss; but she can not cross the river with him. Will he have to cross the river alone? Is there no loving friend on the other side to cheer and welcome him?

Oh! yes. Listen to his dying words.

"Mother, see! There's Jesus."

"Where, Johnny?"

"There, mother! Don't you see Him? He's standing with his arms so, mother."

Here the dying boy stretched out his arms as wide open as he cou'd, to show how the loving arms of Jesus were open to receive him.

A few minutes more, and little Johnny had crossed the river, and his happy spirit was safe in the Savior's bosom.

Is there room in Jesus' arms for you, my little reader? Oh! yes. Although so many dear children have found rest and peace there, "yet there is room"—room for you, my little friend.—The Christian.

'TIS FATHER COMING HOME.

What more cheering, when the day
And its labors all are o'er,
Than toward home to wend my way?
Wife comes smiling to the door—
Children down the lane to meet me
Run, 'tis father coming home?
Baby clasps its hands to meet me—
All beneath my cottage home
Echoes love, and joy, and gladness,
Chasing off each thought of care,
Far dispelling gloom and sadness,
If the good wife but be there.

Correspondence.

FOREST CITY, Mo., Feb. 6th, 1872.

Dear Pilgrim: I will give a sketch of a trip I took in company with brother and sister Ziegler and brother L. Bennet, to Nebraska. Started Thursday morning, Feb. 1st, traveled across the bottom land about 14 miles, a large portion of the way was through timber, the largest timber I have seen in Missouri or anywhere e'se. Came to the Missouri River about 1 o'clock. Ferry boats all froze tight and fast. Went down the river two miles, opposite Rulow City on the Nebraska side, drove over the river on the ice with our two horse team. I thought while crossing, if the ice would give way our grave would be ready to receive us all together, but we landed safely on the Nebraska shore. How happy we felt when we were safe on shore after crossing the cold, icy river. I thought of crossing another cold, icy river which is death, and if we shall meet death as calmly as we crossed the Missouri we will certainly land safely on the shore of happy deliverance. We then passed through the city of Rulow, traveled due west seven or eight miles, came to brother John Glick's, formerly of Rockingham Co., Va. Was kindly received by brother and sister Glick and two daughters, both sisters in the church, and were well cared for, had meeting the same night at a school-house two miles off. There was a small turnout, being very cold and windy was probably, the cause of being so few, paid good attention to the word preached. Returned with Bro. Glick and family. Next morning, Friday, there was no appointment before evening, we all agreed to cross the Nemaha river on the ice to go and take a view of the Indian Reserve, and to see where the Ishmealites live and how they live. About 9 o'clock Bro. and sister Glick, Bro. and sister Ziegler, Bro. Bennet and myself, set out. We went down the Nemaha river half a mile, and began to look out for a crossing place. We had a smooth time crossing. We were on our feet at times and at other times somewhere else, but we all got over safely on the south side of the river, traveled another half mile and got in sight of the wigwams. When we got there, we saw no opening but one in the top for the smoke to escape. It was built of flag and stake somewhat in the shape of a muskrat's house. We went round where we found a hole with a buffalo hide hanging over it. Sisters Glick and Zeigler raised it and crept in, when we soon heard that there was something that lived within. Brother Glick and Bennet slipped in. Brother Zeigler and I remained outside awhile, but for fear they would see more than ourselves we also raised the shutter, and in we went. There stood a squaw over a washstand; giving us a scornful look, and leaving her tub she made for the hole and in a bound was out, muttering to herself, "no good mucky man," leaving us all in the wigwam with four little Indians, seated around the fire built in the wigwam, with a pot-rack hung about four feet high, with tea-kettle on it. All the bedding was buffalo hides. The same was for seats and table. We soon saw that our room was more acceptable than our company, raised the curtain and left the parlor. We went to look over the land that they have reserved, and it is the most beautiful land we ever have seen. If it were in market I certainly would try to get a home here. We returned to the wigwams, got sister Glick and sister Zeigler, who, having staid there until our return, were more welcome visitors than the muckey men. We now started on our return toward Nemahan river, went just where an Indian man was chopping a large walnut tree to make posts. He was a young, pleasant looking man, but could not talk the English language, our conversation was short. We recrossed the river much like the first time, got to brother Glick's about 11 o'clock. We now began to make arrangements to go beyond Fall City, three miles, to the next appointment, at early candle light. Sister Glick soon had a good dinner ready for us, and after partaking of it brother Glick had conveyance at hand, got on board and off we went in a sweeping trot, having about nine miles to go. Arrived at Fall City, Neb., at 3 o'clock, drove through the center of the City which, by the way, is a considerable place of business. Arrived at Bro. Christian Forney's, was received with kindness, sister Forney was alone, Bro. Forney being away, but soon came home. We were soon seated by a hot stove until supper was ready, and when over, and sister got herself and children ready, we all set out on foot for the place of meeting, it being only half a mile distant, got there in good time, and met with Bro. John Forney, Sr., and Elder Jonathan Lichty of Kansas, and Elder Stump who is the overseer of the Fall City Church, where we are now. We here met with a full house, good attention to what was preached by the two or three of the brethren, which we thought made some good impression on the hearers. Meeting closed and dismissed we returned home with Bro. C. Forney, who is a very active, zealous young brother in the ministry. Next day, Saturday, 3rd of Feb., we met the members of the Fall City Church in the fear of the Lord in a church capacity. The object of the meeting was to set apart two brethren for the ministry. After prayer and fasting and exhortation we asked our Heavenly Father in humble prayer to show unto us who He had chosen to take a part in the ministry, who knew the hearts of all men, and our desire was to do His will, and for God to guide us all by His Holy Spirit in the right choice. We then repaired to a room to ourselves and took the voice of the church separate which resulted in the choice of the beloved brethren Joseph Johnston and Michael Lichty, two young brethren. I pray God our Father to give them grace and strength for the work whereunto He has called them. After meeting, went home with brother John Forney, where we were kindly cared for. After taking some refreshment returned to the schoolhouse, met with a full house, appeared to be anxious to hear the Word preached. Two of the brethren preached to them as God gave ability seemingly with good impression. Paul has planted and Apollas watered but God must give the increase. After dismissing went home again with brother John Forney. Next day the brethren had four appointments, and divided the ministering brethren into four companies. It fell to our lot to go seven miles south from this place, which suited us very well, as it was snowing and the wind blowing from the north cold and strong. As the wind was on our backs, it was not so disagreeable as it would have been to face it. At 9 o'clock brother Zeigler and wife and brother Bennett and myself bade farewell to our kind brethren and sisters in the Fall City Church and started for our appointment, arrived there in time but very cold and chilly; it had turned very cold, so much so that people did not turn out, small congregation to-day to what we had north of Fall City, and I thought the brethren had too many appointments and too close together in a new, thinly settled country as Nebraska is at present. If we have meeting near a town or city there is nearly always a large congregation. We filled the appointment and then turned our faces toward Missouri; went home with our brother John Glick and wife, where we made ourselves at home over night. More anon.

A. J. Cobb.

Dear Pilgrim: As brother Young and myself were on a mission of love in Fulton county, Pa., I thought to drop you a few lines for your readers. We left home on the 28th of January, went to brother D Teneley's in the Little Cove, had our first meeting at Teneley's school-house; over night with brother Teneley. Next morning started to Big Cove, took dinner with brother D. Butterbaugh, landed in Licking Creek Valley, at brother George Malotts, had meeting at Turkeyfoot school-house. Next day had meeting at Bro. Absalom Malott's house, in the evening at sister Malott's and also on Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Evening at Joe Run school house; went home with friend Daniel Lake—had meeting at friend Lake's on Thursday at 11 o'clock. This was one of the most interesting meetings that we had. The influence of the Holy Spirit seemed to be felt throughout the whole congregation. In the evening went four miles to friend Morgan Dishong, had meeting. Next day had meeting at friend Caleb Wink's, and also at night, being Saturday. On Sunday had our last appointment at school-house No. 1, Licking Township. Went home with friend Dishong for dinner. We had a cold trip, but our meetings were well attended all the time, and great interest paid to the preached word, and I do say that the people in that vicinity were the most sociable and clever that I ever met. I hope the Lord will reward them for their love shown to His people, and that they may make haste and delay not to do all the commandments. We baptized three persons and several have made application to be received when we go over again, which will be on the second Sunday in March. Landed home Monday, Feb. 5th.

Yours in love,

G. W. Brucker.

Dear Pilgrim: As a word of encouragement I would say that as far as I have heard, the Pilgrim is a welcome visitor in our locality. It has found some new homes and I hope it will find some more. I do think it is a very good way to preach, and its sermons can be read and meditated upon during the week, giving so much in addition to what we hear preached on the Sabbath. Brethren, give us more concerning the plan of salvation, it may be the means of bringing many precious souls to a knowledge of the truth. It is much more easily understood by reading than hearing the Word preached, from the fact that it can be read and reread until it is fairly understood.

D. M. F.

Dear Pilgrim:—I performed a short pilgrimage to Ashland and Knox counties Ohio. I left home on the 22d of Dec. 1871, and arrived at Loudonville Station, on the P. Ft. W. and C. R. R., the morning of the 23rd. In the evening of same day, began meeting in Bro. Morgan Workman's Congregation, and continued morning and evening, until the eve. of the 28th. Meeting at different places, but all the above time in Workman's Congregation.

On the 29th there was a choice for speaker, and the lot fell on Bro. David Brubaker. May God make him instrumental in winning many souls to Christ. On the 30th I was taken to the Delaware Congregation in Knox county, where brother John Workman is overser. Here I continued until the 3rd of January 1872. Enjoyed a number of good meetings with the pilgrim band in this Congregation, it being my first visit here, I was a pilgrim stranger to them, and they were also strangers to me in person, but I felt we were of the same family, and "Fellow citizens with the saints, and were built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone."

We had the pleasure of seeing some added to the pilgrim-band. May God help us all to be faithful, and gain that "better country." I arrived at home on the 5th of January 72, and found my family well. Thank God.

Fraternally yours,

John Wise.

Dear Brother:—I must tell you that the Pilgrim is a welcome visitor in my family, and is fast growing in favor in our Church. One brother told me he would not do without it if it would cost $5.00, another one said he thought more of it than ever, and would not do without it under any consideration. Two years ago there was not one copy in our district, that I know of, now I alone have sent 32 names. D. H. B.

Dear Pilgrim:—Find enclosed, pay for my Pilgrim and that of sister Elizebeth Dicks. I would not know what to do if the Pilgrim did not come, as we hail it with joy. It always contains something to direct our way to Zion. I have felt to thank the Lord that your paper comes so regularly, bringing with it the tidings of peace, for a paper that brings nothing but peace, I love to read. May the Lord prosper you in the work of spreading the truth. A. H. B.

Dear Brother in the Lord: By permission of Divine Providence, I am permitted to address a few lines to you. First we join in sending our love and salutation to the Pilgrim Family. We are, at present, all enjoying good health, hoping you all may enjoy the blessings of Heaven, both spiritual and temporal. Should we not then truly raise our hearts in thankfulness to the disposer of all good for all the blessings which we daily receive from his bountiful hand?

The Pilgrim is a welcome visitor to our home, and we are always glad when it comes. It brings us wholsome counsel and church news which is very interesting to us, and we think it should visit every family of the Brethren, and not only the Brethren, but all our neighbors. It shows the sinner the error of his way and points out the way of salvation. Then brethren Editors go on, and shun not to declare the whole counsel of God, and you shall have our best wishes.

Yours in love, D. B.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

John Shively.

Pyrmont, Ind.

Please announce that we intend holding our District Meeting, of the North East District of Ohio, on Tuesday 7th of May, 1872, at the big meeting house of the Mohecan church, Wayne Co., Ohio, five miles South of West Salem, on the Atlantic and Great Western Rail Road, and 12 miles northwest of Wooster, on the Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road. We fondly hope that every branch composing this District will be represented, and especially those branches that did not represent themselves heretofore. Those coming by the Atlantic and Great Western, will please notify brother Jacob Garver at Lattasburg, who will see that conveyances will be furnished to convey all from West Salem to place of meeting. Those coming by Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road, will please notify the undersigned at New Pittsburg, who will see that they be conveyed to place of meeting. By order of the church.

George Wonst.

Editor's Department.

WORDS TO PATRONS.

1st. Every reader of the PILGRIM is invited to contribute to its columns. Essays, Church News, Obituaries &c. are solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. If you desire a good and interesting paper, help us to make it such by furnishing the material.

2nd. Be sure and write plainly, your name, post office, county and state, in every letter and do not expect us to credit money and change addresses, unless you tell us to whom, and where sent.

3rd. Never send money without giving name and address of those who paid it.

4th. In sending lists, mark who are old and who are new subscribers. Please remember this.

5th. Money may be safely sent in Drafts, Checks, Postal Orders drawn on Huntingdon P O or in registered letters All amounts under $2.00, may be sent at our risk, if put in the envelope and carefully sealed and directed.

"THE SPRINKLED DISCIPLE"

Under this caption the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, of the 13th inst., gives the particulars of a case of "sprinkling" by a Campbellite Christian Minister. Such cases are rather scarce in the history of that sect, and our people will be interested in this one. It appears that a Mr. Kelly, near Wellsville, Ohio, was sick and dying. He wished to be baptized, but his condition precluded immersion As the family were mostly Disciples, a minister of that Church was sent for, and came to see him, and being asked to baptize him, and finding that immersion was out of the question, at the request of the dying man consented to baptize him by sprinkling. The minister's name is Rev. Mr. Baxter.

The incident as narrated by this Mr. Baxter throws a flood of doubt upon the practice of immersion. Here is a case when it was impracticable. Did God ever command anything impracticable? No. Where, then, our immersionist friends advance to the front, and point to a case like that of Mr. Kelly where immersion is out of the question—dangerous—impossible—is not the evidence overwhelming that it is not a Scriptural mode of baptism.?" —Northwestern Christian Advocate.

REMARKS. Here is a sounder for immersionists. Just look at a case where immersion is both dangerous and impossible. This will certainly invalidate and upset the whole theory (?) This is a common style of argument, and is resorted to because there is nothing better. We were credibly informed a short time ago, there was a certain minister undertook to show the fallacy of immersion, and to prove that it was impracticable in all cases, he related a case of baptism which was to be performed by one of our brethren, in which both the administrator and candidate were drowned. The affair occurred in Medina Co., Ohio, and the worthy gentleman was familiar with, both the locality and circumstance, but it happened that there was present, one who was acquainted with the brethren in Medina county Ohio, and knew that such a thing never occurred. The minister got a scent of this bit of information, and confessed that he was not himself acquainted there, but had it from one who was. The matter was investigated a little farther, and the whole thing proved to be a base falsehood, invented to suit the occasion. A similar case was reported to have happened an administrator of the Disciple Church some where in New York State, and was largely copied and commented upon by pedo-baptist papers, but unfortunately for them, the thing also proved to be false, and the large air castles fell. We will relate one more circumstance An old zealous minister, in treating the subject of baptism related the following circumstance: "In a barren desert where there was neither water nor vegetation, two travellers met. The one was a minister, and the other a sinner. The minister, like Philip, preached Christ unto him, and among other things, we suppose, told him that he must be born again, or baptized,—the sinner was converted, and must be baptized straightway, but but—there was no water to be found, —but God requires no impossibilities, and the man of God takes up a handful of sand and baptizes him and he goes on his way rejoicing. "The minister says: "I believe that that baptism was just as good as if it had been water."

This is a parallel case with the "Sprinkled Disciple" and we confess that both are equally valid. Water and sand are both valuable when properly used, but sand is a poor substitute for water, yet we contend that it represents water as fully as sprinkling does a burial in baptism.

The fact that this man could not be immersed had not the least bearing against the ordinance, as hundreds and thousands may die without the privilege of having the ordinance performed by either mode.

The case under consideration, is certainly a poor representative of faith. He first wishes to be immersed—this being denied, he catches a straw No. 2, not through faith, but like a dying Voltair, "if there be any benefit in it, let me have it."—"If there be a God, save me," so that we rationally conclude that his salvation would have been as secure without it as with it. The idea of making death-bed Christians by administering baptism, is of doubtful propriety, and without a precedent in the Bible, and the less it is preached the better. We have thousands of ungodly men and women who are determined to serve the devil to the last moment, and then when laid on a bed of sickness and death, they become frightened and without a proper knowledge of salvation, are willing to accept any terms that may be offered, just like the man who wished to be immersed, but rather than miss would be satisfied with sprinkling. Now the question arises, did God require an impossibility at the hands of this man? Certainly not. He undoubtedly knew his duty long before his sickness, and that was his possible time to prepare for death, but he did it not, like thousands of others, who leave the possible time pass by unimproved, and then after the day of grace is past, they want God to change the plan of salvation to make it possible for them to be saved. Stop a little friend, before you condemn the plan of salvation to accommodate those who spend all their prime in sin, and after they can serve satan no longer, are willing to return to God the unimproved talent without a farthing of interest. God does not need such servants, and we are doubtful of their acceptance if they were baptized a thousand times.

We do not think it wrong to baptize such when it can be done according to Divine appointment, but to deviate from that—never, NEVER. God's grace may reach every case, but it is our duty to work to the line and plummet.

THE DEBATE. Our Western brethren promised us a report of the debate between Eld. R. A. Miller, and—Jewell (Disciple) for publication through the PILGRIM. This debate is said to have been one of great importance, and will be read with interest by all. Every one interested in the questions discussed, should send at once for the PILGRIM, and thus have the pleasure of reading the discussion FREE. Our readers will please let this fact be known, so that all may have an opportunity of subscribing in time to get the whole discussion. We will announce the time of beginning as soon as it is determined, in the meantime we kindly solicit our agents and friends to persevere in getting new subscribers. Remember, subscriptions may commence at any time and run one year, or to the end of the year at the rate of eleven cents per month.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for March has been received. Its contents more than confirm our high opinion of that magazine's character. The very instructive articles on FISH CULTURE IN AMERICA," and "AGUE and FEVER" are alone worth more than a year's subscription. But besides these there is a long list of readable matter. Attorney-General Williams; Expression; Harriet Hosmer; Our Horse-Cars; Will it Pay? Writing for the Press; The Arctic Regions; James Fisk, Jr.; Lord Brougham's Ghost; Rev. George H. Hepworth, etc., with fine portraits and numerous illustrations. Price 30 cts., or $3 a year. S. R. Wells, 389 Bacadway, New York.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL. presents the following interesting table of contents for February: Dora, chapter II, with illustrations—Helen C Weeks. Parsonage doves, with illustration—by Mary E. C. Wyeth. Quest of the flower—by Edgar Fawcet. Number Three—by A. H. Pae Lillie's Valentine—by Olive Thorne. Summer days at Kirkwood, chapter VII—by Emily Huntington Miller. Afloat on an Ice Cake, with illustration—by Chas. E. Hurd. The Rivals, with full page illustration—by Gerald North. Trudy's pocket is filled with the usual variety of spicy letters from the little folks; and Private Queer's Knapsack is crowded with things to puzzle the minds of the boys and girls for a month to come. If you want a magazine that is always fresh, sparkling, and vigorous, subscribe for THE LITTLE CORPORAL. Terms, $1.50 a year. JOHN E. MILLER, Publisher, Chicago, Ill.

PERSONAL.

DAVID MILLER. Please send us the names and addresses of those you sent us, that have paid, that we may credit them.

SAMUEL SOLLENBERGER. Your subscription is paid and so marked.

JOHN HOOVER. Your letter containing $1.25 never reached us, but we lose it according to our offer—See words to patrons. Your name is now booked.

S. M. PRETSMAN. Your first letter containing $3.00 never came to hand. How did you send it?

ELD. WOLF of Cal. informs us that their Eastern mails have long been intercepted on account of heavy snows and rains, tearing up bridges and railroads generally, and that PILGRIMS 1 and 2 only reached them a short time ago. The PILGRIM still finds open doors on the Pacific coast, with a hearty God-speed for its future success. Thank you, dear brethren, for your interest in our humble efforts to send the tidings of peace from shore to shore, and we solicit the prayers of the united church, that God may give us wisdom to man the ship in such away, as to meet the approbation of God and, result in the salvation of souls.

STATISTICS OF THE WORLD.

Editors of the Pilgrim: The following curious and somewhat interesting sketch came to my notice, which I shall now copy for the PILGRIM. It relates to the population of the world.

There are on the globe 1.288.000.000 souls, of which 360.000.000 are Caucasians, 522.000.000 are Mongolians, 190.000.000 are Ethiopians, 176.000.000 Malayans, and 1.000.000 are Indo-Americans.

There are 8.612 languages spoken, and 1.000 religions. The yearly mortality of the globe is 33.333.333 persons. This is at the rate of 91.551 per day, 3.730 per hour, 62 per minute. So each pulsation of the heart marks the decease of some human creature. The average of human life is 33 years. One fourth of the population dies at or before the age of 7 years. One half at or before 17 years.

Among 10.000 persons, one arrives at the age of 100, one in 500 attains the age of 90, one in 100 lives to the age of 70. Married men live longer than single ones. In 100 persons 95 many and more marriages occur in June and December than any other months in the year.

One eighth of the whole population is military. Professions exercise a great influence on longevity. In 1.000 individuals who arrive at the age of 70 years, 42 are priests, orators, or public speakers, 40 are agriculturists, 33 are workmen, 32 are soldiers or military employes, 29 advocate or engineers, 27 professors and doctors.—Those who devote their lives to the prolongation of others, die the soonest.

There are 335.000.000 nominal Christians. There are 3 000.000 Israelites. There are 60.000 Asiatic religions. There are 160.000.000 Mohammedans. There are 200.000 Pagans.

In the Christian Churches 170.000 000 profess the Roman Catholic, 75.000.000 profess the Greek faith, 80.000.000 profess the Protestant.

D. B. CONDRIE.

A DISPATCH from San Francisco states, that by the next season the railroad to the Yosemite Valley will be complete within eight miles, both by the Mariposa and the Coultervillie routes, and that there will be only two-and-a-half miles of horseback ride into the Valley, The fare from San Francisco is stated at $22, and the time one day and a half. Another dispatch says the snow is forty feet deep in the Valley. In that case, the Valley will be inaccessible before July.

DURING the illness of the Prince of Wales, Sir Moses Montefiore sent a telegram to the Jewish authorities at Jerusalem, requesting them to pray for the recovery of the royal sufferer. The rabbis replied that among other ceremonies performed by them, "we also sent a congregation of pious and learned men to pray the whole night at the tomb of our mother Rachel (may her merit protect us!); while, at the same time we ordered a congregation of equally pious and learned men to call upon our God, before the western wall of the ancient Temple, from which spot we are told by our ancestors, the Divine Glory never departed.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have coquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Spenker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlinear Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding. $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871. Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00 Ar	4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 31	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum't	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 13	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 22	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABSQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - - -	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	- - - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	- - -	1.00
Turkey morocco,	- - -	$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen,	- - - -	5 50

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.50
" Hill "	1.45
" Winter red "	1.50
CORN.	.50
OATS.	.38
RYE.	.85
BARLEY.	.65

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

A GREAT CHNCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new seven (7) strand white Wire Clothe Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address atonce Hudson River Wire Works, corner Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill. Aug. 22.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address,

DANIEL KAGARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. 80cts.

Per Dozen,

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.

Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion and sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1 [illegible]
Book paper, " "	1 [illegible]
Eleven copies, [eleventh for agt.]	$1[illegible]

Any number above that at the same rate.

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa

Berkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MARCH 5, 1872. NO 10

ESSAYS.

For the Pilgrim.

THE LEPROSY.

"And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed. And saith unto him, see thou say nothing to any man; but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them." Mark 1: 42, 44.

This Scripture falling, or being in the lesson of a young sister in the Bible class, or school, was asked the following questions by the teacher, and received the following proper answers.

QUES. What, or who is a leper?

ANS. One affected, or afflicted with the leprosy?

QUES. What are those things which Moses commanded?

ANS. Two birds, cedar wood, scarlet wool and hyssop.

QUES. Can you describe the ceremonies used on that occasion, try and state it as near as you can?

ANS. One of the birds were slain, or killed in an earthen vessel over running water, the living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop, and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water; and he shall sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy seven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall let the living loose into the open field And he that is to be cleansed shall wash his clothes, and shear off all his hair, and wash himself in water, that he may be clean.

QUES. Can you describe the symptons, and general character of this disease?

ANS. It is what may be called a skin disease, but is also found in clothes and houses &c., but I am not able to particularize it.

For the benefit of the unlearned reader I will give a brief account of this loathsome disease, as I find it in some medical, and other books.

Leprosy being a foul, loathsome disease, and contagious, hence those persons afflicted with it were excluded from the society of other people, they sometimes formed societies of their own. We find four of them in one society in the days of Elisha. (2 Kings 7: 7, 8.) And ten in another in the days of the Savior. (Luke 17: 12.) The Jews generally supposed the leprosy to be inflicted by God for the punishment of some crime. For reproaching Moses, Miriam was infected, for treachery and lying to procure clothes and money, Gehazi was smitten, for profanely presuming to offer incense, King Uzziah was punished with it. Moses in the law mentioned no medicine for it, and it does not appear that the Jews applied any remedies, but waited the cure only from God.

Whenever a Jew sospected himself, or was suspected by others, to be infected with this fearful disease, he presented himself for inspection to the priest, who in trying him, appears was in no danger of taking the disease from him. A swelling with a white spot bright and redish, created strong suspicions of leprosy, and the person was shut up several days, when he was again suspected by the priest. And if the hair in the sore had turned white or yellow, and was in sight deeper than the skin, and continued to spread in the flesh, and if there was quick raw flesh in the swollen part, if there was a white redish sore in the bald head the priest pronounced him unclean; he was excluded from the city, or camp till God should heal him, and he was obliged to cover his upper lip, and call out to him that approached him that he was unclean. But if on the second inspection, the sore was not in sight deeper than the skin, if it had not spread during the seven days, if the hair on the infected place was not turned white, or if the plague, being thrown out from the inside, and had covered the whole body with leprosy, the priest pronounced him clean.

When it pleased God to heal one that had been pronounced unclean, the priest went out of the camp or city and inspected him, and for his ceremonial cleansing was used, and employed the above, as answered to the question. What are, or were the things which Moses commanded in the law, so far from the Bible? Now from the books.

The leprosy is twofold in kind and degree. That of the Jews was probably much the same with the elephantiasis, or leprosy of the Arabs, Egyptians, &c., which came into and raged in Italy about sixty years before the birth of our Savior. It is chiefly found in warmer climates. It begins within the body, and throws out a sanious moisture that corrupts the outside of it, covering it with a kind of white scales attended with a most tormenting itch. The afflicted person becomes hoarse; his blood becomes mingled with whitish particles, and the scum of it so dry that vinegar poured thereon boils up, and salt applied to it does not dissolve; and so strongly bound together with imperceptible threads that calcined lead thrown into it swims above; his hair becomes stiff, and if plucked brings away rotten flesh with it; his eyes become red and inflamed similar to a cat; his tongue becomes dry, black, swollen, ulcerated, and poisoned; his face resembles a half burnt coal, furrowed with hard knobs, greenish at bottom, and white at the top. The body becomes so hot that a fresh apple held but an hour in the hand will be considerably withered and wrinkled; the parts infected become insensible, and at last the nose, fingers, &c, fall off, being rotten.

In the tenth and eleventh centuries this terrible distemper was common in Europe, introduced, it is supposed, by the Arabs and Moors, and it is said there were about 15,000, or according to Matthew Paris, 9,000 hospitals for lepers. At present it is scarcely known in Europe, unless we suppose the syphillis to be a kind of it. Some time ago a leprosy resembling that of the Africans terribly afflicted the people of Barbadoes, especially the blacks."

This is the account the books give of this dreadful malady, and it is a cause of sincere gratitude to God that this dreadful disease is di-appearing from the earth. The writer, some years ago, saw a man afflicted with a loathsome-looking skin disease distressing to behold. The physicians thought it was a species of leprosy. Be it so or not, death relieved him of his affliction. Does not this leprosy represent the corruption of our natures in the reigning power thereof, which is most penal, defiling and spreading in its nature, and separating us from God and heaven. Not every scab, sore, or boil in the flesh was a leprosy. Neither is every act of sin and impurity marks of uncleanness in the soul. Inward uprightness, repentance and strivings against sin, with a sense of the vileness of our hearts and nature, are tokens that we are not under the dominion of sin. "Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Rom. 7: 17. So at every appearance of evil we must wash ourselves in the Savior's blood through faith, repentance and prayer. (I speak of those who are in the church.)

It was the scab or boil that in sight was deeper than the skin, and that spread in the flesh that was leprosy. So delight in sin and iniquity, wilfully and presumptuously indulging in ungodliness, pride, exaltation, and self righteousness, enmity against God, and not being subject to His laws are the natural workings of the flesh, and if these are not mortified and brought into subjection by repentance and conversion, will spread and bring the soul under the dominion of fleshly lusts. There is no deliverance from this plague of leprosy but by the grace of God, and the application of Jesus' blood, and gift of the Holy Spirit, by faith, repentance and baptism.

There was also leprosy in garments. If greenish or redish spots appeared in a garment, it was suspicious of leprosy, and the priest must inspect it, and shut it up seven days. If on his second examination, he found the tokens of leprosy spread, he tore out the infected parts, and ordered it to be washed, and if the token were not spread he ordered it to be washed; and if on the third inspection he found the tokens depated, it was again washed and pronounced clean. But if on the third and fourth inspection the plague continued after the infected parts had been torn out, the whole garment must be burnt with fire. Leprosy being a representative of sin, it is manifest that the leprosy of sin will infect our clothing. I fear many garments are full of it. The unconverted are carried away with it. These, in repentance, must tear out the infected parts, that is, remove from the garment all the unnecessary or superfluous parts, retaining only that which is useful and good, and if this cannot be done, burn the whole with fire.

Houses also become infected with leprosy. If pale reddish spots appeared in the wall lower than the rest it was suspicious of leprosy, and the priest must inspect it, and shut it up seven days. If at the end of seven days the symptoms were increased, the infected parts were removed and pure ones put in their place. If the leprosy again appeared the house must be pulled down and the materials cast into an unclean place. But if the house got cleansed, a sprinkling of the mixture of the water and blood of the offered birds removed the defilement, &c. Query. Are not some of our houses full of leprosy? Would it not be well to remove from them the infected parts? The removal and throwing out pianos, gilded mirrors, and lust encouraging pictures, would be no disadvantage to the comfort and convenience of the house at all, and would at least be an evidence that we are not conformed to the leprous world in these useless things, which bring ruin and destruction upon families, churches, nations, and the world itself.

D. P. SAYLER.

For the Pilgrim.

VALUABLE HINTS.

Psalm, 119: 17. GIMEL.

Dear Friend:—In our last, we made some remarks in regard to how the existence of God should be understood, whether in shape as that of the body of man, or if God is existing without such, and is a spirit From the testimony and reasoning, we should deem it sufficient in favor of the latter, but since the first theory has got a fast hold on the mind of many, more testimony is needful to make the subject clearer. We would however say here, that we believe it eminently necessary that a worshiper of God, should be fully persuaded and established, in regard to his faith in the true existence of God, and not think light of it or be careless, whether he worships a God in a body, or a God as a Spirit, for much depends on this, as God only accepts a truly rendered service, and in the contrary case, the words Christ spoke to the Samaritan, that they did not know what they worshiped, may be justly applied to us. John, 4: 22, 23, he said: "But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father, in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." By this we are admonished, that whatever we do religiously we should not make a minor matter, nor any part that constitutes the doctrine of Christ, and the service by which God is adored. Christ has not taught any non-essentials for the regeneration of man, or the glorification of God's holy name.

These minor matters are only formed by those who wish to evade the true meaning of the word, and take all the sacred writings in a literal sense, and not look at their spiritual import, and are thereby misled, and mislead others. Christ's literal works, sayings, parables, commandments, precepts, and examples all have spiritual significations, and the literal observance thereof will, undoubtedly bring a rich spiritual reward. Here in this life, joy and satisfaction, for having done our duty and beyond this, the things which are treasured up for the well doers.

But to our former subject, in regard to God having a body, and generally those who hold to a literal meaning of the word only assert this, and refer to those passages already considered, as also, that the Lord God appeared unto Abraham, and as Abraham seen and talked to him, and gave him to eat and to drink, that he must have a body, also that Jacob wrestled with God a whole night, and saw God face to face, and still further. That Moses had seen such parts of God, that there could be no doubt as to the fact of this opinion. However since we have alluded to this difference, it is our duty to examine the passages and give our understanding.

In the history of the Patriarch and faithful Abraham we can see that the Lord appeared unto him, not less than nine different times, sometimes by voice, at a time in a vision. Gen. 15: 1. At another time again to make the notable Covenant, Circumcision with him. Chap. 17. And again the Lord appeared unto him in the plains of Mamre. Chap. 18th. "The men stood by him," and after they had eat and drank the meal prepared for them and had given Sarah the promise of Isaac, turned their faces toward Sodom, while yet Abraham stood before the Lord, and speaking in behalf of Sodom and the righteous that might be there. In the last verse it says, "and the Lord went his way as soon as he left communing with Abraham, and Abraham returned unto his place.

This would all seem that God was in a bodily shape, the same as Abraham, but when we consider, that He had, and does appear to man, in diverse ways and used different means, to confer favors, and make known his will to them, as He had to do it in that age and time in the absence of prophets and as yet no written word, there is still no ground to think otherwise, than that God used such powers of which he was in ample possession, to reach the accomplishment of His own purpose. He who gave man organs to speak, hear and see, can also convey to their minds such intelligence, as He thinks for their good, without having the same organs as they have in the temporal body of men. He is almighty, and therefore can send Angels or Messengers in form and shape, as the case requires it, and where it is done by or through His power or His attributes, it is done by Him. This always was the mode in which God communed with His people, and promulgated His will and design, before his own wise appointed time, to send His only begotten Son into the world, to reveal Him as He is, and what was His will and good pleasure

So God was before the Creation of Heaven and earth, so he was in creation, and all the time, of its preservation, so He was in the time when He, through Christ Jesus His Son, began the regeneration, and so He will be the universal unchangeable God all in all, through never ending eternity. But not to evade what may seem any testimony against our position, in the 22nd. chap. of Gen., we have the notable circumstance of the offering of Isaac. And it came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, "Abraham," and he said, "behold here I am." And He said; "Take now thy son thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest and get thee into the Land of Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of." Here it is said that God tempted Abraham, therfore God could not be that all wise and foreknowing being, or else He would have known that Abraham was faithful and obedient to all the requirements of God, and that it was the same in wrestling with Jacob, if he would hold out faithful and persevere to the end. We cannot see that these trials and temptations were made to satisfy God, whether Abraham was as faithful as he should be, but it was so instituted for the good of Abraham. He had an opportunity here to try himself, to examine into his own faith and confidence in the Lord whom he served. God knew what would be the issue, but Abraham did not and besides God wanted to show His faithful servant by this manifestation, the goodness and loveliness of his own nature, that he would also, in the future and fulness of time, give His only begotten Son for an offering for the sins of the world. This was the first intimation of the promise afterwards more fully given to Abraham, of the coming of the Redeemer into the world, that was ever given to this man, as it did, in time, come to pass, and can therefore not be attributed to imperfection to any of the attributes of God, and so it is in the case of Jacob and all other similar cases. God works by and through His creatures, for their own good, to promote their enjoyment of life here, and their happiness hereafter. His glory is augmented in proportion to the benefit received by His creatures. In Exodus 24th., we have an instance when Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy Elders saw the Lord God of Israeal, but it does not say whether they saw Him in person, or by any such kind of manifestation, yet in this our time, some draw from this that it was a visible display, or manifestation of His person. But from all it seems to us, that God in this instance appeared unto them in the fulness of His power as he had to do in so many cases, to accomplish the journey of such a rebelious multitude as the Israelites in their travels from the land of bondage to that of the promised deliverance. In the 17th. verse it says; "and the sight of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel. In the 33rd. chap, same book, much talk took place between God and Moses. In the 11th verse we read; "And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face as a man speaketh unto a friend." And many such sayings are contained in the same chapter, by which those initiated in the same belief may strain a conclusion, that really God did as a man appear unto Moses, and did talk to Him as man to man, but when we read all and compare all reasonably, with what the Scriptures in general teaches us about the nature and disposition of His being, it will undoubtedly bring us to a different conclusion.

17th. verse. And the Lord said unto Moses: "I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken, for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name, and he (Moses) said, I beseech thee show me thy glory" "And the Lord said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the Lord before thee, and will be gracious to whom I will, and show mercy to whom I will. And he said, "thou canst not see my face and live." And the Lord said; "Behold there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock, and it shall come to pass while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and I will cover thee with my hand, and thou shalt see my back parts, but my face shall not be seen." From this connection it is argued, that if God had no body, He could have no back parts, and because He said my face shall not be seen, He must have a face, or else He would not say so. But it should be recollected that there are back or inferior parts of a person as also faces, except those of man. We have heretofore said, that the being of God was composed of His attributes, or parts, as we also may term them, for in many of the works of God, they need not necessarially be united, for each is a power itself. In the manifestations cited above, we see only a few which are made visible. The glory of the Lord was like devouring fire in the sight of the children of Israel. This also Moses desired to see. But no doubt in a greater degree than here displayed only to the eyes of Israel, yet this was not Jehovahs design.—The time to show His glory in perfect fulness, was when He would be manifested to the whole world through Jesus Christ His beloved Son. Here He delivered a portion of the Human family, and this only from a temporal bondage and bodily servitude, and in the other of which this is only a type, he would deliver and redeem the whole of Adam's posterity, and graciously give liberty to all, bound by transgression and sin, and lead them to the land of eternal peace and rest.

Thus in His glory, passing by Moses, and His goodness, he only was made acquainted with such manifestations as may be compared to the back parts. The face, or fullest goodness and glory of God were only displayed through the Gospel by Jesus Christ, and not at that time, for so limited a purpose.

Moses, notwithstanding the many testimonies he had from God, still doubted, either in the ability of God to lead Israel through the wilderness to the promised land, or in His will so to do, as He had so often declared, hence the many extraordinary manifestations of His glory and goodness.

S. T.

PATIENCE.

Patience is defined as the power of expecting long without discontent—yes, the waiting for that which is long withheld or never comes at all. The earnest expectation, the giving up and utter abnegation of self, the casting aside all thought of personal interest, and taking up patiently the "purpose and burden of life." Patient to endure whatever the Lord or circumstances may bring about for the trial of our faith. The one great virtue of life is patience, which, the soul holding securely, may defy the world to dislodge from her fastness. All other virtues center in and cluster around this, for to her is given the empire, and among her subjects she sits a queen, holding firmly, with her right hand, her heaven born principles, and with her left dispensing the charities that sweeten life.

Though life may be solitary and joyless, though everything that pleases and delights may be removed, yet possessing the soul in patience, no evil may be feared and no shadow of impending wrong will be able to move the firm foundation on which the soul in its virgin purity rests. The thorns springing up along our pathway lose their power to harm, and the petty annoyances are deprived of their sting and instead of no rose without a thorn, we pluck the thorns, and, lo! they become, by the wonderful transforming power within, roses fragrant with life and beauty. "God is patient because eternal:" were he not we had long since been cut off as cumberers of the ground. Our hard-heartedness and hypocrisies, our lukewarmness and slackness of duty, and our eagerness to walk in the ways of the world—all these things should make us cry out, Still, O Lord, our fevered pulses that rush to do evil, and tone down our natures until we become God-like in patience and endurance. Help us to rise triumphant over that which is of the "earth earthy," and ever be able to say when tempted. "Get thee behind me satan," but carefully avoid letting him from that position push us forward towards the commission of the premeditated sin, as I fear we too often in our self-confidence permit him.

Sometimes in our impatience we murmur because our burden seems too heavy to be born, and the idlers in the vineyard stand with folded hands, nor by word or motion help us on our way, but remember, O impatient soul! that "they also serve who only stand and wait." Wherever your mission finds you, go to work bravely, cheerfully, service in one department is as acceptable as in another, only do your duty where you stand and your reward will be sure.

—"Then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

L. H. M.

Euston, West Va.

For the Pilgrim.

"LOVEST THOU ME MORE THAN THESE?"

This interrogatory was uttered by Jesus the third time that He had manifested Himself to His disciples, after He was risen from the dead. This, however, is a subject that may be called into question, and different conclusions deduced from the same. We are aware that some hold the idea that Jesus, when He said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me more than these," had reference to fishes, that is, to understand Him to interrogate Peter whether he loved Him more than he loved these fishes, or in other words, his former occupation of fishing, because Peter formerly had been a fisherman. Now we do not believe this was the way in which Jesus would have Peter to understand Him, but we think He undoubtedly had direct reference to His other disciples that were present on that occasion, when He said to Peter, "lovest thou me more than these," that is, we understand Jesus to ask Peter the question "loves' thou me more than these love me?" as the German translation has it, which we think conveys the idea more clearly of the subject under consideration.

We find by investigating the Scriptures that Peter doubtless held the first place among the Apostles, for we learn that he is named first in every list of the Apostles; and we also get the idea that he was more rash and forward in his actions and doings than were his fellow-apostles, because we find that at the last supper after they had sung a hymn and had gone out into the mount of Olives, and when Jesus said to His disciples "All ye shall be offended because of me this night," he made the repeated protestations of unalterable fidelity, so soon to be falsified by his fall.—Jesus then, after He was risen from the dead, and had manifested Himself the third time to His disciples, said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me more than these?" &c. Here the thrice repeated questions of Christ doubtless had reference to the three protestations and denials, and was thrice met by answers full of love and faith. So we now sum up our preliminaries by saying that we believe, since Peter was first in rank among the Apostles, and yet thus denied Jesus, that he again, for this reason, was asked by Jesus, "lovest thou me more than these," in order to be reinstated again and thus receive the formal commission to feed Christ's sheep, rather as one who had forfeited his place, and could not resume it without such an authorization.

S. F. REIMAN.

Berlin, Pa.

PETER'S REPENTANCE.

Where and how he spent his two dismal days following his denial, we know not. After that look from him in the judgment hall, he never saw his Lord alive again. But as on the third morning we find him and John together, we may believe that it was from the lips of the beloved disciple—the only one of all the twelve that was present at the trial before Pilate, and who stood before the cross—that Peter heard the narrative of that sad days doings; how they bound and scourged, and mocked and spat upon the Lord; how they nailed Him to the cross, and set Him up in agony to die. And at each part of the sad recital, how would that heart, softened by penitence, be touched; how would it grieve Peter to remember that he, too, had had a share in laying such heavy burdens on the last hours of his Lord's suffering life! That Master whom he had so dishonorably and ungratefully denied, was sleeping in the grave. Was he not ready to exclaim.

Oh! but for one short hour with Him!—a single interview!—that he might tell Him how bitterly he repented what he had done, and get from his Master's living, loving lips the assurance that he had been forgiven! But that never was to be. He should never see Him more. Never, grief-blinded man! Thine eye it sees not, thine ear it hears not, neither can that sorrow-burdened heart of thine conceive what even now Jesus is preparing for thee.

The third morning dawns. The Savior rises triumphant from the grave: in rising, sets the angels as sentries before the empty tomb; gives to them the order that, to the first visitants to the sepulchre, this message shall be given. "Go, tell the disciples and Peter that He is risen from the dead." This message from the angel Peter had not heard; when he and John ran out together to the sepulchre, and found it empty. But he heard it not long after. Who may tell what strange thoughts that singling out of him—that special mention of his name by the angelic watchers of the sepulchre—excited in Peter's heart? How came those angels to think of him at such a time as this? It could not have been their own doing. They must have got that message from the Lord himself—been told by him particularly to name Peter to the women. But was it not a thing most wonderful that, in the very act of bursting the barriers of the grave, there should be such a remembrance of him on the part of that Master, whom he had so lately denied? Was it not an omen for good?

Peter had his rising hopes confirmed, his doubts and fears all quenched, when, some time in the course of the fore noon, waiting till John and he had parted—waiting till he could meet alone, and speak to him with all the greater freedom and fulness—Jesus showed himself to Peter. Before he met the others to speak peace, He hastened to meet Peter to speak pardon. One of the first offices of the risen Savior was to wipe away the tears of the penitent.—Hanna's Life of Christ.

WITH ALL THE HEART.

That was a striking thing said of one of the kings belonging to the Hebrew royalty, when the work and its results of his successful reign were being summed up: "He did it with all the heart, and prospered."

This doing things with a hearty enthusiasm is often what makes the doer a marked person, and his deeds effective.

It is so everywhere. The most ordinary service is dignified when it is performed in that spirit. Every employer wants those who work for him to put heart into toil. He soon picks out those whose souls are in their service, and gives them evidence of his appreciation. They do not need constant watching. He can trust them in his absence. The places of honor and profit naturally fall to them.—They are the rising members of the toiling brotherhood. They are in demand. They rebuke indifference and inspire fidelity in others by their example. They prosper; for they work in harmony with the law which God has established and maintains in the world.

For the Pilgrim.

THE COMING OF JESUS.

In the holy Scriptures we read that when Jesus comes again we shall see Him as he is, and more than this, if we love his appearing and have washed our robes white in the blood of the Lamb, 'tis said we shall be like Him. Likened unto the glorious body of Jesus and changed in the twinkling of an eye, and be caught up with Him in the air. What comfort this gives to those who look and long for the coming of Jesus! It will be joy unspeakable to those to see their lovely Savior coming in the clouds of heaven, but to those who have rejected His good counsel and would not have the man Christ Jesus to reign over them, they shall not see Him in His loveliness, with a countenance smiling with joy on them, but in flaming fire taking vengeance on them because they loved Him not, neither did they obey His word. Why do people reject such a Savior when they know He will come again? He will not come, a babe in Bethlehem's manger, nor will he be scoffed at or spit upon by sinful man. Oh, think of Him in the garden groaning under the burden of sin, while His precious blood falls in great drops of sweat to the ground. Was ever love like this? We answer no, and you, dear reader, who are out of Christ, we beg of you to stop a moment and think of the suffering of Jesus, of His ignominious death on the cross, that He might accomplish the plan of salvation for you and all mankind, that in His coming He might find those who have loved Him and obeyed, and have been fit meat for the Master's use. Jesus died upon the cross, He has arisen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. He has ascended to mansions of bliss where He is highly exalted, and His Father has given Him a name above every name, the name of Jesus, at which every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. And when He comes again seated on His lofty throne with all the heavenly host shouting glory to God on high, methinks it will be a glorious sight to see Jesus descending the sky. Shall we be able to stand in that great and notable day of the Lord, or will we shudder at the sight of the dazzling throne of God? I hope we will be able to stand, those of us who have taken upon us the name of Jesus. Let us stand fast, praying to God to keep us faithful to the end of life, as it is written be ye also ready, for in an hour you think not the Son of man cometh. But think of those who have crucified their Savior, how shall they stand? They shall look upon Him whom they have pierced. What feeling shall pervade every breast—what a heart-rending scene it will be to see fathers, mothers and children part to meet no more.

Dear brethren and sisters, should not this awaken us to our duty, that we should be earnestly engaged in prayer for our dear friends who are yet standing out of the ark of safety, that the Lord might gather them into the fold. Our mind has often been drawn out, and we have been made to weep over our friends and neighbors who seemed so unconcerned about their eternal welfare. We are often called to part with those who are near and dear to us by the ties of nature, and how hard it is to give them, but if we can have that bright hope of meeting them at the appearing of Jesus—meet there to part no more, then all will be well. Not long since the cruel monster Death crossed our threshold and took from our family circle an infant brother whom we loved tenderly and thought we could not part with one so lovely.—Ere he had bloomed by our side he faded away.

"No more the pleasant child is seen
To please the parent's eye,
The tender plant so fresh and green
Is in eternity."

We know he is gone to rest, and we need not weep for him, but weep for ourselves that we may be prepared to meet him on Canaan's happy shore, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death shall be feared and felt no more, for Jesus came and conquered them all. Adieu.

KATE ELLIOTT.

Welsh Run, Pa.

TIME.

Time is measured, and is alike at both ends. It began with a day and will end with a day, hence the evening and the morning were said to be the first day. As the general judgment is called the last day, eternity is the fountain from which it sprang, and the flood in which it shall fall.—The most lasting duration of time is but short, and its greatest prolongations comes to an end. A given moment is scarcely known 'till it is no more, a few of which make a minute, which we but begin in joy and it is also gone. Thus one hour flies away, a day hastes to its end, and a year comes to its last day. As business men at the end of the year, cast up their accounts and regulate their book, let me ask, what have my talents gained in the year that is past. Whatever I may think, time itself is none of the least of talents, and another year is added to my account. Thousands who come into the world after me, are called into eternity, and is not this a loud call to me to improve every moment of time. Time is little thought of by those who think still less of eternity, but if I look into a future world, I will see of how great moment every moment of my time is to prepare for eternity.

O, precious misspent time which I never can recall! Another year is gone and shall never return. What have I done for the glory of God therein? Ah, it passed away from me as a void though it sparkles thick with mercies. Ah, did I say a void? Nay, worse, for while his love shone around me like the noon day beams, my sins rose numerous like anthems of the sun. This may be the last day of time, and how should we value every moment of it. I should count every day my last, since some have found their last day on days they as little dreaded as I do this, and at most, some day soon will be my last, then it is wisdom to be prepared before hand for death. Rather to wonder that he stays away so long, then be surprised that it should come so soon. Thus I should look on every day as my last, so that when it comes it may not come unlooked for nor overtake me unprepaired. But alas, the past year afforded me many mournful spectacles of sin. I have heard the divine name blasphemed, seen sin in high place, the holy Sabbath, like Job's birthday, disjoined from the days of the year, and shut out from the number of the months, and all manner of wickedness committed thereon. Drinking, sporting, buying, and selling every kind of merchandise thereon. O, for what trifling gain, will men cast away their precious souls. How can I, unconcernedly look on sin in all its ugly shapes, and the dreadful havock it makes among immortal souls. May the divine providence bring me from these chilling objects, and may I through grace, never forget what I have heard and seen. Here also patience worthy of God, is conspicuous, for when we think how much wickedness is committed all over the christian, as well as the heathen world, in public, and private, by great and small, on land and sea, that this rebellion against heaven was not begun yesterday, but carried on since Adam's fall, for more than five thousand years, it is a wonder that the world has not long ago been devoted to the flames. But that patience which for continuance is amazing, shall at last give place to justice, which in the execution will be terrible. Could my life end on a Sabbath I would be content, but this may comfort me, that upon whatever day I may depart this life, I shall enter into heaven on an high Sabbath day, for Sabbath is eternal there. But while I am meditating on fleeting time, the midnight hour strikes and another day is past. Then adieu to the past, and let me remember by this, that my life is drawing to its latter end.

Clearfoss, Md.

ANSWER TO QUERIES.

In the present Vol. No 7 are several queries desired to be answered, and as Bro. C. H. Walker thinks that the querist department is too much neglected, I will try to give an explation according to my views, at least on the first query; this however is not to prevent others, who may have a better one, to give their opinion.

"And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." The Savior speaks here, in connection this text stands in prophetic language of the calamity, that shall befall the Jewish people, first speaking of the destruction of their temple and the holy city and the consequent downfall of their theocracy. Referring them to the direful calamity which shall succeed, after their downfall and destruction of their policy, he says in the foregoing verse, "For there shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, nor ever shall be." And except those (those, refers to the days of tribulation) days be shortened there should no flesh be saved, that is, God's justice had to be vindicated by executing his wrath upon the Jewish people, no doubt, for the rejection, condemnation and executing of their Messiah, yet not for final extinction of the race; whoever is acquainted with the frequent royal edicts put forth to the final extermination of the race, does not wonder that God stayed the execution of His wrath in shortening their days of tribulation, persecution, lest if it had continued to the second advent of the Lord, His chosen people would have been wholly destroyed: "no flesh be saved." In this prediction, which we now see partially verified, the truth of Daniel's is established. Chap. 9:26. "And three score and two weeks shall the Messiah be cut off but not for himself; and the people of the prince (the soldiers of Titus) that shall come shall destroy the city, and the sanctuary, and thee end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war, that is, to the end of tribulation, desolations are determined." "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time:" (that Michael through the shortening of those days shall deliver them) "and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." "But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Now turn to 9, 10, 11, Chap. of Romans and you find the key to the text. Rom. 10, 7, what then? "Israel hath not attained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded." 25, 26. For I would not brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, (lest ye should be wise in your own conceits,) that blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the gentiles come in. "And all Israel shall be saved, as it is written." There shall come out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." As concerning the Gospel, they are enemies for your sakes, but as touching the elections, they are beloved for their father's sakes. "God has promised them everlasting blessings and a perpetual inheritance." For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." It is evident that Daniel, and the Savior, in the above passage, had direct reference to God's chosen people, the children of Israel; and that the days of their tribulations were shortened for their salvation.

LEONARD FURRY.

Youth's Department.

The Little Church On The Hill.

BY ADA MOULTON.

I sometimes dream of my childhood home,
Where I from care was free
As the joyous bird, whose song I heard,
So I was full of glee.

I sometimes dream of the grand old tree,
That bordered upon the rill,
The meadows green from which was seen
The little church on the hill.

The family pew, I recall it now,
Its back so stiff and high,
The deep toned bell, and the organ swell
That seemed to rise to the sky.

My father in that little church
Had often knelt in prayer,
He now is dead! and in a bed
For which we must prepare.

Oh! blame me not that thus I weep,
And my form with anguish thrill,
For far I roam, from my childhood's home,
And the little church on the hill.

THE NEW COMMANDMENT.

A boy was hissed at in school, because he said he could not give a dollar to the subscription that his class had made to present their teacher with a silver pitcher at Christmas.—The boys called him mean, they said he was a miser, they tormented him dreadfully about it. The truth was, that he was a brave boy. He knew how hard his parents worked, that he might be respectably educated; he knew that if he gave that dollar, his mother would save it out of something she needed for herself, for they were really poor. He preferred bearing the ridicule of his class, to see his mother deny herself; but oh! how it hurt this generous child to be called a miser, to be so misjudged by those he thought were his friends.—The trouble was, that they thought evil of him. If we could only see into each other's hearts, how much happier we should all be! It is so much better to think well of our friends. Did you ever put on a pair of green spectacles? How green everything look through them! If you get the habit of thinking evil, everything looks hateful and unlovely.—Don't wear dark spectacles when you look at your friends. Use the kind, clear eyes that come from the Lord, and all the world will be bright to you. To think no evil is the very greatest kindness.

Have you ever heard of the eleventh Commandment? I dare say you know it. It was given us by our dear Lord Jesus, just before he died. He said, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." If you read your Bible carefully, you will see that Jesus said this very often just before he died. I think he knew what it was to live without love in this world. I think he knew how happy a place the world would be, if we all loved each other; how dreary a place it was without love. He felt sorry for us. He was going back to heaven, and we could never see him on earth, nor hear his loving words, and know that love itself was with us. So he gave this commandment, "That ye love one another," and then he added, "By this shall men know that ye are his disciples, if ye love one another."

Oh, what an easy thing it ought to be to love one another. Think what a glorious thing it is to be a disciple of the Lord Jesus! And to live with him hereafter in heaven! If we are his disciples, we shall do this.

What an easy thing it is, we are told to do, to prove ouselves his disciples—only to love one another!

It should be easy surely. If it is not, it is because we are not yet like our loving Lord. And the nearer we draw to him, the easier it will be for us to obey his commandments, and we shall become kind and tender-hearted, and we shall find what comfort and peace there is in loving one another.—N. Y. Observer.

LIKE TEACHER—LIKE SCHOLAR. I have felt the responsibilities of a Sabbath School teacher myself, and desire to say that your scholars will be as you are. If you are loving, faithful and true, the scholars you teach will be like you. It is like an army; as the generals are brave or cowardly, so will the soldiers be.

Correspondence.

For the Pilgrim.

THAT "APPEAL"

In No. 3 of PILGRIM, current year, there appears an appeal for help from sister Sarah A. Frantz. She and her husband being members of our congregation, it seems our duty to notice said appeal by way of bringing the matter more clearly before the minds of the brotherhood, hoping the result will be to the benefit of our brother and sister so far as to open upon up a way whereby they may be delivered from their straightened circumstances. The editor's course relative to said appeal we think commendable, and as it gives us occasion to refer to the matter without that show of presumption that might otherwise have occurred, we will say we cannot but sympathise with our dear brother, sister and family under their trials and difficulties and present circumstances. At present we cannot advocate the propriety of calling upon the brotherhood at large for charity to bring them out from under their embarrassments, but will urge such a course as we hope may result to their good. First, we will state that so far as our knowledge goes, we have found Bro. David Frantz and sister Frantz industrious, hard-working persons, and warm, zealous members of the church. Soon after the late war Bro. Frantz exchanged his farm in Franklin Co., Va., for a valuable farm at Meadow Bluff, Greenbriar Co., W. Va. He became involved to the amount of over $2.000. Notwithstanding his industrious habits and close attention to business, unavoidable losses and failures incident to life were of such a nature as to deprive him of the power to meet his liabilities, Interest, costs, &c., soon swelled his indebtedness, and as a last resort and as he thought the best means to meet his indebtedness and save his home from being sacrificed, he rented his farm and moved on the line of Railroad now in course of construction, hoping thus to make sufficient in a few years to pay off his indebtedness. Disappointment followed him here, and ill health to self and family have blasted his prospects. Nothing now but the sale of his farm at a reasonable price, or a loan of two or three thousand dollars can prevent such a sacrifice of his property as will leave him, afflicted as he and his family is, in a homeless condition to battle with adversity. His farm is valuable property and worthy the attention of those seeking homes and a chance to invest money to advantage. If we are not mistaken there are about 500 acres in his farm, lying in one of the very best sections of country for stock raising. A good proportion is, or has been, under cultivation; from 100 to 150 acres of meadow land on it, bottom land lying on Meadow River. The farm lies on a turnpike road leading from White Sulphur Springs to Charleston, the capital of W. Va., 10 to 12 miles from the Railroad. There is an orchard of fruit trees on the farm, a large two story brick dwelling-house, and brick kitchen, land well adapted to grass or grain, and mostly lying well. It can be had on very reasonable terms. A person with a few thousand dollars to invest can here find an excellent opportunity.

Now, brethren, is there not one or two among the many that will take such a step as will relieve them of their embarrassments, and at the same time make an investment that will be profitable. There can truly be a bargain had in the property, and don't be backward, because it is a case of distress, for if you do nothing it will be worse for them. Others that are anxious for the property will get it for a trifle and thus throw out this family in their afflictions to the charities of a cold world. I think they would rather sell, but if a brother or other person cannot be found that will buy, cannot one or more be found that will be willing to loan sufficient means at six per cent, to pay off the indebtedness and give a chance for Bro. Frantz to sell, which I think he could do in a year or two. The loan will be secured by mortgage. Don't be timid about the matter because some may say it is not right to take interest in such cases. Too many brethren already have felt the sad effects of such an idea by having to borrow money of worldlings or not getting it at all, while the brethren loan their money where no one can say anything because they take interest. Brother Frantz will willingly pay interest, and be thankful to those who will thus assist him, so he can have a chance to sell his land and save something for himself and afflicted family. For further particulars address either of us at Fayetteville, Fayette Co., W. Va. Brother David Plane, Bonsacks, Roanoke Co., Va., is acquainted with the land.

J. S. FLORY,
A. HUTCHISON.

CHATHAM CENTRE, OHIO.
Feb. 18th. 1872.

Dear Pilgrim: I, For the first time, seat myself to drop a few lines for your paper. We have been reading it for over a year, and find very much consolation from its perusal, as I have been much afflicted for the last eigh months with spinal weakness so that I have been deprived of the privilege of attending meeting. Our brethren and friends in this (Black River) church district have been enjoying a series of meetings for the last week, assisted by brethren from Ashland church, also some brethren from Chippawa church. Although I was not able to be there, I understood they had a season of refreshments, and a feast of good things from the Lord. There are no accessions reported, but perhaps the fruit of their labors will be as bread cast upon the waters which will be seen not many days hence. This custom of holding such meetings among the brethren is very commendable, and much good results therefrom, but would it not be well if the brethren would also go and preach in districts and neighborhoods where the doctrine of the church is not known? By these means many precious souls would have the truth impressed upon their minds and perhaps constrained to turn in with the overtures of mercy before it is too late. It is very common for traveling brethren to go from church to church over large districts of country and through cities and towns, and never once stop to preach to the hundreds and perhaps thousands of precious souls who have never heard the Gospel preached in its purity, but no, they go on to where there is an established church, where the people hear the word preached almost every week. I do not wish to be understood that the brethren should not visit the churches, by no means, but I do think that some time should be spent in preaching where the truth perhaps never was heard. The apostles did not withhold the word of the Lord from any, but went from city to city and proclaimed the glad news of salvation to all. If there was a greater effort made in this direction by the brethren, many souls might be gathered into the fold of Christ. I have often thought that our missionaries should commence at home, in our own land and country. We often hear people say they never heard of the Brethren, or never heard them preach. Now brethren, preach the word wherever you can have hearers. It matters not where it may be, by the way side or on the corners of the street. Yes, cry aloud and spare not, warn the sinner to flee the wrath to come. JOHN WEEKS.

TASSINONG, IND. }
Feb. 22nd, 1872. }

Dear Pilgrim: Seeing so many letters from the churches, of so many being added to the fold, so many seasons of refreshment and enjoyment, makes me think we are a few outcasts, being only three members in this county to my knowledge, it being Porter Co., Ind. I have lived in this county 16 months, and heard only four sermons preached by the Brethren. Our sister has lived here five years and heard the same. Cannot some of the traveling brethren visit us, in place of going the round of the churches where there are plenty of ministers? We are not able to pay a minister to come a great distance, i. e. pay his way; but there is plenty that have plenty to travel on, and surely would not miss what they would spend to come here and preach the Gospel to those who never heard it in its purity.

We are living between the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, and Cincinnati & Chicago R. R, they being 12 miles apart. The brethren can raise the excuse that they did not know about us, but all that read this will know, and can learn more, and all the particulars (if any would wish to visit) by addressing the undersigned, who would be glad to meet any brother or brethren at any station, make previous arrangements for meeting &c.

Would further say, come on dear PILGRIM, we greet thee every week, while we are a distance from any arm of the church, and the association of the brethren and sisters, thou art the only source that we have of hearing from the churches. Come on, and still bring us that comfort which we so much need, while traveling through this dark and howling wilderness.

In brotherly affection.

J. B. LAIR.

Dear Brethren: Please accept our greeting. We send greetings to the brethren and sisters in general, and are glad to say to you that the ark of the Lord is moving slowly along in this part of God's moral vineyard.—We commenced a series of meetings on the 9th and closed on the 20th. We truly felt that the spirit of the Lord was with us through our meetings. They were largely attended day and night, apparently with much interest, many parents were made to rejoice to see their children and others renouncing the sinful practices of this world, and enlisting under the banner of King Emanuel. Forty-five were added to the church by baptism through the course of our meetings We pray God to help them to be more faithful. Brother Yonce did most of the preaching.

SAMUEL MURRAY.

Sidamony, Ind.

Dear Brethren: Patrons are very well pleased with the new form of the PILGRIM, and regard the reading matter healthful, instructive, and well selected. Our church is moderately prosperous. We, during the fall, added regularly a few members. We held a series of meetings, several weeks ago, lasting one week, Brother Jesse Roop, and J. Brown of Bush Creek congregation, Frederick Co., were with us part of the time; and held forth the word of life in its native simplicity and power. We have, since that time, added five members by baptism. Wishing you a prosperous and happy God-speed, in your weekly pilgrimage visits to the homes of your numerous patrons throughout our wide spread brotherhood, I remain,

Fraternally yours.

V. RIECHARD.

Dear Pilgrim: I now will give satisfaction in regard to your kindness to me in sending me the PILGRIM which we are very ready to peruse. We are like some more of our brethren and sisters, we like short pieces, but good. I will now mention that we baptized two individuals on Sunday the 18th, in the Susquehanna River. The ice being very thick we went in a good distance from the shore in order to get water sufficient for the great work to be performed, which all must undergo if ever they wish to have admittance into that heavenly land where we shall meet to part no more, and there enjoy such blessings that tongue cannot express. Dear pilgrims, with me it takes patience and perfect love which casts out fear.

This being at the one side of the Lower Cumberland District, (Dunkannon), brother A. L. Bowman administered baptism. My prayer is that they may prove faithful every day of their lives, as they were looked upon that day by a great number of witnesses, as faithful soldiers enlisting under the banner of King Emanuel. We should remember the time we enlisted and the vow we made to be faithful until death.

JACOB HARNISH.

New Bloomfield, Pa.

COVINGTON, Ohio.

Dear Brethren: YOUR WEEKLY PILGRIM is coming to us with plenty of good news and food for me and my family. It seems the oftener it comes the better we love it. I think the PILGRIM is doing much good. We never had it in our house till this year. Since we have commenced to take it my dear children seem to love it very much. May the coming year be one of Christian privileges, and God be our refuge and strength so that we may live closer to Him, and thus be prepared for death, and be crowned with Jesus in heaven.

D. G. VARNER.

SHANESVILLE, OHIO. }
Jan. 21st 1872. }

Brethren Editors: I am a reader of the PILGRIM and it is a welcome visitor in our family; they all enjoy the reading of it very much. I have now taken it one year, and am very much pleased with it, and I saw a notice that you would send it another year unless you received notice to have it discontinued. Dear brother, send it right along as we cannot do without it and I have also got several more subscribers for the PILGRIM.

Dear Pilgrim: We, the brethren in our arm of the church do strongly contend for the old "land marks." I do think it is time that there is something done to prevent pride, and the customs of the world from coming into the church. It has got a deep root, and I fear it will cause confusion, and has already, till it is rooted out.

I am no writer but may perhaps give some church news after some time, such as I think may be interesting.

D. B.

Sister Sarah Berkey, of Waterloo, Iowa, after paying for the PILGRIM for a grand-daughter of Berlin, Pa., says: "We think much of the PILGRIM, love to read it, and think it would be well for every family to have it in their houses, and read its contents carefully—not only read it, but take heed to the same—in the language of the Scripture, "follow it as far as it follows the Lord."

CHURCH DONATION.

We, the members of the church of the Brethren of Filmore Co., Minn., have no place to hold our meetings and Lovefeast in except a shed, therefore we have concluded to try and build a church, but find ourselves a little too poor, and now would kindly ask our pilgrim brethren to donate a little to us for that purpose, as we are greatly in need of a house.

If any of our churches or brethren will be so kind as to give us a little, send it in postal orders to S. M. Shuck, Preston, Filmore Co., Minn.

ANSWER TO QUERIES.

Dear Brethren: An explanation is desired through the PILGRIM, of the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th verses of the 5th chapter of the 1st Epistle General of John. The 2nd verse reads as follows: "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments." I understand this to mean, that by us loving God, and keeping his commandments, we know that we love the children of God, for we are commanded to love one another.

The 3rd verse reads as follows: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous."—The first part of the verse signifies, that if we keep God's commandments we love God. And the last part signifies that God's commandments are not hard to obey.

The 4th verse reads as follows: "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith." I understand this to signify that faith, or belief, is the victory, and that victory overcometh the world.

DAVID S. STAYER.

New Enterprise, Pa.

An explanation is desired on the following passage: "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Matt. 3: 11. What kind of fire is meant?

D. R. FREEMAN.

Dr. Doddrige paraphrases it thus: "And if you are indeed his people, he shall baptize you with a most plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit, and with fire; causing his Spirit to descend upon his followers in the appearance of a flame of fire, to represent its operating in the hearts like fire, to kindle pious and devout affections, and to purify and enliven the souls of believers."

From the preceding and following verses, we are inclined to somewhat a different signification, giving it a figurative bearing. The elements, water, and fire, are used figuratively, for purification and in purification we have the idea of suffering, therefore we think that the baptism of fire refers to the fiery ordeal through which the christian is to pass for purification. Our Savior underwent this baptism in Gethsemane, and in his footsteps followed the apostles and all the followers of Christ. We must all pass through this baptism of "fiery trials," in order that our evil deeds or chaff, may be burned, and the wheat be gathered into the garner of the Lord.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in the North Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Please announce that we intend holding our District Meeting, of the North East District of Ohio, on Tuesday 7th of May, 1872, at the big meeting house of the Mohican church, Wayne Co., Ohio, five miles South of West Salem, on the Atlantic and Great Western Rail Road, and 12 miles northwest of Wooster, on the Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road. We fondly hope that every branch composing this District will be represented, and especially those branches that did not represent themselves heretofore. Those coming by the Atlantic and Great Western, will please notify brother Jacob Garver at Lattasburg, who will see that conveyances will be furnished to convey all from West Salem to place of meeting. Those coming by Pittsburg and Ft. Wayne Rail Road, will please notify the undersigned at New Pittsburg, who will see that they be conveyed to place of meeting. By order of the church.

GEORGE WORST.

The District meeting of the E. District of Md. will meet, the Lord willing, at the Beaverdam meeting-house in Frederick co., on the first Tuesday in April, at 9 a. m.

PHILIP BOYLE.

Editor's Department.

WORDS TO PATRONS.

1st. Every reader of the PILGRIM is invited to contribute to its columns. Essays, Church News, Obituaries &c. are solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. If you desire a good and interesting paper, help us to make it such by furnishing the material.

2nd. Be sure and write plainly, your name, post office, county and state, in every letter, and do not expect us to credit money and change addresses, unless you tell us to whom, and where sent.

3rd. Never send money without giving name and address of those who paid it.

4th. In sending lists, mark who are old and who are new subscribers. Please remember this.

5th. Money may be safely sent in Drafts, Checks, Postal Orders drawn on Huntingdon P. O. or in registered letters. All amounts under $2.00, may be sent at our risk, if put in the envelope and carefully sealed and directed.

PERSONAL.

Eld. J. Myers, of Cal., informs us that they are having remarkably fine weather, and have had for several months, the thermometer ranging from 50 to 60 degrees above zero.—The crop prospects were never better and feel almost certain of realizing a good harvest after a drought of two years, and concludes as follows:

"Brethren, manifest the spirit of Jesus. Remember that when he was accused and abused he patiently took it all, and never uttered a word of complaint, insomuch that it even astonished his enemies that humanity could suffer so much without being tempted to resist. Cultivate love and thereby crucify carnality and the God of peace will dwell richly with you.

My prayer is that you may be enabled by the Holy Spirit to be lively instruments in the hands of our Heavenly Father to the doing of much good; even to the pulling down of the strong fortifications of darkness, and build up the waste places [illegible]

it is in Jesus, that God's kingdom may prosper, and many souls be brought to Jesus. Brethren, go on; be strengthened. Remember that beautiful plea that Caleb made when the children of Israel refused to go up and possess the goodly land, he said: "Let us go up and possess the goodly land, for we are well able to overcome it, for if God is for us who can be against us." Those words have often strengthened me in my pilgrimage—they manifest such a living faith in God our Heavenly Father.

DAVID MILLER. Your letter containing $7.80, was received but not the names and addresses of those who paid it. You would much oblige us by sending us a list of the names and addresses of all those who have paid, so that we can credit them on the books. Accept our thanks for the new names. The PILGRIM's have been sent—if not received let us know. The last four will cost $1.00 each to the end of the year, or 2½ cts per number.

JOHN GEHR. Your name on book for 1871 is marked paid. If you saw an X attached to your name, it was a mistake of the clerk. For 1872, if there is an agent convenient, you can pay it to him or her, if not, enclose it carefully and send it to us—for which you will find a receipt in our money list.

JOSEPH DRURY. We are willing to send the PILGRIM to all who will pay during the year. We made this offer last year, and feel that we lost nothing by it, as many take it on this condition that could not otherwise. Our agents will please be careful and take none who they think will not pay.

B. F. Connells name with $1.25 was sent us for the PILGRIM, but the papers are returned. He is on the Brooklyn Iowa list. Is this a mistake or what is wrong?

A. FLORA. Your name is on the book and therefore is sent with the list. The mistake must certainly occur in the post office.

GEORGE KINNY. You will find your credit in money list of No. 8.

JOHN BRINDLE. Susan C. Shellars name is entered on our books. All right.

We are informed that our old brother John Zug is sick and life is ebbing. He thinks that his pilgrimage in this world is drawing to a close.—May his sun go down in peace.

JACOB ESHLEMAN. "Fruit Culture for the Million" is sent.

A. L. BOWMAN. The Hymn Books are sent.

JOSEPH RITTENHOUSE. "Man in Genesis and in Geology" is sent.—"Right Word in Right Place" will be sent as soon as received.

COVE ECHO.

The "Cove Echo" is a first class weekly secular news paper published by us at Martinsburg Blair co., and at James Creek Huntingdon co., Pa.

As many of our readers throughout the West were born and raised in Blair, Bedford, and Huntingdon counties, they will, no doubt, be interested in the local news of their former homes. If so subscribe for the "Echo" as we are determined to make it one of the best local papers in the country. Sample copies sent free. Also news items solicited from all parts of the country.

Address Publishers of PILGRIM, James Creek, Pa.,

MARRIED.

KREPS—SHANK.—On the 28th of Dec., 1871, at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. J. W. Brumbaugh, Mr. David Kreps of Pattonsville to Miss. Mollie Shank of Clover Creek Pa.

DIED.

OESTERLEY.—January 30th, 1872, Miss Caroline Oesterley, daughter of Jacob and Christina Oesterley, aged 20 years.

SUMMERS.—In Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon co., Pa., Feb. 21st., 1872, Sallie, widow of Henry Summers. Funeral services by Rev Onrue, minister of the Lutheran Church.

She lived and died a faithful and exemplary member of the Lutheran Church.

GIPE—In the Falling Spring Dist., Franklin Co., Pa., Feb. 6th, 1872, sister Mary, wife of brother Joseph Gipe, aged 64 yrs. 10 months and 28 days.

Her sickness was long and lingering, but was borne with patience and she died in the triumph of a living faith. She was beloved by all who knew her. Funeral occasion improved by elder William Boyer and others

D. H. BONEBRAKE.

ZOOK—In the Snake Spring Valley church, Bedford Co., Pa., February 23d. 1872. Daniel Zook, aged 77 yrs and 3 months.

Funeral occasion improved by the brethren J. Miller, D. Snowberger and the writer, from Rev. 14: 13, to the largest funeral assembly the writer ever witnessed.

The subject of this notice was a member of the church for quite a number of years. About two years ago he was taken with cancer on the nose. After suffering much pain and affliction with patience and hope, the Lord saw fit to call him from this world. He was the father of twelve children, all living but three, and I believe all members of the church but one.

HENRY HERSHBERGER.
(Visitor please copy.)

PAGE—Near Winamac, Ind., Feb. 3d, '72, sister Mary Page. Funeral services by Bro. James Y. Bennett on the following day, Sunday.

She lived faithful to her vow and died in the hope of eternal life. She leaves a husband and children to mourn their loss which, undoubtedly, is very great. May the Lord help us all so to live, that in death we can leave an evidence behind us to show that we are gone home to glory.

D. R. FREEMAN.

STEEL—In the Snake Spring congregation, Bedford Co., Pa., Tuesday night, Feb. 20th, 1872, brother Daniel Steel, aged about 80 years. He leaves three children to mourn their loss; two are members of the church. Funeral preached by Leonard Furry and Henry Hershberger.

ELD. JACOB STEEL.

MONEY LIST.

Jacob Myers,	$1.25
Lewis Sell,	1.25
P. P. Brumbaugh,	6.00
Leonard Furry,	20.00
Moses Miller,	1.25
D. R. Saylor,	1.25
Andrew Markly,	1.25
R. K. Brunkley,	2.50
John Grabill,	1.25
Sarah Berkly,	1.00
Jacob Harnish,	1.25
C. Newcomer,	2.50
J. U. Brown,	7.25
Wm. Damer,	1.25
Daniel Yount,	2.50
George Wood,	6.00
D. H. Bonebrake,	8.75
Lavina Kiehl,	1.50
O. B. Crum,	3.00
Christina Parks,	1.00
A. Heffner,	2 25
M. W. Heaton,	2.25
V. Reichard,	1.25
Elizabeth Stouffer,	1.25
John M. Cline,	1.25
J. R. Royer,	.60
Jacob Eshleman,	7.75
Rebecca Binns,	1.25
John Whistler,	1.25

WISDOM.

Do but the half of what you can, and you will be surprised at the result of your diligence.

The minds of some people are like the pupil of the human eye, and contract themselves the more the stronger light there is shed upon them.—Thomas More.

Kind hearts are the gardens,
Kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms,
Kind deeds are the fruits;
Love is the sweet sunshine
That warms into life,
For only in darkness
Grow hatred and strife.

He will find himself in a great mistake, that either seeks for a friend in a palace, or tries him at a feast.—Seneca.

Some one, feeling that actions are better than words, has said: "We read of the acts of the Apostles, but never of their resolutions."

The circumstances of the world are so variable, that an irrevocable resolution is almost a synonymous term for a foolish one.—Seward.

WHEN God would show himself
In largest measure unto human sight
He makes a man, of mind
Capacious, judgment comprehensive,
Courage never failing, faith sublime.
The warp and woof that make
His texture are of threads
Finer than ever followed shuttle
In a Tyrian loom.

We have but one life to live, and we should be careful to make the very best possible use of it, seizing hold of every opportunity to find out the true objects and ends of our earthly existence, that we may secure those objects while here and so secure to ourselves the supreme good.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE WHIPPING POST IN VIRGINIA.—A bill has been introduced into the Virginia Senate by Mr. Graham, of Nottoway, providing for the repeal of all laws for the punishment of citizens of the State by stripes.—Mr. Graham advocated the passage of the bill on the ground that whipping for petty offences, usually committed by young offenders, had a tendency to make great criminals of them, by making them lose all self-respect, and had been found to be a cruel, harsh and barbarous way of punishment by the army and navy of the United States, and by all the Sates of the Union except Delaware and Virginia; that while the class of offences sought to be punished by law, providing for punishment by stripes, ought to be punished, yet houses of refuge, schools of reform and solitary confinement were found preferable, and in many cases young criminals were actually reformed and saved for society, while, if publicly whipped, they were lost to society, and became a curse to it.

THE ESPERANCE.

Father Hyacinthe who is laboring for a reformation in the Catholic church has started a paper of his own, bearing the above caption. His object appears not to be to withdraw from the Catholic church, but to start a reformation in it, making obsolete, many of the traditions which have been introduced, contrary to the spirit of the Gospel. He has gained considerable popularity of late, and no doubt will make a mark in the world, and gain a large circulation for his paper.

RELIOIOUS LIBERTY IN RUSSIA.

From late reports, religious liberty is dawning in Russia. Many of the Protestants who, rather than suffer persecution, returned to the Greek church are now avowing Protestanism again, although some are still undergoing imprisonment on account of their religious belief.

THE MOABITE STONE.

Recently, there has been a stone found in the Moabitish territory that is causing some excitement among the curious. It measures 36 in. by 18in., is of hard close granite, and has six lines of written characters almost identical in form, with the sinaitic letters. The characters which are clear and nearly perfect, are translated as follows: "We drove them away—the people of Ar Moab at the Marsh ground, there they made a thank offering to God their King, and Jerusalem rejoiced, as also Moses their leader." Mr. Henry Lumley has brought a copy of it to England, and with good evidence from people who know the history of the stone.

Rev. J. P. Sorr, of Indianapolis, sailed with his wife and child on the 10th inst., for Turkey, as a missionary for the American Board.

A letter from Rome states that on the 14th. ult., the Pope gave audience to 1,000 women belonging to the Catholic Interests Society, or marshalled by it. On the 15th. he received 162 females servants and cooks, conducted by the Marquise Serlupi. In replying to their address, the Pope said they ought to imitate the handmaids of Judith, who assisted their mistress to rid the country of its oppressors.

COOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding. $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way." $3.

Any of the above named books can be obtained by leaving orders at this office, or at the Pilgrim office, James Creek, Pa.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - - -	8 00

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	- - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	- - -	1.00
Turkey morocco,	- - -	$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen,	- - -	5 50

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. Ex.	UP TRAINS. Mail	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. Ex.	DOWN TRAIN. Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 15
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'lt	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Ar 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.60
" Hill "	1.60
" Winter red "	1.75
CORN.	.48
OATS.	.43
RYE.	.43
BARLEY.	.65

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th. of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S
Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,
Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address.
DANIEL KAGARICE.
New Enterprise,
Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.
H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county, Pa

Werkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MARCH 12, 1872. NO. 11.

For the Pilgrim.

THE RELATIVE POSITION OF SPEAKERS AND HEARERS.

Our responsibilities are eqoal.

"The word of God cometh by hearing," that is, the word is received into the understanding or into the soul by or through the faculties or sense of hearing, and "hearing cometh by the word of God"—that is, by it, as a creative power, the sense of hearing, as are also all the other faculties created. "But how shall they hear unless they have a preacher?" i. e., how shall God's will be communicated to the soul through the sense of hearing or any other faculty, unless there be a corresponding communicative faculty to convey God's thoughts to the understanding? And "how shall they preach except they be sent?" Verily how shall any one be an instroment or vehicle to convey tidings of salvation when he has never received such tidings himself? When the "blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch." Blind speakers lead blind hearers, and vice verse, they go hand in hand backwards down into the ditch. Preaching, then, is the transmission of God's will by men to one another; and it is not confined to the organs of speech and hearing. Actions speak. True, they sometimes speak louder than word; therefore all who act are also speakers—preachers, or living "epistles read of all men." "Every man's work shall be tried as by fire." The fire is God's word. Works, then, are tried by the Word. By men and women in whom the word dwells, who are moved to criticise as they do by the word—who are just as "sharp" as the word itself, and whose very being will consequently have the same influence upon humanity that the word has upon them. The elements of the soul that is born of the will of God are the word of God, which is of such a nature that it throws off all that does not belong to it, and as a healthy body throws off disease more readily than a sickly one, so the healthy soul will throw off sin more than one that is in an unhealthy condition.

But in a more definite sense, preaching is speaking publicly of the truths of religion at regular or special times and places, and a corresponding definition of hearing is, an assemblage of people listening to one who professes to speak of religion. All the performances of each individual may be either directly or indirectly referred to or hinted and approved or denounced by the assembly during the delivery of one sermon. But God only is the perfect judge of what is done. Man can judge correctly only in proportion to his stature and consequently his strength in Christ Jesus. The speaker may make assertions of what he believes to be truth, and the hearers may agree or disagree with him, and one or both may be right or wrong; everything is dependent upon and judged by the word of the Lord. By men and women who have that word dwelling in them richly, who have by dilligent search and service had their sense exercised to discern both good and evil. "If God be for us, who can be against us." If what we say or do is in accordance with His word; if all our performances are the product of impressioos distinctively made upon us by the word of God, then God is for us and none can be against us. If, when we are in the position of hearers, we have on the "whole armor of God" we shall be able to repel all the "fiery darts of the wicked" though they should be thrown or thrust at us by devils transforoied into angels of light, working in disguise under the banner of King Jesus as watchers upon the walls of Zion. But the soul that ventures out unequipped with the heavenly armor is exposed to a horrible death at the hands of a merciless enemy. In the position of a hearer merchandise is made of him, by great swelling words he is magne tized—mesmerized—a proselyte is made of him, two-fold more the child of hell than he was before, his mind is controlled by the cunning devices of men, and he is led captive down to eternal destruction at the will of satan. And if it should be our lot to occupy the position of speakers; if we are "thoroughly furnished unto every good work," workmen that have no need to be ashamed" rightly dividing the word of truth, "speaking forth the words of truth and soberness." "Sound speech that cannot be condemned"—then we need not fear the criticisms of men, because God is for us. Our words and His Word harmonize; they are gladly received by all the children of God; but they are rejected by all who obey not the Gospel. The minister is the servant of the church, the hearers are the judges who determine the propriety or impropriety of his service, and God judges finally, approving or disapproving of every operation. The minister is very frequently charged and warned in the Scriptures. A certain woe is pronounced upon him if he preach not the Gospel, but all the world is commanded to hear. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear." All are equally bound to know and obey the Scriptures according to the abilities which God has given.

JOHN. B GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the Pilgrim.

LAND OF THE BLEST.

"There is a region lovelier far
Than sages tell or poets sing,
Brighter than summer beauties are,
And softer than the tints of spring.

Brethren and sisters, when we anticipate the glories of heaven, the joys that there await the children of God, and the unbounded happiness there to be realized by those who gain admittance into that lovely land of the blest, it should encourage us on our pilgrim journey thitherwards, to be alive to our duty to God and to one another. Our time is short here, and in this short time the lot with the righteous must be secured, or ever be debarred from that happy land. True, we have trials and difficulties, we meet with obstacles while living among sinners, and consequently, sometimes are called to sustain losses, temporally, I mean, in order to carry out the principles of the Gospel. It may be possible, when surrounded with ungodly men, that we have to endure reproach, derision, mockeries, and the tongue of the slanderer may be unbridled; perhaps busy to spread evil reports broadcast through the land, but notwithstanding all this; be reserved, do not get excited, put the spirit of revenge far away from you, always solemnly considering of what spirit you are.

O let us show that by the grace of God and the help of Jesus, the devil, through his legions of agents, cannot cause us to swerve one iota from the platform of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Let us rather double our diligence to live a holy life, have an untainted character in the sight of God and man, that they who may reproach or speak evil of you may be ashamed when they see your good conversation in Christ Jesus. Let us be ever ready to do good to all men, even to our enemies when necessity requires. By an unspotted life, accompanied with much self-denial, we gain the approbation of God, and the Judge's call,

"Come up ye blessed of my Father,
The purchased of my dying love,
Receive the crown of life and glory,
Which are laid up for you above!
For you, dear souls, who have continued
With me in all temptation bore,
I have secured for you a kingdom,
To reign with me forever more.
There are flowing fountains of living waters,
No sickness, pain, nor death to fear;
No sorrow, sighing, no fears nor dying
Shall ever have admittance there.
But how will sinners stand and tremble
When Justice calls them to the Bar,
These that reject his offered mercy,
Their everlasting doom to hear."

O sinner, take timely warning, for when the accounts of your sins will be cast up you shall stand in awe, and they shall convince you to your face of your own iniquity. "Then shall the righteous in great boldness before the face of such that have afflicted him, and made no account of his labors. When they shall see it, they shall be troubled with terrible fear, and shall be amazed at the strangeness of his salvation, so far beyond all that they looked for. And they repenting and groaning for anguish of spirit shall say within themselves, "This was he whom we had sometimes in derision, and a proverb of reproach: We, fool, counted his life madness, and his end to be without honor: How is he numbered among the children of God, and his lot is among the saints."

Sinners,

How canst thou bear the deep wailing of woe,

How suffer the night of despair,
When the holy have gone to the regions of peace,
To dwell in the mansions above;
When their harmony wakes in the fulness of bliss,
Their song to the Savior of love,
Say, O sinner, that livest at rest and secure
Who fearest no trouble to come,
Can thy spirit the dwellings of sorrow endure,
Or bear the impenitent's doom?"

I appeal to you my dear readers of the PILGRIM who are living a careless life and yet unconcerned about your future and eternal destiny, how long do you think God will forbear, while continually inviting you to come? Can you spurn the proffered crown for carnal pleasures? Will you risk the loss of the blessed land for a few days longer to live in sin? Are you able to add one day to your life? God may call you any moment from time to eternity, and if out of Christ, you are beyond the reach of His mercy, and for trifling away your precious time your invaluable soul will ever be doomed to misery and woe; whereas, by consecrating yourself to the service of God by obedience to His Holy Word you would become a bright and shining star in the constellation of Heaven, to bask forever in the smiles of your Redeemer.

LEONARD FURRY.

REPLY TO JOHN FETTERHOOF.

MINISTER OF THE U. B. CHURCH.

Dear Friend. Your letter requesting some information relative to the sermon preached by myself at Bro. J. M's child's funeral was duly received but neglected, so far, in reply, but duty now impresses me to answer according to the ability that God may give, and my prayer now is that God may prompt my mind, and guide my pen in such a way that you and I and all that read this reply, may be benefitted thereby. You are desirous to know the truth. if so, search and obey the Word of God, and in it you will find the truth which to obey is eternal life.

You wish me to explain or define my ideas relative to the quotation that I made from Acts 4-12, "For there is none other name under Heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." I thought I had made it quite plain to the understanding of all present on that occasion, but if I can still make it plainer, I am quite willing to do so.

When our Savior was on the earth, He revealed His will to twelve chosen witnesses, and after it was confirmed by the shedding of His blood, it was recorded by them for our benefit and salvation. They were so inspired by the Holy Ghost that everything was brought to their remembrance, hence is called the Word of God. John says, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God, * * * * * * * and the Word was made flesh and dwelt among men." This goes to show plainly that the Word is the crabodiment of God Himself, and is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe it. For further evidence I will refer you to Rev.—19: 13, "And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and his name is called the Word of God." There might be many more testimonies produced, bearing the same evidence, but this is sufficient for any that are honest enough to accept the truth.

You say in regard to Judas, that he was still a bad man, after attending to the commandments, thus intimating that there may still be such as Judas in the Church. This may be so, but we have no grounds for objecting to any of the commands because Judas was a devil, or that we now have those in the Church having the form without the power. I am glad that you are willing to admit that Judas participated in the Supper, Sacrament, and Feet-washing. By this you assert that there are three ordinances in connection, but you have them wrongly placed. You should have said, Feet-washing, the Lord's Supper and the Sacrament. In the 13 chapter of John, you will find that Judas did not partake of the Sacrament, for after he had received the sop he immediately went out. At that time, the emblems of His broken body had not been yet partaken of, as will be apparent from reading Luke 22, 20, "Likewise also the cup after Supper," which is equivolent to saying, as He took bread after Supper, so in like manner He took the cup after Supper. If you contend that this bread here spoken of, constitutes the Lord's Supper, then the wine is no part of the Sacrament as it was taken after Supper, and could therefore be no part of the Lord's Supper, hence we observe the Lord's Sopper as a meal, and the bread and wine as the Communion of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus Christ. I hope you may see something here that you never noticed before, and become obedient to the Heavenly vision.

These ordinances are so closely connected that we cannot see how they can be separated. Remember, what God hath joined together, let no man put asunder. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." I think you now understand what word I had reference to, that by obeying, we can be saved. There is no promise of salvation or rest for the soul short of taking the yoke of Jesus, and this can only be done by becoming obedient to all His precepts and examples as recorded in the New Testament. It does not matter how good a man may feel, or how loud a profession of religion he makes, if he comes short of an humble obedience to Christ, just so short he comes of true religion. The question is asked, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say." We should remember that those things which we now leave undone, will stand andone against us at the great judgment bar when the lamentation will be, "The harvest is past and I am not saved." I have often said and say it again, if the people could only see or know the love we have for their precious souls, they would not think hard of us for so strongly urging the necessity of obeying all things as given by the Savior and the apostles. There is a heavy charge laid upon us, and we must preach the truth—the whole truth, for Bro. Paul says; "Though we or an angel from Heaven preach any other Gospel than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Since I have a knowledge of the truth, I always believed that every man and woman will have a time in life that they can know their duty towards God, if they only have the will to obey and walk in the light, but many love darkness rather than light, and oh how great is that darkness! God will even send them strong delusions that they may believe a lie and be damned, because they received not a love for the truth that they might be saved. This also shows that the truth is a saving power.

You seem to find fault with me for saying that water is the mother of the new birth. If you find fault with this you can also find fault with the Savior's words to Nicodemus,—John 3rd 5th, "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven." Study well the word "born" as I fear there are many professed masters in Israel as ignorant of this birth as was Nicodemus. Knowing the value of the soul and the terrors of the Lord against the ungodly, we persuade men. "Oh that my people would know the things that work for their peace," and walk humbly before their God in all the commandments blameless, for the whole duty of man is to fear God and keep his commandments.

GEORGE MOURER.

Upton, Pa.

A man who gives his children habits of industry, provides for them better than by giving them a fortune.

For the Pilgrim.

VALUABLE HINTS.

PSALMS, 119. 73. JOD.

Dear Friend.—We have so far treated only the one class, or what might be called those of the first resurrection, and as comprising only those, who in this life, done as much to attain it, as they, through the help and assistance of God, were enabled yet there is another class which do not belong to the connection of our question, as they do not stand in relationship with God in this time nor in the eternal state of existence, the same as the others. And this latter class it is to be feared comprises the greater part of the human family, and go to a state of existence without a realization of what may be in store for them in the Spirit world. Many live here without caring for the welfare of their never dying soul, and without ever trying to prepare themselves for the lot of every mortal. Many again pretend to be pious, and very strict in observance of some religious action for to have the praise and be seen of men, and still others follow and observe a certain form of devotion which is more the doctrine of man, than that which was brought down from Heaven by the Holy Spirit, and declared and promulgated by Jesus Christ, and His own chosen apostles. These, from the general sense of the Scriptures, are all to be resurrected. But by what process and what they have to pass through before they come to this event, no mortal eye has seen a clear description of, although we have a Book called the "Revelation of St. John," which is by some believed to contain the process by which God would effect His purpose, but as this book is mostly written in a figurative style, it is therefore for an allwise purpose withheld from men. But that the resurrection will progress till all are resurrected, and Christ's mission is fully accomplished, till there is no more death of any kind, till the serpents head is fully bruised, till the last enemy is under His feet, 'till He has the triumphant victory over death and the grave, is a truth contained also in the Scripture.

Then it will only be seen by every eye, and understood by every heart, what the resurrection of the dead implies. Then it will be seen and known that what was sown in corruption is raised in incorruption, that what was sown in dishonor is raised in glory, and what was sown in weakness is raised in power. All then will learn and understand how weak our efforts are when we rely on ourself while living in the flesh, and how strong we can be with the assistance, in following Christ. Then we also can see that as Christ the head of the body began in di-honor and weakness, and accomplished the work in glory, and that as He began in a natural capacity, to redeem the body, the Church, His Bride, and raised it to a spiritual and everlasting existence, to the honor and glory of God the Father, so we are to begin the regeneration in the weakness of our natural capacity, and while living in this body to be raised and ascend to the same exalted and higher existence.

This is the understanding we take from the Scriptures, of the resurrection, we cannot comprehend it to be a natural act. God is a Spirit, and when all things are subdued unto Christ, and Christ shall become subject unto God, then God is all in all again, the same as He was before His manifestation in creation, redemption and sanctification, the one Power from eternity to eternity.

We know there are many, who honestly differ from our views, yet we cannot help it, we think we have them from the Scriptures, and therefore kindly propose these questions: Does God change in his nature? Does He not seek to be worshipped now, as He did two thousand years ago, or is He now known different from what He was then? Is there a way besides Christ? Is there a Truth, a Life, or any other name by which men can get to Heaven or happiness, except as was revealed to men then? Is there a change inthe order and rule of the Universe, or does even the body and system of men exist differently to what they then did? The conclusion must be, that although the external appearances of the Universe might, through the effects of the elements, be changed in some respects, but all that is of a spiritual or divine nature, is, and ever must be the same. So then, as God and His existence was revealed through Jesus Christ, in that age and time, so He is now and will ever be, and as the destiny and relationship of man with God, was then by the same authority declared, so it always will be, regardless of all isms and schisms, that men may invent.

Man shall return to dust from which he was taken, but the spirit, unto God who gave it. (See Ecc. 12: 7.) A little more on the calculations of men as regards the duration of the world, or this Earth and Heaven, then we close our letters on this subject.

(To be Continued.)

ANSWER TO QUERY.

IN VOL. 3, PAGE 63.

The five testimonies as given by the apostle John, first epistle, 5: 7, 8. "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one, and there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." These five witnessess have all testified in their proper time and place to the great truth, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, as we will show in the following: Now the question will arise, how, when, and where, did these witnesses testify? We will now proceed to give a scriptural answer. "Lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and, lo, a voice from heaven saying, this is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3: 16, 17. "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Matt. 17: 5. "Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw, and bear record, that this is the Son of God." John 1: 33, 34. Now we have the testimony of the Father and of the Spirit, to the great truth we have named. But the word also bears witness, we learn that Christ is called the Word. "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." John 1: 14. Jesus did frequently bear record of himself. We will notice only a few of His testimonies: "Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true; for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go." John 8: 14. "I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me." Verse 18. Here, then, we have also the testimony of the word. And how did the water and the blood testify? We answer, when Christ was crucified. "But when they came to Jesus, and saw that He was dead already, they brake not His legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced His side, and forthwith came there out blood and water." John 19: 33, 34. For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled. "A bone of Him shall not be broken." Verse 36. And again another saith, "they shall look on Him whom they pierced." Verse 37. Now we have found the five testimonies, and they all agree, and clearly prove that Christ is the Son of God. These witnesses, we see, are mentioned in different places in the Scriptures; but John is the only writer who sums them up as in the topic before us, hear the language of John when he says, "This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth." I John 5: 6. "If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater, for this is the witness of God, which he hath testified of His Son. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God, hath made Him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of His Son." In regard to the Spirit and Holy Ghost mentioned by John in this discourse, they are identical terms—the same, but Christ at His baptism received an extraordinary portion of that Spirit, or power, from Heaven, in the form of a dove, so John could see and testify to what God said unto him, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and resting on Him, &c. Hence we see how the spirit bore witness from heaven. The same spirit is bearing witness upon earth to the great truth under consideration that Jesus is the Son of God. Every true penitent, genuine believer in Christ, at his baptism, receives but an ordinary portion of that spirit, or power, this spirit or power issues forth to us from the word of God, testifying to us that Jesus is the Son of God. Remember, Jesus says, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life. Hence we have all we need to testify, to teach, and to lead us into all truth.

I will also bear testimony to some remarks made by a brother on the same page. In the first place in regard to the circumstance of the jailor and his household, and when he (the jailor) had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." This is what we will particularly notice. The jailor believing in God with all his house, proves to a demonstration that they were all believing people, and most certainly cuts off the frivolous conjecture that little children were in that household. Also, in reference to Acts 2: 41. I agree with the brother that adding and baptizing are two quite different things. Evidently a great number of John's disciples were assembled on the occasion, and when those who had taken part in crucifying Christ were converted and baptized, then those of John's disciples, or about three thousand of them, were added unto the Apostles. The Church was now about organizing, Christ's disciples, and John's disciples, forming into one body, we see there was a daily adding to the church. Verse 47. Directly we see the church was about five thousand strong, Acts 4: 4, and soon began to have all things common. No doubt a great majority of the church were those that John had baptized in the river of Jordan before that time, and we read no place in the good Book that any of John's disciples were rebaptized.

Let this suffice for the present.

ELD. DAVID MURRAY.

Dayton, Ohio.

A RICH PROMISE.

"He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment.—I will confess his name before my Father, and before His angels."

"He that overcometh." Aye, 'tis to him the promise is made so full of rich, precious meaning; 'tis he who shall wear a robe of spotless purity—who shall be acknowledged by the blessed Savior.

What is he to overcome? Ah! how much, only they can answer, who have been buffetted by temptation and trial—who have met with adversity in many forms, and who, through all, have maintained a hopeful, patient trust in the goodness and wisdom of our Father.

If poverty walks, like a grim phantom, by our side, while we struggle bravely, earnestly, though without avail, to place even a slight distance between ourselves and the dark shadow, how our hearts almost rise up in rebellion that Providence has placed us in such circumstances, while our neighbor, who leads a thankless life, receives all the richest worldly gifts which mankind ever enjoyed, ignoring the source from which they come to him, and we feel as if we ought to murmur—as if human endurance could not hold out against such proofs—that "the good things of earth are unequally divided, if, in such a trying position, we are enabled to overcome—to look up with child-like faith and trust, and say, "Thy will be done." What a conquest! What a victory! What a reward is in store for us, as overcomers.

If we have a few idols treasured in the innermost recesses of our hearts, sheltered as we fancy, from the very breath of harm; if one by one, we are compelled to take them from their sacred niches—to snap asunder the cords of love which hold them, and lay them passively in the hand of the destroyer, to which his ruthless movements, as he crushes to atoms our cherished treasures, while our bleeding hearts yearn vainly for their restoration; if we can accept the lesson, the pain, the, chastisement, and its sure alleviation; if we can say, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice," then are we overcomers—then may we hope for the promised reward, which the continuation of such trust, confidence and obedience is sure to bring to us.

Oh, how many thousand ways there are in which we may overcome. We know that our hearts are selfish, that our eyes are blinded. How important it is that we should continually look above for light, for wisdom, and for strength, that at last we may be received by the Great Father, as overcomers, and may receive the promised, precious reward.—E. S. G.

THE FINGER BOARDS.

Dear Pilgrim: To-day I met with a number of finger boards, which were generally painted white, and considerably elevated, and a number of them pointed to the city of Harrisburg. Some of them have been standing at the same place for years, pointing to the city, but they never go there. This made me think of the celestial city, where many are aiming, and the present condition of our so called christendom.

People generally believe in a home in Heaven, or a rest, or salvation, and generally expect, or hope to get this through Christ. Through our country we find very many elevated white "finger boards," who pretend to point out the way to the city, and nearly all say to the people, that they must get there through Christ. This certainly is right, for Christ tells us, "I am the way," and Peter tells us "neither is there salvation in any other," and Paul confirms this when he says, "nor other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ. But we learn in Acts 1: 11 verse, that Jesus began both to do and to teach, and says, "follow me." But when it comes to that, which we call the practical point of religion, or following Jesus in the way. Many who point to Christ are acting worse than the finger boards, for whilst men point to Christ and do not obey Him, they may be compared to the finger on the board pointing to the city, and are never going there, and the words, "for they say and do not," might apply very well in this place. But these finger boards by our high ways do not hinder any one to go to the city, whilst those white elevated spiritual guides often tell the wayfaring traveler. "It matters not, or it is all one, whether you do this or that command, if you only believe in Christ," &c. I noticed also that our finger boards sometimes differ in the distance. One will tell you twelve miles to the city, and after you have traveled one or two miles, another will tell you it is yet twelve miles. So it is with our spiritual guides, or with some of them at least. Some will have it, "just join our church and you can get to Heaven, others will have it, "you must get religion, then do just as you feel for, if the heart is changed all is right," whilst some would require a little more than this, and yet not come up to what the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ requires of us.

Looking at these things from a Gospel stand point, must we not fear that the woes, pronounced against those that "shut up the kingdom of Heaven against men, and do not go in themselves," will fall upon the present generation? God forbid my dear brethren and sisters that it should fall on us, who profess the whole Gospel. Then let us be willing to come out from an unbelieving world, walk humbly in all the teachings of our blessed Jesus and the Apostles, for after we have done the whole will of God, we must be saved by grace. "Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear." It would be well for us that preach to the people, to remember the finger boards who never go the city.

"I want to go, I want to go,
I want to go there too,
I want to go where Jesus is,
I want to go there too."

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

CRY ALOUD AND SPARE NOT.

"Cry aloud, spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house Jacob their sins." Isaiah 58: 1.

This is the charge God gave his servant, the prophet. When our Lord Jesus promised his disciples he would send them the comforter, he added, "When he is come, he shall convince the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." This extends the New Testament prophet, or preacher beyond the pale, or limits of the church membership. All nations must be taught. For conviction must precede, or prepare for comfort, and must also seperate between the precious and the vile, and mark out those to whom comfort does not belong while in their sins.

The prophet must tell them how bad they were, and he must deal fourth fully and plainly with them. Though they were called the people of God, and the house of Jacob, yet he must not flatter them, but must show them their transgressions and their sins, he must be particular in telling them their faults, he must not particularize a certain catalogue of sins and transgressions, and then say, I hope better things of you my hearers, and I do not say this because I think any of you are guilty of them &c., and so let the sinner guess who is guilty, and to whom it applies.—But he must tell them what sins are committed among them, which they do not know of, and what sins are committed by them which they do not acknowledge to be sins. If they are reformed in some things, let them know that in others, they are as bad as other sinners are. In short, he must show them their transgressions and their sins.

He must be vehement and in earnest in it. He must cry aloud, and not spare, he must not spare them in his reproofs of sin as if he were afraid of hurting them, or lose his own reputation, he must search sin to the bottom, lay it bare to the bone. He must not spare himself in the work but cry as loud as he can, and though he spend his strength, and waste his spirit, and though he get their ill will by it, and get a bad name himself, yet he must not spare, but lift up his voice like a trumpet, to make them hear of their faults. He must give his reproofs of sin in the most powerful and pressing manner possible, he must do it as one who desired to be heeded.

Something like this, dear reader, I understand the charge of God to his prophet to mean, and something like this, I understand the duties of God's faithful ministers still to be,—and I believe that those who endure hardness like good soldiers will do, and in looking to Jesus the author of our faith and salvation for my example I am strengthened in this view. But when I contrast his preaching with that of our fault-finding brethren who never preach a pattern sermon, nor write a pattern article, but set themselves self constituted judges as to how little good such preaching or writing &c will do, I fail to see any similarity. When Jesus preached he attacked the errors of the systems of the day, and pointed out the aiders and propagators of the errors and set their sins clearly before the people. Woe unto you scribes, pharisees, hypocrites, is his address no less than eight times in one chapter, or may I say a short sermon. He tells them that they sit in Moses seat, that is, they have assumed the character and position of teachers, yet notwithstanding the great zeal to make proselytes to their system, they only made them two fold more the children of hell than themselves, and why? Because their system was of man, and not of God, and hence would deceive the people with it.—Therefore he warns his disciples that they should take heed and beware of the leaven (doctrine) of the Pharisees. He don't say in a general way there is a corrupt system, or doctrine of religion taught and practiced somewhere in the world, and that its advocates are very zealous and active in propagating it &c., and that they should take heed and beware of it, if they should happen by some means to stumble upon it, but he tells the people at once who the teachers of it are, and points out, not only their errors, but also their sins. And says: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell." To particularize the sin and errors he charged home to them would involve the neccessity to transcribe all of the 23rd chapter of Matt., and numerous other Scriptures, I therefore refer the reader there for a pattern, or sample sermon. In St. John 8: 44, he says: "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do &c." Will any one dare accuse our dear Savior with not serving these in love. What greater or stronger evidence can we give our fellow-man, that we love him, than to do him a kindness, and what greater kindness can we do than to save him from danger.

D. P. SAYLER.

(Concluded next week.)

Youth's Department.

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.

We suppose that our young readers think our talks few and far between. This is so, but we don't wish you to think that it is because we never think of you. We often think of our young PILGRIM readers and wonder how many are learning to love Jesus—but we are, just now, thinking about the commandments. We often hear people talk about the "Ten Commandments," and no doubt, father and mother have showed you where to find them, and perhaps you have often read them, but have you ever heard of, or read the "Eleventh Commandment"? This is the prettiest and loveliest of them all, and we want all of our young readers to find and read it.

It is a most beautiful rule for little brothers and sisters to observe, and if you obey it you will never quarrel with each other, but dwell in love like a little band of angels. Would that not be lovely? We have seen such a band of little brothers and sisters, and that was what made us think of the "Eleventh Commandment."

Now you see we are getting a little curious about it, and wonder how many of our young readers know anything about this commandment. We could tell you what it is, but we want each one to have the pleasure of finding it for themselves, and after you have found it, we want you to tell your little pilgrim brothers and sisters what it is and where to find it.

Now we want you all to find this commandment, and then report to us before the 1st of April, and we will probably give you a list of all who have found it.

TRUTH is that which renders one free; it is the voice which calls us to the love of God and of our neighbor, and to virtue.

A GOOD LOAN.

I am going to tell you a story about three little children whom I met not long ago. They showed me their little wooden savings banks, which their sick father had made for them; for he was too poor to buy tin ones, such as you sometimes see in shop windows, and such as some of you, perhaps, have. Each of the children had some pennies, which they had saved, instead of spending them for worthless notions that could do them no good. I asked them what they were going to do with their money. They replied that the did not just then know, but would find some use for it.

Some time after this, I again visited the home of these children, and picking up one of the little savings-banks, found it empty. Inquiring what had become of the money, one of the children told me they had lent it away. I told them they should be careful to whom they loaned money, else they might never get it back again. "We have lent it," said they, "to one who is ever so rich!" "What! rich, and borrowing pennies!" we exclaimed. They then told me this story:—

"One day, a minister of the Gospel came along. He was poor and was on his way to a neighborhood in which the people were noted for their wickedness. He was going to preach for them. While riding along, his horse lost a shoe; and he had no money to pay a smith for putting it on. The horse was getting lame from traveling without the shoe; and so we emptied our savings banks, giving him the money. And doesn't the Bible say, that, if we give to the poor, we lend to the Lord? So, you see, we have put it out at interest; and we have no doubt but we shall be repaid,—not, perhaps, in money, but in blessings. Besides, by helping the preacher on his way, we have helped to spread God's Word, which teaches sinners the way to get to heaven."

Don't you think, children, that we might all learn a lesson from the action of these little children? Some of us are not so poor as they; and yet do we do as much? They, like the widow, gave all; we give only a small part of what we have. Let us pray that the Lord will give us liberal hearts, so that we may not refuse to give liberally, according as he has blessed us with the means, for the spreading of his Word.—Gem.

WANTING TO BE AN ANGEL.

"I want to be an angel," Bobby kept singing at the top of his voice, except when he was teasing cat, spilling his milk, contradicting Bridget, or making mud pies; "I want to be an angel, and with the angels stand."

"That is all well and good when the time comes," cried Bridget at last, quite out of patience; "but before you can get to be an angel, Bobby, you must just want to be a good boy.—Good children is the stuff angels are made of; mind that, sir. Put it this way, 'I want to be a good boy, and with the good boys stand.' Then folks can know how much you mean of it."

Bobby did not like Bridget's view of the case, so he made up a lip and walked off.

THOUGHTS UPON WINTER.

I have nodoubt that to many of the little readers of the PILGRIM, winter seems a dreary season, and they are longing for beautiful spring, and the joys of spring and the beautiful blossoms and flowers will come again, and when the beautiful birds will come back to give us their sweet music. But I think if you will look around, you will see many things to gladden the heart. The winter gives us long evenings to improve our time and talents, to have many a pleasant talk around the friends of home, for there I love to see all our dear young friends spend their evenings, and talk and read of God, and our duty to Him. And when we look out and see the earth covered with snow it makes us feel cheerful, it is such a beautiful emblem of purity, how gently it falls from above, just as God's mercies fall on you my little readers. Every good and perfect gift cometh down from above. The beautiful snow is pure and unfainted when it first falls, but if it comes in contact with the earth, and mixes with it, it looses its beauty and purity, so it is with the child, while it is in its innocency, nestling in its mothers bosom, its soul is pure and spotless as the snow flake, but soon, yes often too soon it comes in contact with that which is earthly, sinful, and it is no longer so pure and beautiful, but then, happy thought, the blood of Christ is able to cleanse the soul, and make all white and clean. Oh! what a blessed Savior you have, one that is willing to do so much, should you not all love Him, and pray to Him to cleanse your heart from all stains of sin?

And too, we see there are birds skipping about over the snow. Surely our little readers should not feel sad because of the cold and snow when we see how happy the little birds seem to be. It may be some of you have wondered where the winter birds spend their summers. I will tell you what I saw last summer. I was crossing a large high mountain. As I was riding along, alone on a lonesome and weary road, I took notice of everything around me, and among other things, I saw a good many just such birds as are now hopping around our house, flying around and chirping merrily. Ah! thought I, I have found your summer retreat here upon the mountain top, where the air is cool, you spend your time in summer, and when winter comes to the vallies and far off plains, you fly as on the wings of the snow storm to spend your winters and gladden the heart of many a child that sees you hopping over the snow. How merrily thou would seem to answer the child that would ask thee the question:

What bird wilt thou do with thy little bare feet,
To save them from pain mid the frost and the sleet?
I can draw them right up in my feathers you see,
To warm them and fly away, pee dee dee.

What a lesson we may learn by remembering how God takes care of the little birds; even the sparrows are objects of his care, and how happy they seem. Surely then we can put our trust in God, that He will care for us and bless us. Were it not for winter, spring would not be such a delightful season. Having been deprived for a time of the joys of spring, we will love and enjoy them the more when they come So it is with God's spiritual blessing. If darkness, and a dreary aspect seems at times to hang around the soul, then when God's love seems to break in, oh, how we enjoy it and are made glad, When His rod of chastisement comes and we feel it for a while, then when He soothes the wounds we can say "blessed be God for His mercy." Yes, winter has its joys and its uses. All wisely arranged by God.

J. S. FLORY.

THE DISCONTENTED GIRL.

O dear! I want a new dress, said little Bessie. "I am tired of this old faded thing! Susie Norton has got a new one, and I don't see why I can't have new things once in a while, as well as she"

Bessie's mother came along just then and heard what she said. "Bessie," said she, "I am sorry to hear you speak so. I should get you a new dress if I could, but you know I am too poor now to buy one."

"I don't care," said Bessie, "other girls can have all the things they want, and I don't see why I can't have something once in a while."

Her mother made no answer to this rude speech, but sadly went about her work. Bessie was very cross all day, and when her little brother asked, "Sister, won't you tell me a story?" she said, "No, get out of my way!" and pushed him from her.

When night came, and Bessie had gone to her little bed, she thought what a naughty girl she had been, and made many good resolves to never do so again, and grieve the Lord, and her kind mother, as she had that day. I hope she has never forgotten how sad she felt, nor her good resolutions.—Young Pilgrim.

Correspondence.

LOWER FALL CREEK, IND.

Dear Brethren: I have received and read seven Nos. of the PILGRIM, (present vol.) and feel like testifying to the stern qualities of the same, so far as I have had an opportunity of examining.

I verily believe the brethren controlling the PILGRIM are "earnestly contending for the faith delivered to to the saints," and through the medium by which you work, many of us receive the benefits of the gifts bestowed upon brethren, whom we may never know in the flesh, and as a consequence, we may, and do if we wish, obtain ideas in our youth, that have cost others years of patient and prayerful study to obtain, and we may use those ideas for the enlightenment, and perhaps the conversion of some of the children of men.

And through this medium we learn the condition of the church throughout the land, and are often made to rejoice that our Heavenly Father still continues to bless the labors of our brethren by restoring some of the lost sheep to the fold of our Savior. This is encouraging to us, even if our lot is cast where, through the luke-warmness of the church, the cause of our Master seems to languish, and sometimes almost die.

Brethren, though residing in a distant part of God's moral heritage, and a stranger to you personally, I hope we are united in spirit, and in the spirit I pray God to sustain you in the good work, and enable you to continue to publish to the church, and to a dying world, pure Gospel truths that may revive our souls, when inclined to slumber, that may help to preserve the Church from the inroads of the wicked one, and that may, per chance, arouse the sinner to a feeling sense of his dangerous condition, and cause his return to God, for through such labors God will be glorified, the church at large benefitted, and your own soul blessed with a happy home in Heaven for a reward

MARTIN J. MCCLURE.

Dear Pilgrim: In No. 4 there is an explanation asked of the 4th, 5th and 6th verses of the 6th chapter of Hebrews. I came across the following in the Rev. John Wesley's sermon, or rather in one of them. He first asked, "What was the sin, which the persons here described were guilty of?" In order to understand this, we should remember, that whenever the Jews prevailed on a Christian to apostatize, they required him to declare, in express terms, and that in the public assembly, that Jesus of Nazareth was a deceiver of the people; and that he had suffered no more punishment than his crimes justly deserved. This is the sin which St.

Paul in the first passage terms emphatically "fallen away;" crucifying the Son of God afresh, and putting him to an open shame. This is what he terms in the second, "counting the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, treading under foot the Son of God, and doing despite to the Spirit of grace." This agrees so well with my own idea of the meaning of this passage of Scripture, I have taken the liberty of giving it in his own words.

E. R.

Pine Creek, Ind.

CERRO GORDA, IND. }
Feb. 28th 1872 }

Brethren Brumbaugh: The PILGRIM is making its weekly visit into our family, and it is received with pleasure. Its pages are all filled with such things as are intended to buoy us up on our way to Zion, and as church news is always read with delight, especially by those who are interested in the welfare and prosperity of the church, I will give you a few items of what our brethren are doing here in the Oakhaw church. We commenced a series of meetings here on the 20th. of this month, and closed on the 27th. R. H. Miller of Ladoga, Ind., was with us and preached 11 sermons. During the meetings, four were made willing to come out on the Lord's side and were received into the church by baptism, and we feel satisfied that many more, impressions have been made that will not soon be forgotten. Our church here is increasing in number tolerably fast. There are some fifteen members moving here in the Spring. Nine have come by baptism since the first of January, 1872. That many more may come during this year is my prayer.

D. D. SHIVELY.

NORTHSVILLE, IND. }

Dear Pilgrim: I wish to inform you and your many readers, that the Discussion which is to be published in your worthy paper, took place in the church in which I reside—Stony Creek Branch, Hamilton Co., Ind.—and I truly wish that every member of the church could read it. They should all subscribe for the PILGRIM, as the discussion, alone, will be worth many times its cost. Not only should the Brethren read it, but it should be read by everybody that has any doubt in regard to the subject discussed. Bro. R. H. Miller conducted himself in a christian manner, but we are sorry we cannot say the same of Mr. Jewel, as brother Miller demanded of them, a first class minister and a gentleman, and such he was represented to be, but many thought they were mistaken in their man, as the discussion will show. The next day after the debate closed, there were four additions to our church, and a number since. I would have much more to say in regard to it, but feel that when published it will speak for itself.

Yours in love.

JOHN H. CAYLOR.

CORRESPONDENCE.

(Continued from No. 9, page 70.)

On Monday 5th it was snowing, with a strong North wind. Brother Ziegler stayed over night with his brother-in-law a mile from here, and while waiting for them I will say some more about the church of Falls City, and also of the country. I think the church is in a healthy condition. There is something over one hundred members, having six ministers, the number of deacons I did not learn. I heard them say they needed some more as two of the deacons had been put to the ministry. They are active and zealous in the cause of our Lord, contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

Brother Stump is an able speaker, and fills the office he holds well. Bro. J. Flory labors much for the salvation of souls. The whole church there appears to aim at the great principle of love, peace, and union among them, and I was made to believe while I remained with them, that love and peace reigned in every heart. May God increase that love in every heart as they grow older in days and years, is my prayer.

I shall long remember the brethren and sisters of Falls City Church, for their love and kindness manifested towards me while I remained with them. I pray the good Lord to bless them with all things needful, for both soul and body, and by his grace they may come out more than conquerors. I would have been pleased to have tarried a few days longer with them, but the time had come to part, and this will always be so with us in this world, but I hope to meet all the children of God in our home in heaven where we will no more part.

I will just say this much for the state of Nebraska; as for good and beautiful lands, it cannot be excelled by any other sister states in the Union, and doubtless will be one of the foremost states in the West at no distant day. Emigration has been very strong to that state the last two years. The part reserved for the Indians, is the garden spot of the country. It is one of the most beautiful and lovely spots I ever saw on earth; but I hope to find a more beautiful and lovely home in heaven.

Brother Ziegler and wife arrived about 9 o'clock. They were determined on going home; all now is bustle, giving us hardly time to to wrap up so we could face the wind and snow. Bidding brother and sister Glick farewell, and mounting our two horse wagon, off we started, facing the storm seven miles to the Missouri River, drove across the free ice bridge in safety. Here we had two miles due north up the river, and I can say of a truth of all the cold places that I have ever been, this was the coldest. How glad we were when we got to where our road led east through the timber, as it was not so disagreeable. We arrived at Bigelow Station after one o'clock. At this place we parted with brother Zeigler and wife, their road was north, ours still was east. Here we expected to meet M. Bennet with conveyance to convey us home, but to our chagrin he did not come. It being so very cold he thought we would not venture out. Our only way was to foot it home, 7 miles. We had not traveled far, before a young man took us in his wagon. We rode about two miles with him, and then walked the remainder of the way. Arrived at home about sunset, and found all well. We felt to thank the Lord for his kind protection over us and families while we were absent from them, and granted us the privilege of meeting our loved ones, all enjoying good health. Let God be praised for all His goodness shown towards the children of men. Yours in love.

A. J. CORRELL.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of Southern Indiana, will be held in theNorth Branch of the Wild Cat Church, in the Meeting-house eight miles South of Delphi, on the 28th day of March, 1872. Those coming from the East will stop at Delphi, and from the West at Back Creek. For further information, address the undersigned.

JOHN SHIVELY.

Please announce to the Churches composing the First District of Va., and others who may be interested, that arrangements have been made for holding the Annual District Meeting with the brethren of the West and of Floyd Co., Va., at their meeting-house, on the 19th and 20th of April. A general attendance is desired, and invitation is hereby given to brethren of other portions of the Brotherhood that may find it convenient to be with us.

B. F. MOOMAW.

(Visitor and Companion please copy.)

The District Meeting for Middle Pa., will be held, the Lord willing, with the brethren in the Lower Cumberland branch of the Church, Cumberland county, at the Mohler meeting-house, commencing on Tuesday, the 30th day of April next. Further notice will be given where they are to stop off, &c. A full representation is very desirable, as there will be important business laid before the meeting.

DAN'L M. HOLSINGER.
Cor. Sec'y.

Clover Creek, Pa.

The District meeting of the E. District of Md. will meet, the Lord willing, at the Beaverdam meeting-house in Frederick co., on the first Tuesday in April, at 9 a. m.

PHILIP BOYLE.

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

Middle District of Ind. April 12th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

Southern District of Ind. March 28th. Stop off at Delphi and Back Creek.

Eastern District of Maryland, April 2nd, Beaverdam, Frederick Co., Md.

North-eastern District of Ohio, Thursday. May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Editor's Department.

WORDS TO PATRONS.

1st. Every reader of the PILGRIM is invited to contribute to its columns. Essays, Church News, Obituaries &c, are solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. If you desire a good and interesting paper, help us to make it such by furnishing the material.

2nd. Be sure and write plainly, your name, post office, county and state, in every letter, and do not expect us to credit money and change addresses, unless you tell us to whom, and where sent.

3rd. Never send money without giving name and address of those who paid it.

4th. In sending lists, mark who are old and who are new subscribers. Please remember this.

5th. Money may be safely sent in Drafts, Checks, Postal Orders drawn on Huntingdon P. O. or in registered letters. All amounts under $2.00, may be sent at our risk, if put in the envelope and carefully sealed and directed.

OUR POSITION.

We are strange creatures, and it often takes us a long time to know ourselves. There is a principle within us that is ever strong for the mastery, and too often gains its point. We mean the "little fox" self, and oh, what a countless multitude of sins it has been the mother of! Brethren and sisters, have you ever thought of the tears that have moistened the sainted brow, on account of the nippings of this "little fox?" Let us destroy this monster in the church, and we have a heaven on earth, just as we should have. The kingdom of Jesus is a kingdom of peace, and for it to be such, its members must be the embodiment of this divine principle. There is but one body, and of that body we are all members, and as dependent upon each other in the divine arrangement, as the foot is dependent upon the head, or the head upon the hands. If the smallest and most insignificant part of the body is injured, the whole body suffers. Just so it is in a spiritual point of view, if the least member of the mystical body of Christ suffer, the whole body should sympathize with, and labor to have the wound healed or made whole.

Now brethren and sisters, this is the spirit of Christ, is it also our spirit? We are sometimes made to fear it is not, or we would not be so free in exposing the weaknesses and faults of our erring brothers or sisters. How blessed and glorious the spirit of that rule which says: "If thy brother trespass against thee go and tell him of his fault between him and thee alone." It sometimes happens through the promptings of this "self" that instead of doing this, we go and blaze it abroad, and even send it to our periodicals to have it published thoughout the entire brotherhood.—Now brethren and sisters, this is not the spirit of him who loves us, it is the prompting of "self" which we must learn to crucify, if we expect to be of those lively stones which are to compose the temple of God. We would here say, please do not send us any articles bearing on the character or standing of any member of the body of Christ, and if you do, do not feel offended if we lay it in the box of rejection with others that have already accumulated. We have been forced to the conclusion that it is wrong to publish such things to the world. It does violence to our own bodies as well as the body of Christ. It is true, there are causes for complaint, and we were informed lately of a few things that caused us to weep, to think that any of our dear brethren would act so rashly, but we have thought it better to bury such proceedings rather than publish them abroad.

Brethren, if we have a lamp or light, let us put it on the bushel, but if darkness cover it up, the world is too full of it now, without adding any more.

There is another thing that is not according to the spirit of Christ, i, e, in writing and publishing uncharitable insinuations against our different periodicals. Such things are the outgrowth of self—and manifest a weak and unbrotherly spirit, and is a great injury to the common cause. If we have been guilty, we are determined to try and be so no more, and we ask our contributors to make the same determination. We love "good words" but do not want anything that has a disrespectful bearing upon the labors of our other brethren who are enlisted in the same cause.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Eld. J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for publication, and will soon be ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader; The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real; The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology, Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" Spiritual Rappings" &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called "Experimental Religion;" Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ and recorded by His faithful witness.

Now, brethren and sisters, here is an opportunity of doing good. This "Tract" should be read by every minister, by every lay member and by every son and daughter belonging to the household of faith, and especially, by the thousands that are now basing their hopes of salvation upon this delusion.

Bro. Flory was raised among this element, and has for a number of years given the subject a careful and prayerful examination. It is not the product of the impulse of the moment, but it is the result of long and careful study, and should be circulated by the thousands, as we feel assured that an immense amount of good can be accomplished in this way. We wish all those interested in the dissemination of truth to send in their orders immediately. Those wishing to get them to sell, or for distribution can send along their orders now, and send the money when the "Tracts" are received. Please order immediately as we wish to know of the number needed before we distribute the type.

Many of our able brethren could spend $3.00 or $5.00 or even $10.00 to a very good advantage by sending for these tracts and distributing them. Send along your orders as soon as possible and thus lend a helping hand to the good work. These Tracts will be sent to all post paid on the following terms:

Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 80 cts, 20 copies $1.50, 50 copies $3.00, 100 copies $5.00.

JOSEPH DUNLAP. Your favor is received and "Right Word in the Right Place" will be sent soon.

S. B FURRY. Your favor was received—all right.

M. J. Mc. The address of Wm. Mallory is Cartersville, Cumberland Co., Va.

JOS. AMICH. We will accept all the names you send us on those conditions.

BRO. ISAAC ULERY'S address is changed from Pyrmont, Ind., to Salem, Marion Co., Ill.

JACOB WEAVER. All right.

For the Pilgrim.

THE FRIEND OF MY YOUTH.

(Lines on the death of ELLIE M. SWINE)

BY A. * * * C. * * * *

Where is the friend of my youth!
Say where is that cherished one gone?
And why has she drooped with the leaf
Ah! why has she left me to mourn.

Her voice still sounds in my ear,
Her features I see in my dreams,
And the world is a wilderness drear,
As a wide spreading desert it seems.

Ah! where is the friend of my youth,
Ah! where is the cherished one gone?
And why has she drooped with the leaf,
And why has she left me to mourn?

Say can I ever again?
Such ties can I ever renew?
Or feel that warm pulse again
Which beat for the dear one I knew?

The world as a winter is cold,
Each charm seems to vanish away,
My heart is now blighted and old,
It shares in all natures decay.

Ah! thou poor heart whose faithful love,
Is blighted to the core!
May meet again in heaven above,
She's only gone before!

Ellie dear is lying still,
Thy own sweet darling bride,
But free she is, of every ill,
With angels at her side.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

DIED.

SWINE—On the 21st of Feb. in Aughwick Valley, Huntingdon Co., Pa., of scarlet fever, Ellie M., wife of David B Swine, aged 19 years, 2 months and 16 days. Funeral services by brother John Spanogle, from Luke 12: 40.

The subject of the above obituary was a member of the German Reformed Church. She was an intelligent, amiable, and excellent young woman, and was loved and respected by all who knew her. She had only been married about eleven weeks. She took sick on Saturday night, and died on the following Wednesday. Her remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors. Poor Ellie! a few days ago she was here in the enjoyment of health and bright earthly prospects, the joy of her young husband, and the favorite of her friends, but now she is gone to the city of the silent dead, her gentle spirit has gone to God who gave it. Oh, how vain are all things earthly. How soon are all our earthly prospects blighted.—"Lord make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is, that I may know how frail I am."

McCONOUGHEY—On the 21st of Feb. of cancer, brother John McConoughey, aged about 68 years. Funeral services by Bro. John Spanogle, from Job 14.

The subject of this obituary was a poor, afflicted brother. He suffered long and severely. We hope that through the grace of God, his sorrows have been turned into songs, and his tribulations into triumphs. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed in thee, because he trusteth in thee."

KRALL—In the Lower Fall Creek Church, Madison Co., Ind., Feb. 11th, 1872, Maggie, daughter of brother Philip Krall, aged 1 year and a few days. Funeral services by J. W. McClure and others from Matt. 18: 3.

"Dearest Maggie thou hast left us
Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

M. J. McCLURE.

YOUNG—In the Monticello Church, White Co., Ind., Dec. 10th, 1861, Johnny, youngest son of brother Adam and sister Hannah Young, aged 5 years, 11 mo. and 16 days. Disease, Brain Fever. Funeral occasion improved by brother Joseph Amick and the writer, from 1 Peter 1: 24, 25.

SHUCK—Same Church, Carroll Co., Ind, Dec. 11th, 1871, friend Henry Shuck, aged 41 years and some days. Disease, Typhoid Fever. Funeral attended by the writer, from Matt. 24: 44.

BROWN—Same District, Dec. 24th, 1871, our beloved sister Elizabeth Brown, consort of brother Andrew Brown, and sister of Eld. Adam Young, aged 50 years, 4 months, 29 days; disease, Consumption.

In her, the Church has lost one of its most devoted and earnest members; though not rich in this world's goods, she was rich in faith and good works, which we feel assured follow her while she is resting from her labors She was formerly a member in the Dry Valley Church, Mifflin Co., Pa. Funeral occasion improved by the writer, assisted by brother Joseph Amick, to a large assembly, from John 5: 25–29.

YOUNG—Same place, Feb. 15th, 1872 our much esteemed brother and elder, Adam Young, aged 52 years, 1 month and 21 days. Disease, Lung Fever, followed by Typhoid Pneumonia.

In him the Church has lost one of its most efficient and faithful members, one that was ever willing and ready to do his part either in labor or counsel, truly the Church has cause to mourn, but not as those who have no hope.

In the early years of his life he stood identified with the Methodist church, but after reading the Scriptures more carefully, he felt it his duty to follow his Lord in all the commandments blameless, so he united with the Brethren in Mifflin Co., Pa., where he was, a few years after, chosen to the the ministry, where he labored faithfully till the Spring of 1865, when he, with his family emigrated to White Co., Ind., where he entered a new field of labor in which he proved himself faithful and worthy, so that in August, 1869, he, with the writer, was ordained to the full ministry, in which capacity they labored together, in full confidence in each other, never to the writer's knowledge did anything arise to mar their feeling towards each other, and like David and Jonathan, being knit together in life, the writer feels distressed for his brother, yet not as one that has no hope. On the 25th of the present month his funeral was preached in our meeting-house by the writer and brother Joseph Amick, who were absent at the time of his death, on a mission of love. Text, Rev. 14: 12, 13.

J. S. SNOWBERGER.

Monticello, Ind.

GARNER—On the 21st of Feb, Miss M. J. Garner, daughter of John and Ellen Garner, aged 20 years, 4 months and 19 days.

"Weint nicht meine Freunde, trocknet die Trænen,
Ich bin nicht todt, ich schlafe hier,
Ich hof' auf Gott und Ihm allein,
Sein Will ist geschehen, und nahm mich Heim."

J. J. H. BASSWARD.

APIARY FOR MARCH.

Winter is not yet over, occasionally we may have warm summer days which will induce bees to fly. When there is a light snow on the ground prevent them from flying by closing the entrance and giving upward ventilation, or lean a b ard against the front of the hive to prevent the sun's rays from shining direct on the hive. Bees that have been kept in a depository or cellar during winter may be set out on their summer stands as soon as the weather bids fair, only a few at a time until they have their fly, then all upward ventilation must be closed to promote breeding. Now is the time to insure a heavy crop of honey, and hosts of young swarms the coming season, by a little judicious management. Like the farmer, who at this time feeds a little more grain to his horses than usual, and declares they will stand double the work when plowing time comes, so double the products of the apiary by feeding the bees too, if not more than one gill of sweetened water be fed to them daily, it will greatly promote breeding. Use one part white loaf sugar, dissolve in three parts water, feed to them from the top of the hive in a piece of honey comb, or what is better a bee feeder, also supply them with unbolted rye meal, placed within a few rods of the hive in a warm sunny place, as a substitute for natural pollen (or bee bread,) until flowers produce it. E. J. WORST.

New Pittsburg, Ohio.

LARGE FRESHETS PREDICTED.—The Chicago Evening Post says: All the indications are that the spring freshets will be of an extraordinary volume and violence, and travelers coming from the North, centre and West, are of opinion that whole villages are likely to be swept away.—Happily, the people of many isolated settlements have anticipated the danger, and are preparing for it. The unusual depth of the snowsfall throughout the West has not only resulted in the serious disarrangement of trade by the blockade of the Pacific railroads, but its coming so late in the season will insure immense destruction in the inevitably early thaw. Mississippi valley railroads will need to look sharply for floating rails; and the entire West, wherever the January snows fell with average depth, should assume the defensive against the floods before the attack becomes too imminent.

The Utah Constitutional Convention, now in session at Salt Lake City, has wisely decided to abandon polygamy, if the answers of a majority of the people of the territory can be obtained therefor. This measure was only determined upon after due deliberation, and with the consent of some of the most prominent Mormon leaders; others less influential, however, fruitlessly opposed it. The new constitution will, therefore, be framed in accordance with the terms prescribed by Congress, as a condition precedent to the admission of the territory as a State.

It is stated that two German armies are ordered to be ready to move at any time. The cause for these preparations is the great activity for political parties at Versailles, and the possibility of a change of Government in France. Germany reserves the right to decide as to any new Government there. Should she deem such Government unlikely, either by inclination or incapacity, to execute the treaty of peace, there will be another invasion.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1 25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1 00.

Hand book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

Any of the above named books can be obtained by leaving orders at this office, or at the Pilgrim office, James Creek, Pa.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain, - - -	1.00
Turkey morocco, - - -	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen, - - -	5 50

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Rosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	UP TRAINS. MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	DOWN TRAIN. MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 31	4 13
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 31	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 28	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.60
" Hill "	1.60
" Winter red "	1.75
CORN.	.48
OATS.	.43
RYE.	.43
BARLEY.	.65

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,
Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address.
DANIEL KAGARICE.
New Enterprise,
Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50.
Any number above that at the same rate,
Address.
H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county, Pa

Mirkly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA MARCH 19, 1872. NO. 12.

ESSAYS.

For the Pilgrim

VALUABLE HINTS.

PSALMS, 119. 25. DALETH.

Dear Friend: Inasmuch as we will devote yet some more space, and still say some more on the same point of the subject, it is hoped no offence is taken. We are not inclined to pass any of the references made in support of the theory already contended against in oor former letters. We wish to give satisfaction to you and ourself, because we believe that the true and acceptable worship of God depends much on this point, for if we do not know in what relation we are to him, how he exists, and who he is, than we may adore a something or an idea of our own creating, and may not be much better, if any, than the heathen who make themselves idols, by the work of their own hands. Therefore we cannot be too particular in our investigation, and too impartial in our consideration, and if we find that we have heretofore thought this to be only a minor matter, then it might be well to reconsider, and try to unite in worshipping God in spirit and in truth, and in truth we only can worship him, when we are acquainted with his existence, and know what he is. It is said, and to a great extent believed, that God exists in a body like our bodies, because Christ the Son had such a one. In support of this it is said, Heb. 1: 3. "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged oor sins, sat down on the right hand of the majesty on high." We admit that Christ Jesus, according to the nature of his mother, had a body like ours, but to say that this body was according to the nature of his Heavenly Father, is not so readily admitted.

He was with the Father, before he came on earth, not bodily, but spiritually united together in glory, power, and being, so he was while he was doing the Father's work and will on earth, and so he was again, when he sat down on the right hand of the majesty on high. If there had been a bodily likeness of Father and Son before Christ came on earth, a separation of body and spirit, a death, must have taken place in Heaven, and the body left there, but as this cannot be consistent, we conclude, that all refers to a spiritual existence, and Father and Son existed spiritually only.—Then when he came down from heaven, he assumed a body in order that he could have access to those he came to save. "For verily he took not on him the nature of angels, but he took on him the seed of Abraham," Heb. 2: 16. This shows that the Son was with the Father before he was born of the virgin Mary. The oneness as Christ expressed it, John 17: 21, 22. "As thou Father art in me and I in thee." "Even as we are one," always existed, and consequently only spiritually like those of his Heavenly Father, he had the same attributes, and therefore, "He is the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person or being, as the German translation has it."

The Apostle Paul to the Colossians, 3: 9, 10, defines this image. "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds. And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." Here Paul evidently spoke of the converted or regenerated, and as no bodily change took place, or takes place in conversion, so far as outward or bodily appearance is concerned, it must refer to the spiritual man brought back to his former state, purified, and changed again to that image and likeness of God in which man was created. Then as long as the old man with his deeds is not put off, he bears the image of the earthly, but when he is put off, he bears the image of the heavenly. But we heard it remarked that this image of the heavenly was only first obtained after, or in the resurrection. We will say that we agree to this, and believe it to be the connecting link of the relationship between the existence of the Creator and creature, and that it has much to do with the acceptance of the latter by the former. We intend, therefore, to give in these letters our understanding from the testimony of the scriptures. We may perhaps differ with the popular idea, but in a resurrection we believe with all our heart, and our aim and endeavor is to attain it, and be raised from this earthy, low, and sinful state and condition, whereinto the transgression of our first parents have placed us, to that new life, that new hope, and renewed knowledge and experience of peace, of rest everlasting. A foretaste, an assurance of these we must have in this life. If this life is ended without such experience, we cannot hope for the spirit. The ever-living, immortal and never-dying part of men must, and always will remember what the action and belief were while here on earth, and while united with the body. It will also know that the opportunity to repent, and to make use of the talents and means of grace, which an infinite, good and benevolent Father has offered through and by the Gospel, are out of reach there, and in despair and woe, cannot find comfort, because the promise of atonement and merits of a crucified Savior were unknown, or even perhaps the merciful gifts of the Gospel rejected and evaded while living in the body. We believe the condition of such not to get worse, because of adding more sin, but that despair is bringing them lower, in that abandonment of hope, and uncertainty of knowledge as to how long this state will last, and whether deliverance will come or not But while the first transgression brought men into a similar condition, and deliverance in God's own appointed time did come, the faithful believer and Bible reader may trust in the everlasting goodness and never changing love of God, and look with faith to the happy, and in a blissful united family of the children of God.

This would, or will be a general resurrection, but those who only hold to a part to be saved, cannot admit of but a partial resurrection. The resurrection is unto life, and not unto death, and is a spiritual work, wrought by the Spirit of God through and by Jesus Christ, and where Christ works, life is the fruit thereof, and to whom Christ gives life, he gives Salvation and Happiness.

For to give eternal life to all, Christ came into the world and died for its sins John the Baptist said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." And St. Paul Romans, 4: 25, "who was delivered for our offences, and was raised for our justification."

That Christ should die for the benefit of the entire human race, the Creator knew before men fell. And even in the fall of the first pair, a scene of the likeness of Adam and Eve's transgression, and Christ's death, deliverance of the church, was through the love and goodness of God, manifested. Look at Adam Christ. And Eve the church, or the human family for she is the mother of all living. We perceive that Eve was tempted and eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, out of a different motive, to what Adam did. They both knew the consequence, but a desire to be wise was the main and leading wish, with mother Eve, and so she eat, and lost knowledge of everlasting life, and not only incurred the displeasure of that good Father and Creator, but also the pronounced penalty for the transgression of His commandment, and this penalty she knew to be death, not a death bodily, but a spiritual or a separation from the state and condition in which she formerly lived and enjoyed. Now she knew, and felt no doubt, that she could not have that sweet, agreeable, and peaceful union, and communion with God only, but her only earthly companion, was also a different being from her. He was innocent, and without sin, she had transgressed and was guilty, and death, or a separation, between him and her, must be the consequence if he did not share her lot. So she presented to him the forbidden fruit, and he did eat also. But before he eat, what must have been the feeling and consideration of Adam, when he beheld the object of his earthly affection, and side companion and partner of all his pleasure, now no more qualified to share with him, the joys and duties which the state they had lived in together afforded them? He could not behold her in the light and relation he did before, she stood in one condition, he in another, and the question must have arisen within him, how will this beautiful earth, with all the comforts and conveniencies, which a benevolent Father has so well arranged for the use of his creatures welfare? Who will enjoy them, who will attend to these things given to our care and keeping? Will not all be neglected, and this whole creation go to naught again? Then we believe, to avoid the separation of bone of his bone, and the flesh of his flesh, he chose voluntarily, out of a pure motive of love to go with his wife, and be still united with her, even if death be another consequence, yea, rather than see the object of their created union go into desolution, he left his higher station, and submitted to the death which Heaven had decreed, should be the penalty and wages of sin.

The case with Christ and the church resembles this in all particulars. The church, or the creation committed the transgression, for which Christ the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world, left the high courts of Heaven, descended down to earth, united for a season his divine, with human nature, that he may be able to teach men by word, and die the death for which the church his bride was guilty alone, and was dead and separated from him. Yet he could not be her bridegroom and her companion in this disunited condition, and so he came also voluntarially, and showed by acts and deeds, how a union could take place again that they ever may dwell together in that blissful state or Paradise which God has prepared, and from which transgression of his commandments, had for awhile deprived her.

I. A.

For the Pilgrim.

MEMORY.

Memory is the faculty by which ideas are retained in the mind, or a remembrance of the past. It recalls the various instances of the past, places them vividly before the present that we may clearly view them, and in reviewing them, we can comprehend two ways. The one way, little traveled in comparison to the much traveling on the other. They are, namely: right and wrong. The past that has been spent in innocency and sacrificing ourselves for the happiness of others, will certainly bring forth feelings of ecstasy, while the reverse will cause us to weep bitter tears of sorrow and regret. How miserably we feel when, in an unguarded moment, we wound the feeling of a fellow being. An unguarded moment has caused a lifetime of agony and regret.

The Creator has therefore most wisely bestowed upon us this faculty of which we all possess to a greater or less extent, at least so much that we can remember the goodness of God and our indebtedness to him and our duty to our fellowmen, that we may, from the experience of the past, learn to regulate the future. We have experienced the sensations of doing good, and also of doing evil. Why not then, when we know the peace of mind and kindly feelings which being good has created and the disturbed mind, and unpleasant feelings which were created by doing evil, persist the more in doing good and becoming more perfect? The Lord has promised to be more merciful to the man who remembers the things which cause him to sin and try to avoid them, than the one whom he hardeneth and repeatedly permits those things to take hold of him which cause him to sin.

How pleasant it is to remember in unmolested revelry, the happy scenes of our child-hood; when we were all as one under the parental roof. Oh, how dear they were and how dear to memory still. While brothers, sisters, and early associates are fresh in our memories, each scene is recalled, and the loved ones who comprised our little bands. But now, how changed! Those who were entwined so closely about our hearts have, one by one, left their parental abode until but few traces are left of that once happy band. How vainly do we lisp their voices as of yore. Some are far away, some are beneath the cold and silent earth, but their spirits have flown to so unknown world reaping their just rewards. Time the dispenser of all things earthly, has wrought this change, and all that is left us is the memory of those fleeting days, which are as unchangeable as the rock of adamant. How sad these changes. But while we grieve over the past, we remember it is the Lord's will, that by the memory of the happiness we had in each others society, we strive the more earnestly, that we may at that final day be permitted to take our abode where bands are never severed, and congregations never break up. We should not wish the past, the present, but use it as a mirror into which we can reflect, and discern the defect of our past lives, and make amends, and day by day, blot out the many dark spots which appear. I suppose my dear brethren and sisters have to encounter many allurements to which we sometimes give way, and that is what causes these dark spots upon the pages of memory, over which we shed so many burning tears. And those who like your unworthy sister, are young is years and as a babe in Christ, implore the Father of the Universe who as creator of all and above all, to give us grace to hurl aside the fiery darts which assail and cling to none save Jesus and him crucified, that he may aid us that the pages of memory from henceforth become more perfect and unsullied.

May we all thank God that he has bestowed us with a memory, that we may remember the sorrows and pleasures of the past, and avoid the things which caused them, but not as his chosen of old, repeatedly transgress his holy laws and by so doing heap damnation upon our souls; but take caution from the past that his mighty hand fall not upon us and utterly destroy us.

"'Tis sweet to remember! I would not forego.
The charms which the past or the present can throw,
Tis all the gay visions which fancy may weave,
In her net of illusion which shines to deceive.
We know not the future—the past we have felt,
The cherished enjoyments,—the bosom will melt,
Its pulses anew o'er our pulses may roll,
When the thought of the morrow falls cold on the soul."

S. G. Keller.

Dickenson, Pa.

THE COVERING OF THE HEAD.

1 Cor. 11: 3–16.

There seems to have been a great deal of discussion as to whether the woman should have her head covered with anything more than the hair or not. Some claim that according to verse 16, the covering here spoken of means nothing more than the hair, but evidently the apostle, when he says, ver. 4, "Every man praying or prophesying having his head covered, dishonoreth his head," means a covering that the man can put on or remove at pleasure; and we all know that when a man speaks or prays, either privately or publicly, he does it always with an uncovered head—that is, he takes off his hat. It would be a shame for him to speak with his hat on, that is to have his head covered.

Now then, Paul is speaking of the woman in just the opposite sense from that in which he spoke of the man. That is, he is still speaking of the same thing, in reference to the woman as that of which he spoke in reference to the man, namely, of a covering for the head, i. e. a covering which could be put on or removed at will, and says, "But every woman that prayeth and prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head, for that is even all one as if she were shaven. For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn; but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn let her be covered." Now if, as some contend, this covering be the hair, and the Corinthian sisters prayed and prophesied with uncovered heads (and this a fault among them which the apostle evidently wished to correct), then they must already have been shorn, and the apostle's writing would have no bearing, for he assumes that they themselves consider it a matter of disgrace to be shorn or shaven, for he says, "If it be a shame for a woman to be shorn," &c. From these facts, then, we must assume that there must be some covering for the head other than the hair, a covering which the woman can put on and off at will. In our church it is the custom for the women to wear caps, and we believe it is right and good that our sisters should conform themselves to this custom, both in obedience to the instructions of Paul, and also as a distinguishing characteristic by which our sisters may be known as sisters. It gives us pleasure when, both in private and public worship, we see our sisters conformed to this custom of wearing plain caps.

The Apostle also says in the 16th verse, "But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God." This also seems to be variously understood, and some indeed seem to apply it to the very thing about which Paul has said so much, as though he, after speaking so pointedly and earnestly about the woman having her head covered, now yet at the end, declare, "We have no such custom, neither the churches of God." It would indeed seem strange that Paul, after his earnest reproof and earnest declarations, should now nullify the whole thing which he tried so earnestly to impress upon the minds of the Corinthians by saying, "But after all it does not matter, you can do as you please." Would not his writing on this point have been all in vain? Most certainly. But we do not find Paul thus writing in vain, or for naught. He always wrote with a purpose, and so also here, and he meant to say, "If man seem to be contentious we have no such custom [that our women pray and prophesy with uncovered heads], neither the churches of God," for this was the fault which he tried to correct.—"But if any man seem contentious," not willing to follow the instructions which are here given, let him know that neither we nor the churches of God, are accustomed to have our sisters pray or prophesy with uncovered heads. We hope these suggestions may be satisfactory to many who have been in doubt about this matter.—Herald of Truth.

ANSWER TO BRO. NEGLEY'S QUERY.

I will try, by the help of God, to drop a few thoughts on the query, which reads thus: "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the affliction of Christ in my flesh, for the bodies sake, which is the church." Christ came into the world to reconcile all to himself and to establish a church, which is called his body, and by so doing, he had to suffer many temptations and persecutions in the flesh, even to the death of the cross, and then further we can see in the Apostles while on their mission, there were many things left behind for them to suffer in the flesh, for the sake of Christ's body which is the church of which the apostles is teaching his brethren in the text alluded to. His teaching gave his brethren to understand that if they would live in Christ they would have to suffer persecution, which was yet left for them in the flesh, for his bodies sake. And so if we are truly born of Christ, and entered into the church by the door, we are his disciples, and we may know that many afflictions are left for us to suffer for the churchs' sake. We are then willing to lay down our sinful life for the sake of the brethren, and can say with Paul, "What shall separate us from the love of Christ, neither death nor principalities can separate us from that love which is in Christ's body." So we may well see if Christ and the apostles have suffered so much in the flesh, they have still left a remnaot for us in the flesh to suffer with them, just the same as Paul, at the time when he was addressing his Collossian brethren in the text, from which we now have the same opportunity to address the brethren as Paul then had, and to do all the good to the body of Christ that we possibly can. I am but a lay member yet I do think we all can be teachers in the church of Christ, by our daily walk and conversation, if we do it in God's own appointed way and are willing to suffer reproach from a sinful world. Then we rejoice if we are found worthy to suffer persecution for his bodies' sake which is the church. Now I will leave this over to some brother who is more able to do it justice than I am. I am a German scholar and can not express myself as I ought. I hope we may all try to live the life of the righteous and in the end receive the crown.

JOHN TROXEL.

Ashland, Ohio.

GO YE.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations."—Matt. 28:19.

This is a very important command of our Savior. Brethren, many are calling for help in the West. If they are calling for help, why do you not give them help? One says, "I have married a wife, I cannot go, another has bought a piece of land, and must go and see it, I pray you have me excused, others have bought a yoke of oxen and must go and prove them, I pray you have me excused." Now my dear brethren, does this clear you of that command? Let us be more ready to obey the call of the brethren in the West and give them help. If our wealthy brethren are so wedded to worldly affairs that they cannot go, let them appoint such as the Savior chose, the poor fishermen. The Lord chose the poor fishermen to preach the Gospel to all nations, and they done so in their day, notwithstanding they were persecuted nearly every place they went, but of all this, they were not afraid and went and done as the Lord commanded them. In our day there is no persecution, yet our ministers will not go. Why? because they have too much worldly things to attend to. In this way they will forget the Lord of Heaven, and will serve the god of the earth, for they are laying up treasures in this world, and not in the world to come. One says, "If I would go to the West, I would lose all my time," but precious souls may be lost forever.

Time thus spent would not be lost, for the Lord will pay you in the world to come. Now my dear brethren you can be a fishermen if you will go and do as the Gospel tells you, but if you stay at home you will not fulfill your duty. If you do not wish to go, elect single brethren that have no wives, no land, no oxen—nothing to care for but the flock of the Lord. Send them through the West as they can and will go. I have heard brethren and sisters say, "Let us elect a rich brother for a speaker, then when there is a call for him, he can go and preach the Gospel for them." But that is a mistake, for if they would elect a poor single young brother, he would be more ready to go. Dear brethren, let us go and feed them, for I know there are many souls in the West who are very hungry, and if they could only hear preaching they would turn from their sinful ways. Oh! what a pity for their poor souls. Let us go and preach to them,—preach the glad tidings of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Next to being upright and faithful in the performance of your duty, be decided, and then you will make either friends or foes worth having.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME.

Oh, talk to me of heaven! I love
To hear about my home above;
For there doth many a loved one dwell
In light and joy ineffable.

Oh! tell me how they shine and sing,
While every harp, echoing ring,
And every glad and tearless eye
Beams as the brightness of the sky.

Tell me of that victorious palm,
Tell me of that celestial calm,
Each hand in glory beareth!
Each face in glory weareth.

The Christian home on earth is but a type of his better home in heaven. The pious members feel the force of this. Everything within their earthly homes reminds them of that happy country which lies beyond the Jordan. Besides, they behold the impress of change upon every aspect of their homes. All that is near and dear to them there, is passing away. It is but the shadow of better things to come.—And as the type bears some resemblance to that which it typifies, we may understand by considering the relation they sustain to each other. We may gain a new view of the Christian home, by looking at it in the light of its typical relation to heaven; and we have a transporting view of our heavenly home, when we contemplate it as the antitype of our home in earth.

Let me go! my heart is fainting,
Neath its weight of sin and tears;
And my wakeful eyes are failing,
With these ever falling tears.

For the morning I am sighing,
While I, earths' long vigils keep;
Here the loved are ever dying,
And the loving, live to weep.

Let me go! I fain would follow,
Where I know their steps have passed—
Far beyond life's heaving billows,
Finding home and heaven at last.

While my exiled heart is pining,
To behold my father's face,
They, in his own brightness shining,
Beckon me to that blest place.

Let me go! I hear them calling,
Ho! There, weary one,—come home!
Words which on my ears are falling,
Wheresoe'er my foot steps roam.

I can catch the far off murmur,
Of life's river, sweet and low,
Calling from earths' bitter waters,
Unto me—O let me go!

Let me go my feet are weary,
In the desert where I roam,
Let me go! the way is dweary—
Let the wanderer go home.

I am weary of the darkness,
Of these lonely, failing streams—
Let me go where founts are flashing,
In the light of heaven's beams.

Let me go! my soul is thirsting,
For those waters, bright, and clear,
From the fount of glory bursting—
Ah! why keep the pilgrim here?

Let me go! O, who would linger,
Fainting, fearing, and athirst;
When before us lies a region,
Where undying pleasures burst?

LIZZIE BUZZARD.

Fairplay, Md.

THE WAY OF PEACE.

Persons like to do as they please; and often think that if they could only have their way they would be contented and happy, and everything would be right. But the mind and will of the unrenewed heart ever tends to selfish ends, which leads to strife and trouble.—Hence we find disorder, confusion, and all manner of wickedness as the result of a persistent determination among men to do just as they "have a mind to," regardless of the feelings of others, the dictates of conscience, and the commandments of God.

Thus children quarrel, dispute, and fight; husbands and wives are cross, crabbed, and unhappy; homes are broken up, families scattered, brethren are at variance, and men are led in forbidden paths of sin and shame.

The Apostle Paul well understood this tendency of the human heart, and in his exhortation to the Phillipians thus strikes at the very root of all selfish willfulness;—"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

Jesus had a mind to please not himself, but to please others; to seek not his own good, but the good of others; to suffer when persecuted, and to bless when reviled, and when seized by wicked men and crucified and slain, to pray, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister; not to exalt himself, but "to seek and to save that which was lost." It was his mind to become poor, that others might be made rich; and he made himself of no reputation, but took the place of a servant, and was the friend of sinners. His was a mission of peace. He sought not the honors of the world; he created no envy. "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace, good will to men," was the glorious proclamation of the heavenly host at his birth. Peace followed in his foot-steps while here on the earth.

"Peace, was the prayer the Savior breathed,
When from our world his steps withdrew;
The gift he to his friends bequeathed,
With Calvary and the Cross in view."

And there is peace for us in yielding our wills to the will of God, and having in us "the mind that was in Christ Jesus," which will lead us to forget self and strive to do good to others, and scatter blessings on all around.—The Christian.

The idle should not be classed among the living, they are a sort of dead men, not fit to be buried.

Good is stronger than evil. A single really good man in an ill place, is like a little yeast in a gallon of dough, it can leaven the mass.

To judge human character rightly, a man may sometimes have very small experience, provided he has a very large heart.

For the Pilgrim.

THE EVIL SPIRIT.

"When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest and findeth none."—Matt. 12; 49.

Every man and every woman is possessed of a spirit which actuates them either for good or for evil. That spirit is actively engaged in prompting the person in which he has his dwelling to act, say and do which may be pleasing to him; but as soon as the person refuses to comply with his behest he will find nothing to engage his time, and will leave and seek employment elsewhere. The subject under consideration, is a man that was possessed of an unclean spirit, and we are told he went out of the man. The reason he did so, was because he could not fill his mission according to his desires. An unclean spirit we understand is an evil one, sent out by his satanic majesty to annoy and gratify all with whom he may come in contact and remain as long as he can make it pay. But sometimes by the power of the preached Word it brings a man to a stand, and when this happens to be the case, and he stands in that condition awhile, the evil spirit has no employment: he will leave and seek employment wherever he can.

"He walketh through dry places." What may these be? In the first place let me say, the man was unconverted, and never had been converted, and every other unconverted man has the same kind of a spirit. There would be no use for him to try to get into that kind of a man, then, he must seek some one that is not in possession of the evil one. Then you may look for him around in the assembly of God's people, trying to get admittance there. Look out for him brethren, if your hearts are not filled with the Spirit of God, he will gain an admittance, and woe be unto you, for the devil cometh to you having great worth.

As the evil spirit is of a lively turn, full of jesting and joking, apt to be making sport of others, loves to be in the ballroom, drinking saloon, and at the gambling table, you may well think it will be a dry place for him when he comes around where the people are engaged in worshipping God; no jesting there, no drinking or gambling, or even when he comes to the family fireside and finds an altar erected there, it is a dry place. he cannot enjoy himself in that kind of society,—no rest, no pleasure there.

Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out, and when he is come he findeth it empty, swept and garnished. What a pity that such is the case. When men are brought to a stand by the power of God's Word so they do not go a step further and have their house filled with the Spirit of God, and not allow the evil spirit to return. Depend upon it he will do so if he does not find rest, but remember he will not come back in the same manner, or under the same colors, for if he did he would be in danger of having to leave again, but he will now fortify himself for the future, and what will he now do to get a stronger foothold? He will take "with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there, and the last state of that man is worse than the first."

Now you can see what an effort he makes to establish himself, by calling to his aid seven others, and they march up in solid phalanx and demand admittance, in the shape of a false religion. How much do we hear palmed off in this our day from the pulpit and from the press, it is lamentable indeed. The difficulty with men is this, when hearing the Gospel preached and having loud calls from God, they stop and consider, and in this condition they are found by the wary who are always on the alert for a subject to glut with their false doctrine.

The subject we are now treating is a pliable one, for he has been convicted of sin, he sees the error of his way but has not made use of the means of salvation, yet he has stopped committing sin, but his heart is yet void of the love of God, and is now in the most danger that he can possibly be, of being deceived. Now observe, you see them coming and saying you ought to get religion, you can get it at the mourner's bench, if you do not like to go there, you can get it in the woods, in the barn, or any place that suits you best, only get down upon your knees and pray, and God will bless you. He will baptize you with the Holy Ghost, you need not bear a cross, for it is popular in our day to have religion; you need not get down into the valley of humility, you need not stoop to wash your brethren's feet, that is not essential; you need not observe the Holy kiss, these are things that formalists are very tenacious about, if the heart is only right that is the main point. And if you think you ought to be baptized, you can choose your own way; any way will do, immerse, pour, or sprinkle, they are all baptism, as thy faith is, so be it unto you. When we see these things brought to bear upon the poor sin-sick soul, who hardly knows what to do, is it not enough to arouse the servant of God to double his diligence, to point the sin-sick soul to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, and not allow the return of the evil spirit, with his additional force, to enter in and fortify himself. These seven spirits are the acceptance of the false doctrine, which you can see is under another color from which the spirit behaved himself when he before dwelt in the man. As a form of Christianity is very popular, the man settles down and becomes established, and he is harder to move than he was before his first impressions were made. Therefore his case is a very sad one. He will not likely examine the Word of God closely, because he has a form of godliness; his conscience is kept quiet, and thus he passes through the world, the hour of death arrives, he is placed into the coffin and the people are told what a good Christian he was, he died in the triumphs of living faith, and in the morning of the resurrection, he will be told by the Great Judge of all the earth, "Depart from me all ye that work iniquity, I never knew you. These shall go away into everlasting punishment prepared for the devil and his angels."

Now, in conclusion, kind reader, when this meets you, examine yourself, and if this should be your condition, confer not with flesh and blood, but take the Word of God for the man of your counsel; what that teaches you, that observe, and if it leads you down into the water to initiate you into the Church, do not stop and waste time, for time is precious. "To-day if you will hear His voice harden not your hearts." To-morrow you may not have the privilege, death may intervene and all will be lost.

GEORGE WORST.

CRY ALOUD AND SPARE NOT.

(Continued from last week.)

But what right have we to preach as Jesus did, says one. Well, I know only what is written; and that says that Jesus had given us an example, and that we should learn of Him, and that we should teach the nations everything he had commanded, &c. I turn to the apostles and see how they did. "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Note, "Let the house of Israel know"; not, let somebody in the world know, but "the house of Israel know." Jesus, whom ye have crucified," not who someone somewhere in the world crucified, but whom ye have crucified. Acts 2: 36. "But Elymus the sorcerer withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith. Then Paul, filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him, and said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord." &c. Acts 13: 8–11. "Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers, saying, go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive: For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed;" &c. Acts 28: 26, 27. Let these suffice as a few apostolic examples of preaching, which appears very much to one like pointing out, and locating the error and sins. So, brethren, cry aloud, and spare not, lift up your voices like trumpets, and show the people their transgressions and their sins. Don't stop to inquire how much good this sermon or that article will do; or what this one, or the other one, will say; do your duty and leave consequences to God. You, if you are right, do not belong to the world and have no favors to carry from her; but, contrariwise, will hate you as she hated your Master, of whom she said, he has a devil, why hear ye him. If Stephen had flattered sinners he would not have been stoned to death by them. And if the primitive Christians had flattered sinners, and compromised the truth to please them, there would have been no martyrs.

Cry aloud and protest against sin wherever you find it. Don't slander or ridicule the sinner; pity them, but expose and locate the sin; point out what it is, and where it is found. If a sect sets up a system of religion and invites people to adopt and espouse its principles, it is public property. Examine it, scrutinize it well,—believe not every spirit, but try them by the Word of God, and if you find error in it, expose it, ventilate it, and bring the error to the surface that men can see it and beware of it. Do not let the unthinking soul fall into it without a warning. Suit yourself to the times and circumstances in which you live and preach. If you live in Utah, protest against the sin of polygamy; don't be afraid to tell your hearers, after you have exposed the sin, that the Mormon Church practices it. And if you preach or write where the sects hold fairs in their meeting, or church house, and where they sing the Star Spangled Banner, &c., and "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," all under the sacred and solemn name of religion, and have it published to the world in the newspapers. Not only tell the people that such a religious blasphemy exists somewhere in the world, but also tell them where, and by whom it is practiced. And then if the people still adhere to it, you have cleared your skirts from their blood. Don't let the judgment of one who, perhaps, has some near relative or dear friend among them, persuade you that such preaching or writing can do no good. Hundreds of living witnesses already testify to the contrary, and rise up and call you blessed, while they thank God that that they have been delivered from the path of the destroyer. And eternity will only reveal the rest. Cry aloud and spare not, saith God.

D. P. SAYLER.

THE LIFE TO COME.

The things that are out of sight are transcendently greater than those which are seen. Only a child or a savage has his life bounded by the visible horizon, or the limit of the present moment. And no more should the things of the present existence bound our thoughts. On what ineffible realities does Christian belief lay hold. This world is a mere starting point. Beyond lies an eternity as certain as to-morrow, with glories which the highest human imagination dimly paints. We stand on the brink of a sublime future. It does not become us to live with our eyes closed to it. Steadily looked at, there is power enough even in the anticipation to fill us with rejoicing strength, peace, untold victory complete. Perhaps you are best with the cares of life, perplexities of business, of bread winning, of household ordering. Let not these things darken your path with painful apprehension, or fill the whole measure of your thoughts. A few years and you shall look back upon them and smile that they could cloud your way for a moment! Are you weighed down with weakness of body, crippling your powers, crushing your enjoyment? Be of good courage. The strength of the seraph shall be yours. —No athlete, rejoicing in manly power, tastes the supreme freedom and joy of the spiritual body that awaits you. Does trouble assail you with bitter and heart-piercing blows! Rejoice and lift up your head, for the time of your redemtion draweth nigh. The homeward traveler complains not at beating wind and drenching rain, he hardly feels them, just before him he knows lies the home from whose windows streams the promise of warmth and comfort; and within are the dear ones, the very thought of whom is a shield against wet and cold. Is your life dark through the absence of the one whose presence glorified it. Remember how the brief partiog used to give sweetness to the meeting. The parting now, long though it seem, is but a moment at the union to which you are drawing near. Its sweetness is a full certainty of an unbroken future, shall have a depth which the worst pang now cannot measure. Are you walking in the ways of sin, leaving often your higher life to grovel in the mire of the earth. O, be not ungrateful to the love that may hereafter be revealed to your sight? You are a prince, whose kingdom has been bought with a great price, dishonor not Him who bought your inheritance with His blood. Are you living in sluggishness, an animal life of eating and sleeping, and low self seeking? You are choosing a manhood, instead of an angelhood. You are turning your back to Heaven opening to win you. Or are you, while striving and aspiring for the better things, sad at heart because God is yet far off, and dim to your thoughts? Be patient. Never was such cause for patience as you have. The Revelation, the awakening, is not far off. You are as a child asleep beneath its mother's eyes. Shadowy dreams is all his mind can reach. A moment more and it shall awake to the mother's kiss, the mother's smile pouring forth to it the untutored tenderness of her heart.

These things are real. They are certain. Rather, such thoughts but dimly express the real and certain future. It becomes us to look upon that future often, to let its radiance fill our hearts, that we may walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called. All we hold here that is bright and dear is but the faint image of the world just beyond our horizon line, toward which each step is taking us. —Christian Union.

Youth's Department.

BEGIN YOUNG.

In a land beyond the seas, a minister met a mother in Israel, whose life had been lengthened out beyond the period usually allotted to man.

Talking with this aged disciple of the wonderful ways in which God had led her, the minister found her heart a temple of praise to Him who had loved her and given Himself for her. The service of God has been to her a delight. Eighty-two years she had walked in the footsteps of her heavenly Master, having given her heart to Jesus when she was but fourteen years of age.

Before the minister bade adieu to this aged saint, she said: "I want you to tell the children of America, when you return to them, that it will save them from a thousand snares to mind religion young. Tell them you saw an old lady of six-and-ninty years, who has spent her life in the service of the blessed Redemer, and she has no such source of real joy as the remembrance that she early gave herself away to Jesus."

From many of the follies of youth and the sins of maturer years she had been preserved, because that in life's early morning she had sought and found the Savior. Bitter have been th regrets of many a heart, that, waiting for a more convenient season, life's best years are spent in the service of satan; but no one ever regretted that life's earliest, best years were given to Him who has said. "Those that seek me early shall find me."—Messenger.

A Faithful Shepherd Boy.

Gerhardt was a German shepherd boy, and a noble fellow he was, although he was very poor.

One day, while he was watching his flock, which was feeding in a valley on the borders of a forest, a hunter came out of the woods and asked:

"How far is it to the nearest village?"

"Six miles sir," replied the boy, "but the road is only a sheep track, and very easily missed."

The hunter looked at the crooked track, and said:

"My lad, I am hungry, tired and thirsty. I have lost my companions and missed my way. Leave your sheep and show me the road. I will pay you well."

"I cannot leave my sheep, sir," replied Gerhardt. "They would stray into the forest and be eaten by wolves, or stolen by robbers."

"Well, what of it?" queried the hunter. "They are not your sheep. The loss of one or more would not be much to your master, and I will give you more than you have earned in a whole year."

"I cannot go, sir," rejoined Gerhardt very firmly. "My master pays me for my time, and he trusts me with his sheep. If I were to sell my time, which does not belong to me, and the sheep should get lost, it would be the same as if I stole them."

"Well," said the hunter, "will you trust your sheep to me, while you go to the village and get some food and drink, and a guide? I will take care of them for you."

The boy shook his head. "The sheep," said he, "do not know your voice, and ——" Gerhardt stopped speaking.

"And what? Can't you trust me? Do I look like a dishonest man?" asked the hunter angrily.

"Sir," said the boy, "you tried to make me false to my trust, and wanted me break my word to my master. How do I know you would keep your word to me?"

The hunter laughed, and he felt the boy had fairly cornered him. He said:

"I see, my lad, that you are a good, faithful boy. I will not forget you. Show me the road, and I will try to make it out myself."

Gerhardt now offered the contents of his scrip to the hungry man, who, coarse as it was, ate it gladly. Presently his attendants came up, and then Gerhardt, to his surprise, found that the hunter was the Grand Duke, who owned all the country round.—The Duke was so pleased with the boys honesty, that he sent for him shortly after, and had him educated. —Young Pilgrim.

Correspondence.

Brother Henry:—As I have lately become a reader of the PILGRIM, and seeing so many good articles written by the dear sisters, I thought, oh how I would love to say something too.

Prompted by this feeling, I will, by the help of my dear Redeemer pen a few thoughts. I can truly say, I love to read the Church news as I seldom get to preaching this winter, but I can read the Word of God and the PILGRIM which is a great comfort to me, as my husband is from home a great deal. I have a very lonesome time, although I have my children to comfort me in a measure, but oh, dear brethren and sisters, how glad I would be to see some of you come when I feel so lonesome, to talk with me and to comfort one another. I have no friends by the ties of nature, within one hundred miles, and it is very doubtful if I shall ever see them again in this cold unfriendly world. I do think brethren and sisters that we ought not to be so distant toward each other. It shows to the world a coldness of love, and gives more room to find fault with us. Dear sisters when I see so little love manifested among members, then the thought arises, do we love the Lord.

"For we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the Brethren, and if ye love Me you will keep My comonandments," and how can we love our blessed Savior and keep His cotomands, without loving one another? We are to love one another as He has loved us, and how many of us could lay down our lives for another. "Greator love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his brother."

Yes, dear brethren and sisters, we may say we love one another, but we must manifest our love by our actions, in sickness and in health, and in all our trials and afflictions, helping to bear each others burdens, and not neglect our poor brethren, sisters and neighbors who are destitute of the necessaries of this life when they come to our doors. Not to turn them away empty if we can possibly supply their wants, or at least, some of them. I often think of the poor these cold winter nights, when we are warm and comfortable in our warm houses, and often think and study what most I do to help them, for we know he that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord.

From your unworthy sister.

NANCY CROUSE.

Oak Hill, W. Va.

SAFE HOME AGAIN.

MILFORD, Ind., }
March 4th, 1872. }

Dear Pilgrim: By the request of many brethren and sisters and friends, permit me to give through your columns, a short account of my recent mission of love to the East. I left home Jan. 3rd and arrived at brother Hambletons', Wells Co., Ind., Jan. 4th. Here I remained until the 11th. We had meeting night and day, and a refreshing time we had together, and I think all were much refreshed and encouraged to press onward and upward while others said, almost we are persuaded to be christians. On the morning of the 11th I started for Armstrong county, Pa., and arrived at Oakland on the 12th, in brother J. P. Hetrick's church. Here I remained until the 26th. We had many refreshing meetings together with kind brethren, sisters and friends, with whom we were permitted to meet, and we shall never forget each other. I feel thankful both to God and my brethren and sisters for the kind favors bestowed upon me while among them. Here some were received into the fold and I pray God that the good work may still go on. After enjoying such sweet seasons of love together here it is hard to part, but duty made me understand that we must take the parting hand. So we said farewell to each other as brethren and sisters, many of us never to behold each others' faces in this world again, but oh, the thought is sweet to think of meeting above to part no more.

January 26th I was conveyed by our beloved brother Philip Shoemaker to Cowenshannoe church where brethren Levi Wells and Robert Whitaker preside. Here I remained until Feb. 2nd, where we again made new acquaintances and formed new associations in and out of the church. Here we had meeting morning and evening and very large congregations and I think the church was much refreshed, and very many were made to feel that they ought to be Christians. After those seasons of love, the time came that we here took the parting hand never to meet any more in this world, and some of those we there met, are already gone to their long homes. We shall ever gratefully remember the kindness of these brethren and sisters, and though we shall never meet some of them on the shores of mortality, I trust we may meet on the other shore. We shall not forget those kind friends who bestowed the rich present of a nice silver Time Keeper to me. Dear friends, may you be rewarded at the great Resurrection for your kindness, is my prayer for you all.

February 2nd I was conveyed to Plum Creek by brother Levi Wells, where I remained until the 12th, having meeting morning and evening. Brethren Lewis Kronmel and Jacob Kelso preside here. We had, indeed, a pleasant meeting, and some were added to the fold, and many more, I hope, will be ere long. At this place I made many new acquaintances and associations never to be forgotten in time nor eternity. I shall ever remember the kindness of those dear ones who are near my heart, and I implore His blessings to rest upon you all. February 12th, I was conveyed by our beloved brother Kimmel to brother Wilcox', where we dined together and then parted. I was then conveyed to Indiana town by brother Wilcox, and from here I started to Philadelphia to do some business. After remaining in Philadelphia a few days, I once more took the train for Ind., and I arrived home safely March 2nd, and found all my little family enjoying good health, for which we feel to say blessed and Holy be the name of the good Lord who cared for us until we enjoyed each others association again. Oh what a dear place and sweet name is home, and how dear the loved ones there are. I also found my brethren and sisters generally well except old brother Bush, one of our visiting brethren, who summoned me to his bedside a few hours after my arrival home. After conversing, and holding a season of devotion together, I am again at home. JESSE CALVERT.

Dear Pilgrim:—We hereby give you a sketch of our late visit to Carroll and Frederick county Md., Pipe and Bush Creek Churches. On Monday the 12th, I, in company with my wife, arrived at Union Bridge, where we were met by brother Ephraim Stoner, who accompanied us to New Windsor, where we attended the first meeting in the Pipe Creek Church,—attended a few meetings, visited our dear Elder Philip Boyle, and a few other families, —had a pleasant, and we trust profitable interview. At this place was met by our dear laboring brethren, Eld. J. D. Trostle, and Jesse Roop, from Bush Creek, the former, (J. D. Trostle) became our colaborer while in this Arm of the Church. On Tuesday evening returned to Union Bridge, and continued to labor until Thursday evening. Attended eight meetings, had many pleasant interviews, and we trust, to advantage to many; the Lord working with us to will, and to do His good pleasure. On Friday morning we started for Linganore, Bush Creek Arm, accompanied by brother E. Stoner of Union Bridge,—had the first meeting on the evening of same day, and continued meeting at the same place,—near brother Trostles' one week. Here we truly had a time of "refreshing from the presence of the Lord." The brethren here have no meeting house, have to hold meeting in a small dwelling house, with but two small rooms, unpleasant and uncomfortable, but notwithstanding the good Lord was there in spirit and power. On Sabbath morning, the 18th, the brethren baptized Emma Devilbiss, an intelligent and prominent member formerly of the Methodist persuasion. On the 22nd, eight more were added to the number, with numerous other applications for baptism. On Friday the 24th, the brethren took us to Bush Creek, or Monrovia meeting house, at which place, and Linganore, the meeting was continued alternately, until the evening of the 27th, when the meetings closed, leaving impressions which we have reason to believe, will long be remembered by many, the results of which will only be realized completely in the realms of eternal bliss. The number of accession to the Church during the meetings, up to this time, are eighteen, and still others say they are fully convinced and it shall not be long until they give a practical demonstration of their faith in Jesus. Hope, through the prayers of the faithful, and the grace of God, their desire and prayer may be realized. During these meetings, Bro. Wm. H. Franklin of Sam's Creek, Daniel, and Henry Sayler of Beaverdam, also assisted in the labors of the meetings.

The Church at Bush Creek, though meeting with serious reverses in past days, is rallying again, and with its present royal crew, may engage the contest with sure victory. The simple doctrine of the Bible, and the preaching of the cross of Christ, there, as well as elsewhere, meet with opposition, but satan, with all his mechanical skill and agencies, cannot keep it from being enjoyed by honest souls who desire the sincere milk of the Word; if the faithful embassador of Jesus holds it undaunted, unadulterated, before the heaven-born image of the creature man. The crimson dye of redeeming grace reflects the image of God to the soul,—which will respond with holy reverence, "Thy will O, God be done." May the pilgrim band at Bush Creek enjoy a prosperous journey toward the Fatherland, is my prayer.

D. F. GOOD.

Waynesboro, Pa.

GREENE, IOWA. }
March 4th. 1872. }

Beloved brethren: As it has been some time since you have had any church news from this district or church, I thought to drop a few lines for publication in the PILGRIM.

We had a refreshing time quite recently, as there was a series of meetings held here, which commenced on the evening of the 22nd. of Feb, and continued every evening with three day meetings, until the 28th. There were many good impressions made upon the minds of the hearers. I can truly say that it was a feast to our souls, to hear our laboring brethren so earnestly engaged in holding forth the doctrine of Jesus Christ, as we believe it, and according to the teachings as it is given to us in the Gospel of Christ. And at the same time removing obstacles away which had been thrown in the way of some by those that are not willing to obey all the commands as given to us by the Lord, and who labored hard to do away feetwashing as a church ordinance, and drew a mist over the eyes of some of the hearers. Some were made willing to believe their doctrine and joined in with them, while some others were halting between two opinions. At the close of our meetings there were some found willing to join our church, and were received by baptism, while others seemed to be very much affected, and we hope the time will not be long until they will also come and obey the Savior's call. The members also seemed to be refreshed by the influence of the Holy Spirit and the preached word. Upon the whole we had a refreshing time and at the close of our meetings returned to our homes rejoicing.

The ministering brethren that came to our assistance were Eld. E. K. Buechly, Eld. Benjamin Buechly, and Jacob Murray of Waterloo congregation, Iowa. Further more I wish to say that our congregation has had a large increase during the past year, and the church is in love and union as far as known at this time, and is in a prospering condition. I wish to inform the brethren and friends generally that the name of our post office (Elm Springs) has been changed to Greene. Those that formerly addressed to the above will now address Greene, Butler co Iowa.

So may the Lord add his blessing to all our efforts made for the cause of our Redeemer and the welfare of souls, is my prayer.

J. F. EIKENBERRY.

NEWVILLE, Pa., }
Feb. 22nd, '72. }

Dear Pilgrim: As I live somewhat in a remote place from our church, and, as I am an aged person, and do not get out much, and not knowing who is agent for the PILGRIM in this part, I have to take this method of sending you $1.25 for the year 1872. Please accept it, and as life is uncertain and death certain, so my desire is, not to send blank paper. In my weakness and nothingness I will try, in way of admonition, to say a few words, if you deem them right, you may insert, if offensive lay them aside.

When I look on the many different sects, and so many revivals, some hold on three or four weeks, and every denomination or leader persuades his congregation they are right, and in the meanwhile deny the Lord's precepts. Some say baptism is not essential, others, feetwashing is nothing, &c. Oh, why did our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ leave the shining courts of Heaven, and suffer such an ignominious death, and now His holy precepts to be trampled under foot by sectarianists. The members of Christ were formerly called saints, a chosen generation, elect of God, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood. Brethren and sisters, who are we? What are we doing? What did Jesus say? "Love one another as I have loved you." How much did He love us? Why, He left His life to save us from the violated laws of God. Love! Yes! It originated in the Father and was accomplished by the Son. His birth was the nativity of love, His sermons, the words of love, His miracles, the wonders of love, His tears, the meltings of love, His crucifixion, the agonies of love, His resurrection the triumph of love, and how can dying mortals say, His examples and precepts are not essential?

* * * * * *

O, brethren and sisters, do not speak lightly of our ministeriog brethren, consider they are as watchmen on the walls of Zion, consider what burdens they have on their shoulders to bear. They are to serve God and not mortal man. Let us do as the clean beasts do. "chew the cud," then we will have enough to do with ourselves. O, that we all could pray for humility and meekness. It is for the want of meekness that there are so many paper quarrels, and perverse disputings. If I consider, my brother or sister may fall to-day and I may fall tomorrow. Those who think they stand fast know not how soon they may be shaken and overthrown, therefore, I wish to treat those who are overtaken in a fault with the same tenderness and compassion that I would wish to find if it were my own case. Paul bore reproaches with much meekness, because he did not build upon the opinion of many reckoning it a small matter to be judged of men's judgment. All persons who possess a meek spirit, can live a very comfortable life, he enjoys it himself, he enjoys his friends and his God, and he puts it out of the reach of his enemies to disturb him in his enjoyments.

I am yours in love, bound as a pilgrim to the celestial city.

JOHN WHISTLER.

Dear Pilgrim:—I will give you another item of news. On the 15th. of Feb., I left home on a mission of love to Somerset co., Pa. I attended appointments in Elklick, Berlin, Quemahoning, and Middle Creek congregations. Had the pleasure of seeing some young persons join the "Pilgrim Band." I hope they will prove themselves worthy members.

I closed my labors in Somerset co., on the evening of the 25th., and the morning of the 26th., took the train at Somerset, enroute for Bourbon Ind., to visit Salem College, located at that place. I arrived at Bourbon the morning of the 27th., and to my great joy the Board of Trustees were in session. So I had not only the pleasure of examining the educating process; but also the managing department. They elected officers of the Board while I was there. The present corps of officers are:

President, J. B. Shively.
Vice President, David Wolf.
Secretary, Keylon Heckman.
Treasurer, D. Heckman.

In reference to Salem College I can say; I had the privilege and pleasure of examining the Official Documents of the Institution, and find it placed upon a permanent basis. The Trustees hold a warrantee title for the property. They have also a Corporation. So the Institution is upon a permanent legal basis, and in my judgment, all that is necessary to give a permanent financial basis, is, the public patronage it justly merits.

Upon earnest solicitation of the Trustees and others, I was induced to accept of the appointment of General Agent, to sell scholarships, receive donations &c., for the Institution. Persons desiring information from me relative to the Institution, can address me either at Scenery Hill Pa., or at Bourbon Ind., until further information be given.

I returned on the 2nd. of March, found all well. Thank God for His goodness.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN WISE.

Scenery Hill, Pa.

Editor's Department.

ANSWER TO QUERY.
Col. 1: 24.

The Apostle Paul was not only willing to bear the reproaches that were heaped upon him, but even rejoiced that he was accounted worthy to be a partaker of the sufferings of Christ.

The passage referred to, reads as follows: "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ, in my flesh, for his body's sake, which is the Church." That which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. We do not think that Paul, in this expression, intimates that the suffering of Christ was in any way incomplete, or insufficient to bring about a thorough justification of the sinner, but has a reference to the time when it was said to him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me." The convictions that he had taken part in afflicting Christ's own body was so deep rooted, that he was made to rejoice in any affliction which he could endure in his body, that he might more fully atone for those afflictions which he caused the dear body of Christ to bear. Therefore he says, brethren I wish you to understand that I am not weary of the ministry in which I am now engaged, on account of the persecutions which it brings with it, but I rejoice that I am made worthy to share in that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ's body which is the Church."

Notwithstanding Christ suffered in His body, even unto death, yet His afflictions are not ended, and will not be until His body, the Church, is redeemed and delivered from a persecuting world. Paul, while persecuting the Church, persecuted Christ's body, therefore when he became a part of that body, he could rejoice that he now, as a member of that body, was permitted to bear a full portion of affliction, not only for his own salvation, but also for the sake of his brethren, the Church, which is Christ's body. Dear brethren, this should be our joy. When we consider that we all took part in crucifying afresh the body of Jesus, we ought now, like brother Paul, when persecuted for the sake of the Church, rejoice because we have also been so highly favored as to be made partakers of these sufferings.

Then let us ever bear in mind, when we undergo afflictions or are persecuted, that we are part of the body of Christ, and for the sake of that body, we will bear it joyfully, thanking God that we were made worthy of so great a privilege. We give these thoughts by special request of an afflicted brother, and hope it may console him amidst his afflictions on his pilgrimage to the haven of rest.

TRACTS, TRACTS.

Orders are beginning to come in for our tracts, but not as rapidly as we would be pleased to see them. These Tracts should be distributed by the thousand, and hope that our brethren and sisters will awaken up to the Church's best interests by entering into the work with a determination. If individual members do not feel like buying for free distribution, let each Church throw together their mites and send for three, four or five hundred, for free distribution. Any wishing them by the hundred, or in large quantities, may send in their orders and pay for them when received.

PERSONAL.

AB BAUM.—Your money was received and credited in No. 7.

JOHN HERSHEY.—Your name on our book is marked paid.

C. SHANK.—The name you speak of has not been paid for this year.

S. M. PRETSMAN.—We have no note of receiving the money but it may have been overlooked. Give yourself no further trouble about it, as we will lose it if not already received.

JOHN ZUCK.—Jacob Zarger's PILGRIM will come all right now. Back Nos. sent—an oversight.

VALUABLE HINTS.—We made quite a mistake in the series of articles with the above heading, in our last issue, by putting up part of a wrong number. This week we have it in its regular order, and shall try and be more careful in the future. In it are a few ideas advanced that we think not altogether orthodox, but as it contains many good ideas, we shall hear it through, and would ask our many readers to prove all things and hold fast to that which is good.

MARRIED.

HAUGLE—GROSSNICKLE—Feb. 29th, by Elder D. P. Sayler, at the home of the brides parents, Mr. Henry S. Haugle of Seneca county, Ohio, and Miss Clara E, daughter of Bro. Daniel, and sister Ellen Grossnickle, of Frederick Co., Md.

DIED.

SANGER.—In Fayette Co., W. Va. March the 4th. '72, of dropsy, our much beloved brother, Henry Sanger, aged 69 years.

The subject of this notice was one that was much loved in the circle in which he moved. For many years he was a worthy deacon in the Church, and zealous for the cause of his blessed Master. He moved from Rockingham Co., Va., where he was instrumental, in a great measure, of seeing organized and flourish, a considerable congregation of the household of faith. From there, he moved to this county, a few years before the late war, and was the pioneer of the Brethren on this side of the Alleghany mountains in this section of the State, being the first, with his family, of the Brethren that moved here. He lived to see flourish here, a Congregation of the people of God, and now by his death, the Church deeply feels her loss, a loss not easily repaired, for there are few that can fill the place as he did. None can point to his grave and say, there lies one that was my enemy, at peace with the world and his God he thus passes away. As a citizen, he was respected by all who knew him, and as a neighbor, few if any were loved as he was,—his hand was ever ready to administer to the wants of the poor or afflicted,—truly they have lost a friend indeed.

How he was loved as a husband and father, the bereaved hearts only can tell or feel in the depths of their sorrow. His home influence was such that his children in their youth, through the grace of God, enlisted on the side of Jesus. The father of eleven children, all members of the Church except the two youngest. In his last illness, scarcely a word of complaint escaped his lips, gently and quietly as a babe falls asleep in its mothers arms, he sank to rest in the Lord. How the memory of the departed who thus go to sleep, cheer our drooping souls, strengthen our hopes, and confirms our faith in Jesus, and that religion that makes our dying day a happy day. Joy to the memory, and peace to our dear brother, may we follow on until we meet him in that upper world of bliss.

J. S. FLORY.

[Companion and Visitor please copy.]

ABSHIRE—In the Fall Creek Church Henry Co., Ind., March 8th, '72, sister Hannah, wife of friend James Abshire, and daughter of brother Jacob and sister Hannah Miller, aged 24 years, 9 month, and 11 days. Funeral services by the brethren, J. W. McClure and others.

The deceased was afflicted some time, and suffered much till death came and released her. We hope our loss is her eternal gain. She leaves a husband and one little child, with many dear friends to mourn her loss.

[Visitor please copy.]

WOLF.—In Cumberland Co., Pa., Feb. 27th, '72, Isaac H. Wolf, aged 27 years, 10 month, and 24 days. Funeral service by brother Adam Beelman, from 30th Psalm.

D. GOODYEAR.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

DISTRICT MEETING

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

Middle District of Ind. April 12th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

Southern District of Ind. March 28th. Stop off at Delphi and Back Creek.

Eastern District of Maryland, April 2nd, Beaverdam, Frederick Co., Md.

North-eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa.; Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

First District of Va., West Arm, Floyd Co., April 19th.

Please announce that the District Meeting of Northern Ind. and Southern Mich. will be held in the Pine Creek congregation at their west meeting house, April 18th, 1872, by Divine permission. Those coming by railroad will stop at Walkerton.

JESSE CALVERT.

(Companion please copy.)

[Money list crowded out.]

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

LARGE FIRE.—Dr. Jayne's large building in Philadelphia was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at about $1,000,000.

A man by the name of Chandler Arthur died February 7th, near Fayetteville, Fayette Co., W. Va., at the advanced age of 114 years. He was a young man at the time of the Revolution.

NORTH ALABAMA.—The Tuscumbia (Ala.) Times says that at no time in the history of that portion of North Alabama has its prospect of rapid growth and improvement been more flattering than now. There is a constant influx of new settlers who are men of refinement, steady habits, industrious, and to a considerable extent, blessed with means. We have only to keep up our spirits yet a little while, and the blessed results of prosperity and plenty will be palpably manifest.

A RAILROAD IN EGYPT.—The enterprising viceroy has commenced the gigantic work of connecting Upper and Lower Egypt by a railroad, which is to be 600 miles long, and proceed into the heart of Africa. The land of the Pharaohs is waking from its long slumber.

COTTON FACTORIES IN ALABAMA.—There are now in the State of Alabama six cotton factories. Two are a short distance northwest of Florence, running 5,000 spindles each; the Bell factory at Huntsville, 4,000 spindles; two at Prattville, 2,000 and 8,000 spindles; one at Tuscaloosa, of 600; and the Tallahassee factory of 18,500. The factories named consume 20,000 annually.

A GREAT RAILROAD IN SOUTH AMERICA.—Mr. Robert Crawford, an Irish engineer who was largely concerned in the tubular bridge of the Grand Trunk Railway across the St. Lawrence at Montreal, has undertaken to survey a route for a railroad across the South American Continent from Buenos Ayres to Chili, and thus connect the two great oceans. It will be a work of great difficulty because of the Andes.

RAILWAY IN INDIA.—Experiments are being made in India on a new form of single rail tramway. The vehicles used, in addition to the ordinary description of wheels, have a pair of flanged wheels, one behind the other, running on the single rail, which is laid at the centre of the track. The flanged wheels are adjusted by a screw, so as to take all the weight off the ordinary wheels without lifting them much above the roadway. An experimental line has been laid, in part at an incline of one in forty, and along this a pair of bullocks draw a load of three tons. The advantages claimed for this system are: First, a very great diminution of power expended in hauling, as compared with traction on common roads; second, that the cost of construction is only one-half that of an ordinary tramway with two lines of rails.

DENVER, COLORADO.—The growth of Denver, Colorado, is really something remarkable. The official census in June, 1870, showed less than 5,000 inhabitants. A real estate firm in that city recently had a census taken at their own expense, with a view to publication along with other statistical matter. They find that the population in December, 1871, was 10,832, having more than doubled in 18 months. The number of buildings erected 1871 was 783, valued at $2,391,375. The amount of business done in Denver during last year is reckoned at more than $14,000,000.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Oeer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1 25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

ACENTS WANTED FOR

"JESUS."

BY CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.

Rapidly established and rationalism routed. The most popular and rapidly-selling religious work ever issued. Circulars, address U. S. PUBLISHING CO., N. Y. Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex.	Mail	Stations.	Down Train. Ex.	Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 23	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 31
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 41	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR,	Extra family.	$7.00
"	Superfine.	7.50
"	fancy brands.	8.00
"	Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.		4.00
WHEAT,	white, per bushel.	1.65
"	red. "	1.45
CORN.		.80
RYE.		1.05
OATS.		62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR,	Fancy Brands.	$7.35
"	Family.	6.85
"	Extra.	6.65
"	Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT,	white, per bushel.	1.60
"	Hill "	1.60
"	Winter red "	1.75
CORN.		.48
OATS.		.43
RYE.		.43
BARLEY.		.65

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address.

DANIEL KAGARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, Pa

Mirkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MARCH 29, 1872. NO. 13.

ESSAYS.

Selected by ANNIE S. BECHTAL.

NEAR THE CROSS.

Jesus keep me near the cross,
There a precious fountain,
Free for all, a healing stream
Flows from Calvary's fountain.

Chorus. In the cross, in the cross,
Be my glory ever;
'Till my raptured soul shall find,
Rest beyond the river.

Near the cross a trembling soul,
Love and mercy found me;
There the bright and morning Star,
Shed its beams around me.

Near the cross, oh! Lamb of God,
Keep the scene before me;
Let me walk as if I felt,
All its shadows o'er me.

Near the cross I'll watch and wait,
Hoping, trusting ever;
'Till I reach that golden strand,
Just beyond the river.

New Pleasant Grove, Pa.

WAITING AT THE DOOR.

I am waiting for the Master,
Who will rise and bid me come,
To the glory of His presence,
To the gladness of His home.

CHORUS:—

They are watching at the portal,
They are waiting at the door;
Waiting only for my coming,
All the loved ones gone before.

Many a weary path I've traveled,
In the darkest storm and strife;
Bearing many a heavy burden,
Often strugling for my life.

Many friends that traveled with me
Reached that portal long ago;
One by one they left me battling,
With the dark and crafty foe.

Yes, their pilgrimage was shorter,
And the triumphs soonor won;
O, how lovingly they'll greet me
When the toils of life are done.

O, how soon shall I be with them,
And shall join their glorious throng;
There to mingle in their worship,
And to swell their mighty song.

Yet, O Lord, I want thy pleasure,
For thy time and ways are best;
Hear me, Lord, for I am weary,
O, my Father, bid me rest.

For the Pilgrim.

IS IGNORANCE BLISS?

Happiness is, or should be, the great object of man's pursuit, and every path that leads unfailingly to it should be well marked out and diligently sought, even though it wind around the toilsome hill of science. Those who pursue such a path may occasionally be required to granulate a stone, or analyze a flower; but, imbeded in the senseless rock, the geologist often discovers gems of great worth and beauty, and the delighted botanist finds many rare flowers by the wayside that "Breathes sweetness out of woe," when wounded and torn apart by his scientific hand.

It may be argued that childhood is the happiest period of life, and, inasmuch as it is also the most unlearned period, therefore knowledge is not essential to our happiness, much less does it increase the latter. But this statement, plausible as it may seem, will hardly bear close examination. I will not deny that childhood has its joys, but I will ask, are they not childish joys? I will not deny that in early youth the cup of happiness is often full, and sometimes running over, but I would call your attention to the size of the cup itself, and to the nature of its contents; and this leads me to assert that education enlarges the cup of happiness, or, in other words it increases our capacity to enjoy. What is it that enjoys? I answer. It is the mind. And what is the primary object of education? It is not merely to instruct, not merely to make every little brain cell as it were, a storehouse of useful knowledge, enabling the swift winged messenger of thought to bring forth from those hidden treasures, things both old and new,—not this, important as it is, but the great object of education is, as the word implies, to unfold and develop the powers of the mind, to culture and discipline those powers, to arouse and call forth our latent energies as the buds are aroused and called forth in the first warm days of spring. Education enables us, not only to think grander thoughts, but, also, to feel sublimer feelings, to enjoy purer, sweeter delight. As exercise gives strength and skill to the blacksmith's arm, enabling him to strike off at a single heat, what he at first could scarcely do at a dozen heats, so the mental exercise which education gives, may enable the man of culture to experience in a single moment, and manifest in a quick smile, more depth of rapturous feeling than the untutored mind of a child can possibly experience from the rising of the sun to his setting, even when it seems happy as the day is long. We must not infer that children enjoy most because they are most demonstrative. "Shallow brooks are noisy but deep waters flow in silent majesty." In early life every inner impulse has an outward manifestation. Every little breeze that fans the soul of a child seems to toss its bright spirit as the winds toss a feather,—now bearing it up on the wings of childish hope, and now casting it down amid a shower of childish tears. The youth may laugh and cry in the same breath and mingle tears of both joy and grief on the same cheek, but it is not thus in later life. We know that the deepest, the sincerest grief is a silent grief; and why may not the purest, the sweetest joy be also a silent joy. All this is designed to show, not only that education enlarges the cup of happpiness, but, also, that its contents may be sweeter, and yet the one who drinks thereof may drink in silence, and in silence enjoy more than the uneducated can experience even when apparently very happy.

But education not only increases our capacity to enjoy; it also increases our sources of enjoyment. It not only strengthens and improves our mental vision, it also enlarges the domain of thought, and in that domain we shall find, not only many gems where at first we saw nothing to admire, but we may also discover many new fountains of delight from which flow intellectual streams to water the waste places in our hearts and increase our happiness a hundred fold. As he who stands on some vast mountain hight may behold a greater expanse of the lovely landscape, and can bask in the pleasant sunshine earlier, later and longer than he who dwells on the plain below, so he who stands highest on the hill of science may see farthest, may garner delights from the widest field of thought, and may enjoy more of that inward peace of mind—that intellectual sunshine which is so essential to a noble and truly happy life.

Why is it that the pupils in our schools read many of the choicest productions to be found in our language so poorly, so reluctantly and so indifferently? Why do they not take an interest in thoughts so grand and beautiful? I answer. It is because they fail to see the beauty and grandeur—these are almost as hidden to them as the shining stars are to us on a cloudy night. But let the mind's powers be developed, let education disperse the clouds that obscure the mental vision and then the dazzling thoughts struck out at almost every line will charm the soul and fill it with new aspirations after the true, the beautiful, and the good. Where the student at first saw only a succession of dry, meaningless words, he will now detect a string of intellectual gems. The barren pages of the old reader will suddenly transform themselves, as it were, into a fertile valley, every paragraph a fruitful garden, every comma a wayside inn, and every period a delightful resting place. The same holds true, out on the great ocean of life. There is much to admire in both nature and art, but many fail to see and appreciate some of these sources of enjoyment. There is such a thing as having eyes that see not. For instance, a man may gaze on a gorgeous sunset and be no more impressed with a scene of the beautiful than is the ox impressed by the beauty of the lovely landscape on which he grazes. Another, however, may view that same sunset, and the picture portrayed by the hand of the great Artist may flood his soul with admiration and delight, and he imagines that some radiant angel must have thrown aside his robe as he flew or left his sublime smile upon the golden tinted cloud. Is it not education, culture that makes the difference? 'Tis toil, study, that not only makes the soul to shine, but also enables it to reflect the bright beams of all things else that shine in earth, or sea, or sky.

Let us not undervalue education because it is sometimes employed to accomplish unholy purposes. There is, perhaps, in the whole catalogue of good things not one that has never been perverted. But while we seek and value the powers which knowledge gives, let us not forget that the same power that raises to eminence in this world may, unless sanctified to holy uses, only sink our souls deeper in the world to come. Let us remember that the best learning is wisdom, the best wisdom is goodness, the best goodness is usefulness, and the best place to be useful is in the vineyard of our blessed Master.

J. ZUCK. Jr.

VALUABLE HINTS.

PSALMS, 119-35. HE.

Dear Friend.—In the close of our last, we treated on the resemblance between the first and second Adam, or Adam through whom it is said, sin was introduced into the world, and Christ by whose righteousness, justification of life is promised and obtainable.

We may have been somewhat presumptive, but we see the comparison so much connected with the subject before us, that we could not well refrain from the remark, but not to be considered too precise we were as brief as consistent, and leave further consideration of the actual and true comparison of this, as also of the two natures embodied within each individual being, to the further development in our pages. And to attain to this, we should understand and observe more what is contained in the third chapter of Genesis, as it gives the history of the first transgression, and sin, and the departure or fall of the first human pair from the high altitude in which they were before. So it also contains the first pronunciation of promise of deliverance. God who through His wisdom and foreknowledge knew what He would do to accomplish the object of His design, to bring honor and glory to His name through His creatures and to their benefit. Therefore we cannot admit that all this so happened by chance, and without God's will and design, when He created the world, and capacitated men as to be subjected to the change which took place in His situation, so we might also look for God to contribute much to the restoration and renovation of man. The love He manifested in sending His only begotten Son to make known to us this goodness, care and Fatherly kindness, is ample evidence that men were not created without any holy aim and object to live for, nor with a knowledge of his corrupting propensities, to be cast off or neglected, so as to run into a miserable and never ending destruction. We see in the Garden of Eden were two trees, of which fruit it seems man had not partaken before eating of the tree of good and evil. The tree of Life also in the midst of the Garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Here we see that this tree of Life occupied a prominent place in the Garden. But what was this tree? Was it a literal tree like any other? Sometimes preachers tell us that it was Christ. Well admitted it was Christ, or as it is also said, the knowledge of never ending spiritual existence, and this knowledge men did not have after their disobedience, and God did not want them to have it. He did not want men to put forth his hand and take also of the tree of Life, and live forever. We will not say whether this was a natural tree or not, but this, that its fruit, or signification was spiritual, and as to the Tree of good and evil, the allusion to the eating thereof, had no reference to the natural life, or the life of the body, for it is evident that a total death was not included in the saying of God to Adam, "For in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." If this were the case, man would, on that day, have died temporally as well as he died spiritually. The temporal or natural death could not be the consequence of the transgression, as it did not occur on that day, and it continues on according to the nature of the first creation, even Christ Jesus when He appeared according to promise, and made atonement, and gave full satisfaction by His suffering and death for the original sin Eve committed did not thereby restore perpetual life to the body as some say it was before man sinned and fell. God said, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, 'till thou return unto the ground, for out of it thou wast taken, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. 3:19 This fact preexisted, but this, like other things, were as yet not announced neither experienced, and it is now revoked, as we can almost daily see. The nature wherewith man was created has yet its then prescribed rule, and acts by the same law and follows in the then ordained course. Other things existed with man, but he had not experienced knowledge, therefore he did not know even what he might. This is our understanding of the Word, and as we understand it so we have to believe and give testimony, notwithstanding popular opinion. or even the whole world sees different, but when we see that the Word is so plain and answers to reason, we have no hesitation to call it faith, for what we do so believe, is faith, and affords joy and hope, contentment and heavenly pleasure, which an uncertain and doubtful faith can never give Upon this we will yet refer to another item in this chapter, which if properly understood, is but incorrectly used, at least by the most. And why is it done so? No other reason can be assigned, but to substantiate the so greatly favored doctrine of the world, that man by the fall, died both temporal and spiritual, and that Christ by His literal death and resurrection would restore the same To this however we have referred, and intend to say more hereafter. The item more particularly is in regard to the promise of the Messiah given by the Creator before the expulsion of Adam and Eve from Paradise, and is by so many said, that this promise was given to the woman, and we think that inattentiveness or improper study of the sacred history as it occurred, is the cause of such a delusion It shows clearly that after God interrogated Adam and Eve, He then passed sentence on the instigator of this delusive act. "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field, upon thy belly thou shalt go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed, it shall bruise thy head and thou shall bruise his heel."

By this we should clearly see and understand, that what was here said, was not told to either the women or the man. It would seem contrary to the wisdom and intelligence of God, to promise a way of deliverance to the guilty transgressors, before the penalty of their disobedience was fully carried out, besides, if they had received that promise they would not have lost, but gained through their disobedience, as by these means they would have received the knowledge of everlasting life, which was according to the mind of Jehovah, and according to this prediction was only to be brought to light through the preaching of the Gospel by Jesus Christ the Savior and Redeemer It could therefore be no promise to the guilty pair nor to the woman, yet to us, who see the beginning of the fulfillment of the sentence, and believe and hope in the final bruising of the serpents head, or in the victorious conquest of Christ over sin and death, it testifies that God in His infinite love, had then laid the plan, and ordained the means, to bring honor and praise to Himself, and happiness to His children.

That this promise is not to be understood in a literal sense, is by the many, freely admitted, and that by the seed of the woman, the Messiah, and by the seed of the serpent, unrighteousness, disobedience, wickedness and sin, is meant, is also admitted, and that it could not be a literal saying, and understood by the woman, if even said in regard to her, yet, as it was a pronunciation against sin, and that evil not having ears to hear, nor a heart to understand, it proves that it was a spiritual saying, and the true meaning of it, only in the mind of the Lord. So are other sayings, and taken by many in a different way from their first meaning and intention. We will refer to one, namely: that man was holy before his fall. This is also taken so to strengthen the idea that man was created literally in the likeness of God, and therefore His equal.

Now we may not conclude that since man was then pure, upright, and without sin, that he was also holy like God. The very commandment God gave to man is an evidence that man was created capable, and with inward inclination to sin. Just as much as those things are in the nature of an infant, so much they were in Adam. St. Paul says "For the creature was made subject to vanity not willingly, but by reason of Him who had subjected the same in hope."—Rom. 8:20. and more, if Adam had not sinned, we only would have the evidence that he could not. Then only, he would have been holy. God is also righteous in Himself, yet this likeness man could not obtain in creation, as it is only obtainable by faith and obedience to the requirements of God's laws. N.

FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS.

One land is ever memorable above every other—the land where Jesus lived and died. To this land above all others his loving and reverent disciples would make their pilgrimage. How many such pilgrims has it already received? How many more are still to follow?

It is an easy matter to enter into the feelings which impel the Christian thither. One thrills even at the very thought of treading the ground which Jesus trod, now eighteen hundred years ago. To look upon the places that once knew him, but know him no more—Bethlehem, Nazareth, Jerusalem: to cross the valley of the Kedron, and climb the Mount of Olives; to wander along the bank of the Jordan and on the shores of the Galilean Lake; to stand in the vicinage of Gethsemane and Calvary; and to know that, notwithstanding all the obliterating changes of the centuries, these are the scenes which Jesus once frequented; to do this may well be a cherished hope; a fond memory with all who have accomplished it. These being the paths which once he walked in, these the heights up which he toiled, these the waters over which he sailed; to go over the ground is to walk in his footsteps, and find his person and life greater realities than ever.

Let it not be forgotten, however that a holier land than Palestine is the abode of us all, and that the foot steps of Jesus are here also for us all to follow. It is human life which Jesus most truly sanctified; it is human experience through which he most truly led the way. That far country which bathes its western shore in the Mediterranean, we are told, is a representative land. In its climate, its physical features, and its productions, variety prevails. The same is true of him who found there his birth-place and his tomb. Made in all points like as we are, was the Son of Man. No one of us treads a path where our Master has not gone before. All around are the opportunities, the responsibilities, the duties, the trials, the dangers, the sorrows, which were his to know, and the way for us to follow.

Would we walk in the footsteps of Jesus then? We may do so without leaving country or even home. We may do it by simply going through life as he went. By copying his example, do we, in the highest sense, "follow his footsteps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered he threatened not, but committed himself to him who judgeth righteously; who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree."

Self sacrifice, meekness, truth—these were the great traits of the great Example; these mark the way in which we are to go. Not to Palestine, therefore, let us hie, but let each of us find a holy land in our lot in that common life which Jesus sanctified by sharing. He goeth before us here. May our eyes be opened to see him, and seeing him, to follow. Then shall we see in every day of our small beginnings, a Bethlehem; in every patient continuance in well doing, unknown of men, a Nazareth; in every constant effort in the Master's service, a well of Sychar; in every 'still hour,' a Mount of Olives; in the drinking of every bitter cup which the Father gives us, a Gethsemane; and in every offering up of self for others, a Calvary. Here are the footsteps of Jesus. Who will walk in them?—Congregationalist.

ONLY WAITING.

A very old man bereft of family, and of wealth was compelled to take refuge in an alms-house. When asked what he was doing there, he replied; "Only waiting." Happy man! Glorious thought! His mission is fulfilled on earth; his troubles almost over; now there is nothing to do but wait for his Master's call, which he hourly expects and more gladly welcomes.

Ah! unhappy they who expect, and yet dread. It is true that enjoyment and sorrow come alternately in all stages of life, but I have often thought that the most misery to be felt in life, is the closing up of the existence of an old man, bereft of family, of friends, of health, tottering on the verge of an unwelcome grave, fearing, lest death should take him with his sins into eternity.

A good man welcomes death. Ah! there it is, both "only waiting;" one to be blessed with eternal life, to rejoin the friends over there; the other, shrinking from an inevitable destiny.

Philosophy and religion often agree, but in death there is a difference. Then, the moral philosophic answer is, "I will meet death like a brave man." How different that of the Christian. "Welcome death to take me home."

Growing old, is entirely unavoidable. Some dread, others desire, and none can stop it. The old man may sing and wish to be young, but he grows older while singing.

De Leon grew old while seeking, without success, the youth renewing water. The snow of age falls lightest, for it is felt not, but it never melts; but why speak of it so mournfully or in a melancholy manner? "Old age has its enjoyments; and length of life increases the desire to live." There is much to live for; our associations with objects insensibly makes us love them. There are pleasures of old age that many in the impetuosity of youth, do not see. They overlook the fact that the objects of endearment grow old with us. We love objects as well as persons, from having known them so long. The care of family may keep some here that desire death, but there is also in them a love for objects, for trees, plants, buildings reared, &c., that makes them love this good earth of ours.

With good persons, this is the only counteracting attraction. These hold us here. The old man in the alms house had none of these enjoyments, and the wicked man fears to go. Here are three classes. The desire to die is often over ruled by the love of life for its own sake. Like Paul, they are in a strait between two, to live would be satisfactory, to die would be gain. The natural feeling of love for mankind binds them here, they are also ready to go when called. Shrinking from death is only a bodily fear while the finger of death is plucking away the soul.

If we look with an eye of faith, we can see Heaven in all its loveliness, and feel ready to leave this load of flesh, but we fear to cross the dark river. Concerning this, the Swiss have a beautiful legend.

Along the Alpine hill-sides, and in the valleys beyond the rivers, are extensive pastures and mountain evergreens. The good shepherds desire to get their flocks over there, but the timid sheep fear to go down the rugged hills, and cross the deep turbid waters, though they see the pasture. The shepherds, to induce them to cross, seize a lamb, perhaps a pet one, and tenderly bear it over, the whole flock then eagerly follow. In a much higher sense, it is the same with us. Away in the dim distance of eternity is that beautiful land. The Father wants us there, He begs us to come over and possess that land. Preaching and coaxing are alike in vain. We see Heaven, but fear to cross the dark river. Very often then, our Father takes a lamb from the flock, occasionally a pet one; not to grieve us but to increase our desire to forsake all worldly matters,—go down in the valley,—cross the Jordan of death, and forever be with the darling ones. Then what is death, that we should fear to die? Why it is to leave a world of changing to join those in eternal happiness.

Any one who has been away from home for some time, and through kindness, made friends of those who were strangers, know what are his feelings on leaving them to go home. Sad, yet joyful time. It is sacrificing some pleasures to enjoy others much greater with the dear ones at home. So it is in death; we leave the society of those with whom we often sang and rejoiced, to join the number above, and sing in Heavenly choirs. Happy then is he who is ready, willing and waiting to go when God shall say, "Come up hither," will then, for that call, be 'Only waiting."

"Only waiting 'till the Savior,
In His wisdom thinks it best;
In that land of love forever,
For me, there, to be at rest."

D. M. Long.

Keedysville, Md.

AN APPEAL TO SINNERS.

BY E. S.

Listen, sinners, to the voice of one who loves you, so full of compassion, so rich in promises. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." How inexpressibly tender the invitation, "Come unto me," forsake your sins, turn from your evil ways, "cleave unto that which is good" "and I will give you rest."

Our imaginations cannot conceive, our minds cannot grasp all that is contained in this glorious promise.

"A life in Heaven! Oh what is this?
The sum of all that faith believed;
Fullness of joy, and depth of bliss,
Unseen, unfathomed, unconceived."

How inexpressibly tender the invitation. Through the Father's assisting grace, how easy the conditions! Only to love Him who first loved you. Only to give Him your heart who first gave His life a ransom for your life. Oh sinner, sinner, how can you resist such tenderness, such love—think you there is no happiness in serving God? Try it, try it and see for yourselves. Listen again! "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." Can you say you have never felt the Savior knocking at the door of your heart? have you never felt some "invisible power" of love gently drawing you toward a higher and better life? has that "still small voice" never whispered, in tender accents, "Come to me," almost persuading you to be a Christian—pleading, urging you to "flee from the wrath to come" by "laying hold on eternal life," or are you to be numbered among those who, having eyes, see not, and having ears, hear not, the things pertaining to their soul's salvation? Oh, how can you be so blind, how can you be so deaf? So blind to all He has suffered in His unfathomable love for you, deaf to all His tender appeals, His gracious promises, blind to your best interests both in this world and the world to come.—Deaf and blind to the example and teachings of a lifetime spent in "doing good" in the performance of mighty miracles such as the world had never seen, and never will again, until "that great and notable day of the Lord" come.

Listen again, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." "Search the Scriptures," for therein is the "way" made plain, so "he that runs may read." "Search the Scriptures for in them ye have eternal life." Read them for yourself, you, whose eyes are on this page, to you are these invitations extended, to you is He still pleading. "My son, give me thine heart." Is He not still knocking at the door of your hearts?

"Oh lovely attitude—he stands.
With melting heart and bleeding hands,
Oh matchless kindness—and He shows
This matchless kindness to His foes."

And now in conclusion, what shall I say more? "The Spirit and the Bride say Come, and let him that heareth, say Come, and let him that is athirst, Come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Do not delay, salvation is offered "without money and without price" now is the accepted time, now is the hour.

WISDOM.

Do not choose your friend by his looks. Handsome shoes often pinch your feet.

Bulwer says poverty is only an idea, in nine cases out of ten, and that there is really more happiness among the working-men in the world than among those who are called rich.

Every beginner in life should try early to ascertain the strong faculty of his mind or body, fitting him for some special pursuit, and direct the utmost energies to bring it to perfection.

Though judgment must collect the materials of the goodly structure of friendship, it is affection that gives the cement; and regulated passion as well as reason should concur in forming a firm and lasting coalition.

There is no funeral so sad to follow as the funerals of our own youth, which we have been pampering with fond desires, ambitious hopes, and all the bright seductive berries which hang in poisonous clusters over the path of life.

True philosophy consists in doing all the good that we can, in learning all the good we can, in teaching to others all the good we can, in bearing, to the best of our ability, the various ills of life, and in enjoying with gratitude every honest pleasure that, in the mercy of Providence, comes in our way.

For the Pilgrim.

HEAR THE PROPHETS.

"For Moses truly said, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you like unto me, him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." Acts 3:23.

Like unto me. It appears that there is a similarity between Moses and this prophet. We find that Pharaoh, when king of Egypt, said unto his people, behold the people of Israel are more and mightier than we, let us deal wisely with them that when there falleth out a war that they fight not against us. We find they set task masters to afflict them, but the more they afflicted them the more they multiplied and grew. And it is said, they were grieved because of the children of Israel, so Pharaoh charged all his prophets to cast every male child into the river. Now we find that Moses was born and as they saw that he was exceeding fair they hid him three months, but when they could not conceal him any longer they made an ark of bulrushes and put this Moses in, and placed the ark in the flags by the river side, and by this means his life was saved, although Pharaoh desired it, but through the power of God he was saved. Now we find when this prophet was born in Bethlehem in the days of Herod, the king, that he desired his life, but Joseph was warned by God in a dream that they should flee to Egypt and be there till the death of Herod. Now when Herod saw that he was mocked, he was exceeding wroth, and sent forth and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem from two years old and under, according to the time which he had inquired of the wise men. Here we see he was like unto Moses.

Again, we find that Moses delivered the children of Israel out of bondage which they were under king Pharaoh. So this prophet will deliver the children of men from under the bondage of sin. Here he is like unto Moses again. He will lead them through this wilderness of woe as Moses led the children of Israel through the wilderness after crossing the Red Sea. Again, as Moses was a mediator between the children of Israel and their God, so this prophet is a mediator between us and our God. Here he is like unto him. "Him shall ye hear in all things." As the children of Israel had to hear Moses, so we must hear this prophet in all things whatsoever he shall say unto us. Now when we take a view of what this Prophet has said, can we say of a truth that we hear him in all things? This prophet says, "Not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven." Do we obey all, or only in part? I fear in part. The prophet has said "except ye repent and become as a little child ye cannot enter into the kingdom of Heaven." Become harmless, just willing to do what is commanded, bringing nothing of your own. This is the way the penitent must come. Then you will hear this prophet in all things that he shall say unto you. After you are made willing to hear and obey the first principles of the doctrine, you must continue to hear this prophet in all things that he shall say unto you.

We must hear him in various ways. We find that the apostle Paul said, he was willing to spend and be spent for the cause of this Prophet. How is it with us? O, how hard to spend, much less to be spent, in the cause of our Master. If there are a few dollars wanted to defray the expenses in the house of God, or want a house to worship comfortably in, how hard it goes with some of the brethren to lend a helping hand. Paul says, as there was a readiness to will so there may be a performance also out of that which we have, for if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not, for I mean not that other men be eased and you burdened, but by an equality. So says Paul. 2 Cor. 11, 12, 13. The Savior said, "If ye have not the spirit of Christ ye are none of his." We find this prophet commanded to give to him that asketh and from him that would borrow, turn not away. I fear if we are not careful we may err in this.

Again he says, "Love your enemies, pray for them that despitefully use you and say all manner of evil against you falsely. If they smite you on the one cheek turn the other also." So says this prophet. Do we all hear in this command.

Again, the Savior said, "when he was reviled he reviled not again, when he suffered he threatened not." Beloved brethren, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and run with patience the race which is set before us. Let us live for heaven, as there is nothing else worth living for, and let not the love of the unrighteous mammon have control of the heart and finally famish us in misery and woe. What a disappointment, if we should be cast away after we have spent a lifetime in what we thought was the life of a Christian? We read that if we keep the whole law and offend in one point we are guilty of all. May the Lord help us to become Christians, live Christians and die Christians.

G. W. BRICKER.

THE TWO WORLDS.—This world and the next resemble the east and west; you cannot draw near to one without turning your back to the other.

No author can be as moral as his works, as no preacher is as pious as his sermons.

THE RIGHTEOUS.

"The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree."—Psalms 92:12.

The Psalmest David in his exhortation to praise the Divine Master for His great works and love manifested toward the human family, made use of this language, and well did he make the comparison in comparing the righteous to the Palm tree. We are inclined to think that there was no tree in the land in which the Psalmest resided, and perhaps none in the world, better adapted to make the comparison than the one he selected. We, in a country of which the palm tree is not a native, are not so familiar with it as the prophet was, but what we can learn from it. it is a tree with a straight unbranching stem, terminating in a crown of leaves, and grows to a great height, and it is so elastic that it will stand in the wildest storms; though the tempest beat upon it, and the strong oak be laid prostrate to the ground, it will yield its top to be bent to the earth that its broad leaves will sweep the ground, but when the storms are past. it will again raise its graceful head toward the Heavens, and will only be the better qualified to overcome the next storm that may come upon it. In like manner it is with the righteous, when the enemy comes with his storms of temptation, he may suffer himself to bend to some extent, but if he, like the Ninevites at the preaching of Jonah, repents of his transgressions and cries mightily to God for protection, he will not fall, for God has said "I will not suffer you to be tempted above what you are able to bear, but he, like the palm tree, will strike deeper roots and thereby will be better prepared to overcome the next temptation that the enemy of souls will bring upon him. But in this, God will not do the work alone. He requires a work of him. He must combat with the enemy to the utmost. If he permits him to overtake him in one point, soon he will try him in another, and in that way he will work with him till finally he will come with a great storm, and he, no more like the palm tree, will fall a victim at his feet, and the enemy will be made to rejoice in that he has deceived another soul. But if he puts on the whole armor of God and fights manfully, he can come out as conquerer. And as the branches of the palm tree, are a token of victory, he can then boldly reach forth his hand and pluck a branch from the palm tree and wear it as an emblem of victory over the enemy. But sinner, while you are in your lost condition, you dare not pluck a branch from the tree, and therefore you cannot travel with those that have palms of victory in their hands; and if you are not permitted to be with that class, where are you going, to what will we compare you?

We will again turn to the same Prophet that compared the righteous to the palm tree, and hear what comparison he makes. We find in the 1st. Psalm 4, he says, "The ungodly are like the chaff which the wind driveth away." This is not the comparison that He makes to you. Now sinner it is time for you to reflect, before you further go, and as you stop to think for a moment where you are drifting to, take up your Bibles and turn to Matt. 3:12, and you can see in a few words, what will become of this chaff at the great day of the Lord. You will find recorded there "And He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner, but He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire."

This will be your fixed doom if you will not forsake your sinful ways, and turn to your Savior who stands with outstretched arms ready to receive you, and who is pleading with the Father not to cast you off in your iniquity. But e're long the time will come when your sojourn will end upon earth, and at the time when you will come to the Jordan of death, you will then sincerely lament that you did not give heed to His gentle calling while you had all opportunities. You will then be classed with the chaff, and must pass into eternity, without a branch of the palm tree in your hand as an emblem of victory; and at the great day you will only serve as fuel in the lake of fire. May all who read this take heed to your steps, before you will be summoned to your eternal homes. S. M. SMITH.

NOW.

Now, for time is short, and death is near. Judgment threatens. Now, for in eternity it will be too late, and the very next step may land you there. The only season of which you can be sure is now. The purpose may not last till to-morrow. Fulfill it now. Fresh difficulties will flood the channel to-morrow, wade it now. The chain of evil habits will bind you more tightly to-morrow, stop it now. Religion is a work for every day, begin it now. Sin exposes to present miseries, escape them now. Holiness confers present joys, seize them now. Your Creator commands, obey Him now. A God of love entreats, be reconciled now. The Father from His throne invites, return now. The Holy Spirit is striving in your heart, yield, now. Behold now is the accepted time, behold now is the day of salvation. Oh! dear fellow sinner, come now. Why will you delay, to-morrow may not come, and it would be a pity for the old adversary to drag you to hell, "Where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched" If you would gain Heaven, you have no time to lose. Death is certain, and life very uncertain, and while the invitation is to-day, put it not off 'till to-morrow. "For the Spirit and the Bride say Come, and let him that heareth, say Come, and let him that is athirst Come, and whosoever will, let him come and take the water of life freely.

"Hasten sinner to be wise,
Stay not for the morrow's Sun;
Wisdom if you still despise,
Harder it it to be won."
"Jesus the water of life will give,
Freely to those that love Him."

D. B. CONDRIE.

HOW GENTLE GOD'S COMMANDS.

Gentle reader, hear the precious words of Jesus, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest, take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." "My commands are not grievous."

How much pain and sorrow it would save us to remember our Creator in the days of our youth while the evil day come not, nor the years draw nigh when we will say we have no pleasure in them, and in declining years how happy the thought, going home to Jesus.

How often the tear drop dims the eye, to follow our young and dear friends to the tomb, yet can we pine or wish them back, when we know they are safe at home, safe with Jesus. Dear friends, you who are yet out of the ark of safety, let me tell you, Jesus drank the bitter cup for you. Behold, how guilty man hath pierced him. Can you then say, he has required too much of you? Methinks I hear you say, I think not. Then you will say how gentle his commands Then let us be up and a doing while traveling through this vale of tears, is my humble prayer

"How gentle God's commands;
How kind His precepts are;
Come cast your burden on the Lord;
And trust His constant care."

C. H. HAWBECKER.

Upton, Pa.

Youth's Department.

TO OUR YOUNG PILGRIMS.

We are frequently told by our subscribers, that their families, and even the "little ones" are highly pleased with the PILGRIM. We are glad of this, as they are the very ones that need religious instructions most, but we always feel that we fall short of our duty in this department.

Dear young reader, we do not wish you to think that this is on account of indifference on our part, as we were long ago persuaded, that upon you, depends the future prosperity of the church. Soon your fathers and mothers that are now so dear to you, will grow old, and one after another, will sicken and die, and then leave you to fill their places. This you can only do by becoming good, and the very best time to do that, is, while you are young, as good boys and girls generally make good men and women.

You, no doubt, have often read of the twig being bent while young and tender, and perhaps you have often amused yourselves in bending them in such shapes that suited your young fancies, but do you not remember how stiff and stubborn the larger ones were? You could not bend them in such shapes as you desired them, they were either too stiff or would break. So it is with you. Your dear parents often have the same trouble in bending or training you in such ways or shapes as they would have you.—As father trains, prunes and supports the little apple tree in the orchard, so that it may grow up with a straight stem and well balanced branches, and yield its fruit in its season, so he labors to train up his little sons and daughters, that when the time comes you may bear the fruits of righteousness.—Now if you yield yourselves to the instructions of father and mother, as the little twig yields to your wishes, you will grow up as the well balanced tree ladened with the choicest of fruit, thus causing joy to your parents hearts, and to all those with whom you may associate.

Keep The Gate Shut.

An English farmer was one day at work in his fields, when he saw a party of huntsman riding about his farm He had one field that he was specially anxious they should not ride over, as the crop was in a condition to be badly injured by the tramp of hors s. So he despatched one of his boys to this field, telling him to shut the gate, and then keep watch over it, and on no account, to suffer it to be opened. The boy went, as he was bidden, but was scarcely at his post before the huntsman came up, peremptorily ordering the gate to be opened. This the boy declined to do, stating the orders he had received, and his determination not to disobey them Threats and bribes were offered, alike in vain, one after another came forward as spokesman, but all with the same result; the boy remained immovable in the determination not to open the gate. After a while, one of noble presence advanced, and said in commanding tones, "My boy, do you know me? I am the Duke of Wellington, one not accustomed to be disobeyed; and I command you to open that gate, that I and my friends may pass through." The boy lifted his cap, and stood uncovered before the man whom all England delighted to honor, then answered firmly, "I am sure the Duke of Wellington would not wish me to disobey orders. I must keep this gate shut, nor suffer any one to pass but with my master's express permission" Greatly pleased, the sturdy old warrior lifted his own hat, and said, "I honor the man or boy, who can be neither bribed or frightened into doing wrong. With an army of such soldiers I could conquer not only the French but the world" And handing the boy a glittering sovereign, the old duke put spurs to his horse and galloped away, while the boy ran off to his work shouting at the top of his voice, "Hurrah, hurrah! I've done what Napoleon couldn't do—I've kept out the Duke of Wellington."

Every boy is a gate-keeper, and his Masters command is, "Be thou faithful unto death." Are you tempted to drink to smoke or chew tobacco? Keep the gate of your mouth fast closed, and allow no evil company to enter. When evil companions would counsel you to break the Sabbath, to lie, to deal falsely, disobey your parents, keep the gate of your ears shut against such enticements, and when the bold blasphemer, would instil doubts of the great truths of Revelation, then keep the door of your heart locked and barred against his infamous suggestions, remembering that it is only the fool "who hath said in his heart, there is no God."—Christian Weekly.

"BORROW NOT A FEW."

"Borrow not a few," saith the Lord to every believer. Go, thou thou sorrowing one; borrow empty vessels in which to receive abundant consolations from Christ.—What magnificent grace shines in the world; empty. God will not pour into vessels filled with creature supplies. Thus it is manifest, that the oil comes direct from God. The word "empty" shuts out the creature. The words "not a few" have room for God to enter in. The heart's deep furrows are so many deep vessels to receive streams of comfort. The heart that has many is furnished with vessels "not a few." Faith's warrant is, "Borrow not a few."

—Some time ago we called upon our young readers to give us the Eleventh Commandment. This far we have heard from only one little girl. Next week we will let you read what she has to say.

Correspondence.

ROCK CREEK, Ill. }
March 10th, '72. }

Dear Brethren: I have now been a reader of the PILGRIM for nearly a year, and among its numerous contributions, I never met a single article from any of the churches of the Northern Illinois District, comprising some 12 or 13 churches. Why is this? Well, perhaps a very great part of the fault rests on me, if so, I now desire to be relieved. This Northern District of Illinois is, I believe, all included in Carroll, Whiteside, Lee, Ogle and Stephenson counties. Some large churches and I think generally in a healthy condition. The ministering brethren have been awake to their duties, and the churches have had numerous visits by brethren from different parts of the Brotherhood, this winter, and we were made happy many times to hear that still "more were coming." This Branch, Rock Creek, has had no less than twenty extra meetings through the winter, and we feel that we have been encouraged, but there has been no increase in numbers here, but in other places we hear of increase. The Milledgeville church, of which this is an arm, has had about thirty-two extra meetings and several additions, and we trust that the good seed sown will not all be lost. Hoping I have now done my duty, I will close, as writing for publication is tiresome for me, as I had not the privilege of learning grammar when I was a school boy. May God bless the mission of the PILGRIM.

JESSE Y. HECKLER.

MIDDLEBURG, Ind.

Dear Readers of the PILGRIM, as I think it is my duty, I will try, by the help of God, to write a few lines for our encouragement. We all know that we are fast decaying and dying mortals, and that sooner or later we will have to stand before the tribunal of God. Therefore let us prepare for that great and terrible day of the Lord. Let us watch and pray, for we know not the hour wherein the Son of man cometh. Let us have our lamps trimmed and oil in our vessels, lest when the Bridegroom cometh, we will not be prepared to meet Him. Let us press onward toward the mark and high calling of God. We have no abiding city here, but have a building of God, a house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens. Let us prove faithful so when we come to die we may be prepared to meet with all the glorified saints that have long since gone before us. The Apostle Peter says, "but sanctify the Lord in your hearts and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear, having a good con-silence; that whereas they speak evil of you, as evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ for Christ also suffered for sins, the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the spirit. We often meet troubles and temptations here on earth, but if we hold out faithful, and pass our sojourning here in fear, we have the promise of inheriting that blissful abode where there will be no sickness, sorrow, pain nor death, but all one bright and glorious day, and where parting is known no more. Then let us strive daily for the prize and receive the Crown.

ELIZABETH A. HOOVER.

Brother Henry: I started, in company with brother Henry Hershberger, to Fulton county, Pa. Arrived in Sidling Hill valley, on the evening of the 8th of March, had preaching at friend, now brother, Wm. Kline's. Although it was snowing, yet the people could not all get into his house, good attention to the word preached. Next day we had preaching in the Christian church, then went with brother Geo. Melott, who took us, to Licking creek, 7 miles; had meeting that evening in the Turkeyfoot school house, and also the next day 10 A. M., being Sunday the 10th. Were met there after meeting by brother John Young, George Bricker, George Harman and John Witter from Franklin county. Took dinner with Jacob Melott, Esq., who is a warm friend of the Brethren, his wife being a sister. Being urged by Sheriff Morton, we spent part of the afternoon with him, he seeming not far from the kingdom. Here we were desired, by a friend, to give our views on the formula on baptism which we tried to do, whether to his satisfaction or not, we do not know. This single backward immersion is as preached into them, for many years never hearing to the contrary till lately, that many think it can be fully sustained in the Gospel. That evening we had meeting at Jacob Melott's. Eleventh, at friend John Lake's, 10 A. M., when eight were immersed in the names of the Trinity, three sisters and five brethren. After the ice was cut, they were baptized in twenty minutes, in the presence of a large concourse of people. That evening meeting at brother Absalom Melott's. Twelfth, in the evening, brethren Bricker and Harman left for home. Brother Young and Witters agreed to stay that day yet. Meeting at 10 A. M., at the house of Sheriff Morton, where we bade a solemn and affectionate farewell to the brethren, sisters and friends at Licking creek. Brother Young stayed for meeting at Esq. Melott's that evening and we returned to the Christian's church to attend to our appointment that evening, which closed our labors for the time.

Our meetings were well attended, with good order, solemnity, and manifest desire of being fed with the bread of life, with commendable sociability, hospitality, and a special desire to make us comfortable. May God reward them in the morning of the resurrection, is our prayer. In this valley, a year ago, there were only two members, if I am not mistaken. Last summer the brethren commenced to hold frequent meetings. The doctrine, though new to them, was appreciated, consequently, many, like the noble Bereans, searched the scriptures to see whether these things be so. This created a general stir among the people, some asserting and others opposing the truth; finally it seems, as truth is mighty, that it will obtain the victory, as there are now upwards of twenty brethren and sisters there, and a number more just at the eve of dropping in with the people of God. May God Almighty bless them with power and fortitude to press through all hindrances and oppositions seemingly to be in their way, whether father, mother, wife, children, brothers, sisters, houses lands, or whatever else may be their chief attachment. O, forsake all for Christ's sake and speedily enter into the covenant with God. For heaven and earth will rejoice when sinners turn to God.

We arrived safely at home and found all reasonably well.

LEONARD FURRY.

New Enterprise, Pa.

A LETTER.

EDITORS PILGRIM: I send you the within letter of an afflicted family. They have been nearly two years afflicted with sickness. The sister was, at times, not able to hold knife or fork in her hand. Her complaint is inflammatory rheumatism, and his is still worse. All medical aid hath, as far, failed. The within letter states the condition of his mind, which may give consolation to others afflicted, and may produce charitable feelings in the wealthy.

F. P. L.

BREEDSVILLE, MICH., March, 5 h '72.

Dear Brother in the Lord, for such indeed I may call you, I received your very welcome letter yesterday, and was made to rejoice in the thought that God does hear and answer the prayers of His children. Your letter found me in great bodily distress, but to-day finds me some better. Rachel, Helen and Eveline have been very ill but are now able to be about the house. Willie is down to-day quite sick, but I do not like to dwell on these things, I do struggle for that higher existence of the true Christian, that entire consecration to God. O, how contented and happy are we when we rest in the promises of the Father. Though we may travel down the stream of time, borne down with trials and afflictions, yet we know the Master is ever near to sustain us. Though the journey of life may be a bitter one to the very crossing of the dark river, what glory breaks in on our vision as we are lifted from the murky waters into that bright field of many mansions prepared by the Father for those that love and obey Him. Oh, that I could put away these doubts and fears, no that I doubt His love and power, but I do doubt my own sincerity of purpose. I do very much desire and need that your prayers ascend to a throne of grace in my behalf, for I do realize that the prayers of the faithful are treasured up as sacred jewels with the Lord. I wish to cite you to a very few of the evidences I have received lately of God fulfilling His promises to provide. I was on Saturday last, very much distressed in mind about food for my family, but I fell back on the words Rachel often spoke to me, "We will trust in the Lord." About dark L—— drove up to our door with some flour, corn meal, buckwheat flour, potatoes and cabbage, also fodder for my cow. On Sunday, Mr. A——— came and brought us some meat and some money. On Monday your letter with five dollars, and to-day, some brethren passed here and gave me five dollars and sixty cents, mostly from Almena, for which I pray the Lord to reward each and every one. Oh, how shall I praise the Lord for His goodness to me and mine. I did not know that the news of our distress was known in this neighborhood, yet it had gone to Almena. I have been visited by those that I supposed did not care for me, and urged me to make my wants known and not suffer in the midst of plenty, but I must draw my letter to a close, as I am not able to write much more.

Do not be troubled in mind about us the Lord will provide. The greater the sorrow here the greater the joy in Heaven. We are only being prepared here for a home in Heaven. We are not going into affliction, but out of it, and shall finally ascend and be welcomed with a shout where sin and sorrow, pain and death are known no more. I shall write again if you remain long. Farewell.

L. F. R——

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

DISTRICT MEETING

Northern District of Indiana and Michigan, on the 18th day of April, in the east meeting-house in Pine Creek congregation, 13 miles north of Plymouth. There will be conveyance at Walkerton, Plymouth and South Bend on the 17th, to convey delegates to the place of meeting. Those coming to South Bend should come on the morning trains, those coming to Plymouth, noon trains.

DAVID CLEM.

Dear Brethren: Please announce that our Annual Council Meeting of the Middle District of Iowa will be held, commencing on the 6th of May next, at the house of brother Jacob Snider, at Brooklyn, Powesheik Co. There will likewise be held a Love feast at same place, on the evening of the 4th previous to the D. Meeting.

G. R. BAKER.

[Visitor please copy.]

The District Meeting of North Western Ohio, will be held, the Lord willing, in the Poplar Ridge Branch, Defiance county, in the meeting-house five miles north-east of Defiance, on the 19th day of April, 1872.

WM NOFFSINGER.

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

Middle District of Ind. April 13th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

Southern District of Ind. March 28th. Stop off at Delphi and Back Creek.

Eastern District of Maryland, April 2nd, Beaverdam, Frederick Co., Md.

North eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa., Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

First District of Va., West Arm, Floyd Co., April 19th.

Please announce that the District Meeting of Northern Ind. and Southern Mich. will be held in the Pine Creek congregation at their west meeting house, April 18th, 1872, by Divine permission. Those coming by railroad will stop at Walkerton.

JESSE CALVERT.

MARRIED.

MARTIN—BEEGHLY—On the 10th of March 1872, at the residence of the brides parents, by Wm Sadler, brother Daniel W. Martin, of Wayne county Oh., to sister Susan Beeghly of Ashland Co. Ohio.

DIED.

WAGONER—In the Wildcat Church, Ind., January 58th, Susanna Wagoner, daughter of Samuel and Catharine Wagoner, aged 19 years, three months and 7 days. Funeral services by Eld., Jacob Wagoner, the writer and others.

The occasion was one of great solemnity, as she had neglected to choose that good part, like Mary of old, which could not be taken away from her. Although she was obedient to her parents and strictly moral in her character, yet she greatly regretted her condition. Let this be a warning to all who have not yet made their calling and election sure.

BARB—In the same Congregation, on the 1st day of March, '72, Jacob Barb, aged 68 years, and 7 months. Funeral services by Elder Isaac Cripe and the writer, from Job 14:13-14.

Father Barb was a member of the Lutheran Church until he was laid upon his death bed, when he began to seriously consider his condition, remembering the good council which the brethren had given him, he became dissatisfied and very much alarmed. He called for ministers of the church in great haste, and requested to be baptized, but while preparations were being made, the grim monster death claimed his victim, and launched him into the spirit world before the sacred ordinance could be performed. All was done that love and mercy could dictate that the dying man might have his last and dying request complied with, but our Father willed it otherwise, and he is now in the hands of Him who can take the will for the act, and who is able to save even to the uttermost. Let this be a solemn warning for all to prepare for the important change while the lamp yet holds out to burn.

SAMUEL ULERY.

[Companion and Visitor please copy.]

LAMAN—In the Ashland Congregation, Ashland Co., Ohio, sister Nancy Laman, aged 80 years, and 23 days. Funeral services by the writer and others, from Phil. 3. 9-10, to an attentive congregation.

Wm. SADLER.

BRANNUM—In the vicinity of Fairfield Green Co., Ohio, Feb., 26th David C. Brannum, aged 31 years, 5 months and 26 days. A wife and two small children, are left to mourn his untimely loss. Funeral services by the writer, from 1st. Cor. 15:22.

B. F. DAIST.

Editor's Department.

FIRE INSURANCE Co.

The subject of having a Fire Insurance company among the Brethren, has been agitated for some time. It has, of late, been before a number of our District Meetings and gained considerable favor, and by a few adopted, and we believe, are now in operation with favorable results. At our last District Meeting of Middle Pa, it had a large number of warm friends. It was also before last A. M. where it also met with considerable favor, but was waved for further consideration with next A. M.

In order that the wishes of the brotherhood may be represented fully, each sub district or church should have it before their Council Meeting preparatory to District Meeting, and pass a decision which can be represented by the delegates chosen. If this is properly attended to by all of our churches, the subject will be fairly presented to District Meeting, and we have that faith in the justness of the cause that we feel assured that it will be favorably received.

We have, of late, thought seriously of being burat out of house and home, which may happen any of us, and the anticipated result is, by no means cheering, especially when it is understood that we must bear the loss single handed.

It is true that the church of the Brethren is a charitable association within itself, but the trouble is, the distribution is not equal. When a brother's buildings are burnt down, we become carnal and commence measuring ourselves by ourselves, and this you know is not wise.

Bro. A, by good economy and hard labor, gains enough to buy a good farm and erect thereon good buildings, and perhaps has been enabled to cancel the last payment and call it his own, but by some misfortune, his buildings take fire and sweeps the whole thing away, thus in a few hours losing the honest earnings of half of a lifetime of hard labor. The church duly sympathizes with bro. A, and says; "that was a hard stroke on bro. A,—very hard. Bro. B. has considerable wealth, but has lately bought another farm and must meet the payments. Bro. C's farm is not so good as Bro. A's and he calculates that Bro. A's farm without buildings is worth as much as his with them, and therefore does not feel to help a man that is as rich as himself Bro D. and a host of others away down to Z. are worth still less, and they, of course, cannot see the propriety of helping a man who is worth more than what they are, and thus the unfortunate brother is left to sustain his loss quite alone, right in the midst of this charitable association, or if not alone, the pittance is so small that it fails to meet the case. For these reasons, and many others, we advocate a mutual association of brethren who will agree to equally and proportionately bear each others losses. This we strongly contend, is the spirit of Christ's teaching and is stamped on almost every page of divine writ. "Bear ye one anothers burdens," is an injunction that should be sacred to every brothers heart. In the days of the churches' pentecostal glory, the brethren were not only willing to bear each others burdens in proportion to their wealth, but sold their possessions and had all things common. This, in the spirit of brotherly charity, by far exceeds the association which we, with a large number of brethren feel to advocate.

As we have introduced the subject, we will also submit our plan for forming these associations, which is about as fellows: Let each Church District form the boundary of a Fire Insurance Co., and every brother within the limits of that District shall have the privilege of becoming a member of that organization, with the privilege of withdrawing at pleasure, but shall not become a member again unless he pays to the company his equal proportion of loss that it may have sustained, during the time of his withdrawel, according to the amount of his first Insurance policy, with this proviso: If an extmembers buildings burn down during his withdrawel, the Company shall not be held responsible for his loss. District Meeting shall elect or appoint a Secretary and Treasurer, and each sub District shall elect their own agents. The agents duty shall be to attend to the valuations of the brethren who wish to become members of the Company, and give them their policies. It shall also be their duty, in case of fire, to report to the Secretary the amount of loss sustained. It shall also be their duty to collect the amount of loss to be sustained by their several Districts and send it to the Treasurer.

The Secretary shall have in his possession the insured valuation of every member of the Company, and it shall be his duty, in case of fire, to lay a tax or percentage on this valuation sufficiently large to meet the loss sustained and shall designate the amount of each members indebtedness which he shall report to the agents of the several sub districts for collection. It shall also be his duty to give the brother sustaining the loss, an order on the Treasurer for the same, also attend to other necessary writing for the Company.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive and hold all money belonging to the Company, and to cash orders made upon him by the Secretary.

These officers shall be paid for actual loss of time and labor.

An Association of this kind needs no other law than the law of Christ, and no other charter than that of the church. In such an organization our brethren could enter with a good conscience, accompanied with the assurance of bearing each others burthens and thus fulfilling the law of Christ.

We now submit our ideas to an intelligent brotherhood in which we place implicit confidence, and hope that every church, in harmony with the spirit and intention of A. M., will feel it their privilege and duty to bring this matter before the council meetings and make their decisions pro and con. so that it may be fairly represented at our District Meetings.

ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED.—Orders are coming in quite cheeringly and the prospects are encouraging. Some are quite anxious to see them. Have a little patience and rest assured that all will be supplied, as we expect to run them off by the thousand. All orders are booked as they come in, and when out of press will be sent immediately. We expect to make a good job of it, and print them on our best book paper. We are still holding back for a few more orders, send them along, by the time they will reach us, we expect to have them ready for distribution. Remember our terms: Single copy 10 cts, 10 copies 80 cts, 20 copies $1.50, 50 copies $3.00, 100 copies $5.00, 500 copies $20.00, 1000 copies $30.00.

This week, by running short of our $1.25 paper, we were compelled to use a large percentage of our good paper which will give many of our readers an opportunity of testing the relative merit in the different prices. We are sorry, however, that we failed in getting a fair print owing to the cold weather and contracting of our rollers which are of our own make, and old-fashioned material. We are learning some things, and have much more to learn yet, but we expect to profit by our experience in the roller question, and if we mistake not, our readers will find it out before many more PILGRIMS go on their mission.

THE ALDINE FOR APRIL.—The feature of this issue is an exquisite design by Victor Nehlig, entitled "Morning Dew." The delicacy of the artist's imagination is fittingly offset by the sympathetic treatment of the engraver and printer. By any known process it would be extremely difficult to rival the effect, and we have no doubt that there are many who would not grudge the year's subscription for this single plate. This is the frontispiece promised every quarter. Then we find two other full-page plates—an interior, by Emslie, engraved in a masterly manner by Henry Linton, and a view on the "Hudson at Hyde Park," by George Smillie. Of the smaller cuts "The Little Mother," by John S. Davis, is conspicuous as one of the very best specimens of figure drawing that we have yet seen from an American pencil. Mr. Davis is conscientious in every detail, and lovers of true art will look to his future with the greatest expectation. Pictorially, this number justifies the highest commendations, and indicates a fixity of purpose, on the part of the publishers, that augurs well for American Art. The literary department is very well sustained, and we think, for excellence and variety, this is the best number yet issued. The more solid articles are a valuable paper on "Ancient Pottery," by S. F. Corkran, formerly of the British Museum; "On the Eastern Shore of Virginia," a pleasant sketch of American life and scenery, by Mary E. Bradley, and "Cosas de Espana," an entertaining account of the difficulties of Spanish travel. The poems are, "Liverworts," by W. W. Bailey, a graceful little lyric, which is a real addition to floral poetry, and "Shameful Death," a remarkable poem by the author of "The Earthly Paradise." Nor must we forget Bryant's 'Green River,' (illustrated), and the editorial on "Poets' Rivers," which was evidently inspired by it, and is brimful of genial scholarship. Mr. Stoddard will have to exert himself to make another number as good as this. The statement of the publishers that the edition is already within a fraction of 50,000 copies per months will be hailed as a vindication of American taste and appreciation. Such an unparalleled success, for a publication utterly non-sensational, is a recognition and endorsement of which the youthful publishers (the senior member of the firm has just turned thirty) may well be proud. We are glad that our neighborhood is represented among the patrons of The Aldine, and would urge the necessity of according the widest circulation to its elevating and refining influences. The subscription price, including a pretty oil-chromo premium, is $5—and the publisher's address is James Sutton & Co., 23 Liberty Street, N. Y.

MONEY LIST.

M. A. Moomaw,	$1.25
Eld. Jacob Steel,	8.00
A. B. Brumbaugh,	1.25
Joseph Dunlap,	1.25
Enoch Eby,	1.50
Clara M. Burket,	1.25
John M. Mohler,	1.13
D. P. Sayler,	1.25
Samuel Teeter,	1.25
D. R. C. Neal,	1.25
Jacob Weaver,	6.00
Simon Snyder,	1.00
Samuel J. Burger,	5.00
Elihu Moore,	5.25
J. M. Mohler,	1.13
John Bowers,	1.25
Samuel W. Blough,	1.25
Joshua Hoffer,	1.25
John Montgomery,	1.05
Daniel Bock,	1.25
Joseph Utz,	1.25
William Forney,	1.00
F. P. Loehr,	1.00
John Shank,	1.00
Jacob Bock,	2.75
Samuel Greenwalt,	1.25
Isaac Brumbaugh,	1.25
Samuel N. Wine,	7.00
J. R. Dean,	1.25
John Corban,	1.25
Wm. T. Corban,	1.25
Wm. T. Chilcott,	1.25
D. M. Fogelsanger,	9.50
John Rogers,	1.25
Jonas Price,	1.25
Lizzie F. Miller,	1.25
John Nicholson,	1.25
Joshua Olinger,	3.75
Jacob Harley,	1.25

Miscellaneous.

DISCOVERIES AT JERUSALEM AND EPHESUS.

The London Times has a letter from Capt. Wilson, in which he communicates information of an important discovery made in the explorations at Jerusalem. He writes: "It will be remembered that Capt. Warren explored a remarkably rock hewn passage leading southward towards the Temple area from the subway at the Convent of the Sisters of Sion. Mr. Shick has found a continuation of this passage, or rather aqueduct as it is now proven to be, towards the north. In my notes to the Ordnance Survey of Jerusalem, I pointed out the possible existence of an aqueduct in this position, and should future researches prove this view to be correct, we may possibly identify the aqueduct with that made by Hezekiah when 'he stopped the upper watercourse (accurately, source of the waters) of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David' (2 Chron. xxxii. 30) It may also be the conduit of the 'Upper Pool,' mentioned in Isaiah and the Second Book of Kings. The existence of the aqueduct lately discovered is a strong argument in favor of the belief that the city of David occupied a portion of Mount Moriah, and it may possibly enable us to identify the Pool, or some source near it, as the Upper Gihon and Siloam as Gihon in the Valley."

Simultaneously a letter from Smyrna speaks of remarkable discoveries that have been made on the site of the Temple of Diana, at Ephesus. A large area of the Temple has been cleared, and various architectural marbles have been found. The diameter of the columns of the Temple being six feet, the scale of the architecture is, of course, colossal. Says the writer: "I gazed with peculiar interest on these relics of those famous columns on which St Paul must have gazed when he preached against them, but which local fanaticism, aided by local vested interests preserved in all their splendor for three centuries after his coming. The architecture of the Temple is Ionic"

PAINLESS EXTRACTION OF TEETH.

A physician in "Dental Cosmos," observes that he has for thirty years adopted the plan of obtunding or benumbing the extremities of the temporal nerves, for painless extraction of teeth from their sockets, with complete success, never having used or countenanced the exhibition of chloroform, ether, or nitrous oxide gas for this minor surgical operation. The benumbing or mechanical anesthesia, of the temporal branches of nerves, obtunds the whole nerve to a sufficient extent to allow the teeth to be removed, with sensation so slight that, if not attending a special surgical operation, it would scarcely be noticed by the patient. One of two modes may be adopted. By application of ice to the temples, which is somewhat distressing, the sensation of cold striking deeply. The other, to which he gives the preference, is done by an assistant with each of his middle fingers pressing with persistent firmness into the fossa or hollow behind the ridge or the temporal bone, which forms the external bone circle orbit of the eye. Pressure for one minute is all that is necessary. The practice is as simple as it is harmless, and leaves no after unpleasant sensation to annoy the patient. It is an instinctive method often adopted by people themselves, who press their temples with their fingers to relieve themselves temporarily of the acute paroxysms of nervous head ache. This temporary pressure, with sufficient force, is all that is required to remove teeth without the least pain.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer. D. D 12mo. fine edition, $1.. Plain edition,75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1 25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand book for Home Improvement; comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic economy, By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1 00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3.

AGENTS WANTED FOR

"JESUS."

By CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.
[illegible]

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy, post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy, post-paid,	75
Per Dozen, "	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	11 25
Arabesque plain,	1.00
Turkey morocco,	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,	5 50

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.

Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arraugement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. Ex. P. M.	Mail A. M.	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. Ex. A. M.	Mail P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20,	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	FishersSum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15 Le 7 30	9 48 10 00	Saxton	7 18 7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 31
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7 00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families. at $2 50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home. that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address

DANIEL KAGARICE.

New Enterprise,

Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

James Creek,

Huntingdon county, P

Narkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK PENNSYLVANIA, APRIL 2, 1872. NO. 14.

ESSAYS.

THERE IS NO DEATH.

BY SIR E. BULWER LYTTON.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore:
And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown,
They shine forever more.

There is no death. The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain or mellowed fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize,
And feed the hungry moss they bear;
The forest leaves drink daily life,
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
And flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through wintry hours,
The coming of May day.

There is no death! An Angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
And bears our best loved things away;
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate,
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad these scenes of sin and strife,
Sings now an everlasting song,
Around the tree of life.

Where'er he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in paradise.

Born unto that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them the same,
Except their sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there is no dead.

For the Pilgrim.

TO ELD. HENRY D. DAVY.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH

Because we cannot see the design of a thing, or its adaptation to the end contemplated, is no proof that both may not exhibit the wisdom and skill of an Infinite Mind, and the tenderness of an Infinite Love. If we had an intuitive apprehension of the counsel of God, or were in some way schooled in the knowledge of His high ends in us and by us, and were equally interested in the consummation of His glorious purposes, we would "rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer shame for His Name." Being only half in sympathy with God in our "high calling," we often spend more time, thought, and energy in attempts to reach God's ends by means more congenial to our low feelings and aspirations, than in efforts to take hold of the Crucified, and, with Him as such, rise into "the glorious liberty of the children of God." An underived, ever-existing Intelligence, incapable of accretion, who has from everlasting comprehended what would be in its most minute details, great as wise, and holy as great, is an idea which the finite mind can not compass. And yet without the assumption of this postulate, the entire scheme which the Bible represents as of Divine authorship falls into confusion, leaving us "of all men most miserable." All the images, illustrations, and events of the terrible recorded in the Scriptures, are so many exhibitions of the Divine holiness. The twofold object of all the proceedings of Jehovah is to reveal His Infinite purity and rectitude, and our unfitness to enter His presence or enjoy His fellowship. And in the incarnation and crucifixion of His Son, He has not only made this revelation,—not only flashed out of the Holy of Holies "the glory that excelleth," thereby showing more clearly the hideous nature and fearful demerit of sin—but He thrust the sword of Justice through His own Heart of Eternal Love in His Only Begotten, so that He can "be just AND the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." In Him, as "God manifest in the flesh," the law was fulfilled, righteousness wrought, and sin expiated, so that He could not only remit the penalty due to our transgressions and rectify the bad quality of our being under them, but new-character us by His indwelling, thus making us eternally great in community of life and glory with Him. It is not to be imagined that any of us find any fault, either theoretically or practically, with the manna of God's love as it relates to the work of Christ as our Sin-Bearer; while it may be doubted whether there is one who has not demurred, in some form, against the wisdom, goodness, and love of God, in the methods He adopts in bringing us into the possession of all the riches of grace and heights of glory of which the CROSS is the exponent.

"He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" Although we are not to look at the things which are seen and temporal, to the exclusion or depreciation of things unseen and eternal; "the world," "things present," "life and death," "are ours in Christ Jesus," no less than "things to come," 1 Cor. 3: 22, 23. Christ is "a Name above every name," "for there is none other Name under Heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," and "by Him all things consist." Phil. 2: 9. Acts 4: 12. Col. 1: 17. As Jesus Christ is the Alpha and Omega, the Originator and Executor of Redemption, the Author and Finisher of faith, "it became Him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." And the reason given for this Divine Philosophy is this: "for both He that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; FOR WHICH CAUSE He is not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2: 10, 11. We are "joint heirs with Christ," to share the glory and beatitude of His exaltation, "if so be that we suffer with Him." Rom. 8: 17. And this "fellowship of His sufferings" we are to regard as the very highest attainment of character, as bringing us into conformity with Christ at a point where God gets full satisfaction for all the evil of sin, and where we are set into the liberty of unsinned and unsinning subjects. Phil. 3: 10. Where God was liberated from the necessity of punishing, we are set free from the danger of punishment. Christ's whole life had a cross in it by anticipation. His death was the proper culmination of such a life. We begin our regenerated being where He left off; and as His crucifixion reached over his entire career retrospectively, so must ours prospectively. So far as the active and outward go, our native resources are well nigh sufficient; but to suffer well, to be a "companion in tribulation" with Jesus, requires a kind of life into which the best type of humanity could never be developed, even if God would allow it His own Eternity in which to cultivate its powers. To make us "partakers of the Divine Nature" is the one august object of Jehovah in all His multiform dealings with us; and without violent wrenching of our flesh-begotten, sense-loving, world-hankering, time-serving, self-worshipping nature, we could no more be trained into affinity with the purity and grandeur and glory which "accompany salvation," than Christ could have carried back with Him into the archives of Heaven a titlesdeed for His elect without "strong crying and tears," agony, blood and death. If He suffered the unmitigated strokes of God's wrath to make our salvation possible, how submissively, yea, thankfully, should we receive the stripes of His love to "compel" us into community of character and joy with Him. To the spiritually-illumined mind there is ever "a door opened in Heaven, and the trumpet voice of God is ever calling us to "come up hither." In the True Ark we find the "sure Word" to direct us, the sweet, undecaying manna of Love to ravish us with its crumbs of foretaste and allure us to fullness of bliss, and the Ever-budding Rod to "scourge" us "for our profit," and hasten our assimilation to the "holiness without which no man shall see the Lord."

"If we endure chastening, God dealeth with us as with sons." We easily "forget the exhortation which speaketh unto us as unto children, my son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord nor faint when thou are rebuked of Him," and must needs be reminded, not only of the necessity of discipline, but of its intent. We miss not only a great lesson but a great blessing by so chafing under our affliction as to lose or forbid the thanking disposition in suffering. To be thankful in tribulation is much, but to discern in it the "good pleasure of an All-wise and Loving Father so as to be thankful for tribulation is to make room in our nature for as strong a tide of "the peace of God" as our present constitution will admit. We do not reach the core of christian joy till we are so centered in Emmanuel as to be able to drink the bitterest cup with an unresisting absorption of will into the Divine. There will be a shadow on the heart until we stand with "the angel in the sun"—so bathed in the light of the Godman, so revolved and propelled in our orbits by the magnetism of His Love, that it may be said of us in the highest sense, "as He is, so are we in this world." Ever at his feet in service and submission, ever on His bosom in devotion and self-sacrifice, "He in us and we in Him," our waking thoughts all love, our dreams revelations of coming glory, our whole life forming itself into the luminous letters that compose the dear Name of our Beloved, we go "on our way rejoicing," "singing the Lord's song in a strange land," and harping His praise "by the rivers of Babylon." Christ means that the pean in Rom. 8: 32–39, be set to music in every believer's life. It is the Cardiphonia of faith and love. "It is God that justifieth" is the keynote, of which "no condemnation" and "no separation"—the notes with which the song opens and closes—are the everlasting echoes.

In your present visitation of suffering, and the consequent failure to meet your engagements, or your expectations in the way of active duty, you have opportunity to study the efficiency of patience in witnessing to the power of the Cross, and the beauty and sublimity of a Christ-invested, Christ-pulsating, Christ-crowning life.

I humbly trust the "Bishop and Shepherd of souls" will enable you to take your place "in the great congregation" on the day of Pentecost; but if it is His will to keep you in the furnace, and continue the refining process, you can, and I am sure you will, "tremble for the ark of God," if you cannot follow it into "the camp of Israel." The God of Elijah still liveth, still loveth. "Cherith" is a hidden, lonely spot, but it is there that we are fed with meat which the world knows not of. The elect are a "peculiar people," and must expect peculiar treatment. "Chosen" in the fire, kept in the fire, "baptized with fire," "saved, yet so as by fire," driven to the New Jerusalem in a "chariot of fire," we will eternally "stand on a sea of glass mingled with fire," singing "the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints

Union Deposit, Pa.

HAVE PITY.

Woman, do not scorn the unfortunate of your sex. Remember that instincts and characteristics do not materially differ in all classes of women. Conditions mould the life of every person, and on the brow of the lowest, most debased woman, God has placed a crown of womanhood which, though tarnished and blackened now, will somewhere in the eternal future be cleansed, purified, and shining bright We can each lend an influence more than we do, to brighten and not to tarnish these jeweled crowns.

EVIL COMMUNICATIONS.

"Be not deceived, evil communications corrupt good manners." 1 Cor. 15: 33.

By evil communications the apostle means society and associates, and by good manners he means good habits and principles; while the word corrupt we cannot fail to understand. It means to change from a sound to a putrid state, to deprave, to change from good to bad, to defile, polute &c. Hence the apostle employs this word to warn those he addressed directly, and us, upon whom the end of the world has come, indirectly, yet no less positively, and we do well to heed the warning.

The principle, the apostle designs to inculcate, is understood by all observing minds, as the saying goes, "like begets like," and that the stronger overrules the weaker is known to us all. Therefore we should not only know how to choose our own associates, but also, who are fit companions for Christian children to associate with, for the parent must know, and choose his child's society before the child is capable to discern between the vile and the good. Grace is not an innate principle of our nature, while the lust of the flesh and eye, with all its folly and vanity is; hence the parent who watches with vigilent care and christian anxiety over the early training of his child, living before it in godly fear, ordering his conversation by the Gospel, so as to speak no guile, admonishing and instructing them in the ways of truth, virtue, purity, and holiness, bedewing the couch with tears, and strong crying to God in prayer in their behalf, will be brought to grief and sorrow when the time comes on for their children to go only to the common school in the neighborhood, to find that evil associates will corrupt all the good principles they so earnestly labored to inculcate. It is a fact to be mourned and wept over, that for ever parent who cares for the moral and religious training of his children, there are ten who do not. These later are left to grow up in natures' ways, and never have the love and fear of God set before them.

The christian mother who has so anxiously kneeled with her children at their bedside, whom she had trained not to lay themselves down to sleep without prayer, praise, and thanksgiving to God, will be pained and grieved at heart to learn that these untrained neighbors, and perhaps brethrens' children, becoming their childrens associates, will soon corrupt their good principles. The carnal mind, with all its enmity against God, and disobedience to his law, with all her lust and pride, lies dormant in the well trained child, but coming in contact, and associating with those who are not brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, their influence will awaken and arouse up the latent evil nature in the other, and all the good principles become corrupted. This is an evil patent to observing minds, and very alarming to many sincere Christians.—The question may well be asked, what is to be done? I can only answer, and advise that humble Christian parent, brethren and sisters enlarge their field of labor, usefulness, and influence. That the children who are, and will be associates and companions for Christian parents children, and finally become husbands for their daughters, and wives for their sons, ought to be brought up under a moral and christian training, all will and do admit, but how to reach them is a problem not so easily solved. If all parents would heed the apostolic injunction, and attend to their christian duties at home properly, there would be no difficulty, but as already said, where one does this, there are at least ten or twenty who do not, and hence the difficulty. The uneducated in humble morality, are largely in the majority. They flood our land with fashion and pride, and the Christian parents hear the sad and doleful murmur, must we only, be odd.

To make the fountain head of this stream of corruption pure and good, is what I am writing for. I know that humble, sincere, and good brethren may, and do honestly differ with me, yet the Sabbath School is the only medium I can see by which the brethren can reach any child outside of their immediate family circle. In the Sabbath School the children of all will meet you, and hear in the capacity of teacher, you can and may approach them on any subject of moral truth and religion and talk to them as you do to your own children at home. There is a peculiarity in Sabbath School children that we do well to observe, namely, they will form an attachment to their teacher, and the more humble and meak the teacher is, and the more he will talk with them, the more will his class love him.—Another feature in Sabbath School children is, as a general thing, they are very fond of reading the books their teachers promise them during the week. If any one will doubt these facts, let him make trial and see. Then does it not seem reasonable to all, that a corps of humble zealous teachers, with books and tracts of the brethren's own getting up, setting forth the true principles of Christianity, something might be done to counteract the mighty current of evil which corrupts the better training of at least a majority of our children?

It is true, we have lost at least one hundred years in our very active state of donothing, but thank God that some of our brethren and sisters are beginning to see and feel what we have lost, and are trying, at least to make an effort to recover some of it. These I wish to encourage in the good work. It is to be hoped that our Press will soon furnish you with books and tracts in which the truth is set forth in its clearest light, couched in such language that children can understand and comprehend it. The innocent child will read these as readily as those of a spurious character, and at the next meeting you will have an opportunity to question them in reference to what they read, &c., and in this way truth and sound principles will get the ascendency, and its influence will correct bad habits, as evil now corrupts good ones.

Success depends upon the manner, zeal, and disposition of the teacher. If the teacher has no zeal he need not expect his class to be zealous. Is the teacher proud, he need not look for humility and meekness in his class. The object is to have the teacher right and make the class like him. It is not enough to teach the child to read and commit Scripture to memory, but he must admonish and instruct his class in truth and holiness; he must tell them what is bad, and forbid them to do it. He must instruct their understanding, and by figures of illustration, show them the effect of evil. These figures you may draw from your own observation if you are of an observing mind; if not, illustrate the lesson so your class will understand it. Suppose the subject which heads this article were the governing principles of the lesson, and to show your class how evil will corrupt good, you could with profit use a figure like this:

"One day Robert's father saw him playing with some boys who were rude and and unmannerly. He had observed for some time a change for the worse in his son, and now he knew the cause. He was very sorry, but said nothing to Robert at the time. In the evening he brought from the garden six beautiful, rosy-cheeked apples, put them on a plate, and presented them to Robert. He was much pleased at his father's kindness, and thanked him. You must lay them aside for a few days that they may become mellow, said his father. And Robert cheerfully placed the plate with the apples in his mother's storeroom. Just as he was putting them aside, his father laid on the plate a seventh apple, which was quite rotten, and desired him to allow them to remain there.

Eight days after he asked his son to open the door and take out the apples, but what a sight presents itself! The six apples which had been so sound and rosy-cheeked were now quite rotten, and emitted a bad oder through the room.

Oh, papa! cried he, did I not tell you often that the rotten apple would spoil the good ones? yet you would not listen to me.

My boy, said his father, have I not told you often that the company of bad children will make you bad, yet you do not listen to me. See in the condition of the apples that which will happen to you if you keep company with wicked boys.

Robert did not forget the lesson. He remembered the rotten apples, and kept apart from the rude sports of his former playmates."

With similar figures of illustrations, an active, zealous Sabbath school teacher can instruct, and enlighten the understanding of the children in his charge to comprehend how "evil communications will corrupt good manners." But should he fail, he can thank God that he tried, and failed on the side of effort.

D. P. SAYLER.

LIFE'S BATTLES.

That our life is one of conflicts is evident. There are many ups and downs, many things to encounter. In infancy already the battle commences. When the child has some particular usage, if that is changed, we notice the outcroppings of anger; it battles, and perhaps knows not what for, and many times when there is no apparent cause. As it grows older there are still conflicts, but manifest themselves in different ways. They may receive little insults,—and it is said self protection is the first law of nature,—and a battle is the result. So little insults and little battles cross the pathway of life. Time rolls on, the youth arrives at that state when it is possible for him to discern good from evil; he reads the blessed Book of God, and finds there a Savior ready to save him from his sins. He also finds that there is an enemy, the adversary of souls. The Savior calls him tenderly saying, "Come." The adversary opposes, and thus the battle goes on, the contest is sharp. He would like to be a Christian, because Jesus has said, "He that cometh unto Me. I will in no wise cast out." But how can I be a Christian? If any one insults me I dare not strike him, for Jesus said if they smite thee on the one cheek, turn the other, and He also said pray for your enemies, and I can not do that. The Scripture teaches "Vengeance is Mine, I will repay said the Lord," but if I take the insults the people will call me a coward and laugh at me. The battle still goes on I know I ought to do better, but perhaps there is time for me yet, although my friend, and my neighbor has been called suddenly away, I still think God will spare me awhile yet. I know I ought to do better, but then I could not dress as gay as others do, I could not go to shows, exhibitions, parties, dances, &, in short I could not have any pleasure. If I were to dress plain, and pray, and engage in religious exercises the people would laugh at me. But I know the Scriptures say "Come out from among them and be ye separate." The battle still goes on, and how many does satan gain the victory over, until they are old and perhaps never give their hearts to God. Perhaps they thought to have liberty in business, cheat a little if needs be, in order to obtain a bargain, or, perhaps some worldly honor is at stake; it may be an honored position in life is sought for, perhaps politics are the ruling element or the gratifying of carnal desires. Such are the battles of life.

Now who will we serve, God or satan? But with many the conflict does not stop here. A partial victory over satan may be gained. We may have faith in the Savior, we may repent, and may be baptized for the remission of sins, which is all right, but the warfare still goes on. We are taken up into the mountain and are shown the beautiful things of the world. Satan promises anything that is pleasing to the eye; all the pleasures of life, to go to fairs, picnics &, it is no harm, and even if a circus come along, you may enjoy it too, and how many accept his word and do not detect his artfulness until it is too late. Well might the poet say:

"O, watch, and fight, and pray;
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore.

Ne'er think the victory won
Nor lay thine armor down;
Thy arduous work will not be done
Till thou obtain thy crown."

D. M. FOGLESANGER.

Shippensburg, Pa.

A LESSON ON HUMILITY.—A farmer took his son into a wheat field in harvest-time. "See fathes," exclaimed the boy, "how straight those stems hold up their heads! They must be the best ones. Those that hang their heads down, I am sure, cannot be good for much." The farmer plucked a stalk of each kind, and said, "See here, my child! This stalk that stood so straight, is light-headed, and almost good for nothing, while that that hung its head so modestly, is full of precious grain."

For the Pilgrim.

THE BARREN FIG TREE.

"A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree and find none; cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground." Luke 13: 6, 7.

By referring to the fifth chapter of Isaiah, we find that he, prophetically describes this vineyard; and in that description he tells us that the vineyard was the "house of Israel and the men of Judah his pleasant plant." Hence we conclude that the Savior in the parable under consideration, had a direct allusion to the Church under the figure of a vineyard, and to the members under the figure of a fig tree.

And now, brethren and sisters, among the many who have been planted in the Church of Christ, who among us personates the barren fig tree? Who among us are adorned with the garb of a professed follower of the meek and lowly Lamb, as the fig tree was "with leaves only"? Who among us have never once borne the legitimate fruit of a fig tree. Who of us are occupying the precarious, the dangerous position of that fig tree, and may at any time have executed upon us the order, "cut it down." Who among us deserve having the language applied to us, "why cumbereth it the ground"?

O, fellow pilgrims, are there any of us who are only an encumbrance, on the ground we occupy in the Church? Are there any who, by a want of zeal in our Master's cause, by a lack of conformity to the rules of the Church, by not attending, and assisting according to the talent given us, in the public worship of our God, by failing to perform all the duties enjoined upon us by the Lord of the vineyard; jeopardizing our position in the Church militant and our prospect for a membership in the Church triumphant.

We learn by the reading of the parable, that there was one tree in the vineyard that did not bear fruit, and from this we infer that there may be at least one in the Church in the same predicament. And we find that notwithstanding the lord visited the tree for three years without finding fruit, a time did come in which his kind forbearance ceased, and he gave forth the stern but just command, "Cut it down: why cumbereth it the ground?" Then O, how important, how necessary, that we all examine our own selves to see whether we are to-day in the condition of the barren fig tree, for

"There is a time, we know not when,
A place, we know not where," beyond which, if a mortal venture he will die, and perhaps we may be dangerously near that point. Then let us all try, and let us pray God, for Jesus sake, to help us bring forth good fruit here on earth that will ripen in eternity.

MARTIN J. MCCLURE.

Lower Fall Creek, Ind.

INSTRUCTIONS.

The doctrine and practice of all religious teachers should be tried by the Word of God. If they agree with this they should be received, and if not should be rejected. Hence the right and the duty of all men to be acquainted with the Word of God so they may rightly judge. Religious teachers who do not confess that Christ took upon Him human nature, and became the propitiation for the sins of men, are not of God.—1. John, 2: 2. False teachers proclaim doctrines which are more agreeable to worldly men than the doctrines of the Bible, and flatter them with hopes of Heaven, though they love their sins. Those who love their sins follow them, while those who hate them embrace the doctrine and follow the precepts of the Bible. The most wonderful exhibition of the love of God, was the gift of His Son to be the propitiation for the sins of the world. And the right apprehension and cordial reception of this truth is the most powerful means of leading men to love God and manifest it in love to men. Loving God and good men unites the soul to Him in a most intimate, endearing, elevated, ennobling and blissful union. The joy of which even in its foretaste on earth, is often unspeakable and full of glory. —1 Peter, 1: 8. The gift of the Savior and the way of life which He has opened, the gift of the Holy Spirit, the preaching of the Gospel and all the means of grace, the regeneration of men, their sanctification and hope of glory, their perseverance in holiness and their eternal life, are all the fruits and manifestations of the Infinite and eternal love of God, and will call forth from all the Redeemed the most exalted praises to God and the Lamb.

JACOB PYSELL.

Accident, Md.

PLAIN ATTIRE AT CHURCH.

It would lessen the burden of many who find it hard to maintain their place in society.

It would lessen the force of the temptations which often lead men to depart from honor and honesty for dispaly.

If there was less strife in dress at church, people in moderate circumstances would be more likely to attend, and more brotherly love would be manifested.

Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by the removal of many wandering thoughts.

It would enable all classes of people to attend church with a better motive.

It would lessen on the part of the rich, the temptation to vanity.

It would lessen on the part of the poor, the temptation to be envious and malicious.

Herald of Truth.

LABORING.

1. Tim. 4:10.

Having been silent for some time, I have now thought proper to take up the silent tongue to speak to my brethren and sisters in the Lord once more. I have chosen for my subject, laboring—a term which is familiar to the human family as far as the light of revelation has penetrated. How long man lived and enjoyed uninterrupted rest and pleasure we are not able to state, but that there was a space of time in which man could eat and drink, and let his soul delight itself, we firmly believe. Happy Adam then knew no sorrow, pain, or any wish; disaster and failure caused no vexation of spirit, and laboring was with him yet a thing of the future. No labor! no, nothing to do but to eat of the garden and live. The fatness of the earth could be gathered without toil, provender had not to be provided for the beasts of the field, by man, neither grain for the fowls of the air; but all came forth spontaneously for their wants. But Oh! a sad occurrence disturbs the peace and pleasure of man. Lust is conceived, and it brings forth sin, and sin brought forth the displeasure of Jehovah, for which He drove man from His lovely Eden, and cursed the earth for his sake. "Cursed is the ground for thy sake: in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat of the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread 'till thou return unto the ground, for out of it thou wast taken."—Gen. 3:17-19. Here, we have the origin of labor, in the command of God, as well as the necessity of the case demanded. Labor is of different kinds. We shall look at it in a threefold light, in a way which seems to be progressive, natural and easy to be understood.

1st. Physical Labor. Hand labor seemes to be the first labor that man was commanded to perform. Paul in writing to his Ephesian brethren seems to show forth physical labor in its true color. "Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good."—Eph., 4:28. Good! yes, good for his sustenance in health and strength, it is that which gives animation and life to the body, and fits it to enjoy at intervals, the sweetness of rest. The good that might be accomplished by man, if he would obey Heaven's law, and work a little more with his hands 'the thing which is good,' is incalculable. How many are idling their precious moments away waiting for something to turn up, so that they may escape the drudgery of life, and keep their pretty hands from getting soiled. It is not astonishing to the honest laborer, that our jails and almshouses are being filled to overflowing when he goes to the town or village on business, and sees the corners of the streets and stores crowded with men and boys who seem to have no object in view, nor no end to gain, higher than the Israelites, who sat down to eat and rose up to play, and there they are day after day, evening after evening, idling away their time in jesting and joking—the thing which is evil. Brethren, let us stand aloof from such groups, that we be not condemned with them in their ungodliness. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

2d. Mental Labor. By this we mean a full and complete use of all the intellectual powers of the mind. There is no faculty of the mind which God has given us, that should not be employed. No wonder that stagnation takes place with many of the minds of men. They may have labored long and faithfully by the strength of the arm, but never have brought into use the powerful levers of the mind. Again, some will very readily admit that it is highly necessary to use our faculties in acquiring dollars and cents, but beyond this it is of little utility. Not willing that they or any one else should labor mentally, in order to advance their spiritual condition, and show themselves workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Brethren, I wish to present a thought here. I feel like urging the necessity of brethren, and especially the ministering brethren laboring with the mind a little more, if the hand labor should somewhat diminish; for, the mind is worth more than the body. Some have an idea of this kind: that a man should labor physically hard, six days, and the seventh, attend church and deliver an excellent sermon—one that shall be able to convince the gainsayer, and burst the stony heart that it may be dissolved in the fountain of life. And because they are so often disappointed, the poor humble hard working brother, is looked down upon in disgust, shunned in the market places, and evil spoken of in the world.

There are those also in the ministry who get discouraged with themselves. They think because they cannot speak so fluently, deliver their ideas in as concise and pointed a manner as some of their colaborers, that they are not in their proper places. This I am not willing to admit in this article, and by this also you will perceive that I don't hold genius above labor.

Now, dear brethren whom this may concern, if you disagree with me on this point of mental labor, just for your own satisfaction, if not for your own good, inquire of those whom you think an Apollos by what method they have succeeded in successfully preaching the word of the Lord. As far as my own investigation has been carried I have found that those who preach best are the very ones who perform the most mental labor. The secret of the whole matter seems to be, that we are just what we make ourselves. First, let us teach ourselves before we attempt to teach others, let us be fully equipped, having on the whole armor, when we go out to meet the enemy, laying every hindrance aside, neither delay nor neglect our preparation, but when we know that we have a work to perform, let us go forth prepared for that work, not having the understanding darkened, but like the Jews of "Berea, who were more noble than those of Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily." Acts 17:11.

JOHN ZUCK.

[To be continued.]

COME BOLDLY.

What encouragement there is to come boldly to a throne of grace! Whatever thy state may be, thou needest not hold off. Though thy sins be as scarlet, if thou come to Christ, they shall be made "white as wool." The greatest of sinners are invited. Can any sin be so great as to overtop the value of Christ's blood? Oh! there is not so much vileness and wretchedness in the sinful heart of man, as there is grace and goodness and virtue in Christ. There is no disease so bad that He cannot cure. Let me be as bad as I can be, there is no reason out of the Word of God, why I should not come to Christ for salvation. He puts none back. His proclamation is,—"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, and without price." "Whosoever will, let him come." What would'st thou have more? The invitation cannot be plainer. If then thou art not saved, it is plain thou hast no will for salvation, for if thou hast a will, thou hast a warrant.

Say not, "I would come, if I had so much humiliation and so much faith," for that were to make a bargain with Christ. If God were to say, "You must love me, and I will pardon you," that were an exchange, not a free gift. Away with such a thought! "Whosoever will, let him come." Christ keeps open house. Whosoever comes to him, He will not shut out. If thou hast a heart to come to Him, He has a willing heart to receive you. As it was with the prodigal son, his father does not wait 'till he comes to him, but he runs to meet him. So God is swift to have mercy upon us, though we come slowly towards Him. However great the bulk and burden of thy sins, thou needest not be discouraged. All ye that are heavy laden, and feel the burden of sins, are invited by Christ. Let not satan, then, cheat thee out of the comfort of this word. If Christ would make thy sins as the latch to open the door, and let Himself in, take care that thou dost not make them a bolt to shut him out. Let thy wound be ever so great, thou hast a warrant to come to be cured. When a blind Bartimeus heard the word, "Lo! Jesus calleth thee," he flung aside his garments, and came to Him. So let nothing keep thee back. Haste, then, to this city of refuge, and thou shalt be safe.

But God doth not only give thee leave to come, He commands thee to come. "And his is the commandment that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ." 1 John 3, 23. If a man should say, "May I love my neighbor?" would you not think him a fool? He is commanded to do so. So if a soul say to me, "May I trust in Jesus?" I reply, thou art commanded to do so. The same commandment that bids thee love thy brother, bids thee believe in Him, and more, it is said, "He that believeth not, shall be damned."

As the greatest gift doth not enrich a man, unless he accepts and receives it, so God's gift of His Son will be no benefit to us if we will not receive Him. God's goodness will but turn to our greater condemnation. If we refuse Christ, and will not be saved, then wrath must abide on us.

But how are we to receive Him? By faith—by simple trust in Him. Salvation is a free gift to sinners who trust in Jesus. There is no condition for receiving salvation, but an empty hand to receive Christ. But, to be saved, Christ must be ours. If a man would give something to a beggar, the beggar must reach out his hand to receive it.

Faith is the empty hand that fills itself with Christ. If a man were drowning, and a cable were cast to him, and he laid hold of it, he would be drawn safe to shore. But if he lay hold of the cable, he must let go all other holds. So a man must let go all other holds, and lay fast hold of Jesus Christ, otherwise he cannot be saved.—The Christian.

OUR WEAPONS.

No Christian ever wins a victory by using the weapons of his foes. They who fight the devil with fire will find in the end that he is more at home in the conflict than they are. No greater mistake can be made than that of those who imagine that they shall gain any desirable end by using satanic methods to fight the battles of the Lord. When we give a man "as good as he sends," we simply reduce ourselves to his level, and make ourselves his equals. No gentleman can afford to dispute with a blackguard. Let him say what words he pleases, any barroom loafer can out-do him in reproaches, and in insults—can say to him things which he dares not hurl back again. Michael contended with the the devil; but he durst not bring a railing accusation against him.—Doubtless he knew that in railing he was no match for the devil; and had he commenced to rail, he would soon have been worsted in the contest.

Often, in controversy, persons think that by saying sharp, smart, and insulting things, they have gained their point. No mistake can be greater. Christ's victories are not won by witticisms and taunts, but by solid truths and living testimonies. Dr. Scudder, the East Indian missionary, relates the following:

"A Hindo, on one occasion, said to a missionary: 'Reviling our gods, criticising our Shastras, and ridiculing our ritual, will accomplish nothing; but the story which you tell of Him who lived, and pitied, and came and taught, and suffered, and died, and rose again—that story, sir, will overthrow our temples, destroy our ritual, abolish our Shastras, and extinguish our gods."

In this sign conquer. Overcome by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of your testimony. Leave satan his weapons—take unto yourselves the whole armor of God. And remember that "the sword of the Spirit" is the only offensive weapon found in the gospel armory. But "there is no sword like that." It has hewn the path of victory before the war-worn church—and as yet it has lost none of its edge or power. Let us use that weapon. Let us tell to the dying that message of eternal life. Let us proclaim the gospel; assured that our labor will not be in vain.

"I love to tell the story
Of unseen things above;
Of Jesus, and his glory,
Of Jesus, and his love."

The Christian.

Youth's Department.

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.

Below we give the result of the investigation of our young readers. Though the reported number is small, yet we have no doubt but what many of our young readers have found the "New Commandment," and you may never forget it, as it is the topmost round in the ladder of moral law, and as it is the words of Him who said; "of such is the Kingdom," its observance will always bring a glorious reward.

Since the "New Commandment" is so easily obeyed, and always results in such pleasant and happy results, may we not hope that all of our young readers will try and observe it?

CLEBO GORDA, ILL., }
March 18th '72 }

Dear Pilgrim: I have read in your pages yesterday, and there read about the ten commandments and you have stated that the young Pilgrim readers should try and hunt up the "Eleventh Commandment." I think that I have found it. It is in the Book of John, 13:34. "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

Yours Truly.
E. S. GROFF.

FAYETTEVILLE, W. Va.

What might be called the Eleventh Commandment as given by the Scriptures, "a new Commandment I give," will be found in the 13th., chap. of John, and 34th. verse.

WM. H. FLORY.

URBANA, ILL. }
March 14th '72 }

Dear Editors: My father and mother, who are both members of the church, take the PILGRIM, and I love to read it, and am happy when it comes to us. I noticed that you wanted the children to write to you, and tell you what the "Eleventh Commandment" is. As I am but of twelve summers, I thought that I was one of the number, and will tell you what I think of it. We know that "Ten Commandments" were given, and after this, in John 13:34, Jesus says: "A new commandment I give you that ye love one another." Now this, I think, is the Eleventh Commandment, and it is such a good one. If we all love one another we will never quarrel, but live in peace.

Please tell me, am I right?

LILLIE J. ROE.

Dear Pilgrim: I am young, but I will try and write a few lines, if you think it worthy you can publish it, if not lay it by. You wanted to know how many of your young readers could tell you what the "Eleventh Commandment" is. I, for one will give you what I think it is. "That you love one another," because Jesus says; "That a new commandment I give unto you that you love one another, as I have loved you." John 13th. chap., and 34th. verse, and in the 15th. chap., 12, 13, 14, it reads thus: "This is my commandment that you love one another as I have loved you, greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends, ye are my friends if you do whatsoever I command you." And in Ephesians, the 5th. chapter and 2nd. verse we read thus; "And walk in love as Christ also hath loved us and hath given himself for us an offering and sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling Savour.

Dear readers, ought we not love God for the unmerited favors toward us, seeing he commended His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us? Ought we not show our love toward sinners by kind words and by our good deeds, and tell them how much Jesus has done, and suffered for them? Our words and actions can do a great deal of good.

M. J. BAILEY.

Mayview, Ill.

TRY.

A gentleman traveling in the northern part of Ireland, heard the voices of children, and paused to listen.

Finding the sounds proceeded from a small building used as a schoolhouse, he drew near; and, as the door was open, he entered, and listened to the words the boys were spelling.

One little fellow stood apart, looking sad and despirited.

"Why does that boy stand there?" asked the gentleman.

"Oh, he is good for nothing!" replied the teacher. "There's nothing in him. I can make nothing of him. He is the most stupid boy in school."

The gentleman was surprised at this answer. He saw that the teacher was stern and rough, that the younger and more timid boys were nearly crushed. He said a few kind words to them; then, placing his hand on the noble brow of the little fellow who stood apart, he said, "One of these days you may be a fine scholar. Don't give up, but TRY, my boy; TRY."

The soul of the boy was aroused. His dormant intellect awoke. A new purpose was formed. From that hour he became studious, and ambitious to excel. And he did become a fine scholar, and the author of a well known commentary on the Bible; a great and good man, beloved and honored. It was Dr. Adam Clark. The secret of his success is worth knowing! "Don't give up: but try, my boy; try."

THREE SIEVES.—Before we allow ourselves to find fault with any person behind his back, we should ask ourselves—1. Is it true? 2. is it kind? 3. Is it necessary?

To be at once in any great degree loved and praised is truly rare.

The follies of youth become the vices of manhood and the disgrace of old age.

WHOEVER wishes the welfare of others has already advanced towards securing his own.

THE world would be more happy if persons gave up more time to an intercourse of friendship.

Corrspondence.

The following letter was sent us, accompanied with the privilege of publishing or making such extracts from it as we might think proper, but as the subject is one of great importance we give it verbatim, hoping that those who may think differently from the views expressed will exercise that charity which thinketh no evil. It is generally admitted that our children should have facilities for obtaining a good common education, but where to get it and when to stop, is the great question. We do not intend to dictate for others, but if we had children to send to school we would certainly prefer to have them placed under the influence of the Brethren. To prefer sectarian and worldly schools to that of the Brethren stigmatizes both, our character and our religious principles.

BOURBON IND. }
March 4th. '72 }

ELD. D. KELLER.

Dear Brother in Christ Jesus: My heartfelt greeting in love to you and your wife and children, especially that daughter of yours with whom I formed a little acquaintance at A. M. I hope and trust that you are all well, in body and mind, enjoying the sweet fellowship of Jesus, the friend of sinners and His saints, the Children of God after having escaped the pollutions of this world, and been placed upon the Rock of eternal ages, and having tasted the sweets of the holy religion of our Lord and Savior Amen.

Knowing the great anxiety that parents feel for their children, that they may be kept safe from the contaminating influences of this wicked world and be made useful to society and a solace to our old age, I thought of dropping a few lines to you, informing you of the welfare of your son Samuel, here in Bourbon.

I came here several weeks ago to visit the school, and found it in good order, though not very large, since many had left to teach in the country and some few went to Warsaw School. Samuel, however, remained and is doing exceedingly well in his studies and has gained for himself a good reputation, is beloved and highly esteemed by all that know him, and is an honor to his profession. Would to God that a large number of our brethren's children could be sent here and learn to gain and sustain such a character, it would certainly redound the glory of God in recommending this Institution of learning to thousands of our fellow men, and become a means of great good to the rising generation,

You are safe to recommend this School to all. There are now arrangements made that all can be boarded under the oversight of Brethren, as well as the teaching.

As regards the town of Bourbon, it doth not impress one's mind favorably at first sight, especially to people from the East, for it looks too low and unimposing. There are no palaces and costly buildings, but there is no aristocracy nor high-sounding society, most all the people are mechanics and hard-working men and women, with a proper proportion of dealers in all kinds of merchandise. The three or four weeks that I have been going in and of this place I have not heard as much improper language, nor seen as much improper conduct as I have oftentimes witnessed in half an hour in other towns of its size. It is true the people are not angels yet, but there is a possibility, if not a probability, that they may become saints.

Their Sunday Schools are well attended, and there seems to be a lively interest taken by old and young. It must be admitted however that like in all our countries there are too many gewgaws exhibited on the female side, which is not appreciated by sensible persons for it is a departure from the direct command of the Apostle, and hath a very pernicious effect keeping the poorer classes of society from schools and churches, and thereby loosing the opportunities and blessings of the Gospel, which, in its possession, makes men good and happy.

Having been spoken to by men of high standing outside of our fraternity, as well as of numbers of our fraternity, who have the welfare of the rising generation at heart, on the above subject, I feel it my duty to impress the matter on all our brethren and sisters too, that they by all means send their children in modest apparel, if they send at all to the Institution of learning and let them form a nucleus, or centre of attraction. Why may not we have a power of directing the public mind to simplicity as well as the City of Paris in directing the same to extravagance and folly.

I am glad to be able to tell you that all those of our brethren who visited our school here at B., though they came with more or less prejudice, went away well pleased and ready to advocate its propriety and usefulness. Among those who visited lately, was our beloved brother John Wise, from Washington Co, Pa., and when his mind became disabused of the false reports that are in circulation, and learning the basis upon which the School is established, he was willing to accept a general agency to work for the permanency of the same in selling scholarships and receiving donations to establish a fund, so that poor children of our own fraternity can be taught here free gratis.

All that seems to be wanting now, is either to build an addition to the College building, or a building separate for the boarding of the Students, so that all the Students would be entirely under the oversight and control of the faculty. There are a number of worthy young brethren that ought to attend the spring term here to qualify themselves fully to take positions as teachers. I firmly believe that the Institution will be a success, and if so, one Institution will not be sufficient for it is not only for one fraternity, but many others will avail themselves of a place for their children where good morality, simplicity and Christian virtues are not only taught but practiced and examplified. It seems to me that nothing good will prosper better than when it meets opposition, for it is then only that its merits or demerits are brought to light, and cognizance is taken thereof. The rupture (if I may so call it) that took place about S. College was brought about by a misunderstanding, and from what I have learned since I am here in Bourbon, most of the people would be pleased to see O. W. Miller come back and take his position in S. C. He had gained a good reputation in the short time he was here, among all the classes of people. And since the brethren of Northern Indiana can not drop Salem College honorably, and there is even no call or need for the same, every exertion should be used by all who desire to have such an Institution; and as nobody is compelled to support the same that is not in favor of it, they should use forbearance until they really saw an evil coming of the same, for it is never the part of wisdom to condemn before a criminal is convicted.

F. P. LOEHR.

MAHOMET, Ill.,
March, 18th, '72.

Dear Brethren: The PILGRIM now comes regularly and we are well pleased with its contents. As we live somewhat isolated from the Brethren and have not the privilege of meeting with the people of God as often as we would like, we the more appreciate the PILGRIM, as we find many good things in it that are calculated to make us more cheerful and happy in our isolated condition.

We hope the day is not far distant when the Church will see the necessity of supplying the wants of the brethren and sisters who live on the outskirts of the brotherhood. How many places they are calling us to come and preach that blessed word to them, which they love above every other object in this life? We appeal to you, brethren, to see that all the members of the Church are well fed with the word of eternal truth. As we are all members of the same body, we should see that all are well cared for in a spiritual point. If we cannot preach to them face to face, let us throw in our mite and a word of encouragement to read the PILGRIM. I am satisfied that many would gladly do so if they were properly approached and encouraged. We think if a system to this effect could be brought into operation a brotherly feeling and a union of sentiment could be attained. I believe this is what the PILGRIM started out to do, and, brethren, let us put our shoulders to the wheel and support the principles of peace and union which is the spirit of the Gospel of our Lord and Savior.

JOHN BARNHART.

Editor's of the Pilgrim: Please announce to the delegates and brethren coming to District Meeting of Middle Pa., that the meeting will be held, God willing, at Mohler's M. H., three mile from Mechanicsburg, and two from Shiremanstown. Brethren coming by rail road on the 29th. of April, both East or West, will all stop off at Shiremanstown. Those coming by private conveyance will find Mohler's meeting house, on the State Road, six miles South West of Harrisburg.

We also desire that some of our ministering brethren will come on Saturday, the 27th, as many as will enable us to hold meetings at some half dozen different points. Who will come? Let us hear by letter before the middle of April, and when you come stop off at Mechanicsburg on Cumberland Valley R. R.

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of North Western Ohio, will be held, the Lord willing, in the Poplar Ridge Branch, Defiance county, in the meeting-house five miles north-east of Defiance, on the 19th day of April, 1872.

WM. NOFFSINGER.

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

Middle District of Ind. April 12th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

North eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa.. Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

First District of Va., West Arm, Floyd Co., April 19th.

Please announce that the District Meeting of Northern Ind. and Southern Mich. will be held in the Pine Creek congregation at their west meeting house, April 18th, 1872, by Divine permission. Those coming by railroad will stop at Walkerton.

JESSE CALVERT.

LOVEFEAST.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P. M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECKLEY.

MARRIED.

HEDGE—GRIP.—By the undersigned, Oct. 26th, 1871, at the house of the brides parents, Samuel Hedge and Sarah Grip.

ZELLER—KELLER.—Also Dec. 21st, at the brides parents, Monroe Zellers, and Susan Keller.

CRIDER—SIX.—Also March 7th, at the brides parents, John Crider, and Anna E. S. Six. All of Franklin Co., Pa.

GEORGE MOURER.

DIED.

GARVER—In the Aughwick Congregation, Huntingdon Co., Pa., March 21st, '72, James Howard, son of Bro. George, and sister Annie Garver, aged 1 year, and six days. Funeral service by the brethren present from the words, "Be ye therefore also ready."

We loved him but he left us,
Like some sweet vision nigh;
That early came to bless us
Then passed forever by.

We loved him, yes, we loved him,
But angels loved him more;
And they have sweetly called him
To yonder shining shore.

We loved him, O. we loved him,
But we would not detain;
His spirit's silent messenger,
Nor call him back again.

MARY A. SPANOGLE.

HUTCHENSON—In the Upper Cumberland District, Jan., 3rd '72, Agnes C. infant daughter of brother Wm., and sister Elizebeth Hutchenson, aged 2 years 8 month, and 12 days. Services by the brethren.

PLOUGH—In the same District, Jan., the 17th, '72, Anna, infant daughter of Bro. John, and sister Mary Plough, aged 5 months and 24 days. Funeral sermon from the words, "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

The occasion was a solemn one, and mingled with sorrow. The father of the deceased infant being reduced very low of consumption, feeling like breathing his last, desired to be annointed, which was attended to, just before the funeral services commenced. He felt quite revived, but alas! he died on the 21st of January '72, with a bright prospect of a blessed immortality. He had selected a text himself.—Job, 19:25. The services attended to by the brethren.

LATSHAW—February 3rd, '72, sister Elizebeth Latshaw, aged 83 years, nine month, and 25 days. Services by the brethren, from the 90 Psalm, and Luke 12:40.

COOVER—February 27th, '72, sister Sarah Coover, consort of brother John Coover, who died many years ago, and to whom was entrusted the office of deacon. The sister brought her age to 80 years, eight months, and 17 days. The occasion was improved by the brethren, from 2. Cor., latter part of the 4th, and beginning of the fifth chapter.

These members were some of the first in this District, when the flock was yet quite small, and had the regular meetings long in the house. The sister baked many times for those that would assemble, and as long as she was able, assisted at Lovefeast. She had the pleasure of living until most of her children had entered the church, and the number increasing to over two hundred. May they with all the faithful have eternal life. DANIEL KELLER.

COGLEY—In Germany Valley, Huntingdon Co., Pa., March the 18th, '72 Bennie F. son of Henry and Isabella Cogley, aged 5 years, 1 month, and 19 days. Funeral services by brother A. L. Funk, from 1st Peter, 1st chapter, and 24:25.

Little Bennie was quite a lively boy, and his sickness was rather singular, but was thought to be the scarlet fever. On Sabbath he was at our house and appeared quite well, but by 8 or 9 o'clock he took sick. The next morning my wife was called in to see him, and at noon the word came that little Bennie was dead.

Little Bennie has stemmed the flood, and is now on the shore of eternal deliverance, happy, yea, thrice happy in the fold of Jesus. Parents, do you not hear the tender bleatings of your little lamb? In the still midnight hour, a gentle whisper comes from the silent tomb, Father, come home, Mother, come home.

JOSEPH KOUGH.

LEVY—In Pinegrove, Clarion Congregation, Venango Co., Pa., March the 6th, '72, brother Christian Levy, aged 84 years, 10 month, and 26 days. Funeral services by the writer, from 1st Peter, 1:24-25. GEORGE WOOD.

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God: Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings"&c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid on the following terms: Single copy 10 cts, 10 copies 80 cents, 20 copies $1.50, 50 copies $3.00, 100 copies $5.00.

Editor's Department.

MARRIAGE NOTICES.

Present volume of the PILGRIM, page 51, 4th. column, we find the above heading.

My dear brethren and sisters, with some considerable degree of reluctance, I am constrained to say, that I am sorry to see so much paper and space occupied in publishing marriage notices in our periodicals. I ask, in all candor, could not some thing more useful more edifying, more soul refreshing, and more interesting to the many readers of our publications be inserted in its place? What impression, dear brethren, do you suppose it will make upon the minds of the multitude of readers in the states of Tennessee, Indiana, Iowa, California, and numerour other places, that Mr. G. H., and Miss M. J, of the state of Maryland, were married, upon such a date, by such an one, &c. ? It may tickle the ears of some of our young friends. I ask in all sincerity, will there really any good result from it? If so, I have not yet learned to appreciate it. Brethren I ask you in all candor, is it not more for the gratifying of our carnal minds and natures, than for the good, that may result from it? Judge for yourselves. Is not this the moving cause that we would have others to see and read that "I—such—an—one—had—the—honor—to—solemnize—the ceremony—of—such—ones—&c., &c? Brethren, is not this the case, if there is any thing better about it, I, for one, cannot comprehend it? Dear brethren, if it is not calculated to do good, let us drop it, as any other useless habit. If the "marriage notices," is the moving cause, of our young friends reading the PILGRIM, or our other periodicals, I fear the result will not be very good. Would it not equally induce "some of our young friends," and probably some older ones too, to publish some of the leading novels of the day, such as "The Aldine," "The Song Sparrow," "Music in the Alps," &c., &c., as noticed in the advertising columns of the PILGRIM? But the question is still with me, would there come any good from it? I fear not.

Brethren, I am deviating from the question at issue, the question is "marriage notices." Well then suppose every brother that solemnizes marriages would report to the printers, (for one has as good a right as the other) some will have, besides the mere notice, a short piece of poetry, another will have some good wishes for the newly married couple. All this, of course, comes in very appropriate, but consider brethren, where will this run to? The present size of the PILGRIM will soon be to small to contain all the marriage notices, especially so, if we wish to have any other reading matter in it besides. Let us then, dear brethren, in the ministry, try and devote our time and the paper, and the space in our periodicals to a better purpose. Let us try, instead of useless notices, to give some wholesome doctrine, some spiritual food, not for the nourishing of our sensual propensities, or for the gratifying of our carnal minds, but rather to the "pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing." And again "Giving no offense in anything, that the ministry be not blamed." "Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good. Be instant in season, and out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine.

E. K. BUECHLEY.

Waterloo, Iowa.

The above we give by request, although in direct opposition to views advocated by us, but as charity thinketh no evil, and as we do not set up our opinion as a standard for others, we insert it, hoping the writer had no other object in view than for the edifying of the church. For our part we fail to see the force of the argument. The same objections might be urged against obituaries, as we are not a particle more concerned about the death of some children, or even members of whom we never heard, than we are of those who enter the divine ordained state of matrimony; and as for space, there are about as many deaths as there are marriages, and yet our periodicals have not been overcrowded. We feel just as much interested to know with whom our young brethren and sisters and members' children, cast their lot for life, as we do to know who has died. We look upon the institution of matrimony as being ordained of God and second only to that of being wedded to Christ, and is often the pivot on which hangs the future destiny of our children. That publishing such notices is altogether for carnal gratification, we deny. It is because we are interested in their present, and especially their future welfare, that causes in us, an anxiety to know with whom they have cast their lot, and thus know, prospectively, what may be the final result of that union. Are we not all members of one body? If so, does it not make us rejoice to know that a young sister has wedded a husband that will enhance her spiritual life? Have we not learned to know and love many of the brethren's children who are yet out of the fold, for whose spiritual interests we are deeply concerned? Does it not give us glad hearts to hear that such have united themselves with Godsfearing companions? Is this carnal? Is it carnal in us to be concerned about the spiritual interest of brethren's children, or is it more so than to have a desire to know who died lately, whether the cause was consumption, dropsy, or scarlet fever, where they resided, who preached the funeral, and what were their respective ages? Will our dear brother Buechley please show wherein one is more carnal than the other, or which of the two is the better calculated to awaken holy thoughts?

The reference to novels is not analogous to the question at issue. Religion is a work of progression and he who would be successful in religionizing the young must lead. There is no harm in giving a faithful dog a bite of meat to make him true to his master's interests, or a horse a handful of oats to have him take the bit, neither do we think it harmful to publish marriage notices to wed our young to our periodicals and thus bring to their notice such religious truths as may convert the soul. We agree with our brother, if there is no good in it we had better drop it, and if the church ever decides against it, or if we had the assurance that the larger number of our readers were opposed to it, we would drop it at once, but as many approve of it, and as yet, only a few oppose it, (to our knowledge) we kindly hope that those who differ will charitably forbear. We kindly inform bro. Buechley that he is mistaken when he classes the Aldine among novels. It is a monthly Magazine representing the highest type of art in typography and engraving in America, and is intended to cultivate a taste for the true and the beautiful, the ground work of which was wrought with God's own fingers. We detest novels and therefore shall not recommend them to our readers. We have made these remarks because the rejoinder directly concerns us, and hope they will be received in the spirit of love, as we certainly have no other object in view save the best interests and final salvation of precious souls; neither do we believe that bro. Buechley was prompted by any other motives, therefore, let us hope that all things will work for good to them that love the Lord.

Publisher's Notes.

TO OUR PATRONS.

As the first of April is here, we would solicit our agents to make renewed efforts to procure subscribers for the PILGRIM.—We have spent considerable of late for printing material. A new press which cost us about $1,000, besides a lot of new type and other material, amounting to several hundred dollars. These things we had to have in order to meet the increased demands for the PILGRIM. The latter part of the past year we printed over seventy on a hand press, which by many publishers would be considered almost an impossibility. Our circulation still increased, and now we send out over eighty-eight quires. We are glad of this, and we thank you kind patrons' for the interest you have taken in behalf of the PILGRIM, but we want to tell you that this circulation does not justify such an outlay. We should have at least 3,000 paying subscribers, in order to be remunerated at all. We are aware, however, that it requires time to get a paper introduced, and we feel very much encouraged with our present circulation, and our prospects for the future. If we can demolish self and work alone for the good cause, we know that God will be with us, and that all things will work for our good. We are willing to await the time when our circulation will be increased, and we hope in the mean time our brethren, our sisters, and all friends of the good and true, will make every effort to extend the borders of our pilgrimage, not only that we may be supported temporally, but that the bread of life, that life-giving, life-sustaining manna may be disseminated throughout the length and breadth of our land.

The long expected companion to "TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR ROOM" is nearly ready, and will shortly appear. The popularity and great usefulness of this standard temperance book is evinced by the immense sales that have been made,—much greater, it is believed, than that of any book of its class ever published. Who has not read this wonderful book, so true to nature, so intense in effect, and so terrible in its moral, and who that has read it has not wished for a companion? To satisfy this widely expressed desire, the author has undertaken and just completed a new volume, that unmasks the liquor-seller and his accursed traffic in a way to startle and arouse the public.

The new book is entitled "THIRTY YEARS IN A MAN-TRAP." It gives an inside view of the liquor trade, and portrays the terrible effects of that traffic in a series of life pictures, full of the intensest interest, with the skill and fidelity to nature so eminently characteristic of the author. The book cannot fail to make a strong impression, and, as a new auxiliary in the cause of temperance, will have a wide and powerful influence. Nothing could be more timely than its appearance now. We learn by the publisher's circular, that it is to be sold exclusively by agents, and as it is a good opportunity to secure a book which will sell easily, and at the same time do a vast amount of good, we advise any one seeking profitable employment to apply to the publishers, J. M. STODDART & Co., No. 723 Sansom street, Philadelphia, for an agency, and enter into this work of moral colporteurage at once.

PERSONAL.

JACOB BOCK.—Your paper is now paid to Jan. 1st, 1873.

CORRECTION.—Those attending District Meeting of Northern Ohio, by Pittsburg & Fort Wayne Road, will stop off at Wooster instead of New Pittsburg as noticed, but correspond with Eld. George Worstat New Pittsburg, that being his nearest P. O.

J. R. MILLER.—We have no acquaintance with the book you speak off, and therefore cannot pass an opinion.

J. D. NICHOLSON.—We suppose you made a mistake in sending money. You say $1.00 for N. B. Murray's PILGRIM, and 20 cts. for tracts. Your letter contained one 50 ct. one 25 ct. and two 10 ct. pieces.

MOSES MILLER.—Elizabeth Giver's paper has been sent regularly to Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pa. Why she does not get it we cannot tell. We have now added No. of box &c., hope it will reach her.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE

ORIGIN OF A SAYING.—A correspondent writes: "I have vainly endeavored to ascertain the origin of the saying: 'If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain.' Can you enlighten my ignorance?" It is said that when Mahomet first declared his system of religion to the Arabs, they demanded proofs of his miraculous power, such as Christians claimed for Jesus and Moses. Mahomet replied that it would be tempting God, and provoking his wrath, to grant their demand. Nevertheless, he commanded Mount Sofa to come to him. Of course it didn't. Whereupon he exclaimed: "God is merciful! Had it obeyed my words, it would have fallen on us to our destruction. I will therefore go to the mountain, and thank God that he has had mercy on a stiff-necked generation."—Literary World.

MORE TERRITORY.—It is stated that the officers of Government at Washington have received a formal request to take possession, in the name of the United States, of the group known as Navigators' Islands, in the Pacific Ocean. The papers are signed officially by all the chiefs and many foreign residents of the islands. These are the only valuable islands in the Pacific Ocean not absorbed by France, England, Germany, or Russia. The natives say they are more favorable to the United States taking possession than any other country, because they believe the American religion is the same as theirs. American missionaries have been there many years.

TREES IN VICTORIA.—Recent explorations show that the great Australian trees exceed in height, though not in circumference, the giants of California, though some of the Australians must be regarded as very respectable in girth as well as height, the hollow trunk of one of them being large enough to permit three horsemen to enter and turn without dismounting, while they led a fourth horse. A fallen tree in the recesses of Dandenong, Victoria, was measured not long since, and found to be 420 feet long; another on the Black Spur, ten miles from Healesville, measured 480 feet. The highest trees on the Sierra Nevada, California, yet discovered, reached only 450 feet, the average size being from 300 to 400 feet in height, and from 25 to 31 feet in diameter. The wood of these trees closely resembles red cedar, and the reddish brown bark is sometimes 18 inches thick. The age of some of the oldest has been computed at 2,000 years.

The community at Utah is often referred to by foreigners as a reflection upon this country; but according to the census, nearly two-thirds of those not born in the Territory itself are natives of Great Britain, Denmark, and Sweden, and nearly one-half were born in Great Britain. The following are the figures in regard to the 30,702 of foreign birth: Of these, 12,270 were born in Great Britain (10,072 in England, 1,783 in Wales, and 2,391 in Scotland), 4,957 in Denmark, and 1,790 in Sweden. Only 502 of the Utah people were born in Ireland; only 63 in France; 613 in Norway; 353 in Germany; 122 in Holland; 2 in Belgium; 509 in Switzerland. Six hundred and eighty-seven were born in British North America. This is an English or at least a European community, and not an American.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1 25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Hand-book. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live: Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

AGENTS WANTED FOR

"JESUS"

BY CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.

PUBLISHING CO.

New Hymn Books, English.

	TURKEY MOROCCO
One copy,	post-paid, - - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25
	PLAIN ARABESQUE.
One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50
	PLAIN SHEEP.
One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain, - - -	1.00
Turkey morocco, - - -	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen, - - -	5 50

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Aspewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 08	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 51	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7 00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.45
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands.	$7.25
" Family.	6.85
" Extra.	6.65
" Lowgrades.	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.60
" Hill "	1.60
" Winter red "	1.75
CORN.	.48
OATS.	.43
RYE.	.43
BARLEY.	.65

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,
Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

ITALIAN QUEENS.

FOR SALE.

The undersigned having been successful in sending out good Queens, and giving general satisfaction during the past season, is prepared and will continue the business for the coming season.

Price for Queen, ... $2.50

Address.
DANIEL KAGARICE.
New Enterprise,
Jan. 30th. Bedford county, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.
Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Mirkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA. APRIL 9, 1872. NO. 15.

POETICAL.

LORD REMEMBER ME.

SELECTED BY MAGGIE COBLE.

O thou from whom all goodness flows,
I lift my heart to thee.
In all my sorrows, conflicts, woes,
Dear Lord remember me.

When groaning on my burdened heart,
My sins lie heavily,
My pardon speak, now peace impart,
In love remember me.

Temptations sore obstructs my way,
And ills I cannot flee.
O give me strength Lord as my day,
For good, remember me.

Distressed in pain, disease and grief,
This feeble body see,
Grant patience, rest and kind relief,
Here, and remember me.

Pour on my face for thy dear name,
Shame and reproaches be;
All hail! reproach and welcome shame,
If thou remember me.

The hour is near consigned to death,
I own the just decree,
Savior, with my last parting breath,
I'll cry, remember me.

TRUST IN JESUS.

"Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."—Heb. 12: 2.

Christian! wherefore yield to sadness?
Fix thy heart and hopes above;
Look to Jesus—and with gladness,
Trust his gracious pardoning love;
Trials here will sorely press thee,
Let thy trust on him be stayed;
He will cheer, and guide, and bless thee,
With his ever present aid.

Think how kind, how condescending!
Jesus calls himself thy "Friend;"
From his throne in glory bending,
He will every prayer attend.
He will never, never leave thee,
Through thy pilgrim days below;
Then, at last, he will receive thee,
And a crown of life bestow.

—S. S. Times.

REMEMBER THY MOTHER.

Lead thy mother tenderly
Down life's steep decline;
Once her arm was thy support,
Now she leans on thine.
See upon her loving face
These deep lines of care;
Think—it was her toil for thee
Left that record there.

Ne'er forget her tireless watch
Kept by day and night,
Taking from her step the grace,
From her eye the light.
Cherish well her faithful heart
Which, through weary years,
Echoed with its sympathy
All thy smiles and tears.

Thank God for thy mother's love,
Guard the priceless boon;
For the bitter parting hour
Cometh all too soon.
When thy grateful tenderness
Loses power to save,
Earth will hold no dearer spot
Than thy mother's grave!

ESSAYS.

JESUS WEPT.

BY BROTHER FIDGELY.

Sadly He bowed His head, and as the tears of anguish rolled down His cheeks, forced from the quivering eye-lids at the thought of the loss of His friend, every heart bleeds in sympathy and every tongue is ready to exclaim "Oh how He loved Him." Yes, a love like this for a mere friend is rarely found in the world, for let the friendship be ever so dear there is no love such as the God-man exhibited on this occasion. It is the great climax of all friendship, the grand key-stone to all unity. But, we ask, what are tears, that they should express so much? A chemical analysis shows us a little chloride of sodium, water, and a trace of iron. It is not the tears that excite our sympathies, they are but the effect of a cause: but the feelings that bring them forth, those feelings of which we can but see a dim expression in that which the surface betrays.

First of all we shall notice those hard, we might almost say dry, tears; those which are wrung from the heart by the strongest depths of mortal anguish, and which roll down the cheek and leave not a trace of moisture behind them.—Terribly must the heart suffer that can force such as these from the eyes: and sad, indeed is the picture of such human agony. We can only feel and pray for Him, for God's voice must soothe the pain, and lull the soul to rest. Only the loss of a dearly loved one can cause such tears, and we cannot help but think that it is rebellious for God to give such strong impressions to our suffering at the execution of His holy Will.

Tears of sorrow, that fall like gentle rain-drops, serve to relieve the surcharged heart of a portion of its load of grief, and thus to calm the agitation of the soul. With such we can weep in sympathy, and by pouring cheering words into the ear of the sufferer, lead them from the contemplation of their sorrow, and point them to the all-healing Savior, who can drown all suffering by the power of his compassion. Lend your aid, then, to the sufferer, and God will bless you. Pour balm upon the troubled spirit, and gently lead the sorrowing one to the foot of the cross where the soul can be refreshed by the blood of the Lamb. This is a true christian duty, and God will look with joy upon the disciple who thus aids this good work upon earth. Make your hold stronger upon heaven by these deeds of charity and mercy upon earth.

There are also hypocritical tears, and I think there is no form of hypocrisy more despicable than that which feigns sympathy while the heart secretly rejoices at the suffering. Those who can be guilty of such an atrocity are lower in mind and sentiment than the beasts, for they never give expression for feelings that do not exist. Hard, indeed, must be the heart that can outwardly express grief, while within there is a feeling of vindictive joy at the anguish of another. For such we cannot help but pray, even without judgment. "God pity him, and teach him thy truth." Add a prayer for the hypocrite to thy petitions, Oh, christian, for they need God's aid.

Tears of joy diffuse themselves through the spirits of all who witness them; and well they may, for, as tears express the deepest anguish of the heart, they also show the greatest happiness, and they only flow when the heart is too full to hold more joy or sorrow, and thus gives vent to its surplus feeling. See that hitherto penitent sinner, sitting meekly at the foot of the cross, and as the shower falls and bedews it, we feel like embracing him, and, mingling our tears with his, giving expression to our joy in exclamations of praise and thanksgiving to the giver of all good things. Such must be the joy of the angels over one sinner that repenteth; and Oh! what a glorious sight: myriad's of heaven's host shedding holy tears of joy that there has been another soul added to the list of saints upon earth.

Beware, mortal, that Jesus does not weep tears of sorrow for your sins; for dearly will you be compelled to pray for every drop shed by the Savior of mankind. Rather let His heart be made glad by your repentance and a righteous life. Make His tears joyous ones, and He will bless you, for every drop will soothe a pang, and every sigh of happiness will prove a sin forgiven.

SOLITUDE.

BY JULIA LAKIN.

In the intercourse of the world man holds converse with his fellow man, but in the retirement of solitude he communes with himself and his Maker. In the busy whirl of active life he may live a stranger to himself, the wants of his higher nature unheeded; the noise and bustle of the world may drown the voices that speak to his inner consciousness—but in the retirement of solitude these disturbing influences pass away and the still, small voice speaks to his soul. The false views of life which society engenders, the ignoble ends for which man labors, are here seen in their true light.

Youth in the buoyancy and trustfulness of his nature seeks companionship, but as the years pass away and the reflective faculties are developed he learns to live more within himself. The old man loves solitude; the voices that in youth charmed him with their cunning witchery have lost their power, and he now hears only discord where all before was harmony. In some sunny nook he loves to sit alone, with no companionship but his own thoughts.

There are times in men's lives when they learn how powerless is human sympathy—some great bereavement, some crushing sorrow falls upon them, blinding them, staggering them with its weight; then the man, with the strong yearning of his nature for sympathy which no finite creature can give, turns to the infinite. At such times the voice of the soul is prayer, and man supplicates his Maker, not with the formal words with which he often addresses the Deity in hours of prosperity, but the soul prays with an infinite longing that expresses itself in a few words, and often transcends the power of speech.

God speaks to man not in the crowded haunts of the world, but in the desert solitude, on the mountain heights, and on the lonely island.

All great characters have had the teachings of solitude. Forty years did Moses commune with God in the desert of Midian, as he watched the flocks of Jethro, his father-in-law. Jehovah spoke to his soul in storm and sunshine, in the verdure of spring and the decay of autumn, in the silence of midnight when the stars looked down on his lonely vigils, until he was prepared for that higher revelation of Himself which God made to him in the burning bush, when at eighty years of age he called him to his life-work.

Forty days of solitary journeying brought the prophet to Horeb's height, when he fled in bitterness of spirit from the wrath of Jezebel. Alone in a cave on the mountain he witnessed the manifestations of God in the whirlwind, in the earthquake, and the fire, until the still small voice spoke to his soul.

Among the solitary characters of the world our Savior stands pre-eminent. His contemporaries were utterly unable to comprehend his character and mission, and as a necessity, he lived a life of isolation. At the close of the day's labors, when, weary, he felt that virtue had gone out of Him, He loved to seek the solitude of the mountain sanctuary, or the lonely desert for communion with His God.—The Christian Standard.

THE APPROACHING JOURNEY.

"When a few years are come, then I shall go the way whence I shall not return."—Job. 16:22.

I have traveled much up and down this world, 'till the evening of this life is upon me. I am an old pilgrim, and my journey on earth must soon end,—indeed I am unable to travel here any more. But there is still a journey before me. I must go from time to eternity, from this world to the next. I know not precisely when I shall hear the summons to start, but I know that "the time of my departure is at hand." A few days—or possibly a few years, it is no great difference which, "the time is short"—the journey is just before me, and how many things there are to make it one of deepest interest.

1st. It is unavoidable. I have often found ways of putting off, and even escaping entirely, some of this life's hardest travels, and nothing was lost to any one by it. But there is no chance here, no escape. Even now in my old age, I seem to hear the words sounding from the Master above. "Arise and depart hence, for this is not your rest." In a little while I shall have a message "The Master is come, and calleth for thee." He told me long ago to "watch" for His coming: to "be ready" to have my "loins girded, my lamp trimmed, and brightly burning." So when the supreme moment comes, I must set off.

2nd. It is unknown. Much indeed has been said in the Bible about it, and blessed be God for all I have learned there on the subject, but personally, experimentally, it is utterly unknown. I have never passed that way. I have no practical acquaintance with it.—those of my friends who have traveled that road, have never come back to tell their experience. "It is appointed unto men once to die," only once.

3rd. It is a solitary journey. I must take it alone, entirely alone, so so far as my fellow mortals are concerned. I shall love to have dear Christian friends around me, to comfort me when I set off, but not one of them can go with me further than the gate. They may think of me, feel for me, pray for me,—but they cannot go beyond that. We must separate, they must stay. I must depart, and alone.

4th. A momentous journey. Is there one ever taken by mortal man upon earth, that can, for a moment, be compared to it? It fixes my everlasting destiny. The moment when I cross the boundary, I am in a world where there is no change.—"There is a great gulf fixed." "He that is unjust let him be unjust still, and he that is righteous let him be righteous still."

5th. A final journey. "I shall go the way whence I shall not return." The pilgrimage of life will be over. No more partings, no more change, no more toil, no more fatigue. It will be my last journey.

Oh, how welcome this fact! I shall then have done forever with sin and sorrow. The road I shall take will lead me to my home, to my Father's house, and into which no enemy shall ever enter, and from which no friend shall ever depart, "they shall go no more out."

Then let me not be dismayed at this approaching journey. The way may be painful in some things, but O, how pleasant the end! "To die is gain." "To depart and be with Christ is far better," than being always here. It is a solemn journey, but it is a safe one to Christ's people. For, let me remember, He will not only receive me at the end, but be with me while passing through. And what if no earthly friend can be with me? It will not be lonely if my Heavenly friend, my elder Brother, my Savior is with me. He knows the way, He has trodden it Himself, and I see the marks of His footsteps there still. He can smooth its difficulties, clear its dangers, disperse its terrors. Therefore—"Though I walk through the valley and shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

"I'm a lonely traveller here.
Weary oppressed.
But my journey's end is near—
Soon shall I rest!
Dark and dreary is the way.
Toiling I've come;
Ask me not with you to stay.
Yonder's my home.

I'm a weary traveller here.
I must go on.
For my journey's end is near.
I must be gone
Brighter joys than earth can give.
Win me away:
Pleasures that forever live—
I cannot stay.

I'm a traveller to a land
Where all is fair,
Where is seen no broken band—
All, all are there.
Where no tear shall ever fall.
Nor heart be sad;
Where the glory is for all.
And all are glad.

I'm a traveller—call me not—
Upward's my way;
Yonder is my rest and lot.
I cannot stay.
Farewell earthly pleasures, all.
Pilgrim I'll roam;
Hail me not—in vain you call,
Yonder's my home."

AN OLD PILGRIM.

For the Pilgrim.

LABORING.

1. Tim. 4: 10.

3rd. Religious Labor. In our last article we tried to notice Physical and Mental labor. Physical labor, which seemed to us primary or simple labor; next mental labor—the labor of the mind, which is a degree higher as well as nobler in its nature; being more complex in its workings, and in conclusion, we design noticing Religious labor, the highest and most glorious labor which man can perform in this life. Paul reasons with respect to the different kinds of labor. He says bodily exercise profiteth little, but godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life which now is, and that which is to come." 1. Tim. 4: 8. Truly indeed is the profit of bodily exercise little, when compared with the rewards of the soul in the service of God. The contrast is as great as the difference between heaven and earth, the imperishable crown and the crown that passeth away, the present life and the life which is to come.

Religious labor is the work of the soul in glorifying God as God and for its own promotion in happiness. It is a labor that must be performed in the name of Jesus to secure triumphant success, and meet the approbation of God. It is a labor that cannot be exhausted, though the whole world should lay hold, and enter into the vineyard of the Lord, and work with all our mind, soul and strength, each one will always have plenty to do. It is holy labor because its works are works of righteousness. It is a labor in which the workman shall be made perfect, a labor that is not rewarded so much on account of the amount of work done, nor the time employed, but on account of the motive which has been employed in the work.

Honor of Laboring. Man was created for the glory of his Maker, therefore he should glorify God in his body and in his spirit which are God's. Therefore he should present his body a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto Him which is His reasonable service. There is much service that is not reasonable service—labor that God does not require at the hands of His creature; physically, mentally and spiritually: labor that he has not promised to bless in the deed, nor reward in the end. Isaiah speaks thus: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." Isaiah 55: 2. Some men toil from morning till night, year after year in tilling the soil, yet die poor—go out of the world naked, not being clothed with righteousness and no treasure in heaven. Others labor by the light of the sun, and by the light of the lamp, in acquiring knowledge, in devising plans, and in searching the hidden mysteries of creation, and revelation, and die without hope or God in the world. Others in a spiritual point of view, are active, energetic and enthusiastic in doing what they call serving God, because they mean it good, yet are deluded and deceived, not being led by the Spirit of God, but by those who teach for doctrines the commandments of men, and who in that great day will hear that awful sound, depart I never knew you. While some labor from necessity, others labor voluntarily. This may be applied to all that we perform in relation to our duty to our God, to man, and so ourselves. The Apostle says relative to charity: "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver," 2. Cor. 9: 7. Again Paul to Philemon. "But without thy mind would I do nothing; that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly" Phil. 1: 14.

My brethren and sisters may we not take knowledge of the children of darkness by noting the manner in which they labor? There seem to be two classes, one laboring to obtain something which they have in view giving themselves entirely up for that purpose, while the other seems to be of those who will not plow by reason of the cold; he therefore shall beg in harvest and have nothing," who seems to be working because somebody else happens to be working, or because he cannot help it and would rather do so than to starve, consequently such motives are not best. The willing laborer performs his duty on all occasions, it matters little whether the sun shines or not; cold or hot, he does whatsoever the Master saith, and whatsoever his hands find to do he goeth straightway and doeth it. Now I fear that many are too apt to confer with flesh and blood in relation to the service for the salvation of the immortal soul. Many will say one to another I will serve the Lord if you will go along. Others will desire company when duty stares them fairly in the face. Now I fear there may often be danger here, and all such should be instructed that Jesus has promised to be with them, and better company they cannot have and should not desire, for He is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother, and will be the only one desired when we come to die, and to pass through the valley of the shadow of death. So let all that labor in the vineyard of the Lord say with one of old, "as for me and my house we will serve the Lord." This looks like voluntary service, reasonable service, willing service, and not of necessity. No difference who points the finger of contempt, who utters the disparaging remark, who cries nonessential, or who stumbles because some unwatchful brother or sister has made a misstep, let us unflinchingly stand for the right, always desiring and daring to do that which God has commanded, knowing that the days are evil, and that we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ, there to give an account of the labor which we have performed whilst in the body, whether it be good or evil, voluntarily or of necessity or not at all. Let us be "not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Rom. 12: 11.

The TIME to labor is in life, while the lamp holds out to burn; work while it is called day, before the night cometh wherein no man can work, for there is no knowledge, work nor device found in the grave where we are all hastening, but as the tree falls so shall it lay,—whether towards the north or south,—Heaven or hell. Now in conclusion I would say, let us who are of the day be sober and vigilant, "Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain." Phil. 2: 16. And unto the idlers I would say in the language of Christ, "Why stand ye here all the day idle? Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive. Mt. 20: 6, 7.

"Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

JOHN ZUCK.

Shady Grove, Pa.

For the Pilgrim.

LOVE.

"Love is the fountain whence
All true obedience flows,
The Christian serves the God he loves,
And loves the God he knows."

Thou shalt love the "Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." This is the first and great commandment, and the second is like unto it: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, on these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matt. 22: 37, 38, 39, 40. The language of our Savior in these words show to us the great importance of cultivating the principle of love. If on these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets, how important that we let this divine attribute reign in our hearts; for says the Apostle, "seeing that ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren; see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." 1 Pet. 1: 22. Again love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Rom. 13 Again a new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have loved one for another." Matt. 13: 34, 35. What! is this to be the mark by which all men can know who are the disciples of Christ? And yet we so often see so little love manifested amongst the professed followers of our loving Savior who has loved us and given himself for us, an offering and sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savor. Eph. 5: 2. Should we not earnestly strive to overcome all that is in opposition to the spirit of love. How many sorrows and troubles would never arise, did this attribute fully reign in our hearts? How different would many of our homes be, and how much more would the church prosper, did we all take the many advices of our blessed Savior and His holy Apostles to love one another? "I, therefore, says the Apostle, the prisoner of the Lord beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation where with ye are called, with all the lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." Eph. 4: 1, 2, 3. Let all bitterness, wrath and anger and clamor and evil speaking be put away from you with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4: 31, 32. As we have said before how different would the family, the neighborhood, the church and the state be, did all their members fully comprehend the worth of loving our neighbor as ourself. And this is not all, it will not only secure happiness in this world, but there is no commandment in the holy Scriptures that is more binding than this. If love is the fulfilling of the law, and to be the mark by which all men can know who are the disciples of Christ, should we not examine our hearts closely whether we truly love our brethren and neighbors as ourselves? If we do not, it will be the means of debarring us from enjoying the bliss of the home in yonder world which has been prepared for all that love God and keep His commandments. "If a man say, I love God and hateth his brother he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen." And this commandment have we from Him that he who loveth God will love his brother also." John, 4: 20, 21. And again, "For we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life." John 3: 14, 15.

Here we perceive the love of God because He laid down His life for us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. "Whosoever hath this worlds goods and seeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? "My little children let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." John, 3: 16, 17, 18. Yes if we love God and the brethren it certainly will be manifested in our actions. We will not turn away from the cries and the wants of the poor, when we have wherewith in our possession to supply their wants.

But methinks we could do this and still not have the love of God shed abroad in our hearts, if our alms were given to be seen of men, and not for the love which we have for our fellowmen. We must remember that we must not love in word but in deed, and in truth, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth all knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." Eph. 3: 17, 18, 19. Let us be earnestly engaged in striving to attain unto that perfect love that casteth out fear. O! that we would all let love be without dissimulation, abhorring that which is evil, cleaving to that which is good. "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love in honor preferring one another." Rom. 12: 9, 10. For brethren ye have been called unto liberty, only use not your liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another. All the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

MARY HOOVER.

Chatham, Ohio.

TO THE READERS OF THE PILGRIM.

Respected brethren and sisters. I see a communication by a member of Miami Co., Ohio, in the March No., of the Vindicator, present volume, page 35, headed: "Be not Led Astray.." which I wish to endorse and draw your attention to the same. The substance is full of good sense, and is so solemn and important to all, that I think it deserves notice, testimony and assent, believing that we are living in a dangerous age, where deceiving and being deceived is practiced wholesale and retail. Therefore our devotional exercises ought to be solemnly and earnestly attended to in behalf of poor bleeding Zion, and in behalf of each other, that we might be enabled to endure to the end of our mortal race, that with the apostle, we may have fought a good fight, kept the faith and receive the crown.

I am a subscriber for, and reader of the Vindicator, but as long as I am not convinced of the infallibility of mankind, I shall be in favor of hearing and being heard, and therefore do not write for it, although I read much there that meets attention.

Yours fraternally,
D. BOSSERMAN.

Gettysburg, Pa.

WISDOM.

CONCEIT and confidence are both of them cheats; the first always imposes on itself, and the second frequently deceives others too.

THERE are some great troubles which only time can heal, some perhaps which never can be healed at all; but all can be helped by the great panacea, work.

NARROW SOULS.—It is with narrow-souled people as with narrow-necked bottles—the less they have in them, the more noise they make in pouring out.

A GOLDEN rule for a young lady is to converse always with her female friends as if a gentleman were of the party; and with young men as if her female companions were present.

MEN'S lives should be like the days, more beautiful in the evening, or, like the spring, a glow with promise, and the autumn, rich with golden sheaves, where good works and deeds have ripened on the field.

"I HAVE lived," said Caroll, "to my ninety-sixth year; I have enjoyed continued health; I have been blessed with great wealth, prosperity, and most of the good things which the world could bestow; public approbation, esteem, applause,—but what I now look back on with greatest satisfaction to myself is, that I have practiced the duties of religion."

A LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

By referring to the obituary column, it will be seen that death, the rider on the pale horse, came to our place, and of twenty-eight inclosed cases, there laid in the grave the bodies of four dear little girls, whose angel spirits have taken their flight to God who gave them, leaving sadness, sorrow and regret in the hearts of perhaps over anxious parents. And as the writer is so closely identified with at least, three of the families, —not only by the ties of relationship as father, uncle and cousin, but also by the ties of the Gospel, the Author of which sticketh closer than a brother. As your teacher, pastor and elder he feels to write a few lines of condolence, hoping God may bless it as such to your sorrow stricken hearts.

My dear children, nephew, niece and cousins, as such you are dear to me, and doubly dear as brethren and sisters in the Lord, and I know that your children were dear to you, and not only to you, but to all who came in contact with them, as each one had a special peculiarity of attraction and interest. This I well knew before your dear children were taken ill, and you know with what anxiety and concern I was with you by day and by night during the time of their suffering and death. Yet you have really no cause to mourn, as you sorrow not as those who have no hope. Joseph and Annie, weep when they think of the prattle of their dear interesting little Ella May, when she sat in her rocking chair, and by the peculiar gift God saw fit to endow her with so that with her musical voice would sing full tunes, though she could not pronounce the words, and sitting in her mother's lap would sing the tune to the words "Jesus comes to reign" so correctly that persons unacquainted with her attempt at talking could understand the words in the poetry. But, my dear children, is this really a cause for sorrowing? Do you think her angel spirit is less able to sing now in her heavenly Father's house than when in her body of clay? Have you not read that "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings God has perfected praise"? He has early trained her for the angel choir, where she is now with them sounding the high notes of perfect praise to God. Of this you are assured by the Word of the Lord when He says, "of such is the kingdom of God." She is gone to Him, weep not, dry your tears, and be sure to meet her there and you will understand the song, "Jesus comes to reign."

And when William and Lizzie think of their sprightly, active, and exceedingly apt Sallie, they mourn as though that active and ready-to-learn mind was all buried up with her in her little grave. Why my dear cousins, brother and sister, do you suppose that active and learning mind is less so in her spirit, angelic associations? It is true, you do not see her with your natural eyes, nor handle her with your parent-hands as you used to do. But with eyes of faith you may see her in her Heavenly Father's house with angel's tongue speak the Father's praise in full perfection in her Savior's free purchased salvation, for "of such is the kingdom of God." Then cease your mourning, my dear friends, for God will swallow up death in victory, and then He will wipe away all tears from all faces. Your Sallie, and Johnny who went before her, are gone to God and will return to you on earth no more; be sure you go to them, and while here train your remaining Cora for a home in heaven and you will constitute a family in heaven, where you will never, never weep again.

And here is Daniel and Sarah, how sad they feel when they think of their exceedingly interesting Mary Susan. My dear brother and sister, nephew and niece, I admit that with you I have been disappointed in my expectations; but it only teaches me the truth more fully, that the ways of the Lord are not our ways, and His thoughts are not our thoughts. Some of the extraordinary traits I saw in Mary, and others that sister Sarah, her mother, told me of as much as a year ago, attracted my attention to draw certain conclusions. One of these was that this world was not the place for such a spirit to tarry long in, "because it is polluted," so I marked her for a member in the church early in life. I even hoped to live myself to baptize her. But see how the higher thoughts of God looked on this subject. He took her to the church triumphant without passing through the church militant. And if he, out of the mouths of babes and sucklings, has perfected praise, surely He will have such from one upon whom He had put so much of His spirit. Some of her traits may have been the result of a pious mother's training; yet the governing principle was instinct. Christian parents know how readily children will forget their evening and morning prayers which they had taught them, and that it is needful to remind them of it again and again. But Mary would under no circumstance be persuaded to retire without the regular family prayer. And she would not kneel in prayer without having something to cover her head, and if it must be the skirt of her little dress drawn over the head. We are satisfied the spirit of God was there. St. Paul says a woman praying must have a cover on her head because of the angels. So this little worshipper was an associate of angels and she will be covered. Let some older Christians learn from this perfect little worshipper. Her mother tells me this trait in Mary was no part of her training, she never having called her attention to it. With so much of God in this child, need we wonder that she so often told her parents since the death of her little cousin Johnny, (son of the above, Wm. and Lizzie) who died some eight months ago, that the "good man" had one pretty baby, and she would like to go to Him too. And when on her death bed she said, "I don't like to leave papa and mama, and Ella, (her sister) but I do want to go to the "good man" and be where Johnny is.' My dear brother and sister, all tell you the spirit God gave to your Mary was not to tarry long in this polluted world, and you have no just cause to sorrow nor weep. For could you see her to-night while I am penning these lines, as she is in the angelic band, not with the skirt of her dress drawn over her head for a covering, but with diadems of glory and immortality purchased for her by the Son of God, your tears of sorrow would be tears of joy and gladness in the thought, our Mary is safe with God. Come, my dear fellow members in the body of Christ, cease your sorrowing and strive to meet your angel spirits in purer climes above.

And to Lewis and Margie Carb, and Jesse F. and Mary A Lambert, I will only say that as I am not as intimate with you as I am with my relations and religious brethren and sisters, I did not learn the peculiarities of your children as I did the others. Yet I can assure you that whatever lovely or interesting may have been in them, it was God who gave it, and it was God who took it again. And that you may humbly bow to His will, and be enabled to say, blessed be the name of the Lord, and prepare yourselves to meet your children in heaven, is my wish and prayer for you. D. P. SAYLER.

Visitor please copy and oblige.

BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS.

So writes the apostle in his epistle to the church at Galatia. It is a general direction to Christians to help each other in the divine life; and thus to fulfill the law of Christ, in doing good, especially to them who are of the household of faith.

But if thus broad in its application, is it not more worthy of the thoughtful consideration of those who have pledged their truth each to the other, to love and to cherish till death shall part them? Every man and every woman has peculiar temptations and trials, sometimes from within, and sometimes from without, which constitute a heavy burden. Now the husband may aid the wife, and the wife may help the husband in carrying, and getting rid of this burden by a loving interest in each other's happiness; or they may make the burden heavier and more unendurable by their want of sympathy and aid of the other in their peculiar trials, or their besetting sins. In fulfilling the law of love, such love as ought always to exist between husband and wife, there must be mutual forbearance, and mutual watchfulness. Let neither be too exacting of the other. Cultivate a good temper. Be not hasty to condemn. Avoid those things which excite a bad temper, and ever seek the things which make for peace.

Remember that the greatest of all virtues is charity. It is the possession and exercise of this divine love, which covereth a multitude of sins, and which is so acceptable in the sight of God, because it produces such blessed results in all the relations of life.

Therefore follow after charity.—Bear ye one another's burdens. Let the strong bear the infirmities of the weak. Sometimes the wife may be stronger to endure than the husband. Oh, how many wives have blessed their husbands and their households, when the burden of sin or suffering had made the husband weak. But, wherever the strength or weakness may lie, blessed is the husband, and blessed the wife who, in helping the other in seasons of physical, or of mental suffering, bears the burden, and thus fulfills the law of Christ.—The Christian.

THE MEMORY OF A MOTHER.

When temptation assails, and when we are almost persuaded to do wrong, how often a mother's word of warning will call to mind vows that are rarely broken! Yes, the memory of a mother has saved many a poor wretch from going astray. Tall grass may be growing over the hallowed spot where her earthly remains repose; the dying leaves of autumn may be whirled over them, or the white mantle of winter may cover them from sight; yet her spirit appears when he walks in the right path, and gently, softly, mournfully calls to him when wandering off into the ways of error.

Lines by a Mother in Her Son's Bible.

Remember, love, who gave thee this,
When other days shall come;
When she who had thy earliest kiss,
Sleeps in her narrow home:
Remember 'twas a mother gave
The gift to one she'd die to save.

That mother sought a pledge of love,
The holiest for her son,
And from the gift of God above,
She chose a goodly one:
She chose for her beloved boy,
The source of life and light and joy.

And bade him keep the gift, and when
The parting hour might come,
They might have hope to meet again,
In her eternal home;
She said her faith in that should be
Sweet incense to her memory.

And should the scoffer in his pride,
Laugh that fond gift to scorn,
And bid him cast that gift aside,
That he from youth had borne,
She bade him pause and ask his breast
If he or she had loved him best.

A parent's blessing on her son,
Goes with this holy thing;
The love that would retain the one,
Must to the other cling;
Remember 'tis no idle toy,
A mother's gift—remember boy!

Youth's Department.

WHEN TO STAND, AND WHEN TO RUN.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

BY ELD. J. S. FLORY.

Little readers of the PILGRIM, I don't get to talk with you as often as I should like to, but hope you will excuse me when I tell you I have much to attend to, and many others to write to, I just thought now I would say something about when to stand your ground and when to run.

It is not always a sign of cowardice to run, but is often real courage. That boy is a brave boy that runs away from every "appearance of evil." The boy that runs when he sees a quarrel getting up in the street, is a brave boy, he runs away to get out of trouble because he thinks more of a good name than to be caught in a street fight.

Run away boys from the dram shop, for it is a bad place, about as near the worst of all places as any one can get in this life. there is often heard "knashing of teeth" "wailing" and swearing, and the steam of thier "torment" is smelt there. Run from such places as for life, for "satan" is there! Run from the boy that swears and tells lies. for if you stay with him you may get a black stain, if not a "black eye."

You might say a brave boy will stand his ground and fight before he will run. No he won't, 'tis the cowardly boy that stands his ground in a quarrel or fight. If he was a brave boy he would rather be laughed at than do evil, rather please God than his carnal feelings. Yes, the brave boy will run at such times. He that is too cowardly to do right, will stand his ground. and though he come out best in the fight. has a black stain on his character and a conscience that tells him he has displeased God and Jesus.

Run when you are tempted to take fruit from an orchard or anything, though it be a trifle, it still will be stealing. If you are told to go and do anything, and are tempted to say you will not, smother down the rising answer and run and do it.

If you are tempted to stay from Sunday school and meeting, in order to have a "jolly time" with bad boys, run right off to where you will be in the least danger of doing wrong. Run from every evil thing, and you will thus prove that you are a brave boy or girl.

I have now told you of some of the times it is best to run, now I will tell you when to stand your ground. If boys, or girls either, try to get you to tell a lie to screen them from punishment, stand up to the truth like the boy that some years ago was drowned by his companion because he would not tell a lie, he stood his ground. though it cost him his life,—that was true bravery. When you do anything and fear punishment, stand your ground, own up all about it, and it will be much better, always stand firm for the truth.

Stand up for honesty and a good character, it will never fail, money and worldly honor may fail, if you can't get money without a sacrifice of honor or character, better do without. Poor in money and rich in conscience, is better than rich in money, and poor in conscience.

Stand for your word; and above all else stand for Jesus. If an associate should laugh at you because you pray, stand your ground, if he speak lightly of religion or Jesus, stand up for Christ, and He will stand in your behalf. If satan should tempt you to leave the narrow way, stand to your post and face him with the precious Word, and he will flee. Stand in the way of truth and holiness, and you will be counted a brave defender of Jesus and His Word.

Stand up for Jesus, that you may stand uncondemned at the judgment bar,—that you may stand with the bright angels in glory. I hope my dear little readers that we may all stand to our posts until we are all gathered together to stand amid the throng of angelic hosts in Heaven. So farewell once more, 'till we meet again.

WORK BY THE JOB.

If a woman undertakes to chop wood nobody is surprised that she does it awkwardly, and wastes her strength to very little purpose; but if a man works in the same way, we all cry "clumsy fellow," and wonder why he does not learn his business better. Work is sometimes put upon us for which we have had no training, and all that can be expected is that we do our best under the circumstances.

But what shall we say to people who go on day after day, year after year, doing the same kind of work, and yet doing it so carelessly and so clumsily, that half their strength is wasted, and the work never properly done. And that is just the case with about two-thirds of all the workers in the world. Why, the strength, and time, and money, thrown away by such work would go a long way towards helping the world out of its troubles.

I saw some men lately grading a street. They took gravel from a pile on one side, and carried it, by the shovelful, across to the other. "How stupid!" I said to my friend.

"Oh, they are working by the day," was the reply, "and only want to put in their time. That's the trouble mainly with this world—so many of its workers work by the day, and so few by the job."

Boys and girls, take my word for it that it pays to work by the job. You'll never in your lives know what real solid satisfaction is unless you make up your minds that whatever you undertake shall be done by the job; done in the best way; done as faithfully, thoroughly, and honestly as if you knew it was the one thing by which the great Inspector was to judge whether to enroll you with the good and faithful, or the unprofitable servant. Don't you believe it if any one tells you it does not pay to work in this way. It does pay. You may stand shoulder to shoulder with a shirk for years, drawing the same wages, yet there is sure to come a day when you will find it was worth while, after all, to work by the job. The reward comes every day in conscious self-respect, and a steady gain in power; and above all, it will come in being able to say as every Christian ought—"I have fought a good fight"—not crept like a miserable coward in the rear of the army. "I have finished my course"—not left my work undone to burden and disappoint those who come after me—"I have kept the faith"—and that grand summing up reaches over the whole of life's work, as done in His sight, who declared that those who are faithful in that which is least will be faithful also in much.—Little Corporal.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

BY CAROL.

"Don't cry, little sister, don't cry, we will find our way out of this lone wood before it is dark; don't cry, Lily."

"No, no," sobbed the little sister, "we are lost and the great bears will eat us up, and we will never see papa and mamma any more.

"Yes, we will, sissy, only see that little star. Often and often I've seen that very star right over papa's house, and if we follow it, it will take us straight home."

Taking the little tear-stained hand softly and tenderly, they fought their way out of the briers and bushes into the great open highway, still following their little guide, the star.

They reached the cottage, and were folded lovingly in a weeping mother's embrace.

"I never," said little Lily, "knew what God made the little stars for, and now I know, mamma. It is to light little children home when they get lost in the great wood. How good is God, mamma, how very good.' But the wise mother chose to tell the little girls all about the pretty stars. What bright worlds they are, like our own, how thousands of busy people live on them just as we do on the earth. How wonderfully they are made to revolve on an axis round and round; and how good is God.

Correspondence.

MORRISTOWN, Tenn., March 25th, 1872.

Dear Pilgrim: I will, through your columns, give a little church news, as I am always glad to hear of Zion's prosperity in other parts of the world. I took a short trip across French Broad River. Left home on Friday and returned Monday morning, having several appointments during my absence. There are a few scattered members on either side of the river, who are hungry for the Bread of Life, and who are alive to the work, standing up faithly to the cause, and who, I believe, are shining as bright lights in a dark place. But we do not generally have as comfortable synagogues to preach in as the brethren elsewhere have, though in a humble cot or lonely cabin we are glad to meet God's creatures and distribute to them the Bread of Life. Many for the first time heard the doctrine as understood and preached by the Brethren, and many, from their own acknowledgment, had their buildings much damaged by removing the props and braces, and thus exposing them to a storm of truth, which are easily overthrown when on a sandy foundation. Some with such purpose of heart, and interest in the subject of righteousness, spent nearly whole nights in searching the Scriptures, to see if these things be so.

How earnest the soul when once awakened to its responsibilities, and many away beyond where the Brethren have preached, are crying for spiritual food. Oh! how many precious souls are famishing—perishing for the Bread of life? Who will feed them? whose duty is it to feed them? Will the church lie upon its oars, fold its arms, and be at ease in Zion, while children are crying with hunger? Will the church still say, be ye warmed, and be ye filled, and yet give them not the things they need? Shall the cry of the sinner ascend the hill of the Lord, and reciprocate from the God of Sabbaoth, upon the church of Christ, because the stone that was started to roll, has not been rolled along with that rapidity that was designed? Shall not sinners be warned? Shall they go down to destruction without an invitation to the Mercy Seat? Oh, how many servants may be at ease in their comfortable homes, and never go out into the lonely hovels of the poor, to pour in the oil and the wine. I do not mean ministers directly, but all are the servants of God and can bear up the arms of the missionaries who should be sent into all regions of the country where good might be done in saving souls.

We start out on a little mission, having our heart turned to the cause of Jesus in preaching the Word—we receive such warm entreaties and soilcitations to come to us and preach, come and preach for us. Oh, come, we heard the sound of the trumpet in the distance, we want you to come and preach that doctrine to us. It is what we have wanted to hear long ago. We have been taught, but not the whole truth. The shepherds that have been feeding us, lead us to the door of refuge, and leave us under the eaves of the roof to a more intense exposure to the storm. Come and preach for us, and so the servant might go on to the Gulf coast, carried along with solicitations, and leave his family and dear ones behind to the charity of a merciless world. But how can one cog drive the wheel alone? All the cogs in the wheel of God's Providence, in the church, must do their work in their turn. If any are broken out the wheel must stop, and if the wheel is stopped, the work ceases. I fear there are cogs wanting, or the power is not sufficient for the work, if the cogs in the wheel are all in order. I make this simple illustration to show that, though a minister is ever so willing and desirous of fulfilling the pleasure of so many outside solicitations, and filling so many Macedonia calls, he is but one cog in the wheel and cannot perform all the work alone, when there is work for all. Let us work while it is day with us. There is no organized church of the Brethren in the section where I was, and a great region on southward where the Brethren are not known, and where such missionaries would be hailed with gladness.

We expect soon to leave this section and go north-west, any who may wish to address us, can do so at Burnettsville, White Co., Ind., until further notice is given through the PILGRIM. S. MYERS.

Dear Pilgrim: I will give you a few thoughts that have been passing through my mind for some time. One thing is, I have seen it stated that the Brethren are doing well toward cleaving to the old land-marks that our fathers set up, considering the circumstances by which we are surrounded out here in the West. This would seem to say, we cannot worship God and keep His commandments, and keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Now, my dear brethren, what are we surrounded with outside of the church, that hinders us from being like our fathers and mothers were fifty years ago? I have not met with anything yet. The people of the world here are no worse than anywhere else. We have the same liberty to worship God here in the West that you have in the East, and we can dress as plain as we desire. No one says a word about our clothing except it be a few such individuals who know no better. We care not for their laughing at us, if the Lord is for us who can be against us? I am fearful that the idea has got amongst us that if we are not so particular about plain dressing &c., the Church will prosper better in the way of gaining members or numbers, and then after we get stronger, we can prune off those fashionable and unnecessary clothing, but dear brethren, I fear when we get to that, there will be too many that will not bear pruning, and consequently will suffer to be cut down. A nursery must be pruned when young, and all the unnecessary branches cut off while the trees are small, and be careful that there are no caterpillar webs on them, or they will never bear good fruit, and will finally die webbed all over.

The people here, are a church going people, paying the best attention to preaching I ever had the honor of preaching to, well behaved as any people can be and more so than in older settled countries. There is one mistake we are laboring under, as well as all other denominations, and that is this: we send preachers that are too young to those new countries.—They do not have the same influence over the people as a preacher of some age and experience even if he is not what is called a great preacher. In this our day, a man that will preach the truth and obey it himself—live up to all he preaches for others to do, is the man that will do some good here for himself and all that hear him. I had preached but a few times here when, after the close of one of our meetings, a Baptist gentleman came to me and said, "you are the man that the people of this country wanted long ago. If you preach the gospel as you did to-day, you will always have a large congregation here that will listen to what you tell them, for we are willing to be taught by age and experience, but mere striplings of boy preachers that the most of our denominations send out here in the West to preach, the people will not pay much attention to." At first I thought he was only a flatterer and so let it pass for what it was worth. Since that time, I have kept an eye in that direction and I see the gentleman's words are accompanied by a great deal of truth. The people pay better attention to any man that has the advantage of age and experience.

I will just say that the young man who comes out West and thinks he knows everything and can make the people believe it, will sell himself unbought, the first sermon he preaches; but if he uses wisdom and allows that the people know something too, and lives up to his profession, he cannot find a more friendly people in the world than he will find here in Holt Co., Mo., and other counties as far as I am able to judge. I have been trying to preach the gospel for twelve months and do not think I have made one enemy by preaching the Word, and our congregations are as large now, if not larger, than they were at the commencement of our meetings, and I hope, by strictly adhering to the preaching of the gospel and living up to its requirements, that God will pour out His blessings upon the church of Bethel in Holt Co., Mo., to cause a large ingathering of precious souls in the future. The present indications are for such an event to take place before many days. May God grant it, is my earnest prayer.

I have been here one year and God has blessed me and family with extra good health, so much so that I was able to fill all appointments, as many as four and five a month, myself, which is more than I did in what is called a healthy country. Let me tell you, my dear brethren, the Lord will make any country healthy when we trust and serve Him in sincerity and an honest purpose of heart. When we go to a new country to do the work of the Lord and not too much of our own work, the Lord will take care of us. Do not fear a sickly country if you feel at heart that your desire is to enrich the kingdom of the Lord. God will bless us with health in the midst of sickness and a sickly country. Don't fear, only believe, He will do it. God will keep us us from harm. I do think if we knew how much easier we live here in the West than one-half of the people do more East and South, the West would not be so dreaded on account of sickness. I see that lay members are not as fearful of getting sick as ministers. They are moving West everywhere and are calling for ministering brethren to come and help them to sow the good seed, but few calls are filled. Ought this so to be? Brethren, I have filled one call, I have come out here in my old days to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, and have a large field of labor for a man of my age. I do not intend to run over the whole field at once and half do the work, raw land is first broken up, the fenced, and then cultivated. It then produces a good crop. So it is in a spiritual point of view. We must not begin to preach the gospel in one township once, and then go to another and so on, and perhaps not get back to the place we first preached in 12 months, and thus do little good anywhere. The people in this country will come to hear the gospel preached. At every meeting there is some still coming who live farther off until all hear. The plan is to keep on at home and when we have no more sinners to preach to at, or close home, then we may have our meetings farther away. Some have meetings only once a month at home, all the other meetings so far off that those at home only get to hear preaching once a month. I think the better way is to have meeting from 5 to 15 miles apart that all can get to meeting every Sunday. In this way, the members will not grow lukewarm nor neglect the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but above all, let us preach the Word and let Ephraim alone, he is joined to his idol, and then let us live up to what we preach by being humble, meek and lowly in heart, and we have the promise of finding rest for our souls. May God grant this rest to all His people is my prayer.

Yours in the bonds of love.

A. J. CORRELL.

Editors of the Pilgrim: Please announce to the delegates and brethren coming to District Meeting of Middle Pa., that the meeting will be held, God willing, at Mohler's meeting house, three miles from Mechanicsburg, and two from Shiremanstown. Brethren coming by Railroad on the 29th of April, both East or West, will all stop off at Mechanicsburg. Those coming on the 30th will all stop off at Shiremanstown. Those coming by private conveyance will find Mohler's meeting house on the State Road, six miles south-west of Harrisburg. We also desire that some of our ministering brethren will come on Saturday, the 27th, at least as many as will enable us to hold meetings at some half dozen different points. Who will come? Let us hear by letter before the middle of April. All coming on the 27th will stop off at Mechanicsburg, on the Cumberland Valley R. R.

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of North Western Ohio, will be held, the Lord willing, in the Poplar Ridge Branch, Defiance county, in the meeting-house five miles north-east of Defiance, on the 19th day of April, 1872.

WM. NOFFSINGER.

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

Middle District of Ind. April 12th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

North eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa., Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

First District of Va., West Arm, Floyd Co., April 19th.

Please announce that the District Meeting of Northern Ind. and Southern Mich. will be held in the Pine Creek congregation at their west meeting house, April 18th, 1872, by Divine permission. Those coming by railroad will stop at Walkerton.

JESSE CALVERT.

LOVEFEAST.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECLEY.

MONEY LIST.

David B. Martin,	$2.00
Jonas Leedy,	1.25
Maggie Snider,	1.50
Hagerstown, Ind.,	3.50
Mary Shellenberger,	.80
Daniel Keller,	1.25
James A. Murray,	1.25
Jacob Bock,	2.75
Wm. Noffsinger,	.80
Joseph Kough,	1.25
Lewis Myers,	.60
Benjamin Rhodes,	1.25
John Grabill,	.80
Elihu Moore,	1.60
Samuel G. Hoover,	1.25
Abram Showalter,	1.00
Elias Miller,	1.00
Eli Beagle,	.92
Thomas D. Lyon,	7.50
J. D. Nicholson,	.95
Humphrey Talhelm,	2.00
Jacob S. Harshberger,	1.25
Catharine Tresler,	1.25
John Clapper,	4.00
Mathias Frantz,	8.50
D. B. Mentzer,	10.00
D. L. Replogle,	1.25
Daniel Bock,	1.55
George Worst,	23.50
Andrew Fees,	2.30
S. P. Brumbaugh,	1.25
Lewis W. Teeter,	2.00
George Wagoner,	8.50

Editor's Department.

CRITICISM.

We have in this week's issue by request, given the Vindicator the benefit of a commendatory notice which we think is not quite "tit for tat" or exactly in harmony with some of the insinuations thrown out against the PILGRIM in the colums of the Vindicator sometime ago, yet we believe it to be altogether in harmony with the spirit of Christ, and therefore do it cheerfully.

We will just here say to our brother of the Vindicator, do not admit or publish articles that are intended to undervalue or injure the character of your cotemporaries, it is not charitable, it is not edifying. You may think that you are getting along quite smoothly and without blame, but if we were to publish the darts that are hurled at the Vindicator, you might be surprised, but we do not suppose that it would make you or anybody else any better, therefore such communications are committed to the flames. We do not speak thus out of disrespect to the Vindicator, as we can say with Bro. Bosserman that in it, we read some very good things to which it would be well if our brethren would give heed, but we are weary and sick of this practice of throwing darts at each other, just as if we were enemies to each other, and to the Cross of Christ. Let us not forget that we are brethren, and that our mission is to labor for the welfare of the Church and the conversion of sinners. If we do this, we do well.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

What course is to be taken in regard to members who commune with another denomination? Is it not wrong, and should they not make an acknowledgment to the church and promise to do so no more? Information is requested as soon as possible, through the PILGRIM.

J. M. WELLS.

In this age of liberalism, the above query would seem radical and by popular christendom, considered narrow mindedness, &c., but nevertheless, there is but one body, and that is the Lord's body. The communion consists of emblems representing the broken body and shed blood of the Savior and to be prepared and partaken of by the Lord's people.

In the New Testament we have revealed who are, and how we are to become the Lord's people and what are their privileges, and no pope, any priest, clergy, nor anybody else has right to extend privileges that belong to God only, and the determination of every child of God should be that of Balaam. "If thou give me a house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the Lord." This "Linsy Woolsy" doctrine has ever been hateful in the eyes of the Lord and a dishonor to His Law. We, as a people, are noted for our liberality in things that belong to us, but when we come to the ordinances of the Lord's house we feel ourselves as servants and therefore cannot go beyond the commandments of the Lord, and the man who extends liberalities to all in partaking of the communion, usurps power and is a violator of the law. The emblems of the body and blood of Christ can only be partaken in His church and any brother or sister who eats with any other body, in this capacity, dishonoreth the Lord's body and is a transgressor and virtually dismember themselves from the church. All churches profess that their denomination is founded upon the oracles of God, and as a consequence all others cannot be founded quite on the truth.

This is a rational, reasonable and honorable conclusion, and therefore any church holding this position cannot consistently invite members of other churches who do not, in their estimation, obey the whole truth to commune with them. The idea of open communion being expressive of charity and liberality is false, deceptive and hypocritical, and is in all cases done for the gratification of carnal sympathies. Therefore let every man honor his profession. If he is convinced that Methodism, Lutheranism or Calvinism is founded upon the Gospel, let him become a member of the church of his religious convictions and enter their communions, or if he finds that it is his duty to be buried with Christ in baptism and obey all the commands and ordinances of God's house, let him enter the church that carries out these principles, and participate in its communions, but this thing of preaching up anything and everything having the garb of religion as being right, is simply ridiculous. We believe in no such doctrine. God has given us but one plan of salvation, and the soul that is not willing to obey the whole will, is not worthy and has no promise of being an heir. Therefore we are to be called a peculiar people and any brother or sister who persists in fellowshipping with any church that refuses to comply with the whole truth, let them be unto thee as an heathen man and publican. We believe this to be rational, charitable and according to the spirit of the Gospel and the order of the Brethren. "Come out from among them, be ye a separate people and I will receive you saith the Lord,"

REVIVALS.—The Christian Advocate reports extensive revivals in portions of New England, giving accounts of 200 and 300 being converted at one place. This is nothing remarkable or strange as thousands are daily converted from one theory to another, but it would be rather strange to hear of many being regenerated or born again. A man may be converted and yet live and die an unregenerated sinner. If such could have access to Eld. J. S. Flory's tracts, it might be the means of their salvation. Brethren, there was never a time that calls so loudly for this subject to be thoroughly ventilated as the present. Help us to spread them broadcast over the land and God will give a copious harvest.

OPEN COMMUNION. — Eighteen ministers of the Baptist Church have declared, during the past year, in favor of open communion.—Christian Observer.

Such news may be a pleasant dogma for pedo-baptists, but what kind of a bearing will it have on Baptist churches? Is it consistent for ministers to stand up and preach that nothing short of immersion is baptism and then turn around and commune with those who were never baptized, as brethren in Christ? If a man is a fit communicant to approach the Lord's Table without being immersed he is certainly prepared to die without it.

PERSONAL.

ELY KENTNER. A. J. Correll's address, is Forest City, Holt Co., Mo.

SARAH P. O. Pa. To the brethren and sisters of this place, we have an apology to offer. In our old books our lists were considerably crowded, and the Sarah office was on the same page with another office, and so closely connected, that in transcribing the upper office or list, Sarah was not noticed and the whole page was canceled, thus stopping the PILGRIM to our Sarah list. We confess this to be rather an awkward mistake, for which we are truly sorry and hope our readers at that place will bear with us. We have now booked the names and sent all the back Nos. that we cou'd find, If any of our readers papers stops coming, they should write us at once, as we gladly correct all mistakes, GIVE US YOUR NAMES. There are a number of contributors sending us articles minus their names. We are willing to withold names when so requested, but feel ourselves under no obligations to publish any article without having the writers name. Please remember this.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL FOR APRIL is replete with good things for the boys and girls. The Prize story is continued with increasing interest; and Prudy resumes her inimitable sketches of the Life and Adventures of Tommy Bancroft. Olive Thorne in her "Tale of an X." describes the process of making Greenbacks;—and Mrs. Miller continues her Summer Days at Kirkwood. Julia F. Snow furnishes a very pretty story entitled "Winds and Waves," —and from Rev. J. D. Stong we have an interesting pen-picture of "Nang Chu," a specimun of the coming woman. The poetry in this number is from Mr. M. B. C. Slade, A. H. Poe and other: the editorials by Mrs. Miller, are "Old Doors and In." "Work by the Job"—"The Hill Difficulty," etc. Prudy's pocket has many spicy letters from the children; and Private Queer proposes many knotty questions to be answered and puzzles to be solved.

The Little Corporal has recently absorbed "Work and Play," formerly published at Springfield, Mass., another evidence of its prosperity and increasing popularity.

JOHN E. MILLER, Publisher.
Chicago, Ill.

ENCOURAGING —The large increase of names on our books the last few weeks Remember, it is never too late to solicit new subscribers. Our list of contributors are growing larger almost daily, and as a result, the PILGRIM is becoming more interesting. Only $1.00 to end of the year.

HYMN BOOKS.—We can fill no minor orders for Hymn Books, until the publishers get a new edition out, except a small number of German which we will dispose of to those wishing such books. We have both single and double.

ERRATA.—In Obituary Notice of PILGRIM No. 12, read Leannah Abshire, instead of Hannah Abshire. D. P. H.

MARRIED.

HOMAN—MILLER.—March 24th by Eld. George Hoover, at his residence near Sulphur Springs, Ind., David H. Homan and Hannah Miller both of Henry county, Ind

FRY—PAINTER.—March 21st, by Elder George Hoover, at the residence of the bride's parents, Joseph Fry and Mary J. Painter, both of Henry county, Ind.

DIED.

SANDERS.—Died in Henry county, Ind., March 25th, 1872. Lilly O. Sanders, daughter of George W. and Francis Sanders, aged 5 months and 11 days. Funeral service by the Brethren.

CASH.—At Double Pipe Creek, Monocacy Church, Md., on Thursday, March the 16th, of measles, Nannie E. daughter of Mr. Lewis and Maggie Cash, aged 8 yrs, 4 months and 12 days. Funeral services by Mr. Fair of the Lutheran church and the writer.

SAYLER.—On Wednesday the 18th, at the same place of same disease, Mary Susan, daughter of Elder D. R. and sister Sarah Sayler, aged 5 years and 23 days. Funeral services by the writer and brother Hoover.

RENNER.—On Thursday the 21st at the same place, and same disease, Sarah Catherine, daughter of brother Wm. H. and sister Lizzie Renner, aged 3 years, 8 mos. and 26 days. Funeral services by the writer.

EMMERT.—Near the same place on Friday the 22nd, of measles and whooping cough, Ella May, daughter of brother Jos. S. and sister Annie E. Emmert, and grand daughter of Elder D. P. and Sarah Sayler, aged 1 year, 4 months and 2 days. Funeral services by Elders D. R. Stiteley and Henry Sayler.

LAMBERT.—At the same place of spinal disease, on Sunday the 24th, Arthur Leon, son of Jesse F. and Mary A. Lambert, aged 4 years, 11 months and 8 days. Funeral services in New Windsor, Carroll county, by Mr. Watterman of the Presbyterian church and the writer.

D. P. SAYLER.

Visitor please copy

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE

APIARY FOR APRIL.

We presume all bees that have been kept in depositories and cellars, are now set out on their Summer stands. Some may show signs of dysentery, which destroyed a great many colonies the previous winter. This nasty disease may be known by a sickening smell emitting from the bees and combs, which is generally caused by consuming soured honey, and kept in long confinement. They may be cured by feeding them syrup made from coffee sugar, after they have been set out on their Summer stand. Bees should now be examinied, if not before this, and the exact condition of every stock noted. If any lack stores to carry them through till flowers produce a supply of honey, they should be fed. A few pounds of honey will land them safely through on the flowery banks of Spring when the industrious little fellows will richly repay all labor and expense. We may make use of the axiom right here, that what is worth doing at all, is worth doing well, and at the right time. To have early and large swarms, stimulate them to early breeding.

E. J. WORST.

New Pittsburg, Ohio.

TO GO OR NOT TO GO.

To go or not to go, that is the question.
Whether it is better to bear the ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of.
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all,
And thus, the native hue of resolution
Is sickled o'er with the pale cast of thought.
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard their currents turn awry.
And lose the name of action.

Such is the state of mind in which the unhappy Pope at Rome is, at the present moment. Every other week we are assured by telegraph that his trunk is packed, and he is about to go from the city to some part of the world not yet fixed upon. The intervening week brings another despatch, stating that he has finally determined not to go. So that we may safely say,—

"To go or not to go, that is the question."

In the meantime, Rome is going onward nobly. The Pope appears to be of the least possible account, and things are done daily in the city that must convince even him that the world moves, and with it, Rome. What with new Protestant churches, free schools, public schools, Sunday schools, newspapers, Bibles and oral debates, the city is fairly revolutionized, and the Pope deliberates,—

"Whether 'twere better to bear the ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of."

We will stick to the opinion that he will stick to Rome.—New York Observer.

ROMAN CATHOLICISM IN PHILADELPHIA.

One of our secular papers has recently published the following statement as exhibiting the present condition of the Roman Catholic Church in this city. It seems to have been made up with great care, and is probably very near the truth. The Roman Catholic population of Philadelphia is about 250,000. The number of children attending parochial schools about 20,000. Secular priests in the diocese, 249; priests of religious orders, 35—total number of priests, 183. Priests engaged in missionary duties, 161; priests engaged in ecclesiastical institutions, 16; absent, 7. Churches built, 109; churches in course of erection, 5; stations attended, 31, chapels, 35. Theological students in the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, 101, clerical students in the American College at Rome, 4, clerical students of religious orders, 46. Ecclesiasticel Institutions 2, colleges, 3, religious orders of wo men, 12, number of convents, 13, number of religious women, 565. Number of Brothers of the Christian Schools, 40. academies and parochial schools under the charge of the Christian Brothers, 7. number of scholars taught by the Christian Brothers, 3,000. Academies and select schools taught by religious women, 22, number of young ladies attending these academies and select schools, 1,692, parochial schools, 54. Orphan Asylums, 5, number of orphans therein, 805, hospitals, 2, widow's asylum, 1, home for the aged poor, 1, conferences of St. Vincent de Paul, 21.

PERSECUTION OF THE JEWS.—A correspondent writes to the London papers:

"The latest news from Roumania is truly heartrending. Great as have been the cruelties committed at Ismail, they were by far exceeded by the horrors perpetrated at Cahul. This is a town with a population of about 7,000. 1,000 of whom are jews. These were suddenly set upon by their fellow-townsmen, and for three days beaten, wounded, plundered driven out of their houses, which were battered to ruins and the tenants forced to take refuge in the barracks, where, instead of being defended, they were allowed again to be beaten, and for severl days left without food. One of the sufferes, named Gold, more courageous than the other victims, defended his house for three days, his four sons standing by him. He made them swear that, should he fall, they would continue to fight. The bands surrounding his house were for a considerable time held at bay by these brave men, but they were at last compelled to give way as the villians set fire to the premises. The two synagogues were devastated and polluted, and the sacred objects found scattered in all directions."

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doc trine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINIED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister: The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real. The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery: It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation: Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts. 10 copies 80 cents, 20 copies $1.50, 50 copies $3.00, 100 copies $5.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABSQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex. P. M.	Mail A. M.	STAIONS.	Down Train. Ex. A. M.	Mail P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	FishersSum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th. of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2 50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

ACENTS WANTED FOR

"JESUS."

BY CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.

The most popular and rapidly-selling religious work ever issued. For Circulars, address U. S. PUBLISHING CO. N. Y. Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family	$7.00
" Superfine	7.50
" fancy brands	8.00
" Rye	5.00
CORN MEAL	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel	1.65
" red, "	1.45
CORN	.80
RYE	1.05
OATS	.62

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands	$7.25
" Family	6.85
" Extra	6.65
" Lowgrades	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel	1.60
" Hill "	1.60
" Winter red "	1.75
CORN	.48
OATS	.45
RYE	.49
BARLEY	.65

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,			10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,			8 cts.
Six months,	do	do	6 cts.
One Year,	do	do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,
Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Arkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, APRIL 16, 1872. NO. 16.

POETICAL.

OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they beckon to me—
Loved ones who've crossed to the further side;
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are lost in the dashing tide.
There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes, the reflection of heaven's own blue;
He crossed in the twilight, gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.
We saw not the angels that met him there,
The gate of the city we could not see:
Over the river, the mystic river,
My brother stands ready to welcome me!

Over the river the boatman pale
Carried another, the household pet;
Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale—
Darling Minnie! I see her yet!
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark;
We watched it glide from the silver sands
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.
We know she is safe on the further side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river, the mystic river,
My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We hear a dip of the golden oars,
And catch a glimpse of the snowy sail,
And lo! they have passed from our yearning hearts;
They cross the stream and are gone for aye;
We may not sunder the veil apart
That hides from our vision the gates of day.
We only know that their barks no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea,
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch, and beckon, and wait for me!

And I sit and think when the sunset's gold
Is flushing river, and hill, and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold,
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar.
I shall watch for the gleam of the flapping sail;
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand;
I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale,
To the better shore of the spirit land.
I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet shall the meeting be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The Angel of Death shall carry me.

For the Pilgrim.

WISDOM.

This is a subject that is justly receiving a very considerable degree of attention at this time in the world, and also among the Brethren, as it stands in relation to ignorance, and feeling a decided interest in the subject I concluded to offer a few thoughts for the consideration of those who may be like myself, young pilgrims on the way to Zion.

There is nothing more clearly or explicitly defined than wisdom is as having two separate and distinct characteristics, aims and ends, and as we believe that the two kinds of wisdom are often interchanged and by complicating their meaning and characteristics one is often made to fill the office designed for the other, hence there is an obvious and great reason why we should watch the process and be able to distinguish between the two and keep them separate, as they were originally intended to be.

We read in Holy Writ of a wisdom that is called the "wisdom of the world," and we also learn that whatsoever is of the earth is "earthy and speaks of the earth." Then we must look to the world to find this wisdom, and in the world it is and has been in great profusion from time immemorial, for Christ and His apostles met with and had to contend against this thing in their day, and as the world claims to be progressing rapidly in the arts and sciences, and as we also learn that "in the time of the end many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased," we have no reason to look for any diminution of worldly wisdom yet, and as the wisdom of this world is pronounced "foolishness in the sight of God" we think it very important that we be able to characterize each and distinguish the one from the other. Worldly wisdom is emphatically and exclusively embodied in that one word, science, and as almost every mechanical art, and almost every worldly profession has been, or is being, reduced to a science, these only professing to be of the "earth earthy," we consider the term as here used as being in its proper sphere, but when worldly wisdom seeks to enter the sacred precincts of Religion and threatens to subvert and spiritualize and literalize according to its own theory the Divine Laws of Heaven, we condemn it, and right upon the threshold of this Christian enclosure we ought all to meet it and battle with it until every such attempt shall cease.

That Science has entered the portals of different Churches in different ages of the world is a fact not to be denied, and it is also undeniable that whenever and wherever Heavenly wisdom and worldly wisdom became intermixed in the teachings of any particular sect, right then and right there you will find the beginning of a retrograde movement on the part of that Church, and how often do we find them degenerating until scarcely a vestige of their ancient principles remain.

And from among the ruins of just such fallen structures do we find springing up every species of Infidelity, Atheism, Deism, Materialism, Spiritualism, Millerism, Mormonism, and every other in the long catalogue of isms that are now harassing, contending against, and trying to obscure or obliterate the beautiful Scripture truths that are believed and practiced by the peculiar people of God. How often do we hear those scientific preachers, those eminent, popular, scholarly Doctors of Divinity, inveighing against the orthodoxy of the inspired writers; how often do we find them spiritualizing when literal, and literalizing when spiritual, the different commands of our Savior, and clothing their heretical ideas with a language that renders them barbarians to their congregations, and their congregations barbarians unto them, and all this simply in order that they may be able to harmonize the two antagonistic elements of worldly wisdom and Scriptural truth and prevent their followers from detecting the discrepancy between the two, and induce them to accept their fallacious doctrine and pay their princely salaries and pew rents, thus making merchandise of the people and win for themselves the just application of the language of the apostle James, "whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not and their damnation slumbereth not."

And these scientific religionists would also make us believe that worldly wisdom is necessary to enable us to attain to that sublime degree of happiness, that inward peace of mind intended to be received and enjoyed in consequence of an implicit faith in, and entire obedience to the Divine commands, thus repudiating or making of non-effect or of minor importance, the grace of Almighty God, and thus making man a partner with our Lord Jesus Christ in lifting man out of the slough of despondency and making him the beneficiary of that great peace and happiness which we believe is received only and entirely from our Divine Master.

But, brethren, while we believe that worldly wisdom is good and necessary in worldly business, in the religion of Jesus it is a hindrance and oftentimes, we are afraid, a curse, for Paul says "though an angel from Heaven preach any other Gospel than that ye have received let him be accursed."

And there is another idea obtaining, even among the Brethren, which is that, in these latter days when worldly wisdom has been increased to such a prodigious extent, and has been imbibed by the preachers of other denominations and been incorporated into their lives, writings, and teachings, that it is necessary that we follow their example in the preparation of our ministry in order that we be able to cope with them in argument and be able to defend our tenets from their attacks.

Brethren, this want was not felt in the earlier ages of the Church; the Word of God was the man of counsel then, and our Savior, the great Head of the Church, supplied necessary ability and wisdom for every time of need, and if we have so far degenerated that it requires a high school education to enable us to comprehend and teach the doctrines of Christ in their purity, I am very much afraid there is something else lacking that we can never find in musty books or be taught within the walls of a College or University, or that all the boasted wisdom of the world will ever be able to supply, and that something is the presence of the Holy Spirit, whose office and pleasure it is to lead us into all truth. And there is included in that word truth all the knowledge and wisdom needful for us to possess to fit us for our duty here and our happiness hereafter.

Oh! let us disabuse our minds of all such dangerous notions, and let us pray our Heavenly Father to give us grace, to give Heavenly wisdom that we may be able to understand His Word, that we may be able with singleness of heart to trust in that wisdom and practice what it teaches, for by so doing we shall enjoy a far greater happiness in this world than can be derived from any other source, and by virtue of this wisdom, and this only, can we ever hope to enjoy the happiness enjoyed by the saints in Heaven.

May God in His infinite goodness enable us all to repel every advance made toward us by the wicked one, and to keep ourselves free from heresy in every form, and permit us all to meet at last around His shining throne in the spirit land, is the prayer of your unworthy brother

MARTIN J. McCLURE.

Lower Fall Creek, Ind.

A WORD TO YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN.

I take the liberty to copy the following, taken from Hearth and Home, as expressive of my own views on the subject on which it treats.

"A young Englishman of our acquaintance, who recently came to this country under the impression that he could make money more easily here, though he had no very distinct idea how, wrote to Mr. Greeley, after exhausting every other resource, asking his advice. He described himself as liberally educated, a graduate from Oxford, but without experience or skill in any particular business, and of course, out of money. Mr. Greeley's reply, which we have been allowed to decipher, begins by saying to the young man, 'I utterly detest and abhor the kind of education that you have received,' which, he says, embraces everything except that which it should embrace—the mastery of some business that will yield a support. Mr. Greeley thanks God that he himself graduated from "a New England common school," not that he undervalues the knowledge to be secured in universities, we take it, but because colleges fail to provide adequately for the future of the man by making him a skilled workman in some recognized business which will certainly yield him a support, and the suggestion is one well worthy of attention. Mr. Greeley thinks every man, no matter what his station in life may be, ought to know a business at which he can earn a livelihood with his hands—that every man should know a trade, in fact; and in a general way he is doubtless right.

But what do our colleges train men for? They give us incidentally doctors and lawyers in such abundance that the half of them never secure a footing in their professions, while the non-professional graduates are turned out liberally educated, as the phrase goes, but utterly destitute of any kind of fitness for life. They can read Greek and Latin and know the calculus, and have a limited acquaintance with the mixed mathematics and the sciences. But how many of them know how to make even ten dollars a week at any kind of business? How many can utilize their liberal education? How many could command a salary on their merits without influence and patronage? Men who are in journalism see more of the misery wrought by our defective educational system than others do, because men of education, out of money, invariably try literature, under the delusion that any man with an education can write for the press. They come by scores confident of their qualification, while they admit that they have no experience, and some of them even confess themselves void of an idea as to what they shall write about, imagining that the men who are to pay for their matter can afford also to supply them with its framework and spirit.

People talk a great deal about the miseries of the poor and the struggles of the working classes, but there is probably far more real suffering in the struggles of those who want to work but do not know how. We can conceive of no more unhappy person than the man whose ideas have been refined into almost morbid sensitiveness by a liberal education, without money, and with no skill at anything profitable. A complete education is a noble possession, but the education which does not embrace the mastery of some business is lamentably incomplete, and the parent who makes a blacksmith out of his son does him a much greater kindness than the one who makes a mere graduate of the boy and leaves him to battle with life wholly unqualified for the struggle.

The fault probably lies less with the colleges, which educate the man for the sake of the man, than with the parents who fail to add to what the college has done, the practical teachings necessary to fit the man for a life of usefulness. There is something also to be set down to the mistaken feeling that a profession is more honorable than a trade, and to the snobbishness which pushes into colleges and into the professions many men whom nature has intended to build houses, or to make machinery, or to till the soil. To most men, a collegiate education is very valuable when joined to a business education of some sort, but some are better without it; and no man is fitted for life who has nothing more than a diploma on which to rely."

Dear reader, there is so much truth in the above that I give it my approval, and submit it to the consideration of all. The disposition to give and to obtain more than a good common business education is prevalent among the people, and as like begets like, it is not at all strange if the Brethren be carried away with the delusion that their sons and daughters must be equal with their neighbors, and so seek the college to give them an education whether nature fitted them for it or not.

We do not know whether we understand Bro. Sayler or not, but we think nature has fitted every man, and every woman too, to be educated, unless deprived of their normal faculties. That thousands mistake their calling we admit, but we do not blame education for it, but a lack of it. True education will assist a man in choosing his calling and save him from blundering into a profession for which he has no qualifications.

It is well known that when a man has once gone through college, and has a diploma, it is seldom he returns to useful labor afterwards: some profession is sought after, whether nature has qualified him for it or not; nine times out of ten it has not, and failure is the sad result. We have many a quack doctor, petty lawyer, and hypocritical hireling preacher, who in nature had admirably fitted and qualified for carpenters, stone-masons, brick-layers or farmers, as the result of this thirst for college education. Our land is well filled with professional thieves, pickpockets, burglars, counterfeiters, forgers, &c.; I think the Brethren need not lend a helping hand to manufacture more.

I have a case just at hand. A very worthy citizen in our State gave his son a good college education. Nature had fitted him for labor on the farm, or at the forge; but this cannot be thought of, now he has gone through college and has a diploma; the practice of medicine must be his profession, but it would not go; nature had not cut him out for a doctor. The last time I saw him he was acting as agent for a Life Insurance Company in New York. A few days ago he, with two other college qualified men, were arrested in Baltimore as counterfeiters and "check raisers," and such is the evidence of their guilt that the prospect for the balance of their life to be spent in the Penitentiary is good, quite good. This is only one among the thousands of similar cases. It is known to all who wish to know, that our country is flooded with educated theives and scoundrels of every name and character, from the fact of there being at least ten times more learned men than there are positions for them.

Here is another idea that we cannot quite understand. We always thought that the advantages learned men have over unlearned, is that they are fitted to any position in life, while unlearned men are not. A liberal and proper education unfits a man for no profession in life. To-day some of our best and most successful farmers and mechanics are well informed and liberally educated men, but we are aware that Bro. Sayler does not object to this stamp of education but that which is generally obtained in Universities, Colleges, &c. Education, like religion, has been abused, but religion is religion still, and so is education, and because our popular institutions of learning have run things to excess, is no reason why we should discard everything outside of a common school education. Our Common Schools are not, and cannot be a standard, as many of them are a mere sham and have nothing in them but the name, therefore if our children are to know that the United States does not comprise the whole globe, or be able to read, write and speak the English language properly, they must be sent somewhere else. Where that place shall be we will let every brother and sister decide, but if we had children to educate we would send them to the Brethren's schools, if properly conducted.

Their education has made them too proud to beg, and too lazy to work, hence they employ their skill in stealing, defranding, counterfeiting, &c.

The brethren attribute this general depravity to the immoral, or irreligious influence of college training, and argue that our religion would exert a more healthy influence over the student. Brethren, this I deny. It is the principle in college education, and not the method of imparting it, that spoils the man. It matters but little whose hand holds the book, or whose ears hear the words when the student recites his lessons. Neither does it amount to much whose mouth utters the morning or evening prayers, the student's heart is seldom in it, and his soul hears it not. The brethren's boys and girls are, by nature, as bad as other people's, and if not properly and religiously trained and instructed at home they need not send them to college to get it, for the school discipline will not likely supply the defect.

Is brother Sayler then opposed to education? Surely not; but he contends that such an education as Horace Greeley has, is sufficient for all practical purposes. I mean, to begin life and business with, and if God has endowed the individual with special intellect it will most surely be developed. Mr. Greeley is a living monument of the fact. He is this day considered by the learned to be among, if not one of the best English scholars in America. And his mental faculties were developed in the hard knocks and struggles in life.

We have no disposition to disrespect, or underestimate Mr. Greely's scholarship, but Bro. Sayler should remember that his productions are never criticised, as no person is expected to read his writing. His manuscript is put it type, or transcribed, by men who think they know what he wishes to say, but if any get hold of it who don't know, he is made to say things that he never thought of, which by the public, is thought no crime as nothing better is expected. Although Bro. Sayler holds Mr. Greeley's education as a sample, we are glad that he was not one of his students in penmanship, at least.

These criticisms were not made out of any disrespect to the writer, nor in the spirit of fault-finding, but simply given as ideas suggested while reading the manuscript.

An educated man without natural gifts for professional pursuits is a nuisance, if not a downright bigoted fool, while to the mechanical vocations he might be an honor.

D. P. SAYLER.

LITTLE TEMPTATIONS. John Newton says:—"Satan seldom comes to a Christian with great temptations or with a temptation to commit a great sin. You bring a green log and a candle together, and they are very safe neighbors; but bring a few shavings and set them alight, and then bring a few small sticks and let them take fire, and the log be in the midst of them, and you will soon get rid of your log. And so it is with little sins. You will be startled with the idea of committing a great sin, and so the devil brings you a little temptation and leaves you to indulge yourself. 'There is no great harm in this,' 'no great peril in that,' and so by those little chips we are first easily lighted up, and at last the green log is burned. "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation."

The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity, as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame.

To seek the redress of grievances by going to law is like sheep running for shelter to a bramble bush.

OUR NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

Our approaching Annual Meeting is looked to by many, and should be looked to by the whole church, with interest. It should not be forgotten that matters of importance will be before the Council. Consequently, the church should avail itself of every means within its reach to be fully prepared to meet the responsible work that will devolve upon it. The work to be done will not devolve upon the Elders or official members, or upon any particular number of members of the church. Whatever active and public part some may take more than others, the views of our Brotherhood, in regard to the liberty and duty of all the members of the church in transacting the business of the church and our order of doing business, are such that no member is entirely exhonerated from duty or service. Every individual member, as a general rule, is permitted both to speak and vote in our Church Councils. This being the case, all the members of the church, both male and female, should feel a share of responsibility resting upon them. And any measure that is likely to effect the unity, the purity, and prosperity, and the efficiency of the church in converting sinners, should be regarded with interest by all the members of the church, and all should exercise their influence judiciously, to have every thing acted and settled by the church according to the Gospel. No member of the church should feel that he has no influence to put forth in doing the business of the church. Every real member of the body or church of Christ has an influence; and for that influence each will be held accountable. Does not and will not every member of the church feel a concern and care for the success of the church? And that care will, at times when the church has trouble and dfficulties to meet and dispose of, rest with weight upon the heart of every faithful disciple of Christ. And we are told what we are to do when we feel a burden of care upon the heart: "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time; casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you." (Peter 5: 6, 7.)

Then, when we are troubled, or have great care and anxiety, we are to humble ourselves and cast our cares upon the Lord; that is, we are to go to the Lord, and unbosom to Him our grief and care, and ask Him to relieve us, or to help us to bear our trouble; and if we humble ourselves before Him, and trust in Him, He will help us. And how are we to humble ourselves? There are different ways of doing this. But our purpose at this time will be best answered by referring to the way in which David humbled himself. He was troubled at the unkind treatment of his enemies, and he humbled himself before the Lord, and cast his care upon Him; and he tells us how he did it: "I humbled myself with fasting." (Ps. 35: 13.

And as there is considerable anxiety felt by many of the brethren and sisters in relation to the business that will be before our next Annual Council, we trust they will humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, and cast their care upon Him. We kindly remind them of the privilege, and also their duty, under the circumstances under which we are brought, and hope that every brother and sister will be much engaged with the Lord in prayer for the presence of His Spirit and interposition of His Power at the Annual Council, that whatever is done may be done in harmony with the Gospel, that the blessing of God may crown the work of the meeting with success, that the church may be furthered on her glorious mission of Christian reformation. And that our prayers may be more likely to prove effectual, let us with David "humble ourselves with fasting." For uniting fasting with prayer we have divine authority and the sanction of the faithful in different ages of the world.

Our Brotherhood justly regards fasting as a duty, and our Annual Meeting of 1867 recommends the observance of it. The Twenty-Third Query and Answer read as follows: "Do not the Scriptures enjoin fasting in connection with prayer as a frequent service, and will not this Meeting recommend it as a means of promoting a higher degree of perfection and holiness? Answer. We think that according to the Scriptures fasting in connection with prayer is a service that is attended with great advantages to those who observe it, and we earnestly exhort the Brethren not to neglect this duty and privilege as a private institution, (Acts 10: 30,) and that in important cases it should be enjoined upon the members as a means of sanctification for important duties." (Acts 13: 1–3.

Dear brethren and sisters, we kindly remind you of this decision of our Annual Meeting, and hope it will receive due attention. And we think it is made the duty of the teachers in the churches, according to the closing words of the article, to enjoin it upon the members in important cases. We submit it to the consideration of our ministering brethren whether the impending cases are not important ones.

Perhaps it would have been well for some day to have been fixed as a day of fasting and prayer, but as this has not been done, we do not feel like specifying any particular day, but think it best to leave it with the members to choose the day which they may find most suitable to be observed in the manner recommended. But let it be, indeed, a day of humiliation and prayer; and let not the praying for the approaching Council be confined to one day. Let it be a prominent subject in our prayers, both before the time of the Council and while it is in session.

In one of the Parables the Savior says "The kingdom of Heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods." Matt. 25: 15. The goods, we presume, may represent, in general, the interests of the church or the Gospel, with it various doctrines and ordinances. If we, then, claim to be the servants of the Lord, we should be faithful to the trust committed to us. We hope we shall all realize our responsibility and act accordingly--with the caution, discretion and wisdom which the eternal character of the subjects involved so loudly call for.

Will our brethren conducting our other papers in our fraternity give the subject of prayer and fasting in the connection with our next Annual Meeting a thought, and if they agree with us upon the propriety of fasting, will they unite with us in calling the attention of the Brotherhood to it?—Gospel Visitor.

FOR THE CAUSE.

Prudence forbids that I should say anything touching the merits of those Tracts from my pen now being published by the editors of the PILGRIM But as to the motive that prompted me to prepare them for publication, I will say it was alone through a desire to do all in my power for the advancement of the cause of truth that caused me to make an attempt in that way. I have not nor shall not ask to be paid a dollar for my labor in getting them up. Have suggested that they be put at such figures, that the cost of publication and sending out, and that only, be the money consideration, and at the price they are put nothing more can be expected. Brethren and sisters if thus our time and means are given gratuitously for the cause we are all engaged in, that of building up Zion, will not every one of you do what is in your power to make all such efforts subservient to the prosperity of our blessed Master's Kingdom. You have it in your power, by the blessing of God, to distribute all such Tracts as savor of truth broadcast around you, and thus they will tend to counteract the influences of error that is so ripe in almost every community. Your children and your neighbors are surrounded with a religion and literature that savors more of this world than of Heaven. Use every effort in your power to "cast bread upon the waters" and you shall gather. Otherwise use your means that God has blessed you with to your own exclusive interest, and the day may come that you will see your children and friends worshipping at the shrine of idolatry or something kindred thereto, and in bitterness of soul exclaim, "I only am left to serve the Lord aright." May the Lord prompt within us all a spirit of energy and love.

J. S. FLORY.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF RELIGION.—If I could choose what of all things would be at the same time most delightful and useful to me, I should prefer a firm religious belief to every other blessing, for this makes life a discipline of goodness; creates new hopes when all earthly ones vanish; throws over the decay of existence the most gorgeous of all lights; awakens life even in death; makes even torture and shame the ladder of ascent to paradise; and far above all combinations of earthly hopes, calls up the most delightful visions of the future, the security of everlasting joys, where the sensualist and the skeptic view only gloom decay, annihilation and despair.

"WHAT THEN, SHALL I DO WITH JESUS?"

Sooner or later, to every one, comes the question which Pilate asked the Jews, "What then, shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?" If a man cares nothing for the principles of science or art, or takes no interest in politics, he simply lets the subject alone, giving no thought to it. But this question will be answered, and can be but in one of two ways. No one can settle the matter for you, each soul must make its own reply. Careless, indifferent fellow sinner, do you think to evade replying to this all important question while you live? If you pass your life thus, you have already answered it unconsciously to yourself, it may be, but it has had a reply in the rejection of Him. But when at the Judgment you stand before your despised Savior, you will then think, "What shall I do with Jesus?" The one thought will be, "Oh! what will He do with me?"

THREE SIEVES.—Before we allow ourselves to find fault with any person behind his back, we should ask ourselves—1. Is it true? 2, Is it kind? 3. Is it necessary?

To be at once in any great degree loved and praised is truly rare.

The follies of youth become the vices of manhood and the disgrace of old age.

WHOEVER wishes the welfare of others has already advanced towards securing his own.

THE world would be more happy if persons gave up more time to an intercourse of friendship.

It will afford sweeter happiness in the hour of death, to have wiped one tear from the cheek of sorrow, than to have ruled an empire, to have conquered millions, or to have enslaved the world.

The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts; and the greatest art in life is to have as many as possible.

IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE ARE MANY MANSIONS.

As I am at home to-day with my family and perhaps the first time for a year, that I was not at meeting. And as the time is fast approaching when many of our fellow beings change situations, some for the better, and others no doubt for the worse, my mind was led to the time when we must all move to that land of Spirits from whence no traveler ever returned; our long home the one in Heaven, that happy place where eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, and the other place, that place of torment where the rich man opened his eyes in flames and torment, and as already, said the time is nigh at hand when many have to leave their present homes, perhaps being lawfully warned out. This being the case, would it not be very unwise on the part the person being so warned out to rest easy and unconcerned in regard to securing a home? Experience has taught me and no doubt many others that being out of a house is very unpleasant and makes us much concern, but there can be homes obtained for all of us though not without a sacrifice. When we wish to secure a home we cannot make the terms ourselves. As a general thing, there is a written or verbal agreement entered into, and some hand money needed to secure the contract, and a title promised at some stated time when the purchaser complies with the conditions of said agreement, but it is very reasonable if the purchases fails to comply with the conditions, he forfeits his hand money and can not reasonably look for a title because the conditions will be null and void and the natural consequence will be, he loses his home and his last state will be worse than the first.

Now just so in a spiritual point of view. Our text says: "In my Father's house are many mansions." The sinner when he is convicted on account of his sins, feels homeless and as though he was warned, knowing that death is certain and the time very uncertain, he feels very uneasy, this house of clay is giving way, the seed of disease may already be sown in his body that will take him to his grave. When God speaks with thunder and lightning and the rains descend, the floods come and the winds blow and beat upon them, their hope fails, they feel that their house is not built upon the rock, Christ Jesus. He then feels as though he had no claim in the Heavenly mansions. This makes the weary, heavy laden sinner, and such the Savior invites to come to Him, and here it is that we must enter into an agreement for a home in the mansions of bliss.

With men, the terms for homes are very different but not so with God. As He is no respecter of persons, the terms are made, which is repentance toward God, faith in the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and obedience to His will. By repentance we mean Godly sorrow such as would lead to newness of life. He that would come to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. While in this condition, he will be found in the secret closet, and will be found in the house of God. The right kind of repentance will produce a hungering and thirsting after righteousness. His delight will be in the law of the Lord. Our mind will be changed as well as our conversation.

And in thus giving God our whole heart without any reserve on our part, we will be born again and a rest obtained. We now love God because He has loved us. We are now willing to accept the terms of salvation, we have now paid our hand money, we have a hope provided, we comply with the conditions, but we have no title yet. Now we have arrived to the point where we fear that thousands are led astray, claiming to have a title without complying with the agreement without which we forfeit our hand money, (or repentance) and lose our title. But says one, whence come this good feeling? I feel that my sins are pardoned, I have prayed the Lord that if there is anything more for me to do as regards being baptized, feet-washing, the Lord's supper &c., to reveal it to me, which in my humble opinion, is treating God with disrespect, and in this very way they will be likely to receive a spirit of delusions, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them perish because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a lie that they all might be damned, who believed, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. 2 Thes. 2: 10, 11, 12. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven." Math. 7: 21. O! man who art thou that repliest against God. Rom. 9: 20. "Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it." Job, 40: 2.

"If our Gospel be hid it is to them that are lost, in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not lest the light of the Glorious Gospel, which is the image of God, should shine unto them." 2 Cor. 40: 3, 4. Many other passages might be produced to show us plainly that we must comply with the agreement, the word of God to secure a title. I said we have no title yet. The commission says: "the people must be taught, of course to repent and believe the Gospel and comply with it." In Mark we read; "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." And when the church was organized on the day of penticost, when inquiry was made what to do, they were told to repent and be baptized and none excepted, if they would be saved. Acts, 2 chap., and in Roman 6: 3, we read; "Know ye not that so many of you as have been baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death," and follows by telling us we must be buried in baptism," and Gal. 3rd. we read; "for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. Now if our repentance, our faith and baptism is right, we can read our titles clear to mansions in the skies. But some times good titles to our earthly mansions are obtained, but by neglect of duty we lose them. So brethren and sisters, it may be with us in regard to our title to a mansion above. We should therefore watch and pray lest we fall into temptation. "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

When we look at the great difference that marks our final destiny which depends entirely upon our own actions, and see what our blessed Lord has done for us he was rich but for our sakes became poor that we, through His poverty might might become rich—should it not induce us to renew our baptismal covenant, as the crown is only promised unto them that hold out faithful unto the end? So, when our earthly house of this tabernacle is desolved, we then have a building not made with hands eternal in the heavens, a house more durable, that needs no repairs, no cleaning, no light because there will be no night there for the Glory of God and the Lamb will be the light thereof.—In the heavenly Jerusalem which John the Revelator saw, which is said to be four square with its pearly gates, its walls of Jasper, the streets lined with pure gold, 12000 square furlongs which according to reckoning would be 1500 miles, hence many mansions—room for all. Who should stay behind? There will be no more sorrow there, pain nor death, where the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary shall forever be at rest, where we shall forever be happy with all the blood washed throng, "for in this we groan earnestly desiring to be clothed with our house which is from above, if so be that being clothed that we be not found naked."

ABRAHAM L. BOWMAN.

Griers Point.

THE CONVICT AUTHOR.

The following we take from the American Journalist. The sentiments are so touching and beautiful that they can not well help but be appreciated by every regenerated heart. How passingly strange that from a convict should emanate such gems of heavenly purity in regard to the history of a Divine Savior, while from the pen of the learned and polished Renen should come forth such burning sarcasm and skepticism.

Although his "Life of the Nazarene" was decked with the flowers of language, it fell upon the believing soul as a blasting curse, and will leave the impress of infidelity upon thousands yet unborn.

The idiosyncracies of the human intellect are as remarkable as its powers are illimitable. It seems possible for a man to be at the same time a saint and a sinner, a preacher and a forger, a religious enthusiast and yet a thief. Many persons have attempted to write the "Life of Christ," but we believe the most eloquent and remarkable work on this theme was written, not by a clergyman, but by a convict in the Massachusetts State Prison, sent there for forgery in altering checks, by which the banks of Boston were defrauded of large sums. Mr. Haynes, the warden of the prison, describes it as "a volume of more than 300 pages, of the common duodecimo size, with title page, contents, chapter headings, margins, etc., executed in the neatest style, and with an accuracy and beauty simply wonderful. It has a beautiful pen-and-ink sketch representing the flight of the Holy Family, drawn by a fellow-convict. It is bound in elaborately carved black walnut covers, with raised letters and scroll work, and with a velvet back." The following is a short extract from the chapter on the Resurrection:

"The dawning of the third day after the crucifixion was looked for with fervent and hopeful solicitude by the apostles. The time dragged slowly and heavily as they watched for the realization of the last prophecy of Christ; 'After three days I shall rise again.' Twice had the Sun gone down on the earth, and all as yet was quiet at the sepulcher. Death held his scepter over the Son of God.

Still and silent the hours passed on; the Roman guards still stood by their posts, while the rays of the midnight moon gleamed on their helmets and on their spears. The enemies of Christ exulted in their success; the hearts of His followers were sunk in despondency and sorrow, all unconcious of the angels of Heaven hovering near to behold the approaching event. At length, the morning star, rising in the East, announced the approach of light. The third day began to dawn on the world, when, on a sudden, the earth trembled to its center, the powers of Heaven were shaken, and an angel of God descended to the holy sepulcher. The guards shrank back in terror at his presence, and fell prostrate to the ground. 'His countenance was like lightning, his raiment was white as snow.' He rolled away the stone from the door, and sat upon it. But who is this that comes from the tomb, from the bed of death—He that is so glorious in His appearance, walking in the greatness of His strength?

"It is thy prince, oh, Zion! Christian! it is your Lord who rises from the grave a conqueror, to meet the morning's resurrection. He returns from the world of spirits, bringing salvation to the sons of men. Never did the returning Sun usher in a day so glorious. Let it be proclaimed the jubilee of the Universe; let the earth and all that is within it, all nations and all people, shout for joy! Ye clouds with jarring thunders, ye deeps with roaring billows, lend your voices! Wake ye soaring throngs and feathered warblers, whose glittering wings are tipped with gold; tune your voices to unite with the angelic hosts in a sublime Hosanna to the Highest! Swell the inspiring theme, until Heaven's high arch shall echo back the sound—Hosanna in the Highest."

We know there are many clergymen, and we suspect there are a few editors, even of religious papers, who could not sustain a flight of eloquence like that. M. Renan's book, "La Vie de Jesus," came to the notice of this convict, and he addressed him a letter, wanting some information on important points which the Frenchman, who wrote his book to prove that Jesus was not the Christ, has not yet had time to communicate. The following is the conclusion of the convict author's letter:

"I was taught that the prophecies which relate to the Messiah were literally fulfilled in Christ. In the books of the Old Testament it is distinctly foretold of Him what He is to be, of whom descended, what kind of a life He is to lead; what sorrows he should endure; how He should sustain Himself under them; what should be the manner of His death; what indignities should attend it; and that the Jews, of which nation He should come, should reject Him. All these things are clearly written, and if they do not mean Christ, will you please tell me whom they do mean? But, perhaps, it is all an allegory. If so, will you be so kind as to tell me where the allegories commence, and where end, and how to distinguish them from the balance of the writings? I wish to be a consistent man. Will you have the kindness to tell me how I can be consistent in accepting certain portions of the Bible and rejecting the balance? Will the same rule of consistency, which I doubt not you will be able to give me, be a proper one for one of my friends, who may chose to make a sweeping rejection of all but that one paragraph, "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities?"

"You say that Jesus of Nazareth was but a common man; tell me, were the twelve apostles, and Saul of Tarsus (a pupil of Gamaliel), and the countless early martyrs, all addled pated men, who laid down their lives for an idle infatuation?

"Whence but from heaven could men unskilled in arts,
In several ages born—in several parts,
Weave such agreeing truth? Or how, or why
Should all conspire to cheat us with a lie?
Unasked their pains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gains and martyrdom their price."

"And those seven churches—Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Philadelphia and Laodicea—referred to in the prophecy of St. John—are they still extant and unchanged, or did they meet their doom as literally as it was pronounced? I ask this of you, because I suppose you to be acquainted with the facts, having visited those scenes.

Anxiously awaiting your reply, I am respectfully,"

"PRISONER 201, M. S. P."

IS YOUR HEART SATISFIED?

Dear friendly reader I offer you a question. I know not who you are, or what is the history of your life, but this I do know, the question deserves your serious attention. Are you happy? Is your heart satisfied? Rich or poor, master or servant, young or old, here is a question that deserves an answer. Man of the world, thou who art caring for nothing but things of the world, neglecting the Bible, making a god of business or money, providing for everything but the day of judgment, scheming and planning about everything but eternity, is your heart satisfied? I am afraid it is not. Worldly woman, thou who art trifling away life in levity and frivolity, spending hours after hours on that poor frail body which must soon feed the worms; making an idol of dress, fashion, excitement and human praise, as if this world was your all. Is your heart satisfied? You know it is not. You are not happy, and in your own conscience you know it well. You may not acknowledge it, but it is sadly true, there is a sore place in your concience, and nothing will heal it but that which at present you have not used—simply the gospel of Christ or means of salvation. Take warning this day, that you never will be happy and have a satisfied heart till you are converted. Stop and think before it is too late. Oh that God may show you your folly—awake from your dreams I entreat you. Think of the uselessness of living a life you will be ashamed of when you come to die. Tell me, who was ever really happy without God and Christ and the holy Spirit. Not one. Look at the road you are traveling, dear reader; if you are not a Christian you will miss happiness in this world and in the world to come. Oh believe me, the way of happiness and the way of salvation are one and the same. If you will refuse to serve God you will never be happy; but he that serves God has the promise of happiness on earth, and will still be happier in heaven. You have everything to encourage you. The Lord Jesus himself invites you; He says, "come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Oh reader, wait not. You may feel unworthy, but you must come to Him confessing you are weary of your own ways and want rest, don't put off seeking Jesus, wait no longer, for now is the acceptable time.

CHARLOTTE I. MASTERS.
Ravens Eye, W. Va.

Youth's Department.

SNOW BALLS.

BY J. S. FLORY.

See the little boys rolling snow balls down the hill. They commence up near the top of the hill; at first they are very small, but as they keep rolling and rolling them over they get bigger and bigger, because a layer of snow keeps sticking to the ball while it is rolling. See there, little Henry has got away down the hill and the ball he is pushing is as high as he is; it hides him almost from view. Others are coming on down the hill rolling their balls with their hands. It is fine fun boys, is it not? "Yes" says Johnny "it is glorious play." Yes boys that is a nice play. And now I want to tell our little readers what it puts me in mind of. Don't you think my dear little children it is a little like forming characters in this life. Every boy and girl is doing that in some way or other. We might say the little child stands on the top of the hill and is going down, down every day toward the grave, as it goes down it grows in character every day. How are you starting boys? The first disobedient act to your parents is the first turn of that "ball" and every time you disobey it is another and another turn until it gets to be a very large thing;—yes a bad sin. So with every bad habit. The first story or lie may look little but it is a start, and if kept on rolling in that way it will get larger and larger so that everybody that knows you, can see that "ball." So with swearing, commencing with a bad word, then a word "almost" swearing, the next "turn" an oath, and so on worse and worse until the "ball" has got to be very large. At first you may think no matter your parents did not hear you or no one heard you, but some one did hear you and that was God. After a while it got so large by often "turning" that everybody could see it, and it hid your self respect and hid you from respectable society. This we say of the boy that took such a course; we hope none of our little readers are engaged in pushing such "balls." Smoking and chewing tobacco is a "ball" that keeps getting larger and larger the longer it is rolled. Boys if you have not yet done the like let me advise you to never take the first "turn" at that. And as to the first "turn of the brandy glass never, never put your hand to that or it may get to be such a big "ball as to hide you from sight in some "gutter" or house with iron windows. And now boys if you have been taking turns of naughtiness or rolling up "balls" of bad habits stop right now and lay your hand on your heart and say "If God will help me I will never do the like again." Now you know when the warm Sun shines on the big cold snow balls they all melt away and can't be seen. Now the warmth of Jesus' love can melt the cold and hardened heart so that naughtiness and evil habits will disappear, and in their place will grow lovely flowers,—that is, habits of beauty such as love to parents, brothers, sisters—kindness to all,—good temper, obedient disposition and a heart resigned to God. If you would have Jesus shed His love in your hearts, you must invite Him in by prayer and a willingness to obey Him and love Him because He first loved you and died for you that you might go to Heaven when you die, and be a bright angel up there to dwell forever with all the blessed children of God. Many little children have gone to Heaven; oh what a lovely company they make there—so many angels singing the sweet songs of joy—so many voices praising God—so many bright ones in glory that seem to say to us "come up hither." Will you go? Dear children will you go to dwell with that bright throng in Heaven? Love Jesus, and the answer will be, Amen! Amen!

Correspondence.

PYEMONT IND., }
April 5th 1872. }

Dear Pilgrim:—The District Meeting for Southern Indiana came off in this Arm of the church according to previous announcement. The meeting was announced for the 28th of March, but it continued until about noon of the 29th, a large congregation of members assembled on the 28th, I believe the churches were all represented. Bro. Robert H Miller was appointed Moderator, Bro. Hiel Hamilton reading, and Bro. Jacob Rife writing clerk. The business of the meeting was conducted in a Christian like manner, and apparently to the satisfaction of all present.

Elder R. H. Miller was chosen to represent this District at the next A. M. Bro. Miller came to us several days previous to the meeting and held several meetings in the neighborhood. A general interest seemed to be taken in those meetings, and no doubt many good impressions were made on the minds of our members, neighbors and friends.

A sad and fatal accident occurred in this neighborhood on last Monday, resulting in the death of one of our best citizens, Mr Francis M. Murphy. While engaged in hauling saw logs on a log wagon, being seated on the log on the wagon, the log not being fastened on, rolled off and caught him in such a manner as almost to crush him to death on the spot. He however lingered in much pain until yesterday when death came to his relief. The funeral sermon was preached in the Brethren's meeting house. His age was 34 years, six months and 20 days. This sad occurrence has cast a gloom over our entire neighborhood.

I believe I have no more items, and fearing that I may be tresspassing on your columns I will close my letter for this time. Wishing the PILGRIM success beyond all your expectations, I remain your brother in Christ. JOSEPH ZAHN.

Brother Brumbaugh:—I perceive from the PILGRIM you sent me, that there is still dissatisfaction in the way our Annual Meetings are held. Now in what respect these dissatisfactions may arise in the minds of our brethren, each one only knows for himself, but in order that some plan may be adopted that would be satisfactory to the brethren generally, let the following course be taken: Let all the brethren that feel interested in this matter, give their views through the PILGRIM, Companion and Visitor as they feel, pointing out the present defects of our plan of holding Annual Meetings, and also prepare some plan that would be satisfactory to them. "In the multitude of counsel there is safety."

C. F. WIRT.

Lewiston, Minn.

HAMILTON, Mo., April 1st, 1872.

Dear Brethren. I will try and give a short account of our trip to Harrison Co., Mo. On the 21st of March, I left home, walked 13 miles north to Bro. Petleys' where we were made welcome and kindly cared for.

The next morning Bro. Petley furnished us with a conveyance, and then Bro Robins, father and I, left for Harrison county. Traveled about 10 miles to Martinsville, arrived there at 8 o'clock. We then found that we had four miles yet, to brother Fry's, so we concluded to stop over night in Martinsville—went to the hotel to engage nights lodging, found none at home but the servant girl, the others had gone to hear a ———minister lecture on the subject of temperance. While we were eating they came flocking in and the preacher along with the rest. While listening to their conversation, we were amused at the minister who seemed much gratified at the amount of nickels he had received for the labor he had performed, yet he found fault with some of his members. for he made the remark "When the Lord converted brother S.——he did not convert his pocket." This expression gave us enough of the minister as money was his object,—he was a hireling.

On the morning of the 23d left for C. Fausler's where we arrived at 9 o'clock. There we met with a hearty welcome by our beloved brother Fry, who resides with his son-in-law, Christian Fausler, formerly from Va. and Ind. As our visit was not expected, of course there were no appointments out, but as our friend Fausler took much interest in arranging for meeting, he succeeded in getting a full house that evening, who gave us good attention and good order. After meeting we returned home again with C. Fausler, who spared no pains to maks us comfortable. On the 24th had meeting at the same place, order and attention good. After meeting again returned to Fauslers. Here we formed an acquaintance with sister Fadley who was glad to meet us.—Brother Jacob Fry and sister Fadley are all the members residing at this place. We learned that there are some six members residing twelve miles north. Our time being too short, we could not visit them. We had appointed an evening meeting, but could not fill it on account of rain. These were the first meetings held at this point by the Brethren, and, in our opinion, this is a good point, as we learned while there, that there were a good many that thought of becoming members of the Church of the Brethren. On the 25th, we again returned homeward. Reached brother Petley's at 9 o'clock at night, were received very kindly. Next morning, 26th, brother Petley brought us homeward five miles. We then took it afoot and arrived home at 1 P. M., found all well, for which blessing we feel thankful to God our Heavenly Father.

W. B. SELL.

The author of "Anxious Bench Religion Examined" has made a bold stroke at the giant and disarmed him. If any man, or even an angel from heaven bring a doctrine not founded upon the Bible receive it not. Read and circulate the tract.

Announcements.

DISTRICT MEETINGS

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

North-western District of Ohio, April 19th.

North-eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa., Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

First District of Va., West Arm, Floyd Co., April 19th.

Please announce that the District Meeting of Northern Ind. and Southern Mich. will be held in the Pine Creek congregation at their west meeting house, April 18th, 1872, by Divine permission. Those coming by railroad will stop at Walkerton.

JESSE CALVERT.

The District Meeting of North Western Ohio, will be held, the Lord willing, in the Poplar Ridge Branch, Defiance county, in the meeting-house five miles north-east of Defiance, on the 19th day of April, 1872.

WM. NOFFSINGER.

LOVEFEASTS.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P. M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

The brethren of Cerrogorda Dist. Ill., expect to hold a Lovefeast, God willing, on the 14th and 15th of June, commencing 10 o'clock a. m. An invitation to all the brethren and sisters and especially the ministering brethren.

By order of the church.

JACOB TROXEL.

Editors of the Pilgrim: Please announce to the delegates and brethren coming to District Meeting of Middle Pa., that the meeting will be held, God willing, at Mohler's meeting house, three miles from Mechanicsburg, and two from Shiremanstown. Brethren coming by Railroad on the 29th of April, both East or West, will all stop off at Mechanicsburg. Those coming on the 30th will all stop off at Shiremanstown. Those coming by private conveyance will find Mohler's meeting house on the State Road, six miles south-west of Harrisburg. We also desire that some of our ministering brethren will come on Saturday, the 27th, at least as many as will enable us to hold meetings at some half dozen different points. Who will come? Let us hear by letter before the middle of April. All coming on the 27th will stop off at Mechanicsburg, on the Cumberland Valley R. R.

MOSES MILLER.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Bro. J. Brindle informs us that they intend to have preaching in the upper Comberland Church over Sabbath prior to the District meeting and will be pleased to have some of the laboring brethren come and labor for them. Those attending this meeting will come on Saturday and remain over Sunday when conveyances will be prepared to take them to D. M. Any stopping at this meeting will inform by letter, John Brindle, Greason, Cumberland county, Pa.

There will also be a meeting with the brethren at Green Spring, above Newville. Brethren stopping there will write to Samuel or Jacob Miller, Newville, Green Spring Box, Cumberland Co., Pa.

We wish to have it understood that Eld. J. S. Flory has given us a permit to copy any of his papers wherever found, the same as if written directly for us, therefore if we may think it to the interest of our readers to copy some of his productions we do not wish to be branded literary thieves as we do it fully authorized. Bro. Flory does not write for the building up of some special periodical, but for the church, the advancement of the cause and the salvation of sinners. Such charity thinketh no evil.

DIED.

HUFFORD.—In the Middle Fork Church, Clinton county, Ind., Feb. 23rd., 1872, sister Sarah Ann Hufford, aged 52 years, 10 months and 6 days. She leaves a husband and 12 children to mourn her loss. Funeral services by Eld. Daniel Nehr and others from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

SKILES.—In the same place, March 15th, infant daughter of John J. and Mary Skiles, aged 20 days. Funeral services by the brethren. J. N. CRIPE

ZUCK—In the Falling Spring congregation near Greencastle, Pa., Feb. 13th, 1872, Jacob Martin, infant son of brother John and sister Lydia Zuck, aged 11 months and 13 days. Funeral services by J. F. Oller and J. A. Stoves, HOOVER.—In Woodcock Valley, in the bounds of Snakespring Valley Church, Pa., on the 4th of April, 1872, sister Mary wife of Jonas Hoover, in her 28th year. Leaving behind a baby 8 days old, and a sorrowing husband. We truly sympathize with our dear brother, as he has buried now two wives in less than two years. Funeral services on the 6th, from John 14: 1, 2, 3, by the writer and Jacob Steel. LEONARD FURRY.

MYERS.—In Germany Valley, Huntingdon county, Pa., Clarence A. youngest son of Reuben and Louisa Myers, aged 1 year and six days. The occasion improved by the brethren from 4th chapter and part of the 14th verse of James.

These feeble frames my power shall raise,
And mould with heavenly skill;
I'll give them tongues to sing my praise,
And hands to do my will.

JAMES R. LANE.

SHUCK.—I the Root River Church, near Preston, Minn., March 27th, 1872, Catharine Shuck, aged 74 years, 7 months and 13 days. Funeral services by Eld. Jos. Ogg, from 2nd Cor: 5, 1.

She went to bed as well as usual, but in the night her little grand-daughter who was sleeping with her, heard her breathing hardly and called to her, when she asked for some water and died in a few minutes. She was a member of the Church for 37 years and remained faithful until death. She was born in Elklick, Somerset county, Pa., leaves 6 children, 33 grand children and 6 great grand children. As a ripe sheaf she was gathered into the garner of the Lord.

S. M. SHUCK.

CASH.—At Double Pipe Creek, Md., Apr. 4th, of the effects of measles with whoopingcough, William Thomas, son of Lewis and Margie Cash, aged 3 years, 5 mos. and 11 days. Funeral by M. Fair of the Lutheran church and D. P. Saylor.

Editorial.

INFORMATION WANTED.

1-t. A brother wants a short but plain article written on baptism, adapted especially to the comprehension of the general reader. If any of our brethren who are competent will give us an article of this kind, we shall accept it. We have a Tract under preparation "The Counterfeit Detector." that will answer this and a great many other questions relative to that subject.

2d. Why cannot a man receive the Holy Ghost before baptism?

We do wish that people generally had a more definite idea in regard to this subject. God convicts the sinner and leads him to Christ, who has paid the price of his redemption, and therefore reconciles, or saves him. The office of the Holy Ghost is to lead him into truth, or to teach him his duties as a servant in the Vineyard of the Lord. Every unregenerated or unborn sinner is dead, and outside of the Vineyard. While the sinner is yet unborn, he is dead, and therefore the office of the Holy Ghost cannot reach him. Baptism is the outward figure of an inward regeneration, and no man can be visibly born into Christ's Kingdom until he has underwent the new birth, hence a man does not receive the Holy Ghost until after baptism; because he is yet visibly unborn and therefore cannot be taught or led.

3rd. An explanation wanted on the latter part of the 10th chapter of Acts, 44:48.

If every sinner was to delay his return to God until He would crush him to the ground, like He did Paul there would be few to enter the Kingdom, yet it can be just as reasonably expected, as that God will now pour out the gift of the Holy Ghost before baptism. Both were miraculous dispensations to accomplish special ends, and when God finds men under similar circumstances He may do the same thing again. Have we not Christ for our example in the plan of salvation? Straightway coming up out of the water, the Holy Ghost descended upon Him. Again, "Be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Is this not sufficient, and cannot we abide the time, or must we be forever begging God to do things He has not promised, and at the same time refuse to comply with the terms upon which He has promised? Surely God will not do less than what He has promised.

4th. Is it right for a lay member to preach when a minister is present, or is it proper for a minister to have a lay member select a text, the minister read it and then invite the lay member to preach from the text read?

These are rather strange questions, and yet more strange that there should be a cause for them. Preachers are called by the Church, and not by ministers. If a church has a minister who cannot preach and lay members who can and ought to preach, the church should call them according to the established order, but if the church is not willing that they should be called, ministers should not supercede its authority by having them to preach uncalled. Deacons may preach by request of ministers, as this is embodied in their charge.

5th. Will some one give us an explanation, or the full meaning of the apostle Paul in the 1st Corrinthians, 6:18-18?

The apostle is here speaking to believers, or to those who have been regenerated—born again. The body is the workmanship of God, intended for the indwelling of the soul which is from God and originally, unpolluted, hence God associated with the soul in the body and thus it became a temple for him. Through sin the body became polluted by admitting into it the spirit of sin, or satan, and thus it became the temple of satan.

In regeneration the power of sin is destroyed and satan is driven out and the spirit of God enters, and it again becomes the temple of God. Paul says; "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." This is about the same as expressed in the query. Knowing this fact, it should cause us to have an exceeding zealous care over our bodies that we in no way defile the temple of God. A special reference is made to fornication because it is a sin against the body, defiles it, and thus disqualifies it for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. We are not our own, because by sin our heirship was taken from us, and we became the subjects of satan's kingdom and remained such until redeemed by Jesus Christ, who purchased our freedom at a great price, even the shedding of His own precious blood, hence, "we are bought with a price." Then let us glorify God in our bodies and in our spirits for all come from God and therefore are His.

Miscellaneous.

J. A. Stover. David Bucks name is on the book and his paper has been sent regularly since ordered.

From the Gospel Visitor we learn that there are arrangements made with the Cincinati, Sandusky and Cleve and R. R. to return free, from Forest, where the Road crosses the Pittsburg, Ft Wayne & Chicago R. R., all those attending the next Annual Meeting.

The Brethren of Mineral Creek Church, Johnson county, Mo., have now completed a comfortable house for worship and acknowledge their gratefulness to brethren and friends who lent a helping hand.

Bro. Quinter of the Visitor has written a paper on "Our Next Annual Meeting," that so fully accords with our views that we have copied it for the benefit of those who have not had the advantage of reading it. It forcibly occurs to our mind, that if all our dear brethren, especially those who take an active part, would go up to the meeting after a season of fasting and prayer that it would be visited with a double portion of the Holy Spirit. Brethren and sisters let us all try it. We cannot all go, but we can all pray for those who do go. The field is warmly contested, the host of hell are pressing hard and our lovely Zion is compassed about. Then let us be a unit in the great battle and fight for Jesus only through the flesh should be slain in the conflict.

Some of our agents think we should urge delinquents to pay their subscriptions. The paying part would suit us very well, but the urging is what we do not like to do, but for fear that our readers may think that we are not needy, we would inform them that we will be pleased to receive it at any time especially from those who have it and can pay as well now as at some future time. Those who are in arrears for Hymn Books &c, will please remit us soon as possible, as that should be a cash business.

Please Notice. For the encouragement of new subscribers, we will send each one free, a copy of Elder J. S. Flory's "Anxious Bench Religion Examined." Subscriptions may either run to the end of the year, or one year from date of commencement. Brethren and sisters, please let this be known and thus increase the "Pilgrim Band."

For the encouragement of those who wish to do something in the way of distributing Tracts, we have put down the price, except on single copies. The following are our present prices, and all the orders sent us have been filled according to these prices.

10 copies,	$ .70
20,	1.20
50,	2.50
100,	4.00

If any have ordered Tracts, and do not receive them, please let us know, and we will send them.

Excitement in Rome.—One of the great wonders of the age was the debate in Rome between Catholicism and Protestantism. The question was, whether or not St. Peter was ever in Rome. The subject was warmly contested, but this was not so much the cause of excitement as the great revolution of popular sentiment in regard to religious tolerance. Only a short time ago the papal power was supreme, and to be a Protestant was to be persecuted, but now he stands with equal privileges as a public debatant, sapping the very foundation of Popedom.

Errata.—In the obituary notice of Brother Henry Sanger, No. 12 of Pilgrim, the type setters omitted a word or two, it should read: "He moved from Rockingham Co., Va., to Highland Co. Va., where he was instrumental in a great measure of seeing organized and flourish a considerable congregation of the household of Faith." J. S. F.

Mourners bench religion weighed in the scales of truth and justice and found wanting, see tract on the subject.

MONEY LIST.

Samuel Murray,	$1.25
Wm. B. Sell,	50
John Bottomfield,	1.25
Lewis Teeter,	2.00
Wm. B. Sell,	50
John Custer,	1.50
Jacob M. Mohler,	1.35
John Ulrick,	1.25
Ellen Mull,	1.25
Benjamin Ulrick,	1.25
Joseph Rothrock,	1.25
E. Crowell,	1.25
Michael Oswald,	1 15
Jeremiah Hollinger,	95
John Hunbarger,	2.50
Mary Reddick,	1 25
Henry Ebersole,	1 25
Leonard Furry,	20.00
Noah Longenecker,	2.50

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feet washing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts. Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

SINGULAR RELIGIOUS EXCITEMENT.

Jacksonville (Ill.) correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat.

A most remarkable and unaccountble religious excitement has existed for some time past among a number of the citizens of Old Berlin, Sangamon county, and vicinity. It seems that the pastor of the Presbyterian church of that town became a convert to the religious dogma of perfect holiness and entire sanctification, and become so absorbed in the dogma, and excited in reference thereto, that the church dismissed him from the pastorate thereof. This minister then commenced holding "sanctification meetings" in his own dwelling, which were attended by a small congregation of sympathizers. These meetings, as they progressed, became more and more intensely exciting and boisterous. The attendants became more and more intensified in their faith in the doctrine of perfect holiness, and in the belief in the utter vanity of all earthly possessions. The minister at length claimed he was having revelations from God, one of which was that the marriage relation between a gentleman and his wife, of Berlin, was unholy, and that God had directed him to deliver a message to them, commanding their immediate separation.

Two wealthy farmers who resided near the town were so far carried away by the preaching of their minister, who they believed was God's oracle, that one of them executed a deed conveying to him his farm, and the instrument stated, "for Jesus," and the other gave him $1,000 "for Jesus." While the meetings were in progress at the preachers dwelling, and, with loud singing and loud shouts of the crazy fanatics ringing in her ears, the wife of the divine was confined and died, and it is believed of neglect. Finally the sensible people of Berlin became indignant at the proceedings and resolved to put a stop to them. To effect this they had, on Friday or Saturday of last week, the preacher taken into custody (believing him to be insane), for the purpose of having the question of this insanity tested before a jury. A brother of the farmer who executed the deed and of one who gave him the money "for Jesus" have taken steps to prevent the expenditure of the money or the recording of the deed.

ANOTHER OENTENARIAN.

On Wednesday morning Mr. John Hutchison died at his residence, 120 York street, Brooklyn, at the patriarchal age of 107 years. Mr. Hutchison was born in Ireland in 1765, and was of Scotch descent. He was reared to the linen bleaching business, and was engaged in it more or less up to the time of his emigration from the old country. At the hale old age of fifty-nine he married Hannah Millen, who was a young woman of twenty-four. The pair had three children. When in his seventy-first year the venerable gentleman was seized with a desire to visit foreign climes. He decided to come to the United States. On his arrival in New York he experienced much difficulty in obtaining employment on account of his advanced age. A few years later he was joined here by his wife and children, and they settled down to the weaving business.

The deceased centenarian led a regular life, being very temperate in his habits and diet. He retained his senses up to the time of his death, and could read, speak, and hear as well as any of those around him. He prided himself on his teeth, having lost but one of them during his lifetime. For many years Mr. Hutchison had habitually made a journey on foot, by way of Catharine Ferry, to Stanton and Allen streets, where some friends of his resided. Within the last six months he was obliged to discontinue this practice and content himself with tramping about the neighborhood, where he was well known. Mr. Hutchison leaves three children, fifteen grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. He also leaves a widow who is seventy-two years of age, looks about fifty, and has all the animation of a woman of forty. His aunt died at the age of 108.

EARTHQUAKE IN CALIFORNIA — An earthquake occurred in California on Tuesday morning of last week, which thoroughly destroyed Camp Independence, Inyo county. Other settlements are laid waste. The shock lasted from 2:20 to 6:30 A. M., and is said to have been the most severe ever known in that region. But few lives were lost.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1 25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

AGENTS WANTED FOR
"JESUS"
BY CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.
His divinity re-affirmed and rationalism routed. The most popular and expeditious religious work ever issued. For circulars, address H. S. PUBLISHING CO., N. Y.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid -	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	- - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	- - -	1.00
Turkey morocco,	- - -	$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen,	- - -	5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINIED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 80 cents, 20 copies $1.50, 50 copies $3.00, 100 copies $5.00.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan. 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Jan. 16. tf. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa

Triune Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Oettysburg, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Jan. 15, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.56
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.26

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Narkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, APRIL 23, 1872. NO. 17.

POETICAL.

CHRIST THE WAY.

Just as I am, I take my stand,
With gates and bars on every hand;
And, with one look of faith and love,
Behold! the gates and bars remove,
And heaven comes brightly from above.

It was not done by books and creeds.
By tears, and prayers, and outward deeds:
I tried; but these could not control
The storms and tempests of the soul:
'Twas Christ that came and made me whole.

In Christ, who rules the stormy wave,
I found the arm with power to save;
He rent the gates and bars of sin;
He let celestial glory in,
And taught me God and heaven to win.

O sinning one! no more delay;
Christ is the true the living way;
BELIEVE, and Christ's celestial art
Shall bid thy sins and fears depart,
And heal and save thy bleeding heart.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

THOUGHTS ON ROM. 11 33.

"Oh the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out."

Such is the sublime language of the apostle Paul, who had, as will appear by reading this, as also several previous chapters of this Epistle, been engaged in the most profound reasoning with the church at Rome.

The object of the apostle Paul was to reconcile the contending parties in this church, though there may not have been four divisions there, as at Coriuth, yet there were evidently two, and those were national divisions, a most unfortunate kind. The Corinthians were divided with regard to men, and though objectionable, yet not so pernicious, as when communities are divided by nationality. That such was the nature of the division of the church at Rome is evident from the tenor and scope of the Epistle to the Romans by Paul. It must be borne in mind that although Rome at the time, had the Jews, with many others under subjection, and was therefore for the time being "The minister of God to the Jews for good." The Jews could not realize it, the Christian portion of them could not be brought to submit kindly unto their pagan rulers. Wicked as they had been before, they embraced Christian principles, and still not fully divested of their carnal natures, they could not help entertaining a perfect contempt for them, deeming them as oppressors, and as for their religion that was beneath their contempt. It must be also remembered that the first Jews that went to Rome, those that constituted part of the church there were prisoners, like the apostle Paul believed to have perpetrated some great crime, who like the apostle had appealed to Caesar only to gain time and ward off their punishment. And though that punishment may not have been inflicted, because of the absence of crime, yet in their disputes afterwards their memories were refreshed in regard to their former relationship, and they evidently taunted each other in regard to their former state. Taking this view of the subject, we shall be prepared to appreciate the argument of the apostle in the chapter before us as well as in others previous.

At the conclusion of the 11th chapter, Paul has concluded his arguments to effect a reconciliation of the members of said church, presuming to have done so, he descends from his lofty flight of reasoning, by declaring, "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all." And then reviewing his arguments and being convinced of their truth, confirms the whole by the language of the four last verses of the chapter, of which the one at the head of our article is included.

In those arguments of the apostle Paul (of which the apostle Peter says are sometimes hard to be understood, and which the unlearned wrest to their own destruction, we are not concerned personally because they are directed to the church at Rome. And indeed not to the church as a church, but as two constituent bodies constituting such church—each belonging to different nationalities. Would to God that we at this day had no divisions, yet we may thank God that they are not of the nature of those that were at Rome, necessitating the calling forth of such reasoning as that of the apostle Pauls.

But we have said Paul descended from those lofty flights, in one of which he says "he heard unspeakable words which it was not lawful for man to utter" and condescended to the practical part of religion, as will appear by reading the 12th chapter of the Epistle of Romans, as also the subsequent chapters of the same Epistle, but more especially the 12th, which I have often thought contained a summary of all the duties of a Christian, either direct or implied.

As there is a disposition in the human family to pry into things beyond their comprehension, I thought it prudent to present the experience of the apostls Paul, upon that subject and point of inquiry. Although he may have succeeded in bringing about peace, and concord in the church at Rome, through his natural acquired, and above all, his inspired wisdom, he may have been permitted to see the hidden mysteries of God himself, yet what was his conclusion after all "Oh the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out."

If then a man, learned as was the apostle Paul, specially communicated with, by the Savior after His resurrection, selected for special purposes by Christ Himself, and was afterward enabled to say "I thank God I speak with tongues more than you all," and again he says "I knew a man who was caught up into Paradise and heard unspeakable words which it is not lawful for a man to utter." Yet amidst all those glorious privileges and supernatural gifts, he was constrained to use the language at the head of this article, what, are we to think of mere pigmies in intellect, making no pretentions to supernatural gifts, when they attempt to pry into the hidden things that belong to God? Is it not arrogance of the worst kind? It displays an ambition that will not be gratified. It was denied to God's chosen. It will be said to many, if indeed they do not get a worse rebuke, "What is that to thee, follow thou me." In this last quotation is a mild reproof to all such inquisitive spirits, at the same time a positive command, "follow thou Me." Here we have a duty imposed which all of us would do well to regard.

And now my dear readers, why should we perplex ourselves about passages of Scripture that have no reference to ourselves, and thus waste our precious time, whilst we should be engaged in attending to such things that are easy to comprehend? We should not only comprehend them, but perform the duty imposed. Here I will again refer to the 12th chapter of Romans. Oh, study that chapter well, and perform the duties therein taught, every one of which, belongs to the child of God. You will perceive they are enjoined upon brethren—not now Jews and Gentiles, two contending factions of the church at Rome, though still Jews and Gentiles but also brethren, being the church militant everywhere.

Many of my readers may not be entitled to that endearing appellation of brethren and sisters, yet whose fault is it that you are not? It surely is not the fault of your pious parents, who are anxious that you should be housed safely within the fold of God. It is not the fault of pious preachers to whom you have frequently listened and were sometimes almost persuaded to be a Christian. Nor do I believe it is the fault of many of your former unfortunate associates, who have died and come short of the glory of God, and who are now wreaking their fruitless cries in torment. They would relieve you now if they could, because they may have to some extent been the cause of your present relationship toward God. And surely it is not the fault of God that you are out of fellowship with Him, for "He wills all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of truth." The Savior wept over Jerusalem because the people would not repent. He wept at the grave of Lazaros because of the unbelief of the people, hence the impenitent sinner is alone the cause of his own ultimate damnation. The Lord have mercy upon, and cause His spirit to influence them all for good.

E. SLIFER.

Resist the temptation of circulating ill reports; spread them not at all. If you cannot speak well of another, at least do not speak ill of him. Never speak ill of another behind his back. Why should you consider his character of less value than your own? Speak of others as you would were they present: speak of him as a friend of him who is absent, and cannot speak for himself.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Inasmuch as a Committee appointed in 1865, devised a plan to hold our Annual Meeting more satisfactory to the general Brotherhood, said plan being adopted at the A. M. of 1866, with this proviso: "Resolved that we try the Committee's report for at least, a sufficient length of time to give it a fair trial." We have now done so for five years, and it seems still unsatisfactory to many. The writer having studied the subject carefully and prayerfully, suggests a plan for the serious consideration of the Brotherhood.

In the first place then we will consider the points wherein the present plan seems to be deficient. In order to lighten the burden of the previous plan, the public preaching at the place of the A. M. was to be dispensed, and no boarding houses to be put up to feed the mixed multitude. So far, if carried out, is satisfactory.

Further. "District meeting were to be formed by one or two representatives from each organized Church to be held in simplicity, as much so as the common council meetings as possible." "They should endeavor to settle all questions of a LOCAL CHARACTER. BUT THOSE of a GENERAL CHARACTER, or those that concern the Brotherhood in general should be taken to the A. M." Here we see the business divided into local and general matter. Here is the difficulty. Can there be any local matter that affects the doctrine, or the general order of the Brethren, based upon the word of God? Certainly not. Yet such things are settled in the district meetings, and not allowed to reach the A. M., at least in some of them, and may be done so by a great minority of membership; and finally we may have as many different orders as districts. For instance, a query may be presented by a church of four or five hundred members, and in a district composing from 23 to 24 churches, might be voted down by a majority of one or two representatives, mostly representing only 10 or 60 members. The like inequality we find in the formation of districts. Some only five churches, others as high as twenty-four. And yet we see in this plan that ten churches send as many delegates to the A. M. as twenty churches. Hence we see unfairness and disproportion. Local matters, I understand, can only arise in an individual church, through self-willed, stubborn members, and if that church cannot reconcile differences, why not call disinterested members from other branches and have them investigated in the presence of the parties, where testimony can conveniently be had, and there settled according to the order laid down in the minutes of the Annual Council, which certainly can be done better, more satisfactorily, and with less expense, than by a district of an area of 150 miles, from one end to the other. If general matters are to be sent to the A. Council, why not dispense with district meetings, and send such queries there at once as before, but let no church burden the A. M. with local queries? Is there any burden lightened, when, instead of preparing for one general meeting, which still must be done with a prospect of very little decrease, the general Brotherhood, in addition to that one, has to provide for twenty-three or twenty-four district meetings, which apparently, soon will become as burdensome as A. M. thirty years ago? And is there any expense saved? Every district meeting, including traveling expenses, for the delegates, at the lowest calculation, will average $1,000, amounting together to more than $9,000, and may not make a difference in members attending A. M. of more than 500, if the former system of sub-dividing queries among delegates sent from individual churches which so far as that is concerned, met with general approval, where carried out.

THE CAUSES OF DISSATISFACTION.

FIRST. Because the present plan is not fairly carried out in District Meetings.

I. Queries have been voted down again and again, that belong to the general Brotherhood, because brethren differ in ideas.

II. Because a few brethren, smooth talkers, and of popular standing, may easily sway the minds of brethren inexperienced, defective in sharpness and stability.

III. Because, when queries of a general character are thus crushed, how can we reach the Annual Council, for all queries must first pass through the District Meeting.

SECOND. Because it fails to answer its design to facilitate business, and lighten the burden.

I. Districts, carrying out fairly the present plan, must forward all queries of a general character with an answer attached to the A. M. for discussion at the general Council.

II. Because if answers are not formed to the satisfaction of that Council it has a tendency to retard rather than facilitate.

LASTLY. Because of the inequality in numbers of representatives in Districts as well as in Annual Meetings.

PROPOSED PLAN.

FIRST. Let District Meetings be dispensed with, and all local matters be settled at home where they originated, by the help of strange disinterested brethren, if it cannot otherwise be done, and not let the Annual Meeting be burdened with such queries.

SECOND. Let public preaching be done away at the place for Annual Council, and no provision made to feed a mixed multitude, as done in the present plan.

THIRD. Let each individual organized church send one or two delegates, chosen by the church, as her representatives, those representatives formed into sub-committees, and the queries divided among them for the formation of answers. Let it be done by the standing Committee as they in their wisdom see proper. Let each sub-committee retire to respective places to form answers to the best of their ability and as near to the Scripture as possible, and then to be disposed at A. M.

FOURTH. Let the delegates, through instruction from their church, out of the ordained elders present, appoint the standing Committee from each state equally proportioned and districted according to the number of membership as near as possible; members of the preceding yearly standing Committee as many as are present are to preside over these appointments.

FIFTH. Let the standing Committee, thus appoint and organize among themselves

LASTLY. Let all queries be decided in General Council by unanimity. The writer has attended twenty-three Annual Councils and was a close observer of the proceedings thereof, may thereby have a little experience, therefore claims of the Brotherhood, to give the foregoing article a serious, impartial, unprejudiced and prayerful consideration.

Yours in the bonds of fraternity.

LEONARD FURRY.

[Editors of the Gospel Visitor please copy.]

SABBATH SCHOOLS.

Dear Pilgrim:—Being alone this Sabbath afternoon with Him who has promised to never leave no forsake us, my mind has been wandering over this wide extended world, and I was made to think of my friends and relatives who are scattered in many directions over the face of the earth, also those that have gone the way of all the earth—gone through the valley of the shadow of death, and in my meditations, the thought of Sabbath schools came to my mind and aroused me out of my drowsiness. Knowing that the time is fast approaching that the summer terms of Sabbath Schools will commence again if the Lord permit them, I thought by the help of God I would write a few lines for your columns on the subject.

I was a regular attendant of a Sabbath school last Summer, and I am glad and thankful that I can say of a truth, I had a better knowledge of the Bible at the close of it than I had at the beginning. Much good may be done in these schools if they are properly conducted. But there is one thing in some of our Sabbath schools that I am a little opposed to, but perhaps those who allow it are better judges than I, and if I judge wrong I hope I may see my short sightedness in time to take the beam out of my own eye. What I am opposed to is having other books in the school besides the Bible and Hymn Book. These schools are, or should be, designed to teach the rising generations the will of God as He has revealed it to us by His Son Jesus Christ. But sometimes I think we do not take the right plan, when we give them those books to read which are kept in so many Sabbath school libraries. Brethren and sisters, is it not a little like selecting a useful lesson for pupils to learn, then giving them a novel or some other useless story to read during the time they should study the useful lesson? Well we meet every Sabbath day, (I do not mean all Sabbath schools,) sing and pray, read a chapter in the Bible, and ask the scholars some questions from the chapter read, and others, which I think is all right so far, but at the close, we give them books to read during the coming week, which contain as much as many children at the age of twelve years and upwards get time to read during the Summer weeks, and therefore they have no time to search the Scriptures. I think children and all will learn sooner what their duty to God is by reading the Scriptures than by reading those Sunday school books mentioned. I used to read them, but never to my recollection did I read in them that I must be born again, be born of water and the Spirit to enter into the Kingdom of God. Nor did I read in them that Jesus washed His disciples feet, and told them they ought to wash one another's feet. I think Sabbath schools might be improved if parents would take more interest in them. Come fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and friends, come up to the help of the Lord.

HANNAH E. SMITH.

TOO TRUE.—A few friends will go and bury us. Affection will rear a stone and plant a few flowers over our grave; in a brief period the little hillock will be smoothed down, and the stone will fall, and neither friends nor strangers will be concerned to ask which one of the forgotten millions of the earth was buried there. Every vestige that we ever lived upon earth will have vanished away. All the little memorials of our remembrance—the lock of hair encased in gold or the portrait that hung in our dwelling, will cease to have the slightest interest to any living being.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

The following I clip from the Church Advocate, printed in Lancaster Pa., which agrees so well with my views, and what I know about these societies, that I give it my approval, and as a warning to the young; I desire it to be published in the PILGRIM. L. FURRY.

THEIR OATHS. "It is becoming a mooted question with theologians and thinkers, whether it is Christian under any circumstances to take an oath. This serious doubt, (no doubt with the Brethren) is based upon what seems to be very plain, unequivocal, Scriptural testimony. In Christs' sermon on the Mount, He said emphatically, "Swear not at all." These sweeping words seem to cover the whole ground, and set aside their import and evade the honest and legitimate conclusions, so as to bolster up "legal swearing" requires a more charitable stretch of latitude than is consistent with moderate Christian integrity. James says, "But above all things my brethren, swear not, neither by Heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath."

What does it mean? To say that it does not mean all manner of swearing may silence dispute, but it will not satisfy the conscience of a high toned man. But even should we admit the propriety of a legal oath, so called, what excuse can be offered in extenuation of those horrible oaths which are imposed by secret societies? These oaths are administered without the sanction, consent or intervention of the "powers that be," by bodies of men, professedly benevolent, who take this method of binding themselves together for protection and interest. It is easily seen therefore, that all these oaths are voluntary, and in consequence are more sinful. How Christian men can reconcile this free swearing with the religion of Jesus, is more than I can comprehend. When we read of the first Christian martyrs being compelled by persecutors to blaspheme the name of God, our finer sensibilities are shocked and outraged, and shall we complacently contemplate the free, voluntary and heart-sickening oaths of Christian men, without rebuke or protest? As Masonry is the most prominent of this strict order, I propose to give the oath of an entered apprentice, as quoted from "Light on Masonry, 8th edition, page 27.

"I, A. B., of my own free will and accord, in the presence of Almighty God and the worshipful lodge of Free and accepted Masonry, dedicated to God and held forth to the holy order of St. John, do hereby and hereon most sincerely promise and swear that I will always hail, ever conceal, and never reveal any part or parts, art or arts, and mysteries of ancient Free Masonry, which I have received, am about to receive, or may hereafter be instructed in, to any person or persons in the known world, except it be a true and lawful brother Mason, or within the body of a just and lawfully constituted lodge of such, and not unto him or unto them whom I shall hear so to be, but unto him and them only whom I shall find so to be after strict trial and due examination or lawful information.

Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not write, print, stamp, stain, hew, cut, carve, indent, paint or engrave it on anything movable or immovable, under the whole canopy of Heaven, whereby or wherein the least letter, figure, character, mark, stain, shadow or resemblance may become legible or intelligible to myself or to any other person in the known world, whereby the secret of Masonry may be unlawfully obtained through my unworthiness. To all of which I do most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, without the equivocation, mental reservation, or self-evasion of mind in me whatever; binding myself under no less penalty than to have my throat cut, my tongue torn out by the roots, and my body buried in the rough sands of the sea at low water mark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours. So help me God, and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same."

Here the entered apprentice swears to conceal what he has received, what he is now receiving, and all that he shall receive in the future, when as yet he knows absolutely nothing of what he is swearing to. What does he know of the arts, the points, the parts and the degrees of ancient Free Masonry; and yet he swears to it all in the very first oath of the Institution. If this is not a snare to the soul, it looks like one. The barbarious penalty attached to this oath requires no comment. Let every one examine it carefully.

In the oath of a Master Mason the following occurs: "Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not speak evil of a brother Master Mason, neither behind his back nor before his face, but will apprise him of all approaching danger, if in my power." Supposing he is guilty of theft and the officers are on his track, does the oath apply then? Again in the same oath we have the following: Furthermore do I promise that I will go on a Master Mason's errand whenever required, even should I have to go bare-foot and bare headed, if within the length of any cable-tour." This is understood to be three miles. In another section of this oath we have this language; "Furthermore do I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secrets given to me in my charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election." What is to be the disposition of other crimes among Masons? Certainly society at large is interested in this matter, and I cannot be censured for asking this information. In the oath of the Royal Arch Degree, "treason and murder" are not excepted, and it is reasonable to suppose that those upwards in the degrees these two crimes are not mentioned specifically. In the degrees of Templer and Knights of Malta, as found in the 7th edition of "Light on Masonry," page 182, in a lecture in which the candidate is giving an account of what he has passed through, he says, "I then took the cup (the upper part of the human skull) in my hand, and repeated after the Grand Commander the following obligation: "This pure wine I now take in testimony of my belief in the mortality of the body, and the immortality of the soul—and may this libation appear as a witness against me, both here and hereafter,—and as the sins of the world were laid upon the head of the Savior, so may all the sins committed by the person whose skull this was, be heaped upon my head in addition to my own. Should I ever knowingly or willfully violate or transgress any obligation that I have heretofore taken, take at at this time, or shall at any future period take in relation to any degree of Masonry or order of Knight-hood. So help me God."

Now I feel satisfied that there are thousands of Masons in the lower degrees who never dream of any such oaths in the upper degrees, but they have sworn in the very first oath, to take it when it comes. It is but reasonable to suppose that when a man once takes the first obligation, the "pressure" of the body is brought to bear to induce him to advance to another and higher degree, something mysterious, inexplicable and sublime is fancifully portrayed to his mind, as being in store for him if he will only go on. No doubt many are sick of there terrible oaths, but conscience is stifled by the hopes presented of the future, and they go on from one degree to another heaping up these fearful imprecations to an almost unlimited extent. I remark upon these oaths, 1st. They are voluntary, uncalled for and selfish, and are therefore sinful.

2d. They are contrary to the express commands of God, and therefore must be sinful in His sight.

3rd. The penalties attached to them involve a degree of barbarity that is fearfully obnoxious to every sentiment of the Christian religion, and consequently sinful.

4th. They weaken the moral perceptions, harden the heart and sear the conscience, and therefore they must destroy spirituality, retard a growth in grace, and work ruin in churches.

5th. If they do not cover up crime it is plain that they may, as well as arrest justice, bribe jurors, buy judges, open jails, control elections, and thus shield rascals from laws, righteousness and judgment. Are they not sinful?

For the Pilgrim.

COVERING THE HEAD.

"Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoreth his head. But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head."—1st. Cor., 11:4-5.

Now it is not a question, whether the head be covered in prayer or not, but what is it that constitutes that covering? Is the covering to be natural or artificial? And the dispute is altogether in reference to the female? Is her hair sufficient to fill the design of the apostle? See 1st Corinthians, 11 15 "But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her for her hair is given her for a covering." Now this seems to satisfy a number of people, that there is no other covering required. But we cannot see it so. And in order to show you why we cannot see it, I will show the reader the view I have. It: "For a man indeed ought not to cover his head." If the hair is the covering alluded to here, how can man put that on, or cover his head with that? The hair is the natural covering, and not put on by man, hence we conclude that the apostle had reference to a covering independent of the hair when he says "A man indeed ought not to cover his head," for the putting on of the hair is the work of nature, and not of man. Again, if the hair is the covering spoken of by the apostle, what are those to do who are so unfortunate as to have no hair? They are uncovered, and cannot pray without dishonoring their head. There are many such in the world, and you with me, will say the apostle never intended to say that they were unfit to pray, hence the necessity of looking somewhere else for the meaning of this apostle. Now let us look at another verse of the same chapter. "For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn." Now it necessarily follows, that if the hair is the covering alluded to in this place, he is covered if she have hair, but if she have no hair she is uncovered, and how is she to be shorn if she have no hair. Here is a question for those who say the hair is the covering required. "If she be not covered let her also be shorn." Now you see that if the woman be not covered, according to the popular theory, she is without hair, and yet she must be shorn, how will that work? rather badly we think. Then my readers may wish to know what I will do with the 15th verse as quoted above. Well, I will tell you. In this language we think the apostle refers to the custom of Corinth, which we think you will find was to make the hair the covering. But the apostle immediately tells them that "If any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom." That is the custom, the custom of the world or of Corinth, but not our custom in the Church of God.

Yours in love for the cause of Jesus.

A. HUTCHISON.

Oak Hill, W. Va.

Each drop in the bitter cup is measured out by the unerring hand of the heavenly Physician, who never makes mistakes, nor ceases to watch his patient for one moment.

God can feed us with himself without either ministers or church; and it is well worth being deprived of the comfort of either or both, to be driven to Him, the fountain of living waters.

PLAIN REMARKS ON PLAIN THINGS.

It is just 25 years this April since I joined the Church of the Brethren. As I was raised among the descendants of the Puritan fathers, (being myself a descendant) I had imbibed a notion that theirs was the purest religion on earth. I must confess I did did not receive this impression from the Bible, though they are great Bible readers. The doctrine was handed down from father to son and virtually became the Law. No one enquired farther; taking for granted, that if such a religion answered their fathers it would do for their successors. So much for tradition, or commandments of men. Matthew says, 15th chapter 6th verse, the commandments of God become of none effect by tradition. Again Paul says, Col. 2: 22, 23, speaking of certain ordinances, all are to perish after the commandments and doctrines of men. "Which things have a show of wisdom in will-worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh." Here, I wish to say, I am firm in the faith; neither received I it from men. From a child my mind was not satisfied with the explanation of some passages of scripture which presented themselves to my mind. One was the washing of the saints' feet. The more I studied about it the more was I impressed with its literal signification. At last, at the age of 20, residing in Philadelphia, I accidentally found a people who actually practiced this ordinance. My heart was all aglow with love for that people. I rested not day nor night until I became one of them, though more than two years elapsed before I could accomplish my purpose. I was opposed by a host of friends, among them my husband. At length, I triumphed over all when they saw my health failing, and was received into the church, being baptized by brother John Price, of Eastern Penn'a, when I could exclaim,

"O, happy day that fixed my choice
On thee my Savior and my God."

After waiting and praying ten years my husband begged to come with me. Shortly after my daughter Hattie, (sweet child as she was) came too. Then, as soon as she was old enough, our dear Nettie, who is now in Heaven, came to me weeping and desiring to be baptized, when the door of Bro. Major's church was opened to her. Her dying testimony was, "Ma, I well remember the day." I now have but one more, little Mamie, in her 13th year. I do not for one moment doubt but that the Lord will bring her also in His own good time. A mother's prayers and tears come up before Him as incense and He will not suffer them to be lost. Mothers, who have children out of the church pray and wait in patient hope and your fondest wishes will, after awhile, be realized. Sometimes

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

Before I came to the church I was very gay, for I had been raised in a place of fashion, no one thinking this any harm. I am often surprised that the Brethren received me. And even after I joined the church, no one spoke to me about dress. Of myself, I saw the inconsistency of carrying the foolish fashions of the world into the church, and really felt that I was now dead to the world, and that my life was hid with Christ in God. Yet it was a long time before I left off many things which some may have thought superfluous, for dress was the least of my concern, and in a thoughtless way I may have annoyed some. I pay so little regard to what others wear that I may now neglect some outside appendage which another, by tradition, may think a part of religion. There are two extremes in every proportion, and if we multiply the means, we will find them just equal to the product of these extremes. So it is in the church, if we could, or would, reckon according to the principles of science. I am sorry to say it, though the truthfulness, I presume, none will deny. In the church we have covetousness. In the church we have intemperance, and in the church we have back-biting. I do not mean that these things are either desired or cherished, nevertheless, they are tolerated, and is there any reason why a sister should be excommunicated for not wearing some simple article of dress which tradition alone requires? "I trow not." I was very much censured on one occasion, by a sister in the West, for sewing my sleeve in with a cord. I said but little at the time, but on learning afterward, that the preceding season the same family had sold all the grain they raised, only for family use, to the distiller, and used the beautiful fields on their farm for raising that filthy weed, tobacco, I thought it my duty to make some plain remarks, for which my conscience never troubled me. How easily we can look at things from a different standpoint when dollars heave in view. That it is right to guard against foolish extravagances and worldly frivolities I have no hesitancy in acquiescing. But that some should attempt to lord it over God's heritage and bar the doors of the church against those who may happen to differ in some minor points which they have received only by tradition, seems extravagance to the extreme acceptance of the term. I really think if we could find it in our hearts to look, each one, at ourselves more, and not view our brethren and sisters with a critic's eye, but do as the apostle Paul advises in Col. 3: 14. "Above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness," then would we be complete in Him who is the head of all principality and power, even Christ. Then would we be circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, being risen with Christ through the operation of faith in God who hath raised Him from the dead.

We are living in an age which requires more than at any other period of which I have any knowledge. We live in a current of events and of ideas the most impetuous that has ever swept along the Nations; and at an epoch when a year may effect the work of a century gone by. We have a mission to perform which our forefathers had not. It belongs to us to know how that mission can best be performed. We cannot fold our hands and sit down in idleness. It requires weapons of greater strength in this day, to cope with the enemy, than at any former time. Then with the vastness of the work before us, let us not stop by the way to pick up every straw that may come in our path, but set to work to strengthen the stakes and enlarge the borders of our beloved Zion. The Gospel places religion not in abstruse speculations, and metaphysical subtleties; not in outward show and tedious ceremony; not in superstitious austerities, and enthusiastic visions; but in purity of heart and holiness of life. The sum of our duty (according to our great Master himself) consists in the love of our God and the love of our neighbor. According to St. Paul, "in denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and in living soberly, righteously and godly in this world." According to St. James, "in visiting the fatherless and widow in affliction, and in keeping ourselves unspotted from the world." This is the constant strain and tenor of the Gospel. This it inculcates most earnestly, and on this it lays the greatest stress. Let us, therefore, who live under the Gospel, the most gracious dispensation bestowed by God to mankind, "count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord;" and not suffer ourselves, by slight cavils, to be moved away from the hope within us. Let us show that we are christians in deed and in truth; not by endless disputes about trifles, and the transports of a blind zeal, but by abounding in those "fruits of righteousness, which are, through Christ, to the praise and glory of God our Father. And let us adore Him because He hath given us of His spirit to shine in our hearts to give us the knowledge of His glory, as reflected from the face of His Son our Savior.

I have penned these lines from convictions of duty and not to give offence to any one. And I feel to say with Pilate, "What I have written I have written." And I have endeavored to do so in the spirit of love.

Your unworthy sister in Christ,
C. A. BUZARD.

Warsaw, Ind.

For the Pilgrim.

PRONOUNCING BENEDICTIONS.

With surprise and grief have I learned that some ministering brethren have been tampering with this outgrowth of Rome. What! shall mortal man assume a prerogative which belongs to God only? Jesus lifted up His hands and blessed His disciples before ascending to heaven; but where in all the New Testament, church, and church history, do we find authority or precedent for a ceremony so priest-like and papistical, save in the Church of Rome? Have some of the brethren indeed been courting the "Mother" and her Daughters? The voice from Heaven proclaims, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her plagues.'

We are indeed in the midst of times which are to try men's souls. Innovations are creeping in with smooth tongue and pleasing countenance which would rob the church of its power. I call upon the brethren everywhere to stand up boldly and firmly in defence of the distinctive features of primitive christianity, that the Church may present a united front against the corruptions of the age. "Vain repetitions" are condemned by the Savior in unmeasured terms; and it is a characteristic of the age to multiply forms and ceremonies of man's invention, and pronouncing a benediction, as it is called, is one of them. A little "holy water" is all that is wanting to make it a real papal performance. Oh, when will man learn that the right way is the easiest way at last! But man would be heard for his much speaking, and all the various performances for making converts, impressing the minds of the people with the sanctity of the minister, &c, is the result. In conclusion, I would say, let us be careful that we remove not the ancient landmarks which our fathers have set, nor suffer ourselves to be entangled in those chains which a corrupt christendom has been forging for the last eighteen hundred years.

DANIEL HAYS.

For the Pilgrim.

THE PASSWORD.

"The place where I had to go, was only just the other side of this wall, and I had but to pass through the gateway before me, and I should arrive at my destination, but at this gateway I found a policeman stationed who opened and shut the door as the people passed to and fro, and I noticed that he spoke to each person as he came up before he let him through. On coming up to the gateway the policeman stopped me and accosted me:

"The password, if you please sir."

"The password? I have no password to give you."

"Then I cannot allow you to pass."

"But my business is urgent and I have but to go to these docks, you'll let me out surely?"

"No, sir, I cannot."

I tried to persuade him but he was inflexible.

"It is more than my place is worth?"

"I dare not let any one through without the password."

Seeing that all expostulation was useless I turned round with no other alternative than that of going all the way back and walking round, altogether a walk of some distance. As I returned my mortification was not a little increased at seeing others coming up and on giving the password, at once allowed to go through.

In this simple incident, what an illustration we have of another journey, and the gateway at the entrance of the Heavenly City? How important that we should know the password, let us try to picture the scene, the gate is guarded, people are coming to seek for admittance. Here is one who with a confident step marches up to the gate and loudly knocking demands an entrance—the password is required. "O says he, don't you know who I am? why I'm well known as a man of generosity, I have made good use of my wealth in relieving distress, promoting the cause of religion and establishing churches, and thank God I can say I never offended against the laws of my country or the commands of my God. I am not one of those who have sunk into sin, so undo the gates and let me enter, but the answer is, "the gates cannot be opened as you have not given the password." Then up comes another; he is not so respectable a man as the former, no, says he, I cannot justify myself, for I am a sinner, indeed my soul is guilty and I have no good works to bring, but I've repented of my sin; behold my tears, my sighs, my groans, my prayers. O, sir, are not these enough to gain for me an entrance into the celestial city?

Ah, the gates are still fast closed because he cannot give the password. But look again; there is one coming with trembling step and eyes cast down he is afraid almost to approach the gate, at last he gives a gentle rap, it is asked; "Who art thou?" "I'm a poor undone sinner, said he, I come for mercy.

"What is your plea, do you know the password?" "Jesus, only," cries the penitent, and no sooner do the words escape his lips, than the pearly portals fly open, and ten thousand voices fill the air: "Come in, come in, poor man, thrice welcome."

Thus it is, dear reader, until we have been enabled to say from our inmost soul, "Jesus only," we have not yet learned heaven's password. It is not merely taking these words upon our lips or even having a head knowledge of the fact that "Jesus only can save the soul," that will admit us into the heavenly city, but it is a real heartfelt experience of the truth that we as sinners can do nothing either to cleanse from sin, or to clothe with righteousness, but that from all this we must trust in "Jesus only." N. E. W.

Defiance, O.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

OUTSIDE THE GATE.

SELECTED BY ANNIE BRUMBAUGH.

I stood outside the gate.
A poor wayfaring child.
Within my heart there beat
A tempest loud and wild,
A fear oppressed my soul
That I might be too late;
And Oh! I trembled sore,
And pray'd outside the gate.

Mercy, I loudly cried,
Oh! give me rest from sin.
I will, a voice replied,
And Mercy let me in.
She bound my bleeding wounds,
She soothed my aching head,
She eased my burden'd soul,
And bore the load instead.

In Mercy's guise I knew
The Savior long abused;
Who often sought my heart,
And wept when I refused.
Oh! what a blest return
For ignorance and sin:
I stood outside the gate,
And Jesus let me in.

ALL ABOUT JOSHUA

Dear Pilgrim; I am but a young girl, only in my 15th year, yet I feel like writing a little for the young PILGRIM readers. You may publish the following if worthy.

Dear children; would you not like to know who led the children out of Israel after Moses and Aaron and Miriam were dead? You know they had not got into that pleasant land which God had promised them when Moses died. God said Joshua should take them into that land. He was the son of Num, and had been a great deal of the time with Moses. When Moses went up mount Sinai, Joshua went farther up than any of the rest, except Moses. Once when Moses sent twelve men to spy out the land before the people went into it, Joshua and Caleb who were among them, were the only men who brought a true account of it. The names of the twelve men are all found in the 13th. chap. of Numbers, and the things they were sent to find out were, whether the people were few or many, strong or weak, whether the land was good or bad, whether the inhabitants dwelt in tents or in strongholds, and whether there was wood therein or not. Ten of the men brought back word that the people were very strong and of great size, they said there were giants there, in whose sight they were like grasshoppers. The other two gave a good account of the land and said let us go up at once and possess it, for we are well able to overcome it. They had trust in God, and expected to get the victory through His help. "If the Lord delight in us, then He will bring us into this land, and give it to us, a land which flows with milk and honey, only rebel not ye against the Lord, neither fear ye the people of the land, for they are bread for us. Their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us, fear them not." God blessed them for this, and punished the others. The Lord told the people to mind what Joshua said to them, and He would be with him as he was with Moses. The Lord helped Joshua to do great things, as He had helped Moses. Once when he was leading the people over the river Jordan, God made the waters stand all in a heap, on each side, so that they passed over on dry ground. Another time when he led them to the city of Jericho to fight against their enemies there, God made the walls of Jericho fall down, when the priests sounded the trumpets, so that the people of Israel got in without any trouble, and took the City.

The people who lived in the country of Canaan, which God had promised to Israel were very wicked and had sinned so much against Him that He determined to destroy many of them. God told the Israelites to fight against them, and when they minded what He said, He always helped them to get the victory over their enemies. Once when they were fighting against a great many of these wicked people, God made the sun to stand still a whole day on the hill of Gideon, and the moon also for a number of hours, to give them light till they had got the victory. At last when Joshua had led them safely into the promised land of Canaan, the time came for him to die. He had fought many battles for the Lord and Israel, and been a faithful servant of God. Before he died, he gathered all the elders of Israel together and repeated to them the great things God had done for them, and charged them to obey His word. Joshua died at the age of one hundred and ten years, and the people buried him on Mount Ephraim.

Now, dear children, what can you tell about Joshua, whose son was he? What report did the ten men make of the land which they went to search? What report did the two others bring? What made them think they could take the land? What did Joshua do for Israel? Did he take Israel into the land of Canaan? How old was he when he died, and what did he do just before his death?

ANNA VARNER.

Covington, Ohio.

For the Pilgrim.

A WORD TO THE YOUNG.

My dear young friends, I feel as if I should say a few words to you as I see so many of you idling and trifling your time away as though you could live always, but remember your time is short.

Do you not see daily, the old and the young called suddenly away without time to reflect on their state, but die they must, prepared or unprepared. Happy are they who have made their peace with God, they are in a happy state, their dying bed is easy and calm. They fear not death, but rejoice to leave this troublesome world. They see their kind Jesus waiting to receive them in His blessed abode with all the purified saints in their glory. But, O, my loving young friends, how is it with you that have not made peace with God, it is quite different to the christian state.

They dread death because they know they have no happiness to hope for, they know that they have to appear before an Almighty God, to be judged according to their deeds, be deprived of all happiness and be cast where the devil and his angels are. O, come young friends, do not let your soul go to ruin. It is your own fault if you don't get to Heaven. God sent his only begotten Son to die for us to save us all. He is no respecter of person, we have our free will to choose death or life. He wants us to come out like good volunteers, to serve him in deed and in truth. Our hearts must be changed and we must not be spending our time in the vanities of this world's goods and fashions, but let us see that we do the one thing needful. When Jesus knocks at our hearts give him possession to rule over us, and he will guide us safely to our journey's end.

A. BRINDLE.

Shirmanstown, Pa.

THINK OF THE POOR.

Dear Little Pilgrim: I have been spending many thoughts about conversing with you, as I did not get to meeting this beautiful Sabbath morning. The cause of me not going to meeting, a place to which I love to go, is, I gave my conveyance to a widowed sister; which, I think I will justify in staying at home and reading my Bible. I think we ought to do all we can for the poor. It makes me feel happy when I can do something for the poor people that are trying to gain a sweet rest in that beautiful mansion above where all is love.

SUSIE A. COFFMAN.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CEARLOSS, Md., March 31st.

Dear Editors:—Having been a reader of the PILGRIM, I can truly say I think it worthy of patronage, as it opens a channel for correspondents to express their sentiments on subjects of the greatest importance, and brings to view the various errors which now abound in professing christendom. This I consider to be highly necessary for it must be confessed by every enlightened and candid mind that error, at this time, has become popular by enrolling itself in the garb of truth, insomuch that if it were possible it would deceive the very elect, or the best men. Witness the merchandise now carried on under pretence of preaching the gospel to the triumph of the deists and the dishonor of the christian name. Yet these very men profess to believe the scriptures and say they are their rule of practice. But by this rule they are condemned for they are the very persons which all the prophets, Christ, and the apostles testified against. Error does not stop here, for we may see its baneful effects in a great variety of cases, and even in the most enlightened and spacious undertakings and institutions of the present day. There is evidently too much selfish gratification and the indulgence of worldly desires, so that it appears to me to be an exceeding dark and degenerate time. Nevertheless light has gone forth, but as it is said in John, 15th chap. 'the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth not.' And again Christ saith 'if the light in you become darkness, how great is that darkness.' Therefore it is nothing strange that mankind should be in the state they are at present, for when that light which bringeth salvation is neglected, or men disrespect it, it prepares the way for delusions of the most subtle nature, and of the most destructive tendency.

I feel an earnest desire that all may be rightly informed in regard to those numerous errors, which now so much abound in the world, and that they may withdraw their minds from the rules, the maxims and the institutions of men, and place them on God alone, who then and not till then, will give them His Holy Spirit and be their sure guide and director in all things, inspiring their minds with all holy tempers and desires, thereby they will become visible members of the true church of Christ, and adorn the gospel of God their Savior, for we can only become members of the true Church of Christ by coming to be partakers of the mind of Christ. And as we yield ourselves up to the governments of the Holy Spirit, we shall advance in all godliness and uprightness until we arrive to that state in which we shall be as a city set on a hill that cannot be hid.

A PILGRIM.

Dear Pilgrim: Inasmuch as the time is drawing near when the Brethren are to assemble together, to settle one of the weightiest questions that has agitated the Brotherhood since its establishment in America, namely, Feet-washing, and as I live at a remote distance from the place where the question will be considered, it is not likely that California will be represented. This and other reasons I will endeavor to give in this article, for the cause of none attendance.

My mind has been directed to this subject, from an article in the PILGRIM, Vol. 3, No. 4, page 26, headed Old Reminiscence. I concur with the writer of that article, "That the plan adopted," by A. M. of 1871, to settle this grave question, does not honor the Author of our blessed religion. I, like brother C. S., embraced the faith in the West, and when counted worthy by the brethren there to be put in the ministry of the Word, and afterwards ordained by the laying on of hands, the Word of God was put in my hands by the officiating Elder, and charged to teach what it taught me, that was my text book, and to guide me in my religious duties. Receiving my early instructions from the scriptures, I am led to believe that He is the head of the church, even Christ Jesus. The decisions of any power that has risen since the Savior was here on earth, who taught us how to do, and gave the example, should not be taken in preference to the example and command of our blessed Lord. The sending of these brethren into Penn'a to ascertain what the first practice of feet-washing was, or how observed by the Brethren in America, does not argue well for the high esteem we have for the teachings of God's Word, and if these facts can be satisfactorially ascertained, what has that to do with the right or wrong of the mode at issue? We should through prayer and searching ascertain what the mind of the Lord is, in the teaching of the living oracles. If a union and oneness in feet-washing could be effected on a Gospel basis, there is no one who would rejoice more than I would. And if the custom of casting out brethren and their names without a Gospel cause, thereby going forth to the different churches as bad and stubborn members, would no longer be indulged in, and love to God and one another adopted instead, union and peace would soon reign all over the Brotherhood, and love, joy and peace, the fruit of the spirit, would be felt and enjoyed from sea to sea, for God, in His Word, has promised to bless the effort directed by the spirit of prayer.

The counsel of A. M. of 1871 was, that, between then and the day set forth to settle the feet-washing question there should not be any churches organized on the single mode, or any change from the double to the single. Now, brethren, judge ye whether this is liberal enough to bring your California brethren over 3000 miles to sit in that council. The call for the assembling of the Elders to settle that grave question is Apostolic, but the basis prescribed on which it is to be settled is what we object to.

Another error we may fall into. That is, in settling this question, a majority in favor of one or the other modes would call it right because of their majority. To this we object, from the fact that the law of ordinances in the Government of our Lord Jesus Christ is a theocracy and not a democracy. We admit, that in local matters the majority of a church must rule, but where is it to be found in God's Word that a majority has a right to alter, change, add to, or take from, the pattern and commands Jesus has given us? Now, brethren, I have spoken my mind in few words. In conclusion, permit me to say, that my prayers ascend up to the Great Head of the Church to protect and strengthen us, His weak children, for humility to bow in submission to His Word.

ELD. GEORGE WOLFE.

Lathrop, Cal.

VINELAND, CUMBERLAND CO., N. J.
April 12th, 1872.

Dear Brs. Brumbaugh, Eds. Weekly PILGRIM: I have been receiving your excellent WEEKLY PILGRIM since December 1870, my brother Levi first subscribing for me. I am induced to subscribe again, seeing the paper has been enlarged considerably. I live remote from any church of the Brethren, none nearer than Philadelphia, about thirty-five miles. I frankly admit that the PILGRIM is a great satisfaction to me since receiving it, and greatly assists me in the Divine life. In it, weekly, I hear something that is encouraging to me. I will herein enclose $1.25 for another year for the PILGRIM, and greatly thank you for sending it to me without advance payment thus far. You know best when my last years subscription ended. Long may its visits continue to bless the hearts and homes of the humble Christian Pilgrim. God bless your noble endeavors to extend the circulation of the W. PILGRIM. Farewell brethren in Christ.

J. H. B.

NO HALF FARE.

After conferring with both agents of the railroads running through the Middle District of Iowa, in relation to half fare tickets, as requested by the last A. M. I now inform the members that there will be none granted.

G. R. BAKER.

Altoona, Polk Co., Iowa.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Will the readers of the PILGRIM that know of the whereabouts of James P. Allshouse, a boy 15 years old, please give me his address?

DAVID SWINEHART.

Bowerston, Harrison Co., Ohio.

Announcements.

DISTRICT MEETINGS

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

West Virginia District. April 26th.

North eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

Middle District of Pa., Lower Cumberland Branch, April 30th. A full representation desired.

DIED.

GROBY.—In the Lower Miami Church, Montgomery county, Ohio, March 22nd, Catharine Idella, daughter of brother Adam and sister Susanna Groby, aged 2 yrs, 6 months and 8 days. Funeral service by the brethren from 1st Epistle of Peter, 1st chapter, 24, 25.

This is the fourth one of their tender offsprings that has been conveyed to the silent tomb and they truly have our sympathies. Inasmuch as you have been bereft of your dear children, try and bear up, they have only gone a little while before you. Soon we too must go. Then be faithful a few more days and you can meet your darling ones again, where you can dwell together as an unbroken family.

NEIDICH.—In the Lower Miami Church, Montgomery county, Ohio, April 9th, William Neidich, aged 23 years and 4 months. Funeral services by the brethren and the writer from John 5th ch 25, 28, 29 verses.

The subject of this notice was ailing for some time, and a little over a week before his death he sent for the ministering brethren to pray for him and desired to become a member of the church, but too weak to have his wishes fully accomplished. This is another warning to those that delay and wait for a more convenient season to commence the good work.

DANIEL BOCK.

SMALL.—In the Falling Spring Church, March 9th, George Small. Funeral services by Eld. Henry Koontz and the writer.

GROVE.—In the same church April 5th, sister Ann Rebecca Grove, aged 24 years and 1 mo. Funeral services by Eld Henry Koontz and the writer.

Sister Grove was the daughter of Bro. Christian Deardorf, dec'd., of Franklin Co., Pa. She was prostrated for about five weeks, but bore her affliction throughout her illness as becometh the saints, with such patience as is rarely found, and in much assurance. Her relatives have lost a kind friend, her husband, (John S. Grove) and affectionate wife, and the church a consistent and praiseworthy member. Although she was young in years, she was rich in faith, hope and love.

JOHN ZUCK.

(Companion and Visitor please copy.

IMLER.—On the 12th inst., in the Yellow Creek Church, near New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa., Bro. John Imler, aged 32 years, 3 months and 13 days, disease, fever and hemorrhage. Occasion improved by the brethren from James 1: 23. He leaves a sorrowful sister (widow) and 3 children to mourn their loss. Visitor and Companion please copy.

LEONARD FURRY.

WHITEHEAD.—Near Milford, Kosciusko county, Ind., Adaliza Whitehead of bleeding of Lungs, aged 29 years and 11 days. She was beloved by all, and a large concourse of mourning friends followed her to the grave. Funeral services by the writer, 1 Cor. 15th ch. 19 ver.

JESSE CALVERT.

TOMBOUGH.—In Tenmile congregation Washington county, Pa., Jan. 12th, 1872, of Cancer of the Stomach, our beloved sister Barbara, wife of Bro. John Tomlough, aged nearly 24 years. She was under medical treatment nearly 4 years, but passed away like an expiring vapor. Funeral text, Phil. 1: 21, by

JOHN WISE.

TASHER.—In Marshall county, Ind., Feb. 25, 1872, Henry Tasher, aged 27 years and 11 mos., lacking 2 days. Funeral services by the writer, John Hoover and Adam Appleman,

JOHN KNISELY.

EDITORIAL.

OUR SAY.

As we have refused a number of articles on the subject of feetwashing, it may be proper for us to give our reasons for admitting Bro. Wolf's article, although it is not intended as an argument on that subject, but rather as a protest against the plan which A. M. originated to settle this much mooted question.

1st. Bro. Wolf seems to stand as a representative of the Church of the Brethren in California, and as they will not be represented at A. M. it seems charity in us to let them be heard.

2d. They stand isolated from the general brotherhood and simply contend for that liberty of conscience which God has granted to every regenerated soul.

3d. They are in the minority in practice and not oppressive but stand in defence of that mode which they think was taught and exemplified by their Divine Master, which is certainly no crime, when it must be admitted that they have, at least, as much scripture for their position as those who differ from them. Our hearts were made to rejoice ever since we knew that we had brethren away out on the Pacific coast, and far would it be from us to say or do anything that might have a tendency to sever that cord which binds our glowing hearts together and unites us as the mystical body of Christ.

Although we were always favorable to that mode generally established by the Church, and never, to our knowledge, saw it practiced any other way, yet we feel quite sure if what is called the single mode was established, we would feel just as well in observing it in that way, because we believe that the ordinance is washing feet and that it is observed in either mode, if done in the right spirit and with the true design. Right here brethren, we fear is where the danger comes in. While we are jan gling and disputing about the letter, we may lose the spiritual import. We are often made to fear that many perform this significant ordinance as a dead letter, and to such it matters but little how it is performed. If the time and writing that is spent in discussing the mode was spent in enlightening our dear members of its spiritual signification, perhaps it would be better for the Church.

For any set of elders to excommunicate members for this simple difference in practice, is presumption, and overstepping their privileges, as no such authority ever was, nor never should be given, and we have more confidence in our dear brethren than to believe that they will ever be guilty of committing such a blunder.

As to the Committee sent out to investigate this matter we have but little to say, and less yet to expect, from the fact that the information thus gained cannot add one iota in favor of either mode. The "old landmarks" are so clearly set forth in the Bible that a wayfaring man, though he were a fool, cannot err therein, and if nothing can be found there to settle this mooted question, we fear we will not gather much light outside of it. Brethren, let us stick to the truth and let tradition go, so did our old brethren who are long since gone to rest. The Bible was the only guide that they had, and surely it should not be less ours. This is the oldest, the best and the only authority we have on which to base our hopes of eternal life, and we do well if we take heed thereto. Our predictions are, that if our brethren or elders meet in the fear of the Lord, having nothing in view but the welfare of our beloved Zion, this question will be disposed of just as it should be, allowing each branch of the Church to observe this ordinance in the way that they can do it with a clear conscience as dictated by the Holy Spirit, as we believe that in either way, the ordinance is observed, and that the benefit to be derived therefrom, depends more in the spirit in which it is done, than in the mode. In conclusion we will say, that we do not wish, neither will we allow this question to be discussed in our columns for the present as it only engenders strife. Nothing but charity and Christian forbearance can or will settle it satisfactory.

PETITION TO A. M. A few days ago we received several petitions which are intended to be presented to A. M., but from whom or whence they came, we know not. The spirit of them appears to be ortl odox, protesting against the proceedings of certain elders who are accused of lording over God' sheritage, and excommunicating all who refuse to toe the mark, also asks A. M. to divest elders of power to act in the absence of positive Gospel law, and to accept the New Testament to be our only rule of faith, practice and Church government.

We feel to have much to say in regard to these things, but shall wait for further developments. We are truly sorry that there should be a cause for such things and look upon them as omens of no good. Brethren, let us earnestly pray and labor for the promotion of peace, exercising charity and christian forbearance towards each other as fellow heirs of the Kingdom of God.

Miscellaneous.

ELD. GEO. WOLF, of Lathrop, Cal., informs us that the prospects are cheering and that the crops promise a large harvest. They expect harvest to commence by the first of June.

JOSEPH ZAHN.—We will allow you the percentage on all that you will be pleased to send us.

JACOB HOLSOPPLE.—There is due us from J. P. $1.40. We have cancelled C. P's, name if not right inform us.

SAMUEL MOORE.—The PILGRIM, from now to the end of the year will cost 85cts common paper, or $1.00 book paper. Send the money in a registered letter or get a postal order.

JOSIAH HORNING AND OTHERS.—The promised debate has not yet been sent us. We had a letter from Bro. Calvert, the other day, and he says it will be sent as soon as they get it ready. Have a little patience, it will be forthcoming as soon as received.

DON'T FORGET.—Every new subscriber gets a copy of Eld. Flory's "Anxions Bench Religion" free of charge. Now is the time to subscribe. Will not our agents still continue their efforts in enlarging the PILGRIM's field of labor? Now is the time to subscribe as there are movements afloat in the church upon which every brother and sister should be posted. Annual Conference is also approaching, of which we expect to give as full a report as circumstances will admit. The promised debate is also another prospective inducement On a whole, the PILGRIM is now all that the Brotherhood can reasonably expect, and with its daily increasing list of new subscribers and many valuable new and old, contributors we certainly can reasonably expect to make it more interesting, useful and instructive. Hitherto God has been mindful of us and abundantly blessed us, whereby we have been enabled to labor for the peace and prosperity of the Church and we hope by His good pleasure our future pages may be the imprint of that christian charity which our blessed Master says "thinketh no evil."

ORNAMENTAL AND USEFUL.—Briggs & Bro's catalogue of flowers and vegetable seeds for 1872. As the time for purchasing flowers and vegetable seed is now here, we will call the attention of our readers to one of the most extensive and prettiest catalogues that we ever had the pleasure of examining. It is a perfect album of pretty flowers and is really worth the price asked for it for that alone. It also contains useful hints upon the growth and raising of flowers and vegetables, which are the results of years of practical experience, and a complete price list of all the flowers and vegetables that are cultivated. No person interested in flowers, house or garden plants, or engeged in the raising of vegetables should be without one of these beautiful and valuable illustrated catalogues. Enclose twenty-five cents and have one at once. After receiving the catalogue you order seeds to the amount of $1.00 the price of the catalogue is returned to you again, in seeds.

Address, BRIGGS & BRO.,
Rochester, N. Y.

LOVEFEASTS.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P. M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

DEAR PILGRIM: Please announce that we, the brethren of the Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., intend to hold a Lovefeast in our new Church House, 5½ miles southswest of Plymouth, on the 14th of June, 1872. If any come on the mail train they can stop off at the Summit, 3 miles west of Plymouth. We do hope that some of our laboring brethren will be with us, and as many others as wish to come will be heartily welcome. Meeting commences at 10 o'clock.

JOHN KNISELY.

Dear Pilgrim: Please announce that the District Meeting of Western, Pa., will be held at the Pigeon Creek Meeting House, Washington Co., Pa., on the 1st day of May 1872, and on the evening of the 2nd, there will be a communion meeting at the same place. The usual invitation extended.

JOHN WISE.

Please announce that the brethren in Falling Spring Church, will hold, the Lord willing, their Love Feast at Hades meeting house on the 14th day of May next. A cordial invitation to all. JOHN ZUCK.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!

RENNER'S

HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, DR. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 25, tf Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

BRO. RENNER, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country. A. HUTCHISON, Oak Hill, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. WM. H. BAILY, Raleigh, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic. I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was. My neighbors are surprised at my healty appearance. D. S. STAYER, New Enterprise, Pa.

DR. RENNER:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. WM. H. GANT, Cool Springs, S. C.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

ANTIOCH DESTROYED.

The destruction of one-half of the city of Antioch in Syria, by an earthquake, and the loss of fifteen hundred lives, is announced by cable dispatches. No particulars have been received further than that great distress prevails in that portion of the city not demolished, and the remaining inhabitants are sadly in need of assistance. This is the fifth or sixth time during the Christian era, that Antioch has suffered such a calamity. In the year 115 while the Roman Emperor, Trajan, was visiting the city—then called from its wealth and influence, the "Queen of the East," an earthquake leveled almost the entire city to the ground, burying thousands of its inhabitants beneath the surface of the earth. The city was rebuilt, but in the year 458 was again visited by a shock almost as severe as the first. But a worse fate was yet to come to it, for in the year 265, while the inhabitants and multitudes of people from the surrounding country were celebrating the Feast of the Ascension, the earth opened and engulfed a large part of the city, shattering and destroying the remainder. It is impossible to calculate the amount of suffering occasioned by that single disaster, but it is known that more than 250,000 lives were lost. About sixty years later the city was again the scene of a like calamity, and again in the year 1822.

New Sect in England.—Another kind of religionists have sprung up in England from which country a large part of the recruits of Mormons came. A sect calling itself (very properly) "Peculiar People" has taken possession of one of the arches of the London and Dover Railway, near the Walworth-road. In this dreary vault the Peculiars have fitted up a chapel with benches and a platform. There is a space left for dancing, which, it appears, is one of the ceremonies. The brethren and sisters, upon meeting, kiss each other. Then they sing a hymn. Then somebody makes a long prayer. Then either a sister or a brother preaches from the book of Revelations. Then some boy or girl has convulsions, apparently epileptic. Then the meeting breaks up with what appears to be a "general break-down," with much kicking and leaping, furious gesticulations and maniacal exertions.

Popish "Miraculous Water."—Apropos to the miracles which the Bishop of Laval is making known to the world, the waters of Nanterre, near Paris, which were deprived of their virtues during the war, have now begun anew to work marvels under the auspices of St. Catharine. The cure of Nanterre has charge of the well, and derives from it an annual revenue ten times as large as his sacerdotal remuneration. The trade in this water is very curious. It is bottled, corked, stamped, and sold to believers in all parts of the country. Hundreds of bottles are daily sent to the more fervent regions of Brittany. La Champagne also consumes the miraculous water largely; Chalons, Rheims, and Vitry-le-Francais being the cure's best customers.

The Great Brooklin Bridge Company has already expended upward of $2,200,000 on the work, including the amount paid for right of way. The entire cost is estimated at $12,000,000. It is stated that steam-cars will run across the bridge at the rate of twenty miles an hour.

A frightful tornado swept over Brownsville, Tenn., on the 9th. inst., blowing down many dwellings and outhouses, and injuring a number of persons—one, Mrs. Burteo, fatally. A cabin, containing a dozen negroes, was turned over several times without hurting any body.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition,75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

AGENTS WANTED FOR

"JESUS."

By CHARLES F. DEEMS. D. D.

His divinity established and rationally demonstrated. The most popular and rapidly-selling religious work ever issued. For circulars, address U. S. PUBLISHING CO., N. Y.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	11 25
Arabesque plain,	1.00
Turkey morocco,	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,	5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINIED." by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real. The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery: It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,
Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,			10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,			8 cts.
Six months,	do	do	6 cts.
One Year,	do	do	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Apl. 13, 1872.

FLOUR, Extra family.	$7.00
" Superfine.	7.50
" fancy brands.	8.00
" Rye.	5.00
CORN MEAL.	4.00
WHEAT, white, per bushel.	1.65
" red. "	1.56
CORN.	.80
RYE.	1.05
OATS.	.26

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.
CORRESPONDING EDITORS.
D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1 25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,
Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Middle District of Ind. April 12th.

Merkly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, APRIL 30, 1872. NO. 18.

POETICAL.

LITTLE GREEN GRAVES.

There's many a green and grassy grave
In yonder burial-ground,
And many a child lies sleeping there
Under the swelling mound.

And many a parent's heart has ached
In anguish and despair,
When laid away in the silent grave,
They left them mouldering there.

The heart and home were desolate
When the prattler's voice was still,
For, alas! no sound of merriment
Comes out from yon green hill.

There willows wave their graceful boughs,
And swing in the summer breeze;
Flowers bloom in the grassy beds,
And birdies sing in the trees.

The willow weeps and the summer breeze
Sighs in passing along;
The flowers bloom with a hectic flush,
The birds but murmur their song.

Then who can carol a cheerful note,
As softly there they tread
'Mong the grass that waves over the graves
Of children early dead?

Ah, weary and sad it is to think
How soon they passed away,
How the fairy form and rosy cheek
Mouldered again to clay!

And now they sleep in their dreary beds,
Nor heed the falling rain;
Though thunders roll in the mighty sky,
Ne'er shall they wake again.

List! I hear a whispering spirit say
That angels watch their clay,
And when the night of the grave is gone
They'll wake in endless day!

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

LIFE.

BY BROTHER RIDGELY.

What is that to which we all cling with such a firm tenacity? We call it Life; and in that one simple word give expression to a thousand ideas as different as it is possible for language to convey, and many of them so vague that the most astute philosopher can neither understand nor explain them. Did I say we all cling to it with a firm tenacity? Aye, we make it everything in our voyage through the world, and are willing to sacrifice all else for a few more years, often a few more days. Queen Elizabeth was known to exclaim upon her dying bed, "A million for a moment."

How firmly the shipwrecked Mariner clings to his floating piece of timber, and even when his tongue, swollen from the lack of moisture, fills his parched and burning mouth and throat almost to suffocation, and his paralyzed limbs refuse longer to allow the nourishing blood to course through his veins, thus making his sufferings tenfold more horrible than death itself, he still hopes on for a little more of life, a few more days upon earth. It must indeed be sweet, when mortals can cling so fondly to a mere hope of its short continuance.

A couple of years ago, one bitter cold night, I witnessed the burning of a large planing mill in the city of Chicago. The Fire Marshall after examining the roof of the burning building, sent four fireman up to endeavor to suppress the flames. They had just reached the place of duty, when it fell with a crash, burying three of the men in the flame, but the fourth, making one desperate effort for life grasped the telegraph wire, which was extended over the roof, with his hands, and when the wire had cut through and rendered them powerless, he clutched it in his teeth, and thus supported himself above the raging fire until he was rescued from his terrible position. What man would suffer the terrible agony which he endured but to save his life? Not one. "Self-preservation is truly, the first law of nature."

The poor maimed wretch who has lost hands and feet from the effects of the terrible winters which visit our plains, still cries plaintively for life, though he knows that he will be compelled to be dependent during the remainder of his days upon others, for everything which he can have, for every comfort he enjoys, every pleasure he knows. But with all this weight of sorrow pressing so heavily upon him, he cries, "Give me but life, and I will suffer a thousand times more." Truly to live must be worth much that we would pay so high a price therefor.

The criminal condemned to the scaffold cries in the midst of his despair for the Bastile, the deepest dungeon of which he will cheerfully inhabit, deprived of light, companionship, everything in fact, that could make imprisment bearable, so that the precious boon is granted him. Precious most life be that it would be purchased at such cost. Then what is life that we should all cling to it with such firm tenacity? Is it the mere existence of the body upon earth? Much of it is not enjoyable, in fact many lives are made up more of sorrow and cares than of pleasure and happiness. 'Tis a mystery which philosophers have tried in vain to solve.

We have its counterpart, and at the same time termination, death. We all know that it is the severing of all ties that bind us to earth; the breaking up of all relations formed with the world. It is a dark shadow which lies across our path, and which we all must traverse, either to a more bright and joyous life beyond, or to eternal darkness.

There is another life then, one of which this in its most joyous time is but a poor type, a life which knows no end, a life of eternal happiness. There is no fear of death there, no dark shadow to threaten our passage, for all is clear and bright, one day of neverending bliss. We cling so fondly to this, how much more enjoyable is that. Is it not worth more powerful efforts than that which we know must sooner or later terminate?

Then we have an eternal death, a death which is neverending, but attacks us even more fiercely, and brings with it the dread consciousness that it will ever be recurring, that we must always die anew, and yet we are never dead. The most terrible anguish is this, dying, dying for ages, and yet the dissolution does not come. And so on, the prospect darkens as we gaze ahead, for we can see nothing but death in store for us, and yet we must suffer on.

Oh reader, can you pause to think? Can there be a choice between situations like these? No, no, you must take the narrow way that leads to eternal life. Though you may not know so much of what this world calls pleasure, your happiness will be far greater from the consciousness that you have an eternal life awaiting you, that there are unending joys in the world to come. Follow the steps of our dear Savior, for they lead you to this life. Pursue the narrow way, for it leads you to eternal day, a glorious life in Heaven.

Chicago, Ill.

A BLESSED PRIVILEGE.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

What is a blessed privilege? you ask. We all enjoy privileges, but there are few which we may call blessed. This privilege is a holy work, and is followed often with the most glorious of consequences. But what is it? I will tell you.

The Apostle James says, "Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins." That is it brother, sister. Now have you used this holy privilege? Have you "converted a sinner from the error of his way?" Have you tried? Or can you sit at ease and feel unmoved while you know many souls are going fast on their ruinous way down to the chambers of dark despair and death in the pit. Can you "stand all the day idle," and not "save a soul from death," when it is your blessed privilege to engage in a work so holy? Do you ever speak a kind word for Jesus to those who are His by right of the purchase of His precious blood? Have you tried to convert, or change a sinner from his error, for every one commits a most grievous error who follows the pernicious ways of Satan? If you have you are working for Jesus, and He will reward you at the last day, and I should not wonder if you would receive some reward in this life. But I trust you do not do it for a reward. This must not be the motive. We must be actuated by the "love of Christ" in us. If we love Christ, we will love our neighbor, and be interested in his soul's condition. But now it is our privilege also to convert our neighbor whose thoughts, and words and acts are in the way of error and sin, and need to be changed. He needs to be converted from loving the follies and vanities of the world, to loving God and His Word, and His people. Blessed are they who are en-

For the Pilgrim.

THE HOUSE OF THE LORD.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the House of the Lord.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O, Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a City that is compact together. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem they shall prosper that love thee.

For my brethren and companions sake, I will say peace be within thee.

Because of the house of the Lord thy God, I will seek thy good.

I have selected this subject from the fact it is the dearest place on earth to me. Within its walls I can sit and listen to the truths of the Scriptures as they are explained to us. There we meet with our dear brethren and sisters, and I sincerely feel that it is good for us to be there. There it is that we can mingle our voices together in singing God's praises. None of us should enter that house carelessly or unconcernedly, but rather should come, each one with an offering, and all should pray in behalf of our ministering brethren, and lend our efforts to promote the good cause.

We should pray for our dear young friends that are living strangers to God and His grace, and induce them to turn from their evil ways, and search the Scriptures, for in them they find eternal life.

We should not let any disagreeable weather prevent attending at the house of the Lord. Nothing but sickness should hinder us from going, for there is none of us that feel what a great blessing we are deprived of, until we are obliged to stay away in consequence of affliction, or of being removed so far from the place of worship that it is impossible for us to get there. I can tell from experience that it is the greatest disappointment I ever realized to be obliged to remain at home from church.

Again we should always be careful and examine ourselves very closely, when we enter the house of the Lord, and ascertain if we ourselves are right, before we examine our brethren and sisters. I am sorry to say that some of our brethren and sisters seem to examine each other in the church too closely, and it has caused me some bitter tears; and not only myself but many of our younger sisters. We cannot expect babes in Christ to live as closely as the older ones of the church, and when we see wherein they err we should point out their fault to them privately, and admonish them. We should have a better motive in view, we should be thinking more about heavenly and divine things, than the apparel of any of our sisters. We should not follow after the fashions of the present age, but rather appear in the house of the Lord in neat, modest apparel, as we are commanded.

I wish to speak in particular to the young sisters that they should never absent themselves from church to go visiting, for if we are indolent and negligent, how can we expect our neighbors and young friends to attend worship, we should set the example for others to follow, for there is nothing affords me greater pleasure than to see a large attendance at church, and I know it affords the ministering brethren great pleasure to address a large congregation. I have been to the house of the Lord when there was no ministering brethren present, and I was very much disappointed, and I know that when they are present, and not many people there, they feel sorry to see that people are so negligent. If we absent ourselves one Sunday it will not be hard for us to stay away two, and finally we would rather stay at home or visit a friend than go to meeting. Therefore let us resolve that nothing shall allow us to absent ourselves from meeting, save affliction, and "surely goodness and mercy shall follow us all the days of our life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Always bear in mind that when we are attending the house of the Lord, we are laying up treasures where neither moth nor rust can corrupt, and then we will be ready to exclaim with the Poet:

"Ever hail, blessed temple, abode of the Lord,
I will turn to thee often to hear from His word,
I will walk to thine altar, with these that I love,
And rejoice in the prospects revealed from above.

LIZZIE BUSSARD.

Fairplay, Md.

For the Pilgrim.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 2 Pet. 3:18.

There is nothing so desirable, nothing so much sought and studied by active humanity as a right speedy progress. All, in whatever pursuit, desire a speedy progression, a thrifty growth, a healthy condition of things, as regards the object of man's concern. The pilgrim as he journeys along in a strange land, sees to his right and to his left that all humanity is in a great struggle and bustle after some object or other. He watches some and sees some obtain their objects sought. He sees their end and the result of their struggle. They heap to themselves riches, some great human honor, others fail altogether. All having brought nothing into the world and can take nothing out; all pass away, both them that were successful and them that made little or no progress in life. But the pilgrim well knows that he has a point to reach in just so much time, so he passes steadily on, and as he proceeds he falls in with enemies. He feels his strength to fail him, and while others have progress of substance of earth which success ends on earth, and he viewing his reward in heaven. He necessarily seeks his strength of substance of heaven, namely, the Word of God. He feeds thereon, grows in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Finally by adding to one grace another, to faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, to knowledge temperance, &c., he attains the full stature of the measure of a man in Christ Jesus. And when he leaves this mortal stage of his existence does his progression end as did that of those he noticed to end in death before him? Oh, no. He takes all the substance with him that he accumulated except what he distributes among the children of men here, and for that "he shall in nowise lose his reward." No, he will still progress on unto all eternity. He shall find "joys ever new." For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them unto living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. Now that He will lead them is a promise which implies an advancement from his table in his kingdom, where he shall have come forth, and girded himself, and served unto them living fountains of water. And other promises still imply a farther advancement in heaven. But had the pilgrim been persuaded by any one on the way to give up his "mad pursuit" "of things not seen," and taken interest only in "things which are seen," or especially yielded when his strength began to fail him, just as thousands do, then where would he be? If he had, and had gained the whole world, and by it "lost his soul; what would he give in exchange for it?" Why all he had gained if he had kept it, but at the end of his wild career he had to leave it to the use and the abuse of others; and now what will he give? What has he to give? So fellow pilgrims, as we are pilgrims and strangers we can tarry but to-night; but when the hour of bustle comes on, away we must speed, onward, and upward, and look at the course of the wicked only long enough to learn the moral therof and then onward march. "But" at the beginning of the text, implies that something preceded it, which is a warning that we take heed how we learn morals of things by the way "lest ye also being led away by the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. To Him be glory both now and forever, Amen.

C. C. ROOT.

Mirabile, Mo.

For the Pilgrim.

MAN A FREE AGENT.

"For in Him we live, and move and have our being." Acts 27: 28.

Man is the highest order of God's creation, and the noblest workmanship of His hands. He was highly favored in that that he was stamped with the image of his Creator, and endowed with knowledge sufficient to enable him to know the right, and to labor for his own happiness, as well as to glorify the name of God. As man was created in the image of his Creator, he was created a complete man, and not as a machine to be acted upon by his Creator whether to weal or woe. A free thinker, a free actor is God and man is created like him in this respect, a free being, otherwise he would not be man but a mere machine. Then as man was created free to act for himself, God gave unto him a law to abide by, in order that he might use his freedom in either direction by strictly adhering to the laws of God, or a straight out rebellion against the injunctions of his Creator. Alas, for man the latter proved too true. He takes the power or liberty that God had given him and used it in promoting the cause of the devil. We often hear it said why did not God interfere? Why did he not withhold the power that he had given to man that caused him to sin? The reason why I believe is, because man was free and God does not force his claims upon any one. This would destroy the free agency of man. He was created free and intelligent. The Law was given in plain language, and in consequence disobedience he knew his reward. He was not in ignorance concerning this matter. Where is the reason for giving a law, and not the power to keep or break. Man had the power to do this, and he uses the power, and the effects of that power we feel to deny. Man's condition thus far has never been changed. We still live and move by the power that God giveth, and how often we take the advantage of this power in dishonoring Him. Without God we can do nothing, it matters not what. Then unthinking mortal will not God hold you responsible for the way you are using this power? Be honest with Him in glorifying his name by walking with Him aright.

SAMUEL C. BASHOA.

Whitesville, Mo.

"During my long commercial experience," says Girard, "I have noticed that no advantage results from telling one's business to others, except to create jealousy or competition when we are fortunate, and to gratify our enemies when we are otherwise."

Justice consists in doing no injury to men; decency in giving them no offense.

Many false things have more appearance of truth than things that be most true.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

THE GREAT TEACHER.

I asked the little joyous Bird who taught him how to fly,
And sing such pretty songs in the bright
blue morning sky;
And he told me it was God who had given to him his wing,
And taught him how to build his nest, and taught him how to sing.

I asked the little lovely Flower who gave her perfume sweet,
And dressed her in her velvet coat so beautiful and neat,
And taught her how to breathe so sweet upon the evening air;
And she told me it was God who had clothed her with such care.

I asked the little twinkling Star who taught him how to shine,
And run with such a steady pace along his proper line;
And he told me it was God who bade him shine so bright
And trim his tiny little lamp to cheer the winter night.

Since all things, then, look up to God, the Flower, the Star, the Bird,
And all obey His holy laws, and listen to
His word,
I too, although a child, will try His bidding to obey,
That I may learn to please Him too, and serve as well as they.

A BROKEN SAW.

A boy went to live with a man who was accounted a hard master. He never kept his boys; they ran away or gave notice they meant to quit; so he was half his time without and in search of a boy. The work was not very hard—opening and sweeping out the shop, chopping wood, going errands and helping around. At last Sam Fisher went to live with him. "Sam's a good boy," said his mother. "I should like to see a boy now-a-days that has a spark of goodness in him," growled the new master.

It is always bad to begin with a man who has no confidence in you; because, do your best, you are likely to have little credit for it. However, Sam thought he would try; the wages were good, and his mother wanted him to go. Sam had been there but three days before, in sawing a cross-grained stick of wood, he broke the saw. He was a little frightened. He knew he was careful, and he knew he was a pretty good sawyer, too, for a boy of his age; nevertheless, the saw broke in his hands.

"And Mr. Jones will thrash you for it," said another boy who was in the wood-house with him. "Why, of course I didn't mean it, and accidents will happen to the best of folks," said Sam, looking with a sorrowful air on the broken saw. "Mr. Jones never makes allowances," said the other boy; I never saw anything like him. That Bill might have stayed, only that he jumped into a hen's nest and broke her eggs. He darn't tell of it; but Mr. Jones kept suspecting and suspecting, and laid everything out of the way to Bill, whether Bill was to blame or not, till Bill couldn't stand it and wouldn't.

"Did he tell Mr. Jones about the eggs?" asked Sam. "No," said the boy, "he was 'fraid; Mr. Jones has got such a temper." "I think he'd better owned it just at once," said Sam. "I suspect you'll find it easier to preach than to practice," said the boy. I'd run away before I'd tell him;" and he soon turned on his heel and left poor Sam alone with his broken saw.

The poor boy did not feel very comfortable or happy. He shut up the wood-house, walked out into the garden, and then went up to his little chamber under the eaves. He wished he could tell Mrs. Jones; but she wasn't sociable, and he had rather not. "Oh, my God," said Sam, falling upon his knees, "help me to do the thing that is right."

I do not know what time it was, but when Mr. Jones came into the house the boy heard him. He got up, crept down stairs, and met Mr. Jones in the kitchen.

"Sir," said Sam, "I broke your saw, and I thought I'd come and tell you 'fore you saw it in the morning."

"I should think morning soon enough to tell of your carelessness. Why do you come down to-night?"

"Because," said Sam, I was afraid if I put it off I might be tempted to tell a lie about it. I am sorry I broke it; but I tried to be careful."

Mr. Jones looked at the boy from head to foot, then stretching out his hand, "There, Sam," he said heartily, "give me your hand. Shake hands; I'll trust you Sam. That's right; that's right. Go to bed, boy. Never fear. I'm glad the saw broke; it shows the mettle's in you. Go to bed.

Mr. Jones was fairly won. Never were better friends than Sam and he. Sam thinks justice had not been done Mr. Jones. If the boys had treated him honestly and "above-board" he would have been a good man to live with. It was their conduct which soured and made him suspicious. I do not know how this is; I only know that Sam Fisher finds in Mr. Jones a kind and faithful master.

"LOST."

A little girl, playing at the street door, strayed away; and her friends were almost frantic with grief. So they engaged a man to go through the streets, and, by means of a large bell, announce to the citizens this sad loss.

We do not have a crier in our city streets now, to ring a bell for lost children. If a child is picked up that appears to be lost, it is taken to the station-house nearest to the place in which it is found; then the officers at the house telegraph to all the others the fact of the little stray one being found. So the parents, as soon as they miss their child, instead of running around the streets, go at once to the station-house near to their own, and tell of their loss; and very soon they have their darling in their arms again.

How sad it must be to be lost! If any of my little readers never were, they do not know the dreary feeling of being in a strange place, among strange people, not knowing where your kind friends are; and I sincerely hope they will never experience that feeling.

But oh, it is much worse to be lost from God; to stray away from His protecting love; to go so far away that we cannot tell where to find Him; to be surrounded by people that do not know Him. But He has promised that those who seek Him shall find Him, and those who call upon Him He will answer; and as the loving parents instantly go after the lost child, as soon as they are informed where they may find it, so our heavenly Father will come to us if we cry out that we are lost but for the light of His countenance.

I knew a little girl, living in Barbadoes, one of the islands of the West Indies, who was lost in a sugar-cane field. For half-a-day and night her anxious friends searched for her; and when, at early dawn of morning, she was found, she was but a ston's throw from her grandfather's house, from which she had strayed.

Just imagine the little one, away from her comfortable bed, out in the dreary field all night, and hearing her father calling her, while her feeble voice could not make him hear her; and her bewildered feet could not lead her home.

But God was there. His angels watched over her. And I hope that when, through His providence, she was once more in her parents' arms, they did not forget to thank Him for His mercy.—New York Observer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Brethren:—In my weakness I want to tell you how the Lord has blessed me and mine. Now the Word of the Lord is brought to my mind, "The very hairs of your head are all numbered, and that a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without our Father's notice," showing how the Lord watches over his people, even as he watches over the fowls of the air, and beasts of the field. How much more care will He have over them that love Him and keep his commandments. Far have I been from keeping all of the Lord's commandments, but my heart's desire is to do the will of my Father which is in in Heaven, and with these blessed words, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," I am consoled. Now this leads me to tell you my dear brethren how the Lord has blessed me and mine. First of all my dear wife has been sick for about fifteen years, most of the time, and the last six years we have known that her sickness was the consumption, and on the 28th of February, she left us to go to Jesus. She cared no longer to stay, for when we were all around her bed weeping, she said, "Although you weep, I cannot, for I am going to Jesus." Bless the Lord for those words on a dying bed, for they comfort me while I am here with my children. Oh, may we all continue to praise that holy Name.

Two dry seasons have passed over us here, and the last year I have had to work out by the month to earn a living for my family, and about two months ago, my wife was brought to me, and she said that I must go home with her to take care of her, for she had very severe fainting spells. So I came home with her, but my mind was very busy thinking how I was to get means to support our family, and get her medicine, and the things he would need, for when my labors stopped our income also stopped. I had no money, and no credit, for those that did credit me when I was earning money, could not do it then. Things looked very dark, but here comes the help, and the glory of the Lord, in the shape of bread for the family, by my dear brethren whom I love in the Lord. And they kept that watchful care over us so that we have not been in want, neither for those things that we needed for wife, for not only was bread sent to us, but also money. Oh bless the Lord for His great goodness. To think that our brethren would leave their labors when they were so anxious to get in their grain, and come and minister to our wants night and day is consoling. Oh, it fills my heart to overflowing sometimes to see how the Lord does bless His children, and how sure His promises are. Oh dear brethren, my prayer is that all who profess the name of Jesus may have a watchful care over those that are sick and in want, and so fulfill the teachings of our blessed Redeemer, for He says, "What ye have done unto the least of my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Now in conclusion, I wish to say to all who have an abundance of this worlds' goods, do not neglect the sick and the poor. Oh, do not make the mammon of unrighteousness your god, and lose your soul, for how hardly shall a rich man enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Will you not aid and assist, not only the poor and needy, but help all the means that is calculated to promote the cause of our blessed Lord. Yes, send in your money to the PILGRIM office, and do not be sparing of it, and have it sent broadcast over the land, and the souls that you may thus cause to be saved, will well repay you. Oh, how you will be rewarded for the act, for this will be lending to the Lord. And now dear brethren continue steadfast, for our stay is but short. Fear not man who can destroy the body, but fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. Oh remember, that we are to give an account of our stewardship while we are here on this earth, then let us not hurry our talent, but work for the Lord, by all the means that is within our reach. Let us all search the Scripture more, and find out more what is our duty to God, and to the human family, and put it into practice. Oh, let us try to exercise that zeal that those holy men of old had when they had all things common, and going from house to house eating their bread with singleness of heart.

Brethren, pray for us here in California, so that if we meet not here, we may meet in that beautiful country where parting is no more.

G. W. HOXIE.

Pantas, Cal.

Dear Pilgrim:—I have just returned from holding a meeting of a few days in the Cowanshanock congregation, Armstrong Co., Pa. We had a meeting of some interest, baptized two, one more made application for baptism but was hindered by parental restraint. How hard must be the heart that is not only bent on destruction but will hinder others to flee from the wrath to come. May the Lord of all have mercy on such. I visited many who were afflicted while away, some near the gates of death and we hope near the porta's of day. I returned on the 18th to find sister Sadie Furgason in quite a critical condition. We have at present quite an amount of sickness in our community.

Yours in love,

J. P. HETRIC.

Oakland, Pa.

CLARENCE, Mich., }
April 15th, 1872. }

Dear Pilgrim: I will give you a short sketch of my life. I was born in Lancaster county, Pa., and brought up in Stark county, Ohio. In 1860 I confessed Christ and obeyed the Gospel, and in 1866 I moved to this place with my family of wife and seven children where we now reside. Our farm was new, and we were in rather poor circumstances, so I did not wish to call on the Church to send us ministering brethren, but we would be very thankful to have some of the brethren come and teach us and the people here. When I tell the people here of church ordinances, such as feetwashing and Lord's supper to be taken in the evening, they will answer that they know of no such church. There are but few persons here that have ever heard any of our preachers, and I think that the people here would receive the word of God and the teaching of Christ's doctrine as well as any where. Dear brother, I would be very thankful if you would publish this in the PILGRIM so that the brethren may know our desire. I do not know of any other brother in our country. We give our love to the brethren, hoping they may remember us in their prayers.

Our residence is Clarence, Calhoun Co., Mich. Address, Moses Moist, Albion P. O., Calhoun county, Mich.

Announcements.

DISTRICT MEETINGS

Middle District of Iowa. May 6th.

North eastern District of Ohio, Thursday, May 7th. Stop off at West Salem and New Pittsburg.

LOVEFEASTS.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P. M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

DEAR PILGRIM: Please announce that we, the brethren of the Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., intend to hold a Lovefeast in our new Church House, 5½ miles southswest of Plymouth, on the 11th of June, 1872. If any come on the mail train they can stop off at the Summit, 3 miles west of Plymouth. We do hope that some of our laboring brethren will be with us, and as many others as wish to come will be heartily welcome. Meeting commences at 10 o'clock.

JOHN KNISELY.

Dear Pilgrim: Please announce that the District Meeting of Western, Pa., will be held at the Pigeon Creek Meeting House, Washington Co., Pa., on the 1st day of May 1872, and on the evening of the 2nd, there will be a communion meeting at the same place. The usual invitation extended.

JOHN WISE.

Please announce that the brethren in Falling Spring Church, will hold, the Lord willing, their Love Feast at Hades meeting house on the 14th day of May next. A cordial invitation to all. JOHN ZECK.

Please announce that we intend to have our Lovefeast on the 31st day of May next in the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin co., Pa., commencing at one o'clock p. m. Preaching next day in the forenoon. An invitation is given to all that have a desire to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

For the satisfaction of those wishing to come, we would say that our meeting house is about ¼ mile from the Sunbarry & Lewstown R. R., and the morning train leaves Lewistown at 6:30 a. m. The other train leaves Lewistown at 12:20, p. m. Maitland is our station about five miles from Lewistown. JACOB MOHLER.

Please announce that we purpose holding our Lovefeast at Spring Run, near McVeytown station, Mifflin county, Pa., on the 29th and 30th days of May, 1872. A hearty invitation is extended to ministers and members.

JOSEPH R. HANAWALT.

DIED.

BLOUGH.—In the Mennonite Church, Somerset county, Pa., March 21st, 1872, David Blough, aged 82 years, 8 mos. and 18 days. Funeral service by Saml Blough from 1st Cor. 15: 22.

At the time of his death he had 17 children, 68 grand children and 87 great grand children, making in all 172. He had four wives three dead and one living. Companion please copy. TOBIAS BLOUGH.

BULGER.—In the Yellow Creek Congregation, April 5th, Ollie May Bulger, aged 1 year, 9 months and 18 days.

BRUMBAUGH.—In the Clover Creek Congregation, April 12th, Mahlon Brumbaugh aged 6 months and 7 days.

HOOVER.—In the same congregation, Elizabeth Hoover, aged 23 years, 9 months and 8 days. J. W. BRUMBAUGH.

CRAVER.—In the Monocacy Church, Frederick county, Md., April 11th, Bro. Peter Craver, aged 87 years and 9 mos. Funeral services by the writer from Psalms, 37: 37.

Brother Craver was the oldest member in the Church; he became a brother when young, and lived an humble, harmless and inoffensive life. His wife, a sister, preceded him to the spirit world 22 years. His home on earth was located in the extreme outskirts of the church territory, and consequently he did not get to public meetings as he otherwise would have done. Meeting was held near him once in eight weeks, this he never missed until he became too feeble to attend it. Sleeping in the same room with him one night last October, I was awakened about 2 o'clock by some noise in the room, which was occasioned by his being engaged in prayer, which he continued until morning. After breakfast I said to him, "Brother Peter you prayed a good deal last night," to which he replied, I have made my peace with God, and I now pray for holiness and for others. "Oh when shall I see Jesus," &c., was favorite poetry with him and he would often repeat it as a prayer, but would always add at the end of the verse. "Not my will but thine O God be done." A short time before death he repeated the verse "Come Holy Spirit heavenly dove," &c., but immediately added, "Not my will but thine O God be done."—Visitor please copy.

D. P. SAYLER.

EDITORIAL.

AN EXPLANATION.

One brother has wrote us that he was disappointed in regard to the size of Elder Flory's Tracts, and thinks them too small for the price asked for them. Fearing that others may labor under similar feelings, we make this explanation.

First. We advertised it as a Tract, which properly signifies a short discourse, or point of doctrine written or printed for general distribution. For this purpose Bro. Flory's Tract was written and published, and for merit, we claim all for it that is represented in the notice of it, although it is short, just as it should be. It is true, some might have made of the same subject, a Tract sixteen or twenty-four pages, and not said half as much to the point, but that is not what we want. In a Tract we want the desired information in the least possible space, and this we have in Bro. Flory's Tract.

Second. The Tract enterprise among the Brethren, is an experiment, and it certainly is not fair that the publisher must run the whole risk. This we did, and to give us some chance to secure us from loss, we offered them at such prices as would pay us for our labor and expense, providing we could sell one fourth of the number printed, which at present is doubtful unless a greater number of liberal hearts engage in their distribution. We have put out an edition of 4.000. We hope to sell 1.000 which will average us after postage is paid perhaps 3 cents or $30.00. We then have $30.00 for publishing 4.000 Tracts. Now brethren, what do you say about our prices, are they not low enough?

Third. The object was not to make money either by the writer, publisher or buyer. Bro. Flory has defined his position in regard to them, and in addition to time and labor he has ordered 100 copies at published prices, for free distribution. How many of our brethren will go and do likewise?

This is the only way that we can accomplish anything in this direction, as to think to introduce and distribute a thing of this kind by receiving for them an equivalent in money, outside of the Brotherhood, is expecting too much, therefore we expect our members to buy enough to pay expenses and then distribute free. To do this successfully, each church should lay together enough to purchase several hundred for distribution. For this purpose we will put them at the lowest possible price. It should be remembered that every tract that we send out cost us two cents for postage, also all that we send out for gratuitous distribution must be postpaid by us, thus incurring an extra expense in addition to our time and labor lost in their publication.

We have now explained our position and hope the thing will be fairly understood.

We have met with unexpected encouragement and feel assured that the enterprise, under the blessing of God, will be a complete success. We here subjoin a letter that breathes the true spirit, as a sample for others.

IOWA, April 20th, 1872.

Dear Brethren: Ebl. Flory's tract is received and is just the thing that is needed. Feeling assured that they will be the means of accomplishing much good, I enclose $2, for which you will please send as many as you can afford. I wish them for free distribution among my neighbors, some of whom put more trust in their feelings than in the word of God. Hoping that the brethren everywhere will aid in their distribution, I remain your brother in the Lord.

S. T. N.

We have others of the same tenor, but let this suffice, knowing that our brethren will not be slack in a good cause.

We certainly shall have no objections to selling to members, and even others, if they will buy, but none should feel disappointed because they cannot succeed in selling at such prices as will net a nice profit. In ordering, please state whether they are for distribution or not.

WHO IS IT?

Our brother of the Companion thinks that he cannot afford to offer as much credit as some publishers who have their farms and rich relations to fall back upon. We wonder who he means. When the poor peoant went riding to town beside of his noble king, conversing so hopefully over his good fortune, being blessed with the common necessaries of life, and in addition, for every Saturday evening, a pullet for in the pot, he really thought that it was good enough for the king, but on arriving in town and hearing from the living mass the acclamations "Long live the king," he was dumb-struck. "Why surely either you or I must be the king."

We have been living on in the even tenor of our way, having learned "with food and raiment therewith to be content," but when the fact was revealed to us that there were such lucky publishers in the Brotherhood, we commenced looking around to see if it could possibly mean us, but like the poor peasant we were doomed to disappointment. It will not fit our condition no how. We have some relations who have enough and perhaps a little to spare, but they are too distant to meet our case. We therefore hope our good readers will look somewhere else for the lucky publishers and send us our dues as soon as they conveniently can. By the middle of May or sooner, we would like to have some $300. to meet a paper bill. How many will make a little effort towards gratifying us in making our ends meet? We do not wish to beg from those who are not prepared, but there are many that can pay just as well now as any other time. Such are the ones we mean—please.

Miscellaneous.

D. N. We will print for you or anybody else, 1,000 Tracts, sixteen pages, for $25.00, and for all above that number considerably less.

J. B. Miller. J. G's Pilgrim to end of the year will be 80 cts.

D. R. C. N. The list containing $1.25 and four names was not received. They are now booked and will be sent all right,—last two received, also money.

Eld. A. Baker. Your paper is $1.25.

F. P. L. Levi L's letter never reached us. Our readers in sending money at a risk, should be careful that all necessary precautions are observed for its safety. Use a plain yellow envelope, and put enough paper around the money to prevent detection from the outside, also be careful that the letter is properly addressed.

J. S. F. The names are booked at 75 cts.—The Tracts are sent.

We have been sending the Pilgrim to Allen Haws, Charleston, W. Va., since No. 13. We have examined the Post Office Directory, and find no office of that name, but have found Charlestown, Jefferson Co. W. Va. to which office we are now sending them. Is that right?

If you want to do good with the spare dimes and dollars the Lord has blessed you with send and get those tracts we have just published.

On to-morrow morning, no providential interference, we start for District Meeting. We expect to have a pleasant waiting before the Lord and associate with kindred spirits. If we get home in time, our readers will hear something of our meeting. We expect a quite pleasant and profitable meeting, hope we may not be disappointed.

Subscribers are still coming in encouragingly. Keep the good work moving along brethren. The Pilgrim is gathering hosts of friends and is well received by all. We labor for no schism, but for peace and unity in our beloved Zion.

Church news is always welcome. The more we have of it the better and more interesting will be the Pilgrim. Keep this in mind. We would be pleased to have a reporter from every church in the Brotherhood to keep us posted on transpiring events. Brethren, let us hear of the welfare of Zion.

Bro. W. B. Sell of Mo., says that the work of the Lord is slowly going forward; and that he lately led two willing candidates down into the rippling stream and buried them with Christ in baptism.

The weather at present seems rather unfavorable to vegetation. The winter grains are coming out slowly on account of cold nights until quite recently. It is now quite warm but dry and windy, and last evening the mountains around us was a blaze of fire and much damage to timber is apprehended should it continue dry and stormy. From a slight elevation above town both Taurus and Terrace could be plainly seen, and the sight, independent of results, was truly magnificent.

A report from Michigan says: "We had two thunder storms last week and very fine growing weather. The fields look quite green and the wheat looks promising, it having been covered with snow all winter.

Lake Michigan has been frozen farther in than ever known before. It is said that the ice is piled up on the eastern shore to the height of twenty feet. Some of the peach buds are frozen which seldom occurs.

The Mormons are now in conference and discussing matters of vital importance to them. They are still looking forward to the time when the kingdom of God will be permanently established in Utah through the inspiration of the Latter Day Saints and all the combined powers of earth cannot avail against it.

THE SCIENCE OF HEALTH.

PROSPECTUS OF

A NEW INDEPENDENT HEALTH MONTHLY.

The object of it is, to teach the people all that pertains to the preservation of Health, the prevention of Diseases, and how to live in order to develop normally in body and mind.

It is not a Medical Journal, but Physiological and Hygienic, a family magazine, containing just that practical information on the laws of Life and Health, useful to every member of the household, and cannot but be worth many times its price to every family in which it is read.

Quack Medicines, and quack doctors will be exposed, and swindlers will not be allowed to impose on the people where the Science of Health is generally circulated.

This Journal will be the exponent of all known means by which Health, Strength, Vigor and a Long Life, may be attained by using and regulating those agencies which are always accessible and so vitally related to Health and the treatment of Diseases, including Air, Light, Temperature, Bathing, Eating, Drinking, Clothing Recreation, Exercise, Rest, Sleep, Electricity, Mental Influences, Social Relations, and all Normal agents and Hygienac materials. All that is required to keep well and to preserve health, is a knowledge of the uses and misuses of there agencies.

The Science of Health will be the best exponent of the scientific principles of these subjects, and not the organ of any particular institution, or of the profession practice of any one, but devoted to the best interests of the whole people.

Terms.—Published monthly at $2.00 a year in advance; Single numbers, 20 cents. Clubs of ten at $1.50 each, and an extra copy to agent; we are offering the most liberal list of Premiums. Local Agents wanted everywhere, and cash commissions given. Address all letters to Samuel R. Wells, Publisher 389 Broadway, New York.

The Phrenological Journal for May is a most interesting number. The following topics are worth special commendation: The Presidential Campaign, Judge Davis,—Gov. Parker; How the faculties combine; History of Photography in America; Expression, finely illustrated; Choosing a servant; Robert Chambers, the distinguished Scottish Author and Publisher; Punishment and prison reform; Homes of Famous Americans; The Hermitage; Small Pox and vaccination; Irrigation in Colorado; The First Chapters in Genesis, another interpretation; Tools for our Women, etc. Terms, $3 a year. Single Nos. 30 cents. S. R. Wells, New York.

If you want the key to unlock the "mysteries" of "Anxious Bench Religion" send for tract bearing that title.

This will inform the Brethren that we have appointed our Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, June 22d and 23rd '72, at Bro. George Dilling's, five miles East of Urbana, and one mile North of Mayview, meeting to commence at 10 A. M. on Saturday. A hearty invitation is extended to all members, especially the ministering brethren.

Brethren coming from the North or South, on the Illinois Central R. R., will stop off either at Thomasboro, or Champaign City. Those coming from East or West, on the Indianapolis and Bloomington R. R., will stop off at Mayview.

J. H. Moore.

Urbana, Ill.

NO HALF FARE.

After conferring with both agents of the railroads running through the Middle District of Iowa, in relation to half fare tickets, as requested by the last A. M. I now inform the members that there will be none granted.

G. R. Baker.

Altoona, Polk Co., Iowa.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871, Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	UP TRAINS. MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	DOWN TRAIN. MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 31	McConnellstown	8 31	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 54
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 35
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Ar 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 42	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 22	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 27	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 32	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 41	1 30
8 50	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 01	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Curtley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 25	11 55	Bedford	5 13	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

Apl. 13, 1872.

Flour,	Extra family.	$8.50
"	Superfine.	6.25
"	fancy brands.	8.00
"	Rye.	5.00
Corn Meal.		4.00
Wheat,	white, per bushel.	1.95
"	red. "	1.85
Corn.		.68
Rye.		.87
Oats.		.55

GENERL INTELLIGENCE.

The printing of the entire Bible in the Eskimo language is now happily completed, the concluding portions having recently passed through the press. The British and Foreign Society has thus had the privilege of providing the whole of God's word for those successful missions which have been conducted for more than a century by the self-denying and laborious brethren of the Moravian Church on the coasts of Labrador. The poor Eskimos, once so ignorant and degraded, have been elevated and richly blessed through the knowledge of Divine truth. The translation of the Scriptures is due to the efforts of the same mission.

More than four thousand human beings are this moment in rigorous and cruel bondage in Japan, because they profess the Christian religion. Nearly all of them are Roman Catholics. Only about twenty persons in Japan have professed conversion under the Protestant missionaries, who have but recently begun their labors. The Romanists have been there and in China for many long years. The Japanese Government makes no distinction between Romanists and Protestants, but condemns all alike to imprisonment or death.

A STEAMBOAT DISASTER.—The "Oceanus" exploded on the Mississippi river on the 11th inst., at 4 o'clock, A. M. The precise number of victims is not known. The cause of the explosion is not known. The engineer says he went on duty some minutes before the explosion, and made certain experiments upon the steam guages which were satisfactory. He thereupon went back to "get a cup of coffee," and in a moment scores of sleeping men, women and children are hurled from their berths, through the air into the river, into the rents and chasms of the shattered vessel—scalded, dismembered, dying and dead. All the work of a minute.

AN EARTHQUAKE IN EUROPE:—European advices state that the town of Schemaker, in Caucasus, was almost entirely destroyed by a recent earthquake. One hundred and thirty-seven persons were killed. A considerable portion of the country was converted into a desert, and the inhabitants are reduced to great misery by the destruction of the crops.

MORMON INFALLIBILITY.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 15.—The Mormon conference resumed its session on Sunday in the Tabernacle. There was a comparatively small attendance. One discourse showed how the Kingdom of God would be permanently established here through the inspiration of the Latter Day Saints, and all the governments and powers on earth combined would not avail against it.

A number of home missionaries were appointed, and the conference adjourned until next Sunday. The reason of this adjournment, which is unusual, it is reported, is because intelligence is expected from Washington that will enable Brigham Young to close the conference in person.

The miners in the Star, Lincoln and other districts in the southern part of the Territory, are forming secret organizations to oppose the secret influence of the Mormon Endowment House, and among other objects, to bring to justice the instigators and perpetrators of the Mountain Meadow massacre. Over two hundred members have already joined.

The aggregate circulation of daily papers in the United States is 2,606,547; average circulation 4,511. The weekly papers circulate 10,591,743 copies, with an average of 2,480.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook, being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes. Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. O. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

ACENTS WANTED FOR
"JESUS."
BY CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.
His divinely established and rationalism routed. The most popular and rapidly-selling religious work ever issued. For circulars, address U. S. PUBLISHING CO., N. Y.

New Hymn Books, English.

	TURKEY MOROCCO
One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25
	PLAIN ARABSQUE.
One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50
	PLAIN SHEEP.
One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain, - - -	1.00
Turkey morocco, - - -	$ 1.25.
Single German post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen, - - -	5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINIED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.
Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!

RENNER'S

HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, DR. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 23, tf. Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

BRO. RENNER, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country, A. HUTCHISON, Oak Hill, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. WM. H. BAILY, Raleigh, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic, I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was, my neighbors are surprised at my healthy appearance. D. S. STAYER, New Enterprise, Pa.

DR. RENNER:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. WM. H. GANES, Cool Springs, S. C.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts. Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.
CORRESPONDING EDITORS.
D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Narrow Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MAY 7, 1872. NO. 19.

ESSAYS.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER.

BY CHARLOTTE ELLIOT.

My God! is any hour so sweet,
From blush of morn to evening star,
As that which calls me to thy feet,—
The hour of prayer?

Blest is the tranquil hour of morn,
And blest that hour of solemn eve
When, on the wings of prayer upborne,
The world I leave.

Then is my strength by thee renewed;
Then are my sins by thee forgiven;
Then dost thou cheer my solitude
With hopes of heaven.

No words can tell what sweet relief
There for my every want I find;
What strength for warfare, balm for grief,
What peace of mind.

Hushed in each doubt, gone every fear;
My spirit seems in heaven to stay;
And e'en the penitential tear
Is wiped away.

Lord! till I reach that blissful shore,
No privilege so dear shall be,
As thus my inmost soul to pour
In prayer to thee.

GODLY AND WORLDLY SORROW.

"For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death."—2 Cor. 7:10.

In the above Scripture there is two kinds of sorrow spoken of, the one working repentance to salvation, or deliverance from sin, and the other death. It is no easy matter to discriminate the two, and more especially without the light of God's Word. "Men love darkness rather than light" and for this cause, "their eyes, will be darkened that they may not see."—Rom. 11:10. Hence it is no wonder that our Savior said, "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." But we shall proceed to notice the difference between godly sorrow and worldly sorrow, according to our understanding.

Godly sorrow is that which causes us to hate sin, and avoid it as far as the weakness of our flesh will allow. If a man hates sin he will forsake it. Sorrow "is pain produced by a sense of loss," consequently when we are caused to see our dreadfully depraved and lost condition by a Heavenly calling, that we have offended God, and that it "is in Him we live, move and have our continual being," then we begin to hate sin. Godly sorrow is that which brings about repentance, a forsaking sin, and turning to God through Christ in whom is salvation, and in none other. God being the author, this work will enable us if we have a love for the truth, "to work out our salvation with fear and trembling." The Word teaches us that "Many are called, but few chosen," that is, few are willing to be led by the Spirit into all truth. Consequently a legal, worldly sorrow takes hold, and being of a worldly nature, not having a love for the whole truth, will not produce repentance to salvation, but will work death, yet the subject unconcious of it. To illustrate. A person is taken very sick; a physician is called, he finds the patient beyond cure; he begins to stimulate the patient with medicine, the influence of which benumbs the person to that extent that he becomes insensible to pain, yet the disease is progressing, and finally he dies. So it is with those having no love for the truth.

"For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they sho'ld believe a lie, that they all might be damned who believed not the truth." The apostle John says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world, If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him; for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but of the world; and the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever."—1st. John, 2d chap. Now those who love the world of course are not willing to be led by the spirit of God, consequently obtain a spirit which tells them to go outside of God's arrangements, and which is evidently not the spirit of God which leads into all truth. This spirit causes them to ask aoiss.

It is believed by some, that if a person is just sincere there is no danger, so you see they take sincere obedience instead of perfect obedience. It may be asked why does God send these delusions? The Scripture says, "because they received not the love of the truth," which is the Gospel. Now they love the world and all the habiliments of fashion. They rather go to the house of feasting than to the house of mourning. They enjoy the society of the wicked, because they love such places. They "measure themselves by themselves," and under the sound of beautiful singing, such as "Hail Columbia" they feel the best. Some undergo this change under the influence of singing being prostrated. This influence charms the mind to such an extent they think they have "got religion." But alas! a delusion. O when will men cease loving darkness, and come to the true light? In conversation with a friend once on the subject of religion, who has made no less than two professions said, "Some time ago I thought I would be baptised, then I could have no faith in it. Again I thought I would be baptised whether I believed in it or not, but finally I concluded it would profit nothing without faith." That person has never been baptized. Dear reader, take warning! Truly does "the light shine in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not." That is, the light of God's word is not discovered by some, though they have it set before them in its true light. Friendly sinner, be not like the Scribes and Pharisees, who rejected the counsel of God against themselves, not being baptized with the baptism of John. They had no faith in it, yet Christ said to them, "How can ye escape the damnation of hell?"

They had, no doubt, a spirit of delusion, consequently "believed a lie that they might be damned." So it is now, dear reader. Many spirits are gone out into the world to deceive men, and it is our duty as well as privilege to try them, whether they be of God or not. And this is to be done by the detecter only—the Word of God. Lamentable indeed to think that man will not believe in the plain commandments of Jesus. To doubt God's word is tempting him. James says, "God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man, but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Alas! alas! is it possible that man will doubt baptism or any other command, and say they are "born again"? This is prevalent. Take warning, O man! "for this persuasion cometh not from him that calleth you."

We have said it is no easy matter to distinguish between legal sorrow and godly sorrow. But there are certain signs or marks by which they may be distinguished, therefore we will just notice one or two of them. Worldly sorrow is a fear of damning, Godly sorrow is a fear of sinning. Worldly sorrow causes us to fear the wrath of God. Godly sorrow makes us fear the cause of that wrath, even sin. The apostle John says, "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love. If the mind that was in Christ be in us, which is love, then are we truly in him and he in us, but if love be absent, then we know him not." We are yet in our sins, "for God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him.' On the other hand there will be a "certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation." The works of Providence, at times, they fear, causing them to tremble instead of looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. When a man repents with the grace of repentance which God works in him, he repents not of the punishment of sin, but of the cause of that punishment, which is sin. Repentance must be actual not fictitious. How many of us are like men who behold their faces in a glass, and straightway go away and forget what manner of men they are! There must be a true and actual abandonment of sin and a turning to God in real act, in every day life. Repentance must be entire, not a turning from the most visible crimes. Every sin must be renounced and despised, even if there were no fire unquenchable, no torment for the wicked, and no pit digged for sinners. Sinners, do not think that, because when you come to die you will be afraid of eternal torment, that will be repentance. Every thief dreads the thought of being cast into prison, but he would steal again if you set him free. True repentance is perpetual. it is not turning to God during to-day that will be a proof of a true convert. Yet how many Sunday christians are there, who go to meeting on Sabbath, and when that is over take part in things that they know to be wrong, laughing, jesting, telling tales of every description. When they get in company with sinners easy to be enticed. These things are not to be found in the truly converted, but will be about their Father's business, taking no part in filthy conversation, but fulfilling the instructions of the Apostle Peter who says, "what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." Dear brethren, let us be watching, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Keeping the tongue in subjection, that unruly member, "for all kinds of birds and beasts can be tamed, but the tongue can no man tame." How often do we say hard things against others when we hear they speak evil of us. Let us like Christ pray for them, for if we suffer for righteousness' sake happy are we. Contrast Godly sorrow and worldly sorrow. The former evidences the obedience of love, the latter of fear. The former obeys perfectly, the latter obeys sincerely. The former brings salvation, the latter brings death. 'Be not deceived" is the injunction of the Apostle, and which implies danger; then to avoid danger we must receive the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, "and the truth shall make us free."

J. M. WELLS.

Meadowville, W. Va.

DEATH IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

It is very fearful—the slow, steady, resistless, remorseless approach of the shadow of death across your threshold; the desperate but futile attempts to drive the grim destroyer back; the vain pleadings of affection; the utter impotence of human skill; the unavailing resources of the most loving and tireless ministries at the bedside; the cries to God that seem to bring no answer; the helplessness of a strong and manly victim in the grasp of the monster. There lies the cold, stiff form. It was once erect, warm and gay with life, the pulse-beats regular and vigorous, the eye bright, the hand warm and strong in its friendly grasp, the lips responsive in their kiss of holy love, and the play of genial sympathies and lively wit, and noble sentiment, beautiful and grand. It is unconcious now. The lights have gone out. Silence reigns. The heart beats no more. The lips are cold, and give back no sign of love. There is no response to the tears that fall on the passionless face, or the bitter sighs and moans of distress that vainly pour from breaking hearts. Like a deserted house once bright with lights and merry with song, the abode of life and light and joy, but now tenantless, deserted, the fires gone out, the shutters closed, the merry voices ceased, and silence and decay brooding over it all—there is here but the outer form, and the giving tokens of dissolution. Once it was an unbroken circle of children that gathered with their parents about the hearth-stone, and formed a little kingdom within themselves, with their own sacred loves and joys and charming fellowships, too sacred for the world's gaze, too sweet and holy for the rude world's intrusion. Home was a blessed retreat from the storms and strifes of the tumultuous outside world—a grateful rest from its toils and cares—a sweet refuge from its conventionalisms and rigid proprieties—where natures bound in holiest mutual trust dared to be themselves, and to act out their genuine impulses, restrained only by the fear of God and the love of each other. It is broken now. It was broken once before, when a bright-eyed, beautiful boy was carried by the angels out of suffering into bliss. It is broken again, and a manly form is carried out to return nevermore—nevermore. The evening hymn of praise grows feebler and somewhat tremulous; the voices are fewer that utter it. The circle of prayer is smaller, and the Amen lacks the strong voice of manhood. Tears, more than words, form the prayers now offered at the throne of grace. The shadows are thick and cold that have gathered over the worshippers. It will never be bright again as in days gone by. The deepest shadows may withdraw; the days of bitterness may seem to wear out; and the circle, gathering, gathering closer, may appear to eat pleasant bread and enjoy merry seasons; but the memory of years gone will bring shadows again, and the sad, fond echo in the hearts of the living of voices that are hushed and of footfalls that will return no more, will be heard above the merriest tones and will mingle with the gladdest songs.

So it seems to the eye of sense—so it feels to us in the weakness of the flesh, in the dimness of this murky atmosphere in which we at present live. But to faith's vision, it is not so. This circle is not broken; the absent are not dead; the songs and the prayers are not feebler.

"Saints here, and those in Jesus dead,
But one communion make;
All join in Christ, their living Head,
And of His grace partake."

The thin vail of flesh is all that divides them. They have passed "within the vail," we remain without; but all in the same spiritual temple. We are among the shadows—they have passed into eternal sunlight; and somewhere between this and the throne their ransomed spirits must catch up the old, familiar hymn, as it floats past the stars, and send it on its upward way, laden with truer praise than it used to bear, and quickened into a nobler strain than mortal tongues can raise; and the prayer has its full Amen, as of old. Fleshly ties may perish; merely earthly relationships may dissolve; they are needed only here. But the spiritual ties that bind the members of a family in holy fellowship, are imperishable. The pure in heart shall live forever, and love forever; and they who, in a home consecrated to God, form fellowships of goodness and truth, cannot be separated by death, nor defeated of their high aims by the hand of the spoiler. Life is theirs, and death is theirs also; and though they shed "some natural tears" when the hour of parting comes, "they'll wipe them soon," as they reflect that what men call death is, to the righteous, the end of fears and the entrance on eternal rest and peace.

Home is yet more sacred when a portion of its membership dwells with God. Heaven is nearer and dearer. Christ is more and more precious. Earth's vanities cease to dazzle and bewilder. Life takes on a grand solemnity. Domestic ties are sanctified. The tent of the Pilgrim band is pitched nearer to Jordan, and the echoes of joy from the land of promise are caught more distinctly. The heart grows into a conviction of immortality through its own experiences, such as philosophy could never establish, until the future takes on a blessed reality, and this—not that—is the land of shadows.

Oh, ye who have homes where children gather, and merry voices ring! Make them homes of purity, of love, and of prayer—spiritual nurseries in which young spirits may be educated for the true life beyond. For the shadows will gather; death will rob you of your treasures, and leave your heart and home desolate. Then the memories of the years that have fled will come floating by, laden with the testimonies of the irrevocable past, and your comfort and your strength will be in the glad evidence they shall furnish of your faithfulness to those that are gone.

If we knew the baby fingers
Pressed against the window-pane
Would be cold and stiff to-morrow—
Never trouble us again—
Would the bright eyes of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us then, as they do now?

"Ah! these little, ice-cold fingers,
How they point our memories back
To the hasty words and actions
Strewn along our backward track!
How those little hands remind us,
As in snowy grace they lie,
Not to scatter thorns—but roses—
For our reaping by and by?

"Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird is flown!
Strange that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone!
Strang that summer skies and sunshine
Never seemed one-half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake the white down in the air!

"Lips from which the seal of silence
None but God can roll away,
Never blossomed in such beauty
As adorns the mouth to-day;
And sweet words that freight our memory
With their beautiful perfume,
Come to us in sweeter accents
Through the portals of the tomb!

"Let us gather up the sunbeams
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses—
Casting out the thorns and chaff;
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessings of to-day—
With a patient hand removing
All the briars from our way."

He is to be envied more than pitied, who can stand over the graves of his kindred, and fear no remembrance of neglect or unfaithfulness. And what can pity avail to him who is compelled to think remorsefully of wrongs unredressed, of words or deeds of unkindness that cannot be recalled, of the example that has misled the dear ones now gone from him forever! Christian parents, these are dear, precious years that God now gives you with your children in your homes. Employ them wisely and faithfully, for you and they will soon go away, and the opportunity to make their lives glad, and to train them for heaven, will have forever passed. If you live to bury them, God grant that their graves may be graves of hope. If you go before them, may the grief of their hearts, when they lay you in the ground, be assuaged by the precious memories of a noble life here, and the blessed hope of eternal life hereafter.—Christian Standard.

THOUGHTS ON JOHN.

I wish to give a few ideas on 1 John, 5 : 6. "This is he that came by water and blood even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood." In a previous copy of the PILGRIM, (which I handed to some neighbors), I read Eld. Murray's explanation of the above scripture, presented as a query through the PILGRIM. I do not mean to controvert his explanation, or criticise, but simply give my views. It is said he came by water and blood. I understand bro. Murray to say, that the water and blood here spoken of was the water and blood that flowed from His side, when pierced by the soldier. I do not know that it is any violation of order in this case to change the ideas expressed in the language, for if it means what bro. M. says, that is, the water and blood referred to by John, then these as witnesses, would not, perhaps, have been changed from blood and water, to water and blood. But I think it has reference to the water of baptism, as the spirit was present and testified that this was the Son of God, and this must necessarily be, First, "came by water." The verb came signifying on a mission, consequently alive and active. Second, "by blood." When he was wrestling with the load of sin on him in prayer, when an angel appeared unto him, strengthening him, a witness from God of His love in the great struggle of drinking the bitter cup, in sweating as it were great drops of blood. Who in the days of his flesh when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared. (an angel coming and strengthening him). Though he were a son, yet he learned obedience by the things which he suffered. Heb. 5 : 7, 8. We always speak of His agony and sufferings in the garden, and the giving up of himself to the will of the Father, ("not my will but thine be done,") as though the suffering here in drinking the bitter cup, was more severe and excruciating than the pangs and pains of death on the cross, although that was severe enough, and in this we see His life-blood shed by himself in His willingness to fulfil the Father's pleasure. But the blood and water that flowed from his wounded side was both lifeless and cold for He was dead already, and so I think cannot be considered as available only so far as it may have oozed from the wounds of the nails in His hands and feet, and consequently Paul says "If we suffer with Him in wrestling in prayers and tears," for ourselves and for the salvation of sinners, we may become children of God and joint heirs with Christ.

I submit the above thoughts to any criticism for correction, as I would wish to understand the scriptures aright, and in the spirit of meekness give them as my views.

S. MYERS.

LITTLE SINS.

A merchant of San Francisco, during the infant days of the State of California, having escaped disastrous fires, grew rich and prosperous. He built a fine warehouse, partly upon solid rock, and partly upon piles, as it was convenient to have a portion of his establishment extend over the water of the harbor.

One night, a messenger came to him with the intelligence that the whole concern had fallen to the ground, and that bales and boxes of merchandise were thrown into the water.

What was the cause? A worm, a mere mite when young, but nearly as large as one's finger when grown, and growing most rapidly, and multiplying in almost incredible numbers, had entered the piles. They had completely honeycombed the interior, rendering them incapable of sustaining any weight.

Is not this like little sins? Does not one beget another, and then another, multiplying to an alarming extent? A child does not become utterly faithless to his parents all at once. One small act of disobedience at first has led many, step by step in the course of crime, even unto the State's prison.

Another begins to deceive in little things. He does not become a notorious liar all at once, but commences by withholding the truth; then prevaricates; then utters small falsehoods; next larger ones, till his moral sense becomes sadly corrupt, if not entirely destroyed.

And thus, like the mite in the timber, these little sins eat into the very life of the soul, destroying its soundness, its health, and making it a mass of uncleanness, "whose end is to be burned." Beware, then, of little sins.

The above accident is also capable of illustrating another important truth. The merchant built his house partly upon rock, and partly upon piles, and stored his precious merchandise upon this seemingly secure foundation. But behold the disastrous result! So some souls build their hopes of future happiness partly upon Christ, and partly upon their own supposed good works; but, as these cannot possibly be pure and perfect, they fail in the day of trial, and cause a loss irreparable and never-ending to those who have so foolishly trusted therein.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

"But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon."—N. Y. Observer.

WORLD WEARY.

Society is full of people who know that their lives are frivolous and unsatisfying. It chafes them to think that they are the victims of this great world-show, whirled along in it whithersoever it listeth, with no opportunity for a deeper culture, no time or vitality for the discipline of the soul, for coming into fellowship with the great minds of the race, for communing with what is noblest and best in human thought; no time left for walking with Christ in the lowly and obscure paths of charity, for letting their spirits lie still that they may be put in tune, purified, calmed, and rested in the arms of God.

Persons thus ensnared by their earthly and selfish cares may well look back and sigh for the advantages of other days. They know that there was much more reality and noble truth in their lives than now. They were nearer to Nature, and to all that gives largeness and strength of soul. Well may they envy the obscure Christian, unvexed with trifling cares, whose conversation is in heaven, who walks daily with God, and amid those truths and thoughts which are the glorious essence of things.

How often, weary and empty of soul in this world-pageant, men and women would be glad to flee out of it, as Moses fled from Pharaoh's court to Midian. Better to keep the sheep of Jethro, if he might thus come unto Horeb, the mount of God, than to bask amid royal pleasures, which are a weariness and pain. Better to flee into the wilderness, and sit under a juniper tree, fed by the ravens and drinking of the brook, than be oppressed with gaities which are but vanity and vexation of spirit.

It was not to the Pharisee and scribe, amid the pomp and life they so proudly led, but to the shepherds who watched their flocks by night, that the angel of the Lord appeared. To them, and to wise men in the East, silently communing with the stars, was it first made known that a Saviour had been born.

Not amid the hurry of Laban's home, but while he lay alone in his far desert journey, were God's eternal counsels revealed to Jacob.

There must be more of simplicity in our modern lives, less of earthly engrossment, and more of high spiritual aspiration, if we would save ourselves from becoming the automatons of the hour.—J. M. Manning.

ADVICE TO WIVES.—We often regret that their husbands do not talk with them. This is not the place to discuss the shortcomings of a man, but sometimes when I have listened to the faultfinding, the garrulous repetitions, frivolous details, the childish exactions of sympathy and attention with which some women bore their husbands when they are overburdened or anxious with care and work, I have not wondered that some men grow taciturn in their homes. But it is a great loss if a man is silent with his wife and children. The husband and wife live so much of the time in a different world that a free intercourse can be a great help and pleasure to each of them. You will not be likely to make a man talk by telling him he ought to talk, or scolding him because he does not do so. Make it a pleasure for him to talk with you. Exercise good sense, good temper, and tact in drawing him out on topics of interest to himself. Be patient under his moods of silence. Be deserving of the companionship of a sensible man.

THE NEARNESS OF GOD.

A missionary visited a poor old woman, living alone in a city attic, and whose scanty pittance of half a crown a week was scarcely sufficient for her bare subsistence. He observed, in a broken teapot that stood at the window, a strawberry plant growing. He remarked from time to time how it continued to grow, and with what care it was watched and tended. One day he said, "Your plant flourishes nicely; you will soon have strawberries upon it." "O, sir," replied the woman, "it is not for the sake of the fruit that I prize it; but I am too poor to keep any living creature, and it is a great comfort to me to have that living plant, for I know it can only live by the power of God; and as I see it live and grow from day to day, it tells me that God is near."

GOD SAYS REPENT.

God says "Repent." The sinner answers, "I mean to." "Believe." "Yes, I intend to." "Prepare to meet thy God." "Such is my purpose."—"Turn ye, for why will you die?" "I intend to before the hour of death." "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." "Yes, I believe that is the best way, and I intend to be zealous for God some time." "Now is the accepted time." "No, not now." "To-day is the day of salvation." "No, not to-day; I must attend to other concerns to-day." "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." "But to-morrow will do as well, or next month, or next year." "To-day if ye hear His voice, harden not your hearts." "Go thy way this time, when I have a convenient season I will call for thee."

Thus does God invite, beseech and command, and thus do men hesitate, temporize and delay, till all is lost.

Here is the fatal error. Men perish because they will not have salvation to-day. They are doomed and damned because they defer that which they dare not reject.

They postpone, they wait, they neglect so great a salvation? Reader, you want salvation, you intend to have it. I have one question for you to consider, and that is—when?—Christian.

THE WAY TO THE CROWN.

We must taste the gall, if we are to taste the glory. If justified by faith we must suffer tribulations. When God saves a soul, He tries it. Some believers are much surprised when they are called to suffer. They thought they would do some great thing for God; but all he permits them to do is to suffer for His sake. Go round to every one in glory, each one has a different story to tell, yet every one a tale of suffering. But mark, all were brought out of them. It was a dark cloud, but it passed away. The water was deep, but they reached the other side. Not one there blames God for the way He led them thither. "Salvation!" is their only cry. Child of God, murmur not at your lot. You must have a plain as well as a white robe. Learn to glory in tribulations also.

PRINCIPLE.—The man of principle needs not the restriction of seal or signature, or any legal instrument. He deals in solitude as in public, at midnight as in sunshine. His heart is the throne of honor, and his brow the witness of manly integrity. His grasped hand is as good as a bond, and his promise as sterling gold. The complicated interests of men, which so often jar and conflict, are reconciled in him with a beautiful harmony. He is himself the embodiment of justice, the symbol of a perfect society. His charities are not the droppings of a formal pity, but the ointment of a yearning love. In his soul there is a fountain of honor, and close by, a fountain of tears. His spirit is an instrument strung to every proper mood, touched by the light graces of the passing hour, or swept by "solemn thoughts that wander through eternity."

For the Pilgrim.

THE NEW BIRTH.

In the Gospel by John, we read there was a man of the Pharisees named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. He lived in the days when the Savior was her on earth, a man of some note, holding a high position among his people. When we come to examine into his character and nature, we find him made up of different material from many of his fellow countrymen. There were virtues in him that would be well for us if we all would imitate, that is, of an enquiring nature after that which is good. He lived at the time when God manifested Himself to the world through His Son Jesus Christ, at a time when the true knowledge of God was almost extinct. The mind of man being carried away by the traditions which had been engrafted into the law of Moses. So many and various were the traditions that the Savior was compelled to tell them upon a certain occasion, "you have made the word of God of none effect through your tradition." In such an age of mid-night darkness, did this man Nicodemus leave his associates, his seat in the Sanhedrim, and in the darkness of the night seek out the Son of God to get some instructions from Him pertaining to Godliness, for he says, "we know that thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that thou doest except God be with him." This proves a greater degree of honesty in him than in most of his associates, for the very language tells us that they talked about this matter in their councils, for he says, "we know that thou art a teacher." &c.

Oh, how willing Jesus was to comply with his request, for he says: "Verily, verily I say unto you, except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." The same is yesterday to-day and forever. Happy thought for us in the nineteenth century, that we can have a God that will give attention to our requests although almost on the brink of ruin. But this was an unexpected bit of information, and in his surprise he says, "How can these things be; can a man be born when he is old?" He was kindly informed that this was altogether a spiritual affair. "That which was born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." This shows us clearly that there is not much remedy for the flesh.

God, in the beginning, said, "cursed is the ground for thy sake, thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field." It is universally acknowledged that the body of man and beast and every living thing is composed of earth. That accounts for the ravenous disposition in man and beast, being made up of such impure material, but man has a higher nature which if properly cultivated can keep the disposition of this corrupt flesh in subjection, but nothing short of being born again, and that of water and of the spirit. In the way this is to be brought about, there has sprung up difference of opinion, and unless we take the word of God for the man of our council, we, by the sophistry of the many will be in danger of taking the inside track, and by so doing will not realize the benefit that will be obtained by the new birth which will give us power to keep the flesh in subjection.

Paul in writing to the Romans, 6th chapter, says: "let not sin reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." Now observation will clearly set forth this class of characters to all who are willing to make use of the intellectual faculty they possess. No matter how loud a man may profess whenever he is ready to resent an insult by physical power, it proves that he depends upon the arm of the flesh, or that sin reigns in the mortal body, having the control of the whole man. Again, says Paul, "ye were the servants of sin but God be thanked ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then made free from sin ye became the servants of righteousness." When? After the form of doctrine was obeyed which was delivered you. Now we would ask what is that form? We must quote Paul again. "Therefore we are buried with him in baptism into death that like as Christ was arised from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we should also walk in newness of life, for if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection. What a beautiful illustration of planting. The Evangelist says: "He bowed his head and gave up the Ghost," and Christ says: "ye must be born of water and of the spirit." Good common sense will teach any one that the less is always born of the greater, and not the greater of the less. That would take a larger quantity of water in bulk than the candidate to be born, and when this is done from the heart, it will bring about that peaceable and quiet spirit where love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness and kindness will be the order of the day. The reverse of this is self-evident that the heart is not regenerated, and the new birth is not brought about.

Astonishing as it was in the days of Nicodemus to hear the doctrine of the new birth preached, it is equally as astonishing in our day, for when we preach the same doctrine the mass of the people will not receive it, for they have sought out a way more convenient to their wishes, having a form of godliness which allows them to do almost anything that the flesh desires, and even say that this and that in the word of God, is not essential to salvation, for instance, Feet Washing, the Holy Kiss, the Lord's Supper, and even in regeneration get the cart before the horse, that is, remission before baptism, which is not the doctrine taught by the Apostles. Their whole system is a perfect Babel, a confusion of tongues, a mystery, requires classical education to understand it, and therefore, a salaried ministry, a carpeted pulpit and steepled church building, and such things as will attract the eye, and please the unregenerated mind. Now dear sinner, to you who have not been contaminated with this confusion of tongues, my advice is, read the word of God carefully, turn a deaf ear to everything that does not correspond with the word, and obey from the heart that form of doctrine you learn in the Gospel, and you will be sure of Heaven if faithful.

GEORGE WORST.

For the Pilgrim.

PRAYER.

BY D. B. CONDRIE.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Unuttered or expressed."

There is prayer without words. There are well-rounded periods of supplication without prayer. There is danger of sliding into formal prayer—prayer from habit. Not because we have any particular desire, but because it is our custom. It is our duty, the fulfillment of an obligation.—What effect such prayer may have upon God and Christ we will not attempt to determine. But its effect upon ourselves and the world is a field of legitimate inquiry. The same words used a thousand times are effective, provided only they come from the depths of being, laden with the earnest longing of the soul. But if they only come from a pious intellect, in a matter-of-course, formal way, the effect upon the listener is paralyzing to his moral sense. As far as the present effect of prayer upon the listener is concerned, it matters but little what the words, if they are fresh from the fountain of feeling. The simple prayer of the publican will touch every heart in a vast audience, when it comes from a soul burdened with a sense of its sin and guilt. The same words in a pompous, pharisaical, or indifferent style, fall unheeded or disgustingly upon every hearer. They lift no desire to God. They send no ones thoughts down to the bar of conscience to enquire of its own standing before God. Such indifferent prayer is powerless upon the hearer. Then, if we look closely, we shall see that the supplicants themselves are not advanced in spiritual growth by such prayer. They may think they have discharged a duty, and quiet their conscience with the hope that it is accepted with God as good service, but when we look for the real growth in goodness, for true spiritual enlargement, we find them standing still, if not actually falling back from what they were at conversion. Such praying is dangerous. The world would be better if there were less of it. But real prayer—real out-going of soul after God, resting our finite weakness on His infinite strength, has just the opposite effect upon the listener and the suppliant. Both are really benefitted—made more Christ-like, more alive to the enterprises of practical godliness. Formal prayer is made to discharge a duty. Real prayer is made to be answered. And it is answered. If we saw correctly, we should probably see the soul superior to its circumstances and surroundings, and a law by which real life-throes are always effected. Its real outgoing carries it into the infinite love and strength; and in that its work can never fail. The finite blending spiritually with the Infinite becomes, in that particular, superhuman. Prayer which comes on this type is just as sure to be answered as the sun is to rise. It is in God, and in Him there can be no failure. Poor, burdened soul, let not thy faith falter, nor thy heart grow weary of delay. The answer may not be just according to the plan your intellect has marked out, but it will be according to the measure of your faith, and in harmony with the Infinite wisdom. The essential good will be given—the spirit of the pure prayer will be wrought into human history without failure.

Brethren, watch and pray, for we are commanded to pray and not to faint.

"Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of an eye
When none but God is near."

Man is the victim of discontent. He either looks for happiness in his recollections of the past, or seeks it in the brilliant visions which his fancy has created of futurity; whereas the present should be the moment of enjoyment and preparation for the future.

Independent of worldly considerations mental pursuits invariably bestow a rich reward on their votary, in the delight attendant on their cultivation, and the temporary oblivion, at least, of all anxious cares, in the abstraction they require.

Every drop in the sea of life imagines itself an ocean.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

THE SOLEMN QUESTION.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock." Rev. 3: 20.

SELECTED BY KATE BRENIZER.

There is a solemn question,
To which I must reply;
Shall I accept the Saviour,
Or all his claims deny?
Behold He standeth knocking
Upon my bosom's door,
Perhaps if now He ceaseth,
'Twill be forevermore.
Oh, shall I now receive Him,
Accept Him and believe Him,
Or shall I now refuse to hear
And bid Him go away?

How long He hath been waiting,
My heart alone can tell;
How patiently entreating,
My conscience knoweth well,
What words of solemn warning,
What promises of love,
His voice hath ever pleaded
My stony heart to move.

The question must be answered,
The time will soon be past,
It will not do to-morrow,
To-day may be my last;
I either must reject Him,
And choose the world of sin,
Or open freely to Him,
And bid Him enter in.

Oh, on that awful morning,
When He upon His throne,
Shall summon all before Him,
Who life on earth have known:
How shall I stand before Him,
And look upon His face,
If while he here entreateth,
I scorn His offered grace.

SWEET REUNIONS.

Oh! for the songs of gladness,
Sweet-sounding through the air;
Oh! for the no more sadness
Of all the ransomed there.

Oh! for the long, long meeting
Of Jesus with his own;
Oh! for the loved, loved greeting,
Of pilgrims in their home.

Oh! for the "sweet reunion"
Of friend restored to friend—
That loved and long communion,
Which never more shall end.

Oh! for the life immortal,
For bodies like his own;
Oh! for within that portal
Which leads me to his throne.

Oh! for the no more dying—
The no more oft distrust—
The sweetness there of lying
For ever on his breast.

Oh! for the joy of being
"For ever with the Lord;"
The long, sweet joy of seeing
How perfect was his word.

THE LITTLE GIRL AND HER COPY.

A little girl went to writing school. When she saw her copy, with every line perfect, "I can never write like that," she said.

She looked steadfastly at the straight round lines so slim and graceful. Then she took up her pen and timidly put it on the paper. Her hand trembled: she stopped, studied the copy, and began again. "I can but try," said the little girl: "I will do as well as I can."

She wrote half a page. The letters were crooked. What more could we expect from a first effort? The next scholar stretched across her desk, and said, "What scraggy things you make!" Tears filled the little girl's eyes. She dreaded to have the teacher see her book. "He will be angry with me and scold," she said to herself.

But when the teacher came and looked, he smiled. "I see you are trying, my little girl," he said kindly, "and that is enough for me."

She took courage. Again and again she studied the beautiful copy. She wanted to know how every line went, how every letter was rounded and made. Then she took up her pen and began to write. She wrote carefully, with the copy always before her. But O! what slow work it was! Her letters straggled here, they crowded there, and some of them looked every way.

The little girl trembled at the step of the teacher. "I am afraid you will find fault with me," she said, "my letters are not fit to be on the same page with the copy."

"I do not find fault with you," said the teacher, "because I do not look so much at what you do. By really trying you make a little improvement every day; and a little improvement every day will enable you to reach excellence by and by."

"Thank you, sir," said the little girl; and thus encouraged, she took up her pen with a greater spirit of application than before.

And so it is with the dear children who are trying to become like Jesus. God has given us a Heavenly copy. He has given us His dear Son "for an example, that we should follow His steps," He "did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth." "He is altogether lovely," and "full of grace and truth." And when you study his character, "I can never, never reach that," you say; "I can never be like Jesus."

God does not expect you to become like His dear Son in a minute, or a day, or a year; but what pleases Him is that you should love Him, and try to follow His example. It is that temper which helps you to grow, day by day, little by little into His likeness, which God desires to see. God loves you for trying and will help you.

THE REAL GENTLEMAN.—Not he who displays the latest fashion—dresses in extravagance, with gold rings and chains to display. Not he who talks the loudest, and makes constant use of profane language and vulgar words. Not he who is proud and overbearing—who oppresses the poor, and looks with contempt on honest industry. Not he who can control his passions and and humble himself as a child. No, none of these are real gentlemen. It is he who is kind and obliging—who is ready to do you a favor with no hope of a reward; who visits the poor, and assists those who are in need; who is more careful of his heart than the dress of his person; who is humble and sociable—not irascible or revengeful; who always speaks the truth without resorting to profane or indecent words. Such a man is a real gentleman, wherever he may be found. Rich or poor, high or low, he is entitled to the appellation.

While a mother was brooding over her poverty, her little son said: "Mamma, I think God hears when we scrape the bottom of the barrel!"

SELECTIONS.

SPURGEON AND BEECHER.

There is an article in the February number of the Contemporary Review, on Henry Ward Beecher, which is fulsomely eulogistical, and therefore, both unfelicitous and inaccurate. The writer who is a clergyman of lax views, contrasts Spurgeon with Beecher, for the purpose of setting off the latter to advantage. The two men, I admit present a contrast; but to contrast them with intelligent and accurate discrimination and educated critical acumen, is to place Spurgeon on an eminence almost as far above the popular and able Brooklyn preacher in every element of real permanent power, as it is possible to conceive. This writer says that if Spurgeon, John Bright, Prof. Maurice and Mr. F. W. Robertson were compounded, Beecher would be the result; which proves that he either knows very little of Beecher, or else very little of Maurice. Beecher is a preacher of the hour; Spurgeon is a preacher for all time. The one proclaims himself; the other, like the Apostle Paul, preaches Christ and him crucified. The one amuses, the other instructs; the one raises a laugh, the other evokes the question, "What must I do to be saved?" I agree with another writer who refers to these two men in a journal on this side of the sea. He says, "Beecher is professedly an orthodox Congregationalist, or Independent, but it would be very difficult to discover or define his position. What he asserts to-day, with characteristic dogmatic assurance, he will contradict to-morrow. The Universalists claim him as one of them; so do the Unitarians, so do the Swedenborgians, so do the Spiritualists; and yet, with that versatile veerability which distinguishes him, he welcomed into the fold of orthodoxy, the other day, a celebrated Unitarian clergyman at a Ministerial Assembly of orthodox clergyman in the city of New York. He is liberal, uncertain and erratic in his views, even to unsafe and pernicious looseness. His pulpit influence and teaching tend necessarily to laxity of opinion; and I venture to say that he has made more infidels, radical unitarians and free-thinkers, than any other man in the United States. And the fascinating and brilliant medley which he repeats Sunday after Sunday is scattered broadcast over the country, and is even committed to memory, and rehearsed by numbers of imitators in other pulpits.

"Spurgeon's sermons are worth reading; they contain the very marrow of Gospel truth, and cannot fail to benefit and bless those who either hear or read them. But Beecher's discourses obscure the truth, and raise a scaffolding of bedizened Beechery around the cross, so that the Savior is concealed behind the obtrusive and inflated egotism of the preacher. Not so with Spurgeon. If egotistical, it is subservient to the exaltation of the Master; and hence, the influence of the one will live and operate through the ages on the side of truth and righteousness; while that of the other will operate as now, injuriously.—Beecher has a fraternal greeting and a kind word for every phase of heresy under the sun; but what form or phase of error ever received any countenance from Spurgeon?"

The animus of this writer may be somewhat unkind, and he may be prejudiced against Mr. Beecher, but he is much nearer than the writer in the Contemporary Review. Beecher may be faithful to the central idea of the Christian system, but the tendency of his sermons is not to the production of a like fidelity in others. The Contemporary Review writer says, "If Mr. Spurgeon fails to leave a school, it will not be for want of his definite evangelical cast of doctrine, but merely because he is the eloquent exponent of a dying tradition." What! and are we to be told that the cross is a dying tradition, and salvation by the cross an absolute theory? and that too, by a professed minister of Christ? Spurgeon has already raised up a school of faithful men, who, whatever their views of the non essentials of Christianity, preach faithfully and ably "the truth as it is in Jesus," and this school will continue, for the world is to be saved by such preaching. I hold that to criticise these two men together, by way of comparison, or of contrast, is to fail to reach a correct estimate of either. They are different in every respect; as unlike as is possible for two popular and able men to be. But I am thoroughly persuaded that Spurgeon's sermons will be read and appreciated by multitudes of creatures after Beecher and his discussions shall have passed into oblivion.—Christian Observer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Pilgrim:—As news, queries and answers thereto are of great interest to me in reading the PILGRIM, I will, as I never have before, give a query through the PILGRIM, hoping some brother or sister will give us something on the same. Think not that I ask this through any impure motive, or to create strife. Let us search for the old paths, and walk therein, for thereby will we obtain a crown of glory. Luke 11, 20, we read like this, "But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the Kingdom of God is come upon you," and in other records, we read the Kingdom is in you. Now why do we not all see this in the same light? Some of the brethren stand on the Campbell te platform, and say we use the Lord's prayer in vain, for the Kingdom they were learned to pray for, has come. Certainly so, the church or his subjects had come, and was before the prayer was taught them. Am I right brethren? Don't let me stand alone or in an error, let all come to the truth. The church is the ground and pillar of the truth. Are we? If not, we are the ground and pillar of something else, and not the truth.

Again, have we persons in our days, that are in possesion of these devils that caused them (the men and women) to dwell among the tombs, to cut themselves with stones, to cast them in the fire and water, &c? If we have, where is that power to cast them out, or must God or His Son again come and kindle this power, or must these perish that come to His disciples to have them cast out? Now I look at this as a hidden thing to me. "Oh ye of little faith," is the words of the Lord to His followers in regard to those things. In love from your unworthy co laborer.

J. H. FISHEL.

Batavia, Iowa.

ROCKPORT, W. Va. }
Apr. 20, 1872. }

Bro. Brumbaugh:—I inform you that I have been reading the PILGRIM for one year, I find so much good reading in it that it makes my heart rejoice when it comes. H. D. Powell was the agent last year, I paid him for it, but I have not seen his name in the list. If he has not sent it yet I will. The church here numbers about twenty-two at present. Some left us this spring and last fall. We have built a new meeting house and have it all paid for but forty dollars. We are poor and if some of the wealthier churches would help us a little it would be thankfully received. We have to pay that amount before we can get our deed for the house and lot. We have one speaker but he is backward in his calling. We have no strange speakers. Bro. Christian Showalter was here last fall and had a good meeting. We read in the PILGRIM of so many ministers visiting churches, we would be glad if some would come to West Virginia on the little Kanawha river, in Wiert county, only ten miles from the county seat. The name of the Church is Prosperity. Bro. John Wise organized it. I feel assured that if some one would come and hold meeting we would have a large church in a short time. We hope some brother will be sent here on a mission of love. I see in the PILGRIM the District Meeting of West Virginia but it don't give the place. We would be thankful to you if you could send our request to the meeting.

JOHN GAULT.

Brother Brumbaugh: I wish to inform you and the many readers of the PILGRIM that on the 20th day of March, old brother Lingafelt's house caught fire. He and his wife being old were unable to save but little. It seems that the most of their living was stored away in their house. Brother Lingafelt is about 70 years old and his wife 73. They seem to feel their loss very much, and as we think it a duty as well as a privilege to aid in such cases like this, we have extended the privilege to as many as feel like giving something, let it be ever so small a gift, and it will be received with thankful hearts. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver, and the good book says that it is better to give than to receive, and if there is any one that feels like giving, you can send it in a letter and direct to William Lingafelt, Leo P. O., Allen county, Ind.

ELD. JEREMIAH GUMP.

Huntertown, Ind.

BRADFORD, Ohio, }
April 26, 1872. }

Dear Editors: I ordered you to stop the PILGRIM, but I wish you to send it again as I feel quite lonesome without it, &c.

Just so, dear sister, we do not know the value of a good friend until we lose them, as it was with you and the PILGRIM. You did not fully know the amount of the Bread of Life that you realized from its pages until you closed your door against it. We are glad that you are lonesome for the glad tidings of salvation. Sinners born to God and saints taken home to rest, and gladly will the PILGRIM again enter your home and bring you the news of Zion.

VESUVIUS IN ERUPTION.

The following we clip from the New York Observer, as being of general interest to our readers. When we consider that the interior of our earth is a mass of combustible matter ready to ignite, burn or explode at any moment, it should teach us that the time of renovation may be near at hand.—

There is no more striking feature in the unrivaled scenery of the Bay of Naples than the living mountain, Vesuvius. Its fires have not been extinguished for nearly two thousand years, and when it was not in violent eruption a cloud of steam or vapor was silently ascending from its crater. Since the great catastrophe and the first appearance of its fires in 79, when Herculaneum and Pompeii were destroyed (a graphic account of which is given in the writings of Pliny the younger, the elder Pliny having perished at the time), there have been several memorable eruptions. In 1538 the whole region was agitated, and a new mountain on the north side of the Bay, nearly 500 feet in height, was thrown up. In 1779 the most brilliant eruption on record took place, flames and masses of burning rock being thrown to the height of several thousand feet. The town of Torre del Greco was destroyed in 1794, and again in 1861.

For some weeks past there have been signs of the activity of the internal fires, and last week they broke forth with unwonted energy. New craters opened on the sides of the mountain and streams of lava poured out and ran down toward the sea, increasing from day to day and destroying several small villages and driving the inhabitants of others to places of safety. We give below some of the dispatches which have been received:

Naples, April 26.—A fresh crater opened in Vesuvius to-day. The ashes and lava threaten the villages on the mountain side, and the inhabitants are removing their household goods. Thousands are encamped in the fields. The Ministers have been summoned from Rome, and are coming to make provision for the houseless people. The bay is covered with spectators. The scene is grand and terrible beyond description, The flames at times shoot up to a great height, and masses of rocks are ejected with earthquake shocks which are distinctly felt in this city.

Rome, April 28th.—The eruption of Mount Vesuvius continues with dreadful violence. The flowing lava has already reached Sabastiano, and threatens other towns. Explosions in the volcano are constantly heard in Naples. The consternation among the inhabitants of the villages and towns which are threatened with danger increases. Twelve persons have thus far been killed and twelve injured by the running lava. The villages of San Sebastiano and Massadisomma have been almost entirely destroyed, but all their inhabitants succeeded in getting away safely. The lava is now advancing toward the villages of Ponticelli, Cercola, Portici, St. George, which have been abandoned by their inhabitants. The people living in the towns of of Torre del Greco, Resina and Boscotrecare have also fled from their homes, as those places are threatened with destruction. These homeless persons have been provided with temporary homes. On Friday the lava advanced at the rate of one kilometre (more than half a mile) an hour, but to-day its pace has slackened.

Naples, April 28th: Evening.—The stream of lava which threatened the villages of Resina and Pirsina have ceased, and the molten mass is now cooling. The eruption is decreasing but the villagers do not dare to return to their homes. A new crater opened near Tersigna to-day, but with every fresh opening now, the violence of the eruption seems to abate. Yesterday the entire mountain was concealed from sight by the smoke which settled around it. This morning the heavens were darkened by the dense clouds of smoke and ashes, and a strong wind carried the burning cinders and old scoriæ as far as Scafate and Palermo. The precaution was taken to flood the Government powder magazine at Scafate.

The volume of the stream of lava near San Sebastiano is 16 feet deep, and the village is still in danger. The King, who arrived in Naples yesterday, has gone to San Sebastiano to direct measures for the relief of the inhabitants. The devastation has been terrible. Thousands of acres of cultivated land have been overwhelmed by ashes and lava, and vineyards and farms are buried out of sight. The loss of life must have been heavy, but it is impossible to ascertain the number of the victims.

A despatch from Naples states that on Monday the wind was blowing toward the city dense clouds of smoke and ashes. The ashes were falling in the street like snow, and reached a depth of two or three inches. Showers of sand have succeeded the rain of ashes. The lava has ceased flowing, but the eruption is accompanied by fearful electric phenomena. Lightning darts incessantly from the summit of the volcano, and the quakings of the mountain are more violent and frequent. The thunder is continuous. Burning cinders, stones, and scoriæ are falling fast and thick in the town of Massa di Somma, which is entirely deserted. At Naples the Bourse has closed, and business is almost entirely suspended.

Announcements.

The Lord willing, the Brethren in the Waterloo Congregation, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 1 P M. A hearty invitation is hereby extended to all who please to favor us with a visit.

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

DEAR PILORIM: Please announce that we, the brethren of the Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., intend to hold a Lovefeast in our new Church House, 5½ miles south-west of Plymouth, on the 14th of June, 1872. If any come on the mail train they can stop off at the Summit, 3 miles west of Plymouth. We do hope that some of our laboring brethren will be with us, and as many others as wish to come will be heartily welcome. Meeting commences at 10 o'clock.

JOHN KNISELY.

The Lord willing, the brethren in Fawn River Congregation, Lagrange county Indian, intend having a Lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th of June next, commencing on Saturday at 10 A. M. A hearty invitation is extended to all who may please to favor us with a visit at that time. Six miles East of Lima, at the house of brother Eli Horner.

Please announce that the brethren in Falling Spring Church, will hold, the Lord willing, their Love Feast at Hades meeting house on the 14th day of May next. A cordial invitation to all. JOHN ZUCK.

Please announce that we intend to have our Lovefeast on the 31st day of May next in the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin co., Pa., commencing at one o'clock p. m. Preaching next day in the forenoon. An invitation is given to all that have a desire to be with us, especially mioistering brethren.

For the satisfaction of those wishing to come, we would say that our meeting house is about ¼ mile from the Sunburry & Lewstown R. R., and the morning train leaves Lewistown at 6:50 a. m. The other train leaves Lewistown at 12:20, p. m. Maitland is our station about five miles from Lewistown. JACOB MOHLER.

Please announce that we purpose holding our Lovefeast at Spring Run, near McVeytown station, Mifflin county, Pa., on the 29th and 30th days of May, 1872. A hearty invitation is extended to ministers and members.

JOSEPH R. HANAWALT.

The following notices were handed to us for publication with a request that we give a general invitation to all and a special one to ministering brethren.

Aughwick, Huntingdon county, Pa., 27th, 28th of May, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., 3d and 4th of June.

Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., 6th and 6th of June.

Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., June the 11th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Yellow Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., June 13th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Snake Spring Valley, Bedford Co., Pa., June 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

NOTICE.

This informs the Brethren and others, that Eld. David Bosserman has no more of his Tracts for sale or distribution, and that no further orders are solicited.

MARRIED.

KELLER—HOLLINGER.—At the house of the brides parents, Dec., 21st 1871, by J. F. Stamy, Jacob Keller, and Catharine Hollinger. All of Cumberland Co., Pa.

DIED.

NICHOLSON.—In the Iowa River Church, Marshall county, Iowa, April 3rd 1872, Amorette Nicholson, aged 10 months, 5 weeks and 5 days.

NICHOLSON.—In the same Church, April 5th, '72, Katie M. Nicholson, aged 3 years, 3 months and 3 days. The above children both died with Diptheria. Funeral services by L. Hall and Elder Samuel Garber.

Gone, our darling little Bettie,—
Gone, the babe we loved so well;
Angels came and gently bore her
In that happy home to dwell.

And Katie too, she was not spared,
Our hearts with anguish riven;
We have one left, to cheer us now,
And two we have in Heaven.

MOTHER.

EDITORIAL.

OUR SANOTUM.

We have just returned from District Meeting and again taken our seat on the familiar stool with letters scattered profusely around. It is surprising to see how letters and business will accumulate during a a few days absence. New subscribers to be attended to, a host of Eld. Flory's tracts to be sent out, addresses to be changed and minutes of a number of District Meetings to be printed, and in addition, prepare matter and publish two weekly papers per week. Those who envy our idle hours can be consoled in this respect at least as we have concluded that our lot is to earn our bread, if not by the sweat of the brow, by the scratch of the pen.

We intended to give a report of our interesting meeting this week, but cannot for want of time to prepare it, suffice for the present to say that we enjoyed ourselves hugely, and found our family and printers well and work up to time or nearly so.

The meeting was an interesting one, being fully represented. If any are interested in its proceedings wish the minutes can be supplied by us at 10 cents for single copy or 75 cents per dozen.

P. S. Not knowing the number that would be wanted we charged those who first subscribed something more than we took at the close of the meeting. To such we will send as many more, above order, as to make up the discrepency.

We are informed that our brother, Adam Hollinger is still in a critical condition and but little hopes are entertained for his recovery. The prayers of the church are requested in his behalf. Brethren and sisters, please, remember this and do not forget brother Adam when bowed at your altare. Bear his condition on the wings of prayer up to the God of heaven that his afflictions, which will be only for a season, may work out for him a far more exceeding weight of glory.

SUFFERERS AT ANTIOCH

The fatalities were not the greatest in the city of Antioch, as the first dispatch intimated, but were heavier in the country in the vicinity of that city. A letter from Antioch, under date of the 4th of April, says:

"The American Protestant Churel was severely injured and four of the American community were killed. All the members of the families of the missionaries are safe. The number of persons killed in the city of Antioch is less than 300, but it is known that 1,600 people in the surrounding towns and country—where the shocks were as severe, if not more so, than here—were killed, and this number may be increased. The distress of the people will be only temporary, as the crop prospects are good. The supply of provisions on hand is moderate."

The Buffalo Advertiser says the new suspension bridge at Niagara Falls (which is now four years old), passed triumphantly through the severe test to which it was put by the gale of the 13th, when the wind blew 95 miles an hour by the anemeter. The bridge is over a quarter of a mile long—"the longest span in the world." Says the Advertiser: "there was no perceptible movement of the greater part of the bridge, but the central portion, unprotected with guys, performed a graceful serpentine movement, both horizontally and perpendicularly, that was pleasant to look at, provided the observer was on terra firma."

A portion of the mammoth Jubilee Coliseum, in course of erection at Boston, fell with a tremendous crash, last Friday evening. One of the end towers had reached the height of 110 feet, while the truss destroyed was 140 feet high, and had a span of 300 feet. Nearly 50,000 feet of lumber had been used in the construction of the truss. The wind was blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour when disaster occurred. Several watchmen were in the vicinity of the building, and a train of cars was passing, but no one was injured. The accident will cause only temporary delay in the building operations.

John W. Foust,	$ 2.00
Daniel Ulrich,	1.25
J. H. Biddle,	1.25
John Zuck	1.25
Catharine J. Hildebrand	1.00
George Kinny	2.50
James Guthrie	1.35
Wm. R Harshbarger	1.25
Moses Moist	2.00
F P Lœhr	1.25
Kate Brenizer	70
J P Hetric	1.25
Jacob Mohler	3.75
John H Caylor	1.30
David Hildebrand	2.50
J. S. Holsinger	5.00
J P Lerew	1.25
Wm H Quinn	1.25
Daniel Hollinger	1.25
Eld Jacob Price	1.25
David L Cunkleton	80
D F Good	10.00
J F Stamy	1.40
J T Beaver	.80
Brice Sell	.80
J W Brumbaugh	1.25
A L Bowman	6.75
Jacob Fishel	.70
J J Rosenberger	1.25
J W Blauch	3.00
J F Weaver	1.35
Daniel Yount	.80
Wm. B Sell	1.85
John H Gehr	1.25
J H Abbott	.50
Cyrus Brindle	1.25
Harriet Hammer	1.25
J H Raffensperger	1.75
C M Raffensperger	1.25

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871 Passengor Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	UP TRAINS. MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	DOWN TRAIN. MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 38
6 40	9 14	Rough & Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 53
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 06	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 23
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

CINCINNATI MARKETS.

FLOUR, Fancy Brands	$7.25
" Family	6.85
" Extra	6.65
" Lowgrades	4.50
WHEAT, white, per bushel	1.60
" Hill "	1.60
" Winter red "	1.75
CORN	.48
OATS	.43
RYE	.43
BARLEY	.65

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

GENERL INTELLIGENCE.

NEW DISCOVERIES AT ROME.

Some remarkable discoveries in Rome are described in a letter to the Times from Mr. John Henry Parker, C. B.: "I have this day been through the subterranean passage from the vestibule of the great ancient Mamertine Prison (commonly called the Prison of St. Peter) under the Church of the Crucifixion, near the arch of Septimius Severus, and the principal chambers of that prison called the Lautumiæ, now cellars under the houses in the Via di Marforio and the Vicolo del Ghettarello. This passage is 80 yards long, nearly two high, and one wide, and the construction, as well as that of the prison, is of the large blocks of tufa usually called in Rome the walls of the kings, the same as that of the earliest part of the Cloaca Maxima. The excavation of this passage has been a tedious, difficult and expensive work, and I hope it will be duly appreciated by the subscribers. It clearly settles another long-disputed question among scholars, and demonstrates that this is the prison in the middle of the city, mentioned by Livy as made in the time of Ancus Martius (A. U. C. 121, B. C. 632, 'Livii Hist.' lib. I. c. 33).

THE PERSECUTIONS OF THE JEWS IN ROUMANIA.—A letter from "Bucharest, Feb. 24," gives terrible details of these persecutions. The writer says:—"A deputation from Cahul reached me today. Language fails me to depict all they related. Cahul is a place of 7,000 souls, 1,000 of whom are Israelites. Suddenly the latter were set upon, and for three days beaten, wounded, plundered, driven out of their homes, which were battered to ruins, and forced to take refuge in the barracks, where, instead of being defended, they were allowed again to be beaten, and for several days kept without food. The way along the street from many Jewish houses to the barracks was marked with blood. Heads were split open, arms broken, beards plucked out by the roots, hair torn from the scalp, &c.

INDIAN MASSACRE.—A noted murderer, Ezekiel Proctor, was lately on trial in the Indian Territory. It was supposed that he would not be permitted by his Indian friends to undergo punishment, therefore, on April 13th, a posse of eleven United States deputy marshals was sent from Fort Smith with instructions to arrest Proctor in case of his acquittal or rescue, and bring him in. As soon as they arrived at the court house a fight began. In another moment seven out of the eleven United States deputy marshals lay dead on the ground, three Indians dead inside, and sixteen or seventeen wounded. The Sheriff in charge of Proctor, inside the courthouse, was instantly killed, and the judge on the bench received a load of buckshot in the knee. Fort Gibson will be reoccupied by United States troops.

THE YEAR OF DISEASE.

By the testimony of medical men and of the press all over the world, this has been an exceptional year for the prevalence of diseases of a malignant type. What peculiar state of the atmosphere causes this spread of disease is not settled, but there is a deficiency or superabundance of some element to occasion it. The manner in which confluent small-pox has traveled in this country, the steady advance of cholera over the world from its Asiatic lair; the alarming development of the spotted fever, or celebra-spinal meningitis; the unprecedented spread of malignant scarlet fever, diphtheria black measles, and like diseases in their worst type, are illustrations of this unpleasant fact.

Advertisemeots.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. Illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular: or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro-Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms; Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which Is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Spring session of Salem College will open for the reception of any number of students from all parts of the country, on the 20th, of March 1872.

Ample accommodations, and thorough instruction will be given all students who connect themselves with this College. Good board can be obtained in the best of families, at $2.50 to $3.00 per week; or students can board themselves, separately or in clubs, at from $1.25 to $1.50 per week, as large numbers are doing, with the consent of the faculty. An extensive boarding house is to be erected by a brother early in the season, to accommodate all children of brethren, who desire it. Parents and Guardians can rely on the location of the College at Bourbon, as being a permanent arrangement, and that the health of the locality is unsurpassed, by any place in the entire country.

Special care will be given to students who are far from home, that shall be satisfactory to parents. For Catalogues, Scholarships, and full particulars, address,

SALEM COLLEGE.

Jan, 23. 1y. Bourbon Ind.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!

RENNER'S

HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, DR. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 23, tf. Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

BRO. RENNER, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country, A. HUTCHISON, Oak Hill, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. WM. H. BAILY, Raleigh, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic, I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was, my neighbors are surprised at my healthy appearance. D. S. STAYER, New Enterprise, Pa.

DR. RENNER:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. WM. H. GANES, Cool Springs, S. C.

TRACTS.

Treatise on the Salutation, Feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, by Eld. David Bosserman, intended more especially for the Brotherhood. They are now offered for sale on the following terms; Single Copy, 10cts.
Per Dozen, 80cts.
Address, D. Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Narkly Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MAY 14, 1872. NO. 20

POETICAL.

TOO LATE.

Too late, too late was never said
Of morning sun, or bud, or flower—
The light is true to hill and glade,
The rose-bud opens to the hour;
The lark ne'er asks the day to wait,
But man awakes too late, too late!

Too late, too late our anger burns—
The sun goes down before the flame
The gentle word of kindness turns,
And we are scourged with inward shame
To think our breasts have harbored hate,
And pride bows down—too late, too late!

Too late, too late for public prayer,
The words of worship have begun—
Our cheeks are flushed with hastening there
Or enter as the chant is done;
And, pausing at the temple gate,
We stand and say—"too late, too late!"

"Too late, too late!" who has not said?
The post is out—the train is gone—
The time is fled—the debt not paid—
The aid not sought—the work not done;
Neglect makes up life's weary freight,
And then we cry—"too late, too late!"

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

THE GROWTH OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

"First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." Mark 4:28.

When I was a boy my father's door yard was my world. Of course I could see things outside of this narrow circle. I could see the sky, the clouds, the sun, moon and stars, together with fields, mountains, and many other things, yet it was after I had a conception of the word world that I could conceive of them as belonging to the world. By and by I was surprised and vexed to discover that I had the wrong word to represent these things in my mind, I exchanged it for universe. As I grew older and read some history and some astronomy there was added element after element until my conception of matter and space spread out broader and deeper and more beautiful. The impulse is the same as at the commencement, but how much richer and how much grander it has become! And if I grow older, and if God permit, my ideas shall still grow larger though they will ever remain identical with those at the beginning. As the mind becomes developed and expanded in temporal things, so it also becomes developed and expanded in spiritual things. There are as many different stages of growth in the knowledge of space and matter as there are degrees of advancement in the knowledge of divinity, and as many of each as there are persons living. There are millions of persons who may be properly assigned to a position in a class of God's creatures whose conceptions of men and things are very limited, and these may again be classified according to their natural capabilities and thus according to the exertions which they have made. And still they may be divided and sub-divided again and again in regard to the varied circumstances connected with their condition until each class contains but a single individual. Such I apprehend are the talents of which we read in the Scripture, the conditions upon which they are given and the result of their use.

The balance of humanity may be properly analyzed in a similar manner. Their sources of manhood are the same—differing from those who appear to them of inferior origin only in degree of quality. They are only of a deeper or more sensitive and not of a different moral nature. As there "are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit" so there are different conceptions that all cohere in the same original nature. Naturally, men are like so many different magnets each of which draws to itself that which its nature wants, only as it is placed sufficiently near the object of its attraction. The simile becomes more striking when we compare those who profess godliness, passing through or over the word of God—with so many magnets passing through a mass of metal filings, each one drawing to itself only what it wants. But the perfect child of God compared to such a magnet will aim to pass through the word of God drawing from all that is in it. If one brother sees nothing but humility in God, and another sees nothing but beauty in Him they are both blind, and they will fall into the ditch with all who are like them.

Naturally, some men are born Methodists, others are born Catholics, and naturally, all are born with the faculty of entertaining one or several distinct truths of God's nature more than others. Naturally, that part of the mind that is most susceptible of impressions will suggest most to the person. Thus a man in whose mind the holiest sensation is excitability or psychological adaptation is a born Methodist, or a man who is in the main pantheistic making God the result of and not the cause of force; is a born Catholic. But a man who is daily, hourly and minutely living into God, who is conscious of a growing knowledge of Jesus Christ within, upon and around him, who is continually growing larger around the conscience and smaller around the animalism is a born Christian, whose birth is not natural, but spiritual—whose mental capabilities are not expanded in a particular direction, naturally caused by previous experience or by peculiar actions of the faculties. Whose chief evidence of being born again is not that he is as he was at first, but that he is growing into God, whose mind is continually renovated, whose conceptions of God are growing. Who was at first taught but has become a teacher, who at first desired and drank milk, but is now able to eat and digest strong meat, who when he was a child spake as a child, but has now become a man and has put away childish things. The Scriptures do not by any manner or means justify or encourage, or make the least allowance for known ignorance. The child of God is aware of this; therefore the reality of true religion grows within him, his activity—his earnestness and morality increase. The whole spiritual architect will be enlarged and improved in every direction. By reason of use the senses are exercised to discern both good and evil; thus experience produces more and better material each succeeding day through life. The apostle says "Now we see through a glass darkly, then face to face." The most diligent and the most talented men in the world see the brightest truths only as through a glass darkly. If the clearest outline of truth are but dimly seen by those who spend their time and talents to search them out, what must be the thickness of the darkness that pervades in the souls of those whose minds are uncultured and undeveloped, whose world of matter and spirit is "self" together with a few friends and little or much money. Who are inconsistent, straining at gnats and swallowing camels, attempting to pull motes out of their brethren's eyes, when they have great beams in their own, who inveigh against nothing but extravagance in dress and education, simply because they love money or its equivalent more than all things else. Who when they have gone through their religious exercises have gone through nothing that forms the new creature in Christ Jesus. Who build entirely by and upon externals only, "having a form of godliness, but in works they deny the power of it." "Whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." How benighted and how poor the soul that is without God and without hope in the world! Though a man may possess millions of dollars, yet he is extremely poor without God and without hope that reaches beyond the grave. But how blessed it is to begin eternal life upon the earth! The richest men in the world are those who are laying up the brightest, the clearest and the most noble conceptions of God. If men would lay up more treasure in Heaven, they must "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." They must "count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus," and thus grow up into Him in all things.

J. B. Garver.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

PRAYER.

Remember that God is no curious or critical observer of the plain expressions that fall from his poor children when they are in their closets. It is not a flow of words, or studied notions, seraphic expressions, or elegant phrases in prayer, which takes the ear, or delight the heart of God, or open the gate of glory, or bring down the best of blessings upon the soul; but faith, uprightness, holiness, heavenliness, spirituality, and brokenness of heart—these are the things in the saved man's experience that makes a conquest upon God and turn most to the soul's account.

Humility.—The flower of Christian graces grows only in the shade of the Cross, and the roots of them all is humility.

HEART LESSONS.

BY S. E. PEARRE.

"And the disciples came and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus."

In the hour of pride and prosperity, we may, moth-like, flutter in the bewildering brilliance of greatness; but in the hour of humility and sorrow we go to other hearts for sympathy and solace. The widow does not go to the great man to tell him how her heart died with her husband; nor the orphan to the king to leave his smitten life on his bosom. At such times the heart stands aloof from the strong and great, for it instinctively feels that its woe would dot be understood; and there is no comfort in the words of him who does not under-stand us. A most wonderful exception to this is the life of Jesus. In a life so conspicuous that his movements about the country were as the march of an army for the multitude that followed him, in a life so busy that a comparison leaves that of Napoleon in idleness; with wisdom so great that senators were awed by the words of the mere child; rising so sublimely above the race, that they exclaimed, "he is no man, for no man ever spoke like this man speaks," still none were afraid to go to him with their troubles. The nobleman and the peasant, all who had any grief, the moment they were touched with sorrow, felt that his was the only breast on which to lean, and his the only heart that, with more than the strength of man, and more than the love and tenderness of woman, could understand them or give the healing word of sympathy. He stood in the midst of the multitude, and thither came the bereaved mother with her tears, and the nobleman with his strong manly sorrow; thither came the cripple and the blind, and the deaf and the dumb; and more than all, thither came the outcast sinner, and they all bowed down and wept together on his breast. Oh, ye wise men of the East, what were all your gold, frankincense and myrrh, to these pearls of the heart poured out to him here!

It was precisely at one of these moments that John sent two of his disciples to him to ask if he were the Messiah. Jesus was exceedingly busy when they came, and told them to stand aside a moment and note what they should see. As they stood and watched, the sorrowing came trooping to him, and as he took their hands, some blessed word, warm from the heart, went straight to theirs, and the waters of grief were turned to wine, and the better words of the Gospel went down into the hearts of the poor and made them heirs of heaven. Turning to the two disciples he said: "Go and tell John what you have seen, and blessed is the man that abandons me not." And every soul present said to itself, Amen; blessed is he that abandons him not. Was John satisfied? Reader, had you been there would you have said, This is he that was to come? And these disciples, when their brave, conscientious master was beheaded, came and took up the body, and went and told Jesus. Ah, here is a marvel, that he who took all sorrow from the grave was himself the grave of all sorrows, where all might come and bury their griefs forever from their sight.

But he was not satisfied with this. When it became "expedient that he should go away" he said, 'I will not leave you comfortless;" and I confidently ask, has not this promise been kept? Has he not left in the world an influence as potent to heal the heart as that which was exercised by him while he was here? There is a power in his name in all lands that can charm the spirit of grief and cast it out. A faith in him is like an Artesian well from the heart of the earth, causing perennial streams of consolation to flow from the deepest heart of God. When the Son of man walks with the soul, it can tread the fiery furnace of affliction, and the smell of fire shall not pass upon his garments.

Were you to come with the same question that these disciples propounded to him, I would say as he did, Lift up your eyes upon all the broad face of the earth and tell me what you see. That bereaved mother, by a little plays thing has had thoughts stirred that were too deep for human sympathy, and too sacred for human ears. Not a bosom friend could hear it nor a friendly heart enter into it; but away in the solitude of her chamber, she "went and told Jesus," and she comes out now with that sweet resignation—that radiance of holy joy. That victim of oppression and cruelty opens not his mouth to human ears, but quietly and confidently pours his woe into the ear of Jesus, and immediately is strong to endure. The orphan that is frightened to silence by the gentlest human look, goes in solitude, and in confident faith tells his whole heart to Jesus. Look away over the seas to where the newly converted Islander creeps away into the grove to his secret conference with the Savior—all, from whom the great turn coldly away; all, whose deep heart the world cannot understand, all go bending down on the bosom of Christ. Ah, more! See the sinful outcasts that have no heart to lean upon; no friendly hand outstretched to help them; none to tell them that he loves them and will help—how they turn aside in every solitary place and weep on his breast. Could we but have ears to hear it all, what a great whispered murmur would we constantly hear pouring into his ears the secret sorrows of the moaning world! And could we but see the river of consolation that flows back from him, we could but say, He has kept his promise. Yes, all the world over his heart is made the confidant of all hearts; and out of the sorrows of the world are manufactured their intensest joys. Is this not He that was to come?

THE CONSTRAINING LOVE OF CHRIST

BY GERHARD TERSTEEGEN.

"The love of Christ constraineth us," 2 Cor. 5: 14, exclaims the apostle Paul, in which words he naturally calls our attention to the matchless love of Christ, and to its divine constraining power. It has not pleased the Holy Spirit to indicate more clearly, whether by "the love of Christ" is here meant the love wherewith Christ loveth us, or that love with which the believing heart loves Christ, perhaps for this very reason, that we should take them both together, they belong in fact, most closely to each other. The one is produced by the other, and they are origioally one, for how should we possess even a spark of love for Christ, unless He had first loved us, and the love wherewith we are enabled to love Him, is not less His love, than that with which He has loved us, both in time and in eternity. It is Christ who makes the commencement in loving, therefore, in our present meditation we must also begin with considering His love to us. Christ loves us with a love surpassing the most faithful and most fervent love of a friend. Friendship amongst men consists in the free and inward inclination of the heart, by virtue of which the individual wishes his friend the possession of every good, and gladly procures it for him, whilst he seeks, on the other hand, to defend him from every injury and misfortune, and to aid and assist him in every emergency. It is with such a friendly affection, that Christ is in reality attached to us in the highest degree.

If we wish to form to ourselves an idea of the most faithful friendship, it must be such a friendship as to continue firm in the hour of need, but where amongst mankind do we find such a friend in need, and if we are desirous of representing to ourselves, this affection of the soul in its sublimest exercise, we must suppose the the case of one friend laying down his life for the other, but where is such a friend or such friendship to be found? In Christ, we really possess such a friend, and in his heart, such a friendship for us. No one, says Himself, "hath greater love than this that He lay down His life for His friends." John 15: 13. Ah, dearest Savior, why talk of friends, we were foes and rebels, and yet hast thou laid down thy life for us. "God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. 5: 6, 8. O, the astonishing intensity of the love of Christ. You and I my dear friends, were fallen from the friendship, light, love and fellowship of God into the depths of misery, wretchedness and sin, we were no longer friends but foes, no longer worthy of being loved, but hateful and deserving of wrath, yet God in His eternity, had compassion on our great and boundless misery. He let it cost Him that which He held most dear, for our salvation He gave up His only begotten Son, the child of His bosom, and in His Son the heart of His love. Neither man nor angel can comprehend or fathom this, we must believe it, we must adore it, and with Christ Himself, astonished exclaim, "God so loved the world," this miserable world. John 3: 16

Christ's surpassing friendship for us constrained Him to leave heaven, that He might save and deliver us and in order to do so, and that we, might not be afraid at His appearing, He clothed Himself in our wretched humanity form, as our goal and near relative. He really took upon Himself the burden of our sins and transgressions, as though they were His own. During the space of nearly thirty-four years He labored, prayed and struggled for you my friends, and for me, under the most appalling sense and agonizing feeling of that divine wrath which sin had roused. He became exceeding sorrowful, sweated great drops of blood and experienced the hiding of God's countenance. He "bore our sins in His own body on the tree," and all this He did from the voluntary affection of a friend, and that by the inestimable value of His blood He might again reconcile us and purchase us to become His friends. Can we imagine greater love? Is not Christ a true friend in deed, a real friend even unto death? And He suffered all this, not for us generally, but for every one of us in particular. In this view Paul regarded it. "Christ loved me," says he "and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2: 20. Ah, Paul, what is it thou sayest, did Christ then die for thee solely. O yes, solely for me, and solely for thee. Thus we ought to view the subject, in order to behold it to the most advantage, and it is that Christ loves every one with a particular affection.

TEMPERANCE. (Continued.)

Dear reader, I was telling you in a former article something about whiskey and its powerful agency to destroy life.

But do you really know what whiskey is? I will tell you. Four-fifths of a glass of whiskey is water flavored with rye or corn; one-tenth is alcohol, part of the remaining tenth is tobacco and fusil oil; the remainder is burnt sugar and strychnine. What a fine assortment of poisons, alcohol, tobacco, fusil oil, and strychnine. These produce all that thrill of excitement which is so agitating and seductive to all lovers of the cup. Alcoholic drinks do not nourish. The great chemist Lubig has said that there is more nourishment in the quantity of flour one can lay on the point of a table knife, than there is in nine quarts of the best Bavarian beer. They are as barren of nutriment as a flash of lightning. They do not strengthen. It is a well known fact that Thomas Sayers when he was training for the ring, said: "When I have business to do give me water and the dum bells." Neither do they warm. They stimulate for a few moments, only to decrease the natural heat of the body, when the excitement passes off. Instances are not wanting to prove the truth of these assertions. If then they do not nourish, do not strengthen, do not warm, what do they do? They enter the lungs inflaming and gradually destroying their delicate structure; they impair the healthy action of the liver, impoverish the blood, and irritate the nerves. They affect the heart, increasing its action to an unnatural degree, and turn the brain that sublime dome of thought into a whispering gallery fit only for shouting maniacs. They destroy the body by burning out its vitality, and blacken forever all hopes of a future existence of the soul. If you would relinquish all hope of heaven, and fit yourself for the starless night of the drunkard's eternity, then drink! drink! drink! moderately at first of course, until you become accustomed to the flush of excitement, the advance of the temper.

It will not be long after you leave tipplers station on this downhill track before circumstances will occur that will loosen the brakes, and send you forward with a speed that no human power can arrest. Down, down, the black valley road with your companions, the mad suicidal worshippers of the cup. The dark idiot, browed demons, fit guests of hell—the end of this road.

Satan has three prime ministers, Intemperance, Licentiousness and Infidelity. These three go hand in hand, and serve as mutual stimulants—they rouse and sustain each other in that hell-begotten work of dragging the souls of men into the most complete and terrible slavery in existence. There is but one hope for you young man; one ground of confidence on which you can build securely, one position in which you can be fully prepared to resist the temptations of time, and the terrors of the grave. It is not the confidence of pride, nor the hope of a stoical philosophy, nor the power of your own resolution. It is the hope of religion, the cross of Christ, the strength that God has promised to all that put their trust in Him. But if you cannot or will not, call upon one who is mighty to save, and to shield you in the hour of temptation from this great enemy of man, intemperance, how then can you expect to escape when the waters of death shall roar around your feet, when the last great flood shall dash against your frail bark and engulf it forever?

O, Liquor, Liquor! how many Edens hast thou made desolate, how many starved and naked orphans hast thou cast out upon a cold and friendless world; how many graves hast thou filled with confiding and heart broken wives? What sad wrecks thou hast made of brilliant genius. Oh thou accursed but mighty transformer of the noblest work of God into all that is despisable!

SIMON MIXEL.

Bloody Run, Pa.

MORAL COURAGE.

Life is a fixed fact, a stern reality, and we are all voyagers on its wild, broad sea. From the port which we start there is a current impelling us out into the rough, restless sea. On we must go, there is no way of avoiding it. And since we must pass over the sea of life, it is idle and useless to regret it, and unwise to murmur at the roughness and unevenness of the way. On we must go, and it is only by undaunted courage, and untiring perseverance that we will ever arrive safely on the other side. Our ship for the voyage is one that cannot be surpassed; its architecture is divine; its strength exceeds that of bars of iron or brass, yet it may be wrecked ere it reaches the harbor. The storms and whirlwinds directed by satanic force will cause a trembling and quivering of the most stanch and compact structure, and nothing but a determined purpose of soul and heart will be available in contesting with the opposing power. Then life's voyager, take courage. You need not expect to cross the ocean of time without meeting with trials. Satan will exercise his fascinating power and we must have the courage to resist all, and determine our own course of action. This is bravery, the sublimest of human virtues; true through all opposition, true in forming decisions, even in the midnight hour, when there is no eye to see save the all-seeing eye of God; true when the world would applaud for being false, and all our worldly interests would seem to offer a price for cowardice. This courage we want at all times, and under all circumstances. We want it in the common walks of life for it is there that we meet with severe trials. The passions are to be subdued; lust, avarice and ambition are to be suppressed; unholy and evil desire relinquished, all of which require true moral courage. Courage, pilgrim, your voyage will not be long; a few more trials, a few more temptations, a few more struggles and the ever green shore will appear in its splendor and beauty, all illuminated by the refulgent rays of the Son of Righteousness. To the cowardly, distrustful, the illuminating rays of God's Righteousness can never appear. They have sunk beneath the waves of time, ever to remain in the depths of misery and despair. Then Christian pilgrim if you would enjoy the presence of God, and a place among the Redeemed, dare to do right, however threatening may be the opposing power.

"Do what conscience says is right,
Do what reason says is best;
Do with willing mind and heart;
Do your duty and be blest."

J. B. B.

THE HAPPY FAMILY.

There were only three persons composed this little family, Mary, Martha and Lazarus. How happy they must have been when they had Jesus for their guest. Often when Jesus was tired and wearied with the noise of the multitude and troubles of the day in Jerusalem, He would retire in the evening to the bosom of this little family and there rest. On one occasion when He was there, Mary was sitting at his feet listening to the gracious words which fell from His lips, while Martha, no doubt through kindness to her Master, was trying to accommodate and make Him as comfortable as possible, was serving alone, she became impatient with her sister, and asked the Lord why He did not bid Mary help her. But what was His answer to Martha? He told her she was careful about many thing, but there is one thing needful, and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her. Sisters, this is something for us to think of. How many Marthas' there are now, and how few Mary's. Some of us, like Martha, are too much cumbered about the things of this world when we have visitors, especially ministers of the Gospel. We ought then, like Mary, be ready to sit at their feet and learn from them what they have learned from the Master, and not be like Martha consuming our time in fixing so many extras, which is not good for the body, and perhaps not for the soul. We can never learn too much, for there is much to learn. There is none that have been so wise but that they can learn more. M. C. K.

Parnassus, Va.

NO PERSON IS WITHOUT INFLUENCE.

Some persons fall discouraged on the highway of life, because they can not be this or that great or eminent person. Why not be willing to be themselves? No person who ever lived, or ever will live, is without influence. Why not make the most of that? Since you cannot grasp that which you wish, why let that which you have slip through your fingers? No person in the world is exactly like you. You have your own faults, but you have also your own excellencies individual to yourself. Give them air. Because you are not a poet, should you not be a good merchant? Because you cannot go to college, should you therefore forswear the alphabet? Because you cannot build a palace, should you not rejoice in your own humble roof, and that because it is your own? Will not the sun also shine into your window if you do not obstinately persist in shutting it out? If you cannot have a whole hot-house full of flowers, may you not have one sweet rose?

THE USE OF TRIALS.

How much we all desire exemption from the trials of life, forgetting that without these, life itself might be a failure. The rough sea makes the good sailor; and nothing but battles can produce veterans fit for the fiercest fights. An untried man is but half a man. His strength has never been tested. His powers are unrevealed. Only in the deep waters can we know the strong swimmer's skill. Only the fury of the hurricane can show the might of the eagle's wing. And as only temptation and trial can reveal our weakness and our strength, so nothing else can disclose to us the power of Him who watches us in our trials, who helps us in our infirmities, who stands by us amid the terrors of the darkest hour, who "knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation," and will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear, and who has given to us this blessed and assuring word, "My grace is sufficient for you." "My strength is made perfect in weakness."—The Christian. H. L. H.

DEATH—There is nothing pleasing in the thought of death, disconnected from every other consideration. His grasp is firm and unrelenting, his breath is cold and damp, and sends a thrill of terror to the heart. Without mercy he breaks the blissful union of husband and wife, dissevers the strong cord that unites mother and child—looses the band that so endearingly unites brother and sister, friend and associate, and any other tie of love and fellowship that strew the pathway of life. But blessed thought! Death, the "last enemy" must flee before the King of Kings who cometh forth to "conquer" and to take "captivity captive." Before Him, who "has brought immortality to light" shall death flee and be "swallowed up in victory!"—J. S. FLORY.

BE GENTLE WITH THEM.—Be ever gentle with the children God has given you. Watch over them constantly. Reprove them earnestly, but not in anger. In the forcible language of Scripture, "Be ye not bitter against them." "Yes, they are good boys," I once heard a kind father say, "I talk to them very much, but do not like to beat my children—the world will beat them." It was a beautiful thought. Yes, there is not one child in the circle around the table, healthy and happy as they look now, on whose head, if long enough spared, the storm will not beat. Adversity may wither them, sickness may fade, a cold world may frown on them. But amidst all, let memory carry them back to a home where the law of kindness reigned, where the mother's reproving eye was moistened with a tear, and the father frowned, "more in sorrow than in anger."

"The glory of young men is their strength, and the beauty of old men is the gray head."

RELIGIONS.

Dear Pilgrim:—My thoughts have been out on the scout contemplating or speculating upon the different religions in the world, and in meditating upon this subject my mind was carried far into the heathen land, where men, who were never created to know God, and to act for themselves have become so corrupt in principle as to "change the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible men, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things." This is the state and standing of the dark and benighted heathen. But still they have a religion worshipping as they believe to be right. The thought comes to my mind, why have the surrounding circumstances placed them where they stand to-day? The only reasons I can conceive are, as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient. For this cause God gave them up to vile affection. "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." I thought this is one Religion, but there are others which are not one whit better in the sight of God than the one I have been thinking about. This seems to be a broad assertion, at least some may think so, but "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." I will not speak of the Mohammedan and Mormon Religion, for I believe they are wrong, from scriptural evidence. But the conclusion to which my thoughts lead me as regards these two churches may not be amiss, from the fact that one of the three churches named, is unenlightened; they know nothing only what is stamped upon their memory and handed down by tradition, while the others are enlightened and are to-day sinning against better light and knowledge. "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not to him it is sin." "As many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." Rom. 2: 12. Then so far as the word of God has anything to do with this religion, it pleases them equally alike so far as disobedience is concerned, and this will condemn them without the shadow of a doubt. Still there is another religion that is somewhat more refined in principle, but it strikes me that it will not stand the test of God's word. This religion claims to be founded upon the word of God, defying the world to show them where they are wrong, and just name non-resistance, nonconformity, and feet washing &c., &c., then and there you will see whether they are founded upon the word of God or not. "Preach the word" is a theme generally used as a subject for lecture, and their hearers seem to be edified, but when the word is preached in its simplicity and power, offence is taken. This is their religion. Must we class this religion with those others? We understand that every name and order, every religion will be judged by the words of our Lord Jesus Christ. "He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my word, hath one that judgeth him, even the words that I speak shall judge him in the last day." Then away with every principle that conflicts with the word of God. Away with every religion that does not teach me to obey the Lord Jesus Christ in all His commandments. Then the religion that does not teach me this, you know what I think. These are my thoughts when called together.

SAMUEL C. BOSHOR.

Whitesville, Mo.

ANXIOUS BENOH RELIGION.

In the PILGRIM, I see a notice of some forthcoming tracts, the object of which seems to be the exposing the anti-scriptural practice of some of the sects who persuade ignorant and credulous people to believe that it is religion to pass through the manipulations of a mourners bench excitement; and that it is the evidence of repentance, conversion and a change of heart. Now anything that has for its object the abatement of this anti-scriptural practice or system meets my hearty approbation, and if assured of its utility my cooperation. Whether anything but the plain and simple preaching of the gospel will effect anything may be a question. Any set theory or argument brought directly against it, will be made a two-sided question by the advocates of the Bench, and success will depend upon the shrewdness of the advocates for or against, but preaching the gospel has but one side and hence must either be beleived or rejected by the hearer, and all who believe and are born of it will never, no never think of a mourners bench. While they who do not believe and obey the gospel, may as well hold and practice this error as the many others which they do.

My observation and experience justify the declaration that there is no popular error more readily preached out of the people than is that of the mourners bench. Even those who believe and practice it, cannot induce any one to come forward to the bench by preaching the gospel even in their way. The bench must be set in motion by an excitement gotten up by other means. In illustration of this truth permit me to state a case of their own occuring in our own vicinity within the past year. In a small town not far from us, the Methodists had a minister, who in their way of believing, preached a good, solid, practical doctrine. They started a protracted meeting, of course for the double purpose of reviving religion among the membership, and to convert sinners to the faith. But the longer the minister preached his practical sermons, the less of a mourners bench revival appeared, although thinking ones seriously contemplated the necessity of living a religious life. At last, however, it was determined upon to call in the assistance of an expert revivalist. He, with his troop arrived by the evening train after the meeting had commenced, and several prayers had already been made without any apparent results more than solemness and quiet. After the arrival of the new comer he was called on to pray; and my informant informed me that he went into it with a boisterousness and vehement frenzy, shouting and clapping his hands, striking the bench as though he would maul the arch fiend himself, while his troop kept up one continued roar of crying, shouting glory to God, with hallelujahs which were deafening. By the time this scene was played off, all that remained to be done was to bring up the mourners who were denominated the slain of the Lord. And to keep up this state of things for four weeks they need but keep in this path.

Brethren, all we need to do to annihilate the mourners bench religion, is to preach the gospel. The only trouble with us is, we don't preach it enough. It has pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe" saith the Apostle, hence the brethren who oppose a vigorous and continued effort at preaching the gospel, do greatly err. Preaching being part of the conditions of salvation, it must be done. There is power in the word preached. When God sent Jonah to Ninevah he said to him, "Preach unto it the preaching I bid thee," he went, and he cried and said, "Yet forty days, and Ninevah shall be overthrown," a short sermon certainly, but it was the preaching God bid him. If a man would now, on his own account, go into one of our large cities and say, "Yet forty days and this city shall be overthrown," and continue to do so, he would be arrested as a madman, and be placed in some insane asylum. And no doubt it would have been so done unto Jonah had not God been in it. It was the Word of the Lord, and when preached, pierced them to the heart. Even so saith the Lord, preach the Gospel to every creature, that they may hear, believe and be baptized to be saved. How long Jonah preached his short sermon until Ninevah humbled himbled herself I know not, he had a margin of forty days, and I presume he continued to preach the preaching God bid him. Certain it is he had no right to look for the overthrow of the city notil the time his preaching specified had expired. I believe it was at the end of the forty days when "Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of it, 'till he might see what would become of the city." I am aware that some who hold that one sermon at a place, once in four or eight weeks, if it don't happen to rain or snow on those days, is sufficient, hold that Jonah just passed through the city and cried "Yet forty days, and Ninevah shall be overthrown," and then ceased. I believe no such thing, neither will the reading justify any such a conclusion.

Brethren, preach the Word, be instant in season, and out of season, you have nothing to fear in the doing of it. The more you preach the Gospel, the less mourners beoch there will be. The bench was originated in the absence of preaching the Gospel, and the faithful persevering preaching of it only will overthrow it. By way of illustration permit me to cite only one of many similar cases. I assisted the brethren in a church to preach the Gospel for eight or ten days. It was in the dead of winter, and intensely cold, the meeting commenced on Friday evening, on Sunday morning a young couple on their bridal visits came to meeting, perhaps to be seen as much as anything, but returned to the evening meeting. By this time they became so interested that they would not miss one meeting, and on Sunday following they with a number of others, had the ice, nine inches thick, cut and were baptized. Afterwards she said there had been a revival meeting near her father's some nine weeks, at which the excitement run very high, and many of her associates went to the mourner's bench for religion, and that several times she arose to go, but could not feel it to be right to do so; and when the preaching of the Gospel showed her what religion was, the mourner's bench vanished out of her mind like smoke in the air; and oh! she was so glad that she learned to know the truth.

Brethren, if you wish to overthrow the mourner's bench system, preach the Gospel. I am fully persuaded that if we would preach the Gospel day and night as the apostles did, wherever we could get hearers together, (and if it were in the market place) in our churches by ourselves when we had no help, and by others when present, before this generation had passed away, the mourner's bench would be one of the passed away and forgotten superstitions. Brethren, make the trial and see. The results following every effort of the Brethren of only one or two weeks daily preaching at one time and place, justifies the conclusions above given.

In the love of the truth.

D. P. SAYLER.

For the Pilgrim.

RELIGION.—ITS EFFECT.

To deny that the Apostles and primitive believers were actuated by the constraining love of Christ, in their endeavors to promote the interest of Christ's kingdom when they lived and walked in a consisteney so answerable to the pattern set before them by their divine master, would be unreasonable and absurd. And on the other hand to believe that all who are engaged at the present day in missionary and Bible societies and other associations designed to spread the Gospel on the earth, are also actuated by the same constraining principle, would be a sad mistake. Were it the case, true religion would prevail in a greater degree than it does. To judge of the increase of the blessed government of the prince of peace by the hundreds of thousands that are engaged in diffusing the outward knowledge of christianity is a very uncertain criterion, and were it not for that excellent rule of our Savior's "by their fruits ye shall know them," and by which we are enabled to ascertain the true state of mankind, we might be grossly deceived in believing that there is a great deal of religion now in the world. What real ground is there to indulge in the pleasing prospect that righteousness ere long will cover the earth, when professing christians in their various endeavors to bring about this event have associated so much pride and vanity as to be wholly strangers to the all important duties of self-denial and the cross. Oh, the infatuation and mistaken zeal of many! How much better would it be were they individually more conformed to the example of the blessed Savior, who in all that He did sought not the honors of men, but that honor which cometh from God only, and whose meat and drink it was to do the will of His Father in Heaven. In whatever our activity or zeal may determine, it is certain that nothing can give us a claim to the title of disciples, but putting on Christ and walking as He walked. And if the precepts of Christ have more possession of peoples hearts than their heads, and they were more disposed to manifest their christianity by their fruits than by their pompous and splendid undertakings, the face of society would wear a far more encouraging aspect. But the truth of the matter is, nearly all are given to covetousness in a greater or less degree from the prophet to the priest, and so down to the lowest order of the human family.

To be seen of men or procure gain for themselves is the ruling principle of the soul. Each one engaging in, or following after something that appears calculated to make them what their hearts would prompt them to be, Lords or great men. True religion is something more than living in accordance with certain doctrines and faith, and being active and zealous in their propagation. In this only consists the religion of too many at the present. They appear to have more thought about the heritage, or their own society, than what pertains to themselves, or the true kingdom of righteousness in the heart. Where ever this is the case, there is a want of that charity which only can reform and make men preachers of righteousness. To be true disciples of Christ as observed before, is to put on Christ, to do His will, and not our own, the effect of which will so change our natures as to reduce them from that of a lion and leopard to the disposition of the lamb. And why? Because in this association there is nothing that can hurt or destroy. Nothing that can do any injustice or wrong. This is the effect of the religion of Christ, in which the highest greatness consists in becoming little.

And yet it is to be feared that many forgetting the examples and holy precepts of Christ, conceive ideas of religious weight, and fail not to display it under a color of sanctimonious appearance, in which deceit they will fall short of the state of a little child, the only condition of entrance into the portal of eternal rest. The mixed state of society is indeed very alarming, and if men were only disposed to quit their idols, and practically do righteousness, then might Zion arise from the dust of the earth, and put on her beautiful garments and appear in the splendor of her excellence, and that power which is of God.

A PILGRIM.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

SATURDAY NIGHT FLOWERS.

FOR THE YOUNG READERS OF THE PILGRIM.

My dear young readers of the PILGRIM, I this afternoon met with a disappointment and the result is I have an opportunity to have another talk with you. It is an old saying that "it is an ill wind that blows no one good." Often our disappointments end in good, so we should also try and conclude that everything controled by Providence is for the best. But I will try and tell you about my disappointment and how I spent a part of my time, what my thoughts were, and other things that I trust may be interesting and instructive.

I set out to go to the other side of a large river that is near where I live, to attend meeting on the morrow. I had to travel down a very rugged road for several miles, high and perpendicular cliffs towered for hundreds of feet above me along side the winding road, down, down, I went walking and leading my horse, crossing a wild and rushing stream of water that came plunging and foaming over precipices, ten, twenty, or thirty feet high, I had to think the stream was like some persons that rush along headlong, making a great noise as they go, and soon reach the ocean of eternity, and are swallowed up in the great lake that burneth forever. By and by I came to the river which was high and rushing on like a mighty flood. Passing along for some distance up the river I came to the ferry. The ferryman who was on the opposite side give me to understand that the river was too high to ferry. Feeling disappointed and somewhat dispirited I turned my course for home. Near the road side I discovered quite a number of beautiful flowers—the first of the season, growing in the lonely forest, sheltered by the massive cliffs that towered above them. The sight of the flowers caused my spirits to revive, and I felt I was no longer lonely but in company with NATURES GOD. Only a little more than one half of the month of April gone and here Nature was coming out in her lovliest garb. I could not resist the temptation to stop and cull from her a handfull of her choicest jems, and while doing so my mind wandered upon many things, I thought how happy would those little ones feel, who are shut up in cities and towns, could they be just then here as free and happy as the deer I seen to-day roaming in the wood. Here they could fill their laps with the beautiful wild flowers, sit beneath the grand trees, see the great river flowing on, hear the birds singing in their native wood, and have their hearts filled to overflowing joy and gladness. Then I looked to the other side of the river and seen men going to and from the DRAM-SHOP that stood by the Rail Road line, all seemed bustle over there while where I was, nature's bowers were undisturbed. Oh! thought I, who can be so blind as to suffer themselves to be led into Satans' net and there drink of that poison that destroys both "body and soul in hell." They seek that haunt that stands just by the wayside that leads to ruin and there spend their money for the "fumes" of misery and woe, where here grow in the "lap" of Nature the perfume of flowers that fill the heart and soul with gladness and thankfulness. Then I thought of those that have gone over the river of death to the land of heavenly flowers and wondered if it may not be they can see us over on this side mingling with the busy world and drinking of the cup of sinful pleasure, and wonder why we will be so blind to our eternal interest, knowing we have it "written" there is a "home with many mansions" and a "happy land far far away." Oh! will you not all try to reach it. Then I thought these flowers here may be only a type or shadow in this world to remind us that there is a God who has power to create, and they are a faint representation of what He has for us in heaven of an unfading nature. Seeing beautiful flowers growing on large rocks on which had gathered an inch or more of loam, I thought if God in nature can thus prepare the once naked rock for a flower bed upon which beauty groweth, He surely can prepare the hard flinty heart of a sinner so that "good seed" may grow therein, and the soul be "clothed upon" with heavenly beauty. Yes, dear reader, make bare your bosom, free your soul from self, let the showers of Divine grace fall therein and it will be prepared for a glorious indwelling of the "beauty and excellence of Christ."

I then thought of those dear little ones that have gone to gather flowers in those fields where nothing ever fades. When our time here of gathering and "laying up" is over, I hope you all with me may go safely over to gather and "reap" with all those that have gone before. I also lay down and drank out of the pure and gushing spring on the mountain side; and there thought of the "water" that Christ said if ye drink of ye shall "never thirst." May we all drink at that fountain and be "filled."

Thus the eve was spent unto the time the shades of night closed upon another week and now the time of night is past when no doubt many a little one has said in prayer to God "Now I lay me down to sleep," and I would say before "I lay my garments by," may God bless you all dear young readers of the PILGRIM, and

> "Teach you how to watch and pray,
> And live rejoicing every day."

J. S. FLORY.

Pleasure and pain, though directly opposite, are yet so contrived by nature as to be constant companions; and it is a fact that the same motions and muscles of the face are employed both in laughing and crying.

We ought to believe that is best for us, which it pleases a wise, good and gracious God to give us, or which he permits to come upon us.

You may go to heaven without riches, prosperity or health; but you cannot go there without Christ, faith and holiness.

EDITORIAL.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

By special arrangement, on Saturday morning, we took leave of our office and little family, for the purpose of attending our District Conference to be held in the Lower Cumberland Church, near Mechanicsburg Pa.

Eld. Moses Miller with his brethren and sisters, thought it good to have a number of appointments in the vicinity over the Sabbath, prior to the District Conference, and to fill these, there were a number of special invitations sent to the brethren to come and help to bear the ark of the Lord. Brother Miller entertained some fears that the laborers would be insufficient for the work, but we were not far on our way until we felt assured that this would not be the case. By the time we reached Harrisburg, we had a pretty fair representation. The connection at this place being close, we had only time to get our tickets, and off we went to Mechanicsburg. This ride was short but pleasant. The road is complete, and the side scenes entertaing. The pretty and commodious farm buildings, by the way, presented a sight which bespoke homely enjoyments, providing willing hands and happy hearts arranged the tasteful surroundings. In our short life, we have learned a few things, and one of them is, that appearance is not always a true index to the place within. A happy and regenerated soul will find a Heaven in the most lonely cot, while the wicked and hardened sinner will turn a paradise into hell. But we are digressing, we have arrived at our stopping place where we are met by the brethren, and conducted to the house of our kind brother and sister Niswanger's, which seems to be headquarters until a division be made. As well as we can remember, there were appointments made for the following places:

Mechanicsburg, Shiremanstown, Hogestown, Shepherdstown, Bakers M. House, and Churchtown. Between these points, our force was divided, giving some four to each place. Our lot fell to Shiremanstown, in company with Wm. Howe, P. S. Myers, G. H. Swigart and Geo. Myers. Conveyances in abundance were awaiting those who were to leave town, so we got aboard with our brother Levi Howe, brother to Wm., and was soon introduced into his small but kind family, where we received such tokens of hospitality as made us feel quite at home. Brother Wm. Howe appeared to enjoy the associations of this place, being the land of his nativity, and no doubt, many were the reminescences of the past that crowded around him. We are not of those that believe that ignorance is bliss, but the innocency of youthhood participates in joys that stamp the soul with recollections that are a constant fountain of pleasure through our future life.

In the evening we made our way to the place of worship in Shiremanstown, where the Church of the Adventist was opened for our use. They have in this place, a fine and commodious church, and seem to be a people of much zeal for the cause of salvation. They hold, in common with us, the doctrine of Christ's speedy and personal coming, and seem to be patiently awaiting the blessed hour. The meetings of this place were well attended, and much interest manifested in the preaching of the Word. During our meetings in this place, we put up, and made a number of calls among the Adventists, and found them a zealous, kind and sociable people, and well read in the Scriptures, especially in that part of it which refers to the Second coming of Christ.

On Sabbath moring, after our last appointment in town, we were again taken to brother Howe's. The principle part of Monday was spent in calling on members and friends in Mechanicsburg. In this place the Brethren have a comfortable house of worship, and there are a number of members in town who seemed to much enjoy the association of kindred spirits and the blending of prayers around the common altar. We just now think of a dear old sister whose sands are nearly run. Our presence gave her so much joy that her good soul could scarcely contain it. Our time was short, but there was the burning altar, and she could not see us depart until our sacrifice was laid thereon. Freely and feelingly did we bow us in the sacred temple and implore a crumb of the bread of Life for the old sister's soul—the flowing of tears, the clasping of hands and we parted, perhaps never to see others more until we meet on the other shore.

In the evening we were conducted to the Mohler Meetinghouse where public worship was appointed. The services were introduced by D. M. Holsinger, followed by L. Furry, Grabill Myers, (German), J. R. Hanawalt, A. Miller, (German), and concluded by John Spanogle

Tuesday morning we again assembled at the same place for the opening of the Conference and the transaction of business to be presented.

After the usual opening exercises the following delegates reported:

Antietam	Jacob Price, D. F. Good.
Aughwick	J. Spanogle, J. B. Garver.
Buffalo Valley	Chas. Royer, John L. Beaver.
Back Creek	John Shank, Daniel Miller.
Clover Creek	J. W. Brumbaugh, D. M. Holsinger.
Codorus	Jacob Shambarger, Thomas Gray.
Duncansville	Brice Sell,
Dunnings Creek	J. S. Holsinger.
FallingSpr'ng	Jacob Stover.
James Creek	Geo. Brumbaugh, H. B. Brumbaugh.
Lewistown	Wm. Howe, Geo. Myers.
Lost Creek	Solomon Seiber, Benj. Wadman.
L. Cumberland	Moses Miller, Adam Beelman.
Marsh Creek	Joseph Sherfy, John Trostle.
Perry	C. Myers, Isaac Eby.
Ridge	Daniel Eckerman, D. M. Foglesanger.
Snake Spring	Jacob Steel.
Spring Run	J. R. Hanawalt, P. S. Myers.
U. Conawago	J. P. Lerew, A. Brown.
U Cumb'land	Jacob Hollinger, J. F. Stamy.
U. Codorus	A. Miller, Geo. Mummert.
Warriorsm'rk	Grabill Myers, Wm. H. Quinn.
Yellow Creek	L. Furry, D. Snowberger.

After which the following officers were elected:

Grabill Myers, Moderator.
D. M. Holsinger, Clerk.
Geo. Brumbaugh, Secretary.

As the business before the meeting was generally of a local nature we shall not burthen our columns with our deliberations. Those who are specially interested can have its whole proceedings by sending for the Minutes—price, postpaid, 10 cents.

The discussions were conducted in the spirit of christian moderation. Everything passed off smoothly and quietly, except an occasional thump of our good Moderator's crutch on the floor for the sake of order. On the whole, we had a pleasant and profitable meeting, and believe that all parted with the best of feelings.

On Thursday morning we again took the train "homeward bound," but on account of close connection at Harrisburg we were obliged to lay over some six hours. During this time we visited the Cemetery and spent an hour in the city of the dead—how quiet and how different from the busy and living city below! Yet daily they enter its gates and increase its number. We were informed that dor the month of April, sixty were placed within its walls. This was a little above the average fatality, but put it down to fifty, and we have six hundred for the year! How solemn to contemplate, if time continues, during the next five years 3,000 or more will be conveyed to this city. Thus we live and thus we die. The tear is shed, the crape is dropped, the dead is forgotten, and we continue to live as though nothing had happened.

We now took our leave of the city of the dead and returned to the city of the living.

After being pleasantly cared for and accommodated with a good dinner at the Bumgardner House, we again took the train and by evening arrived safely home where we found all well and awaiting our return. Adieu.

REMIMICENT.

The brethren of the Middle District of Pa., held their 9th Annual Conference within the Lower Cumberland Congregation, April 30th 1872, in the Mohler meeting house, a place familiar with many of the brethren throughout the whole Brothhood; being on the farm now owned by Solomon Mohler, and in sight of the buildings in which the A. M. was held in 1824, and also in 1835, then the property of brother Daniel Mohler. This congregation is one among the oldest of the State, or at least of this District, and although it has undergone many changes, and suffered some of the eruptions that have befallen many of the churches, yet it seems now to stand upon the permanent premises of the Gospel, and in the order of its forefathers.

Having recently been blessed with large accessions, it has become large and strong; having for its Elder, Bro. Moses Miller, who seems to be in every way equal to his position and charge. An air of Christian grace and spiritual virtue seems to prevail among its members, and on the whole, we have it to say, that we never enjoyed ourself better among brethren and sisters, than while attending this D. M., but in justice to all of our congregations, we believe that we would have about the same to say if we were to go among them, judging from the disposition, and spirit manifested in the several delegates. The meeting was a happy one, the deliberations pleasant, and the result we hope satisfactory to all. May God help His people to live in peace, and prepare them as a bride for the Lamb, when He shall come to take His bride from off the earth.

G. B.

Miscellaneous.

RUDOLPH B. REIGERT we do not know of any of Nead's Theology to be had in German. Of No. 47—1871 we have none.

JOHN T. ROW, The missing numbers are sent except 16 of which we have none.

ELD. JOHN MURRAY, In your letter you say: Find 25 cents to pay the remainder of Jesse Nicholson's subscription and 50 cents for tracts, but there was no money in the letter. Did you not forget to put it in?

The tracts are sent, also Nicholson's, please hand them to him.

HYMN BOOKS.—We are now supplied with Hymn Books and will fill all orders on hands. If any orders are not filled, we should be apprised of it at once, by sending a new order. Some time ago we received an order from George Mourer, but is now lost, please send again and we will fill it immediately.

D. P. Sayler's Anxious Bench Religion might seem to be unfavorable to the distribution of Eld. J. S. Flory's tracts, but this is certainly not the intention of the writer judging from his own declaration, not long since. In speaking of copying from our periodicals he says: There are articles written by our brethren that should not only be published in all of our periodicals, but should be published in tract form, by the thousands for distribution. If the Brethren ever penned anything worthy of general distribution, Flory's tract is the thing. Bro. Sayler is one among our most acceptable preachers and therfore we do not wish to have it understood that he intended to condemn a thing which he had not read as the commencing of his article will show.

Correspondence &c, crowded out for want of room. We wish our readers to keep us posted on all the events of interets transpiring in the different churches. It should be remembered that the PILGRIM is an enterprise for our mutual benefit, and therefore all should be interested in making it interesting by lending a helping hand in filling its pages with such matter as will be for our general good.

"Anxious Bench Religion Exnmined," are still going, going send and get 10, 50 or a 100 copies before they are all gone.

ONLY 90 CENTS! For the PILGRIM from A. M. to the end of the year, book paper, including report of A. M. and the Minutes. An extra number will be printed so that we can supply all new subscribers with back numbers to that time.

DIED.

ESHLEMAN—In the Cherry Grove Congregation, Carroll Co., Ill., April 18th 1872, Our beloved brother Andrew Eshleman, aged 52 years, 3 months and 25 days, leaving a sorrowing widow and 7 children to mourn their loss, but we hope their loss is his great gain.

Brother Eshleman was a deacon in the church, and beloved by all who knew him. Disease, lung fever, of which he suffered much for two weeks. Funeral services by the writer and others, from Amos 4 :12.

HENRY M. MARTIN.

FOX.—In the same Congregation, March 4th 1872, sister Emma, wife of brother Cyrus Fox, and daughter of brother Elias and sister Fannie Forney, aged 22 years and 29 days. Funeral occasion improved by elder Henry Martin and others, from Rev. 14 :13.

She leaves a sorrowing husband and one child to mourn their loss, which we hope is her great gain. Her husband had went to Nebraska a short time before to prepare a home, and she was shortly to follow him, but alas! she sickened and died, and her husband had not the privilege of seeing her buried, as he was where no telegram could reach him. May he prove faithful, and try to meet her in the climes of immortal glory.

[Visitor, pleasey.copy]

BOYD.—In the same Congregation April 2d '72, sister Sarah, wife of friend David Boyd, and daughter of brother George and sister Catharine Sword, aged 32 years, 11 months and 13 days. Funeral occasion improved by elder Michael Bollinger and others, from Rev. 14 :13, to a large concourse of people,

She leaves a sorrowing husband and six small children to mourn their loss, which we hope is her eternal gain.

[Vindicator please copy.]

SPROGLE.—Also April 26th '72, our beloved old sister Catharine Sprogle, wife of elder John Sprogle, who is now laboring under a disordered mind, aged 80 years, 2 months and 5 days. Funeral occasion improved by the brethren, from Hebrews 14 :13 to a very large concourse of relatives and friends.

It is useless to add that our old sister was universally known among the Brotherhood, as there are few places in the East or West where they have not been, but the last few years they were deprived of the privilege of visiting among the Brethren.

Our old sister bore all patiently, and it was always her prayer that she might be patient unto the end, as her husband is a great deal of trouble. She was indeed a great comfort to us all, as she always encouraged us on our way to Zion. She always endeavored to serve her Master, and her seat was never vacant when she could be with us in the sanctuary. Oh how we shall miss her, but we do not mourn as those who have no hope. She leaves a companion and four children to mourn their loss. MARY ESHLEMAN.

FLORA.—In the Black Water Church, Franklin Co., Va., Magdalene, wife of Stephen Flora, and daughter of brother Daniel Barnhart deceased, of Roanoak Co., Va. Funeral services by the brethren, from Thessalonians 2 :13-14, to a large and attentive congregation. The age of our sister was 24 years, 7 months and 13 days.

We sympathize with the companion of the deceased, this being his second wife, and only having the privilege to enjoy the pleasures of this life about one year with each. We hope that these bereavements will cause our friend to see the uncertainty of life, and the great necessity of preparing for death, as we have all reason to believe that his companions have fallen asleep in Jesus, and that God will bring them with him. May the Lord bless us all is our prayer. J. H. FLORA, BOWMAN.—Accident, Alleghany Co., Md., April 28th '72, Bro. David Bowman aged 62 years, 3 months, and 23 days. Funeral service by elder Jacob M Thomas and the writer, from John 5 :25.

He was a son of John and Elizebeth Bowman, his mother was a daughter of Jacob Beeghly, a minister of the Gospel in Somerset Co., Pa. He has been dead some 40 years. He has two sons that are in the ministry, Jacob and Benjamin Beeghly, who live in Iowa, Jacob in Pa.

JOSIAH BEEGHLY.

SHERFY.—In the Limestone Church, Washington Co., Tenn., March 12th '72, Bro. Joseph Sherfy, aged 51 years. He was a faithful member 30 years, and a deacon 8 years. Funeral services by John Bashoar and the writer from Heb., 9 :27.

JOHN BRUBAKER.

DELION.—In the Union Church District, Marshall Co., Ind., May the 1st, 1872, Henry Elmer, son of Elmer M. and sister Hettie Delion, aged two years, 5 months and 9 days. Funeral services by Adam Appleman and the writer, from James 4 14.

The father of the deceased son, died two years and two months before the son, leaving the young widowed sister to mourn the loss of both husband and child.

(Lines composed by Hannah Appleman.)

Farewell my little Elmer,
Thou hast from sorrow gone;
And left a widowed mother
Thy loss to mourn alone.

I miss thee O, sweet Elmer,
But my loss is your great gain;
For this world is naught but trouble,
Temptation, toil and pain.

We will strive to meet thee,
When our Father's will is done;
And live with thee forever,
Round God's eternal Throne.

JOHN KNISLEY.

[Visitor, please copy.]

MOATS.—In the Manor Church, Md., on Sunday evening April 28th, very suddenly, brother Elias Moats, aged 61 years and 2 days. Funeral discourse by elder David Long, to a large congregation from 2 Timothy, 4 :6-7-8.

He leaves a widow, a sister, and a number of children, all grown, to mourn their loss. Bro. Moats was afflicted with disease of the heart, and died on his chair, while in conversation with his wife and others. Oh, how sudden death comes.

JACOB REICHARD.

Announcements.

Please announce that the brethren in Falling Spring Church, will hold, the Lord willing, their Love Feast at Hades meeting house on the 14th day of May next. A cordial invitation to all. JOHN ZUCK.

Please announce that we intend to have our Lovefeast on the 31st day of May next in the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin co., Pa., commencing at one o'clock p. m. Preaching next day in the forenoon. An invitation is given to all that have a desire to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

For the satisfaction of those wishing to come, we would say that our meeting house is about ¼ mile from the Sunburry & Lewstown R. R., and the morning train leaves Lewistown at 6:50 a. m. The other train leaves Lewistown at 12:20, p. m. Maitland is our station about five miles from Lewistown. JACOB MOHLER.

Brother Brumbaugh, please announce through the PILGRIM, the Lord willing, the Lost Creek church, Juniata county, Pa., intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 3rd and 4th of June, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m. A hearty invitation is extended to all who may please to favor us with a visit.

MICHAEL BESHOR.

[Companion and Visitor please copy.]

Please announce that we purpose holding our Lovefeast at Spring Run, near McVeytown station, Mifflin county, Pa., on the 29th and 30th days of May, 1872. A hearty invitation is extended to ministers and members.

JOSEPH R. HANAWALT.

The following notices were handed to us for publication with a request that we give a general invitation to all and a special one to ministering brethren.

Yellow Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., June 13th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Snake Spring Valley, Bedford Co., Pa., June 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Aughwick, Huntingdon county, Pa., 27th, 28th of May, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., 3d and 4th of June.

Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., 5th and 6th of June.

Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., June the 11th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Waterloo Congregation, *B*lack Hawk Co., Iowa, June 15, 16, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m.

Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., June 14th commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. 5½ miles southwest of Plymouth. Those coming on the Mail Train will stop off at the Summit, three miles west of Plymouth.

Fawn River Congregation, Lagrange Co., Ind., June 15, 16, commencing at 10 o clock a. m. Six miles east of Lima at the house of bro. Eli Horner.

Urbana Ill., at the house of bro. George Dillings, June 22, 23. *B*rethren coming from the North or South, on the Ill. Central railroad, will stop off either at Thomasboro, or Champaign City. Those coming from East or West, on the Indianapolis and *B*loomington railroad, will stop off at Mayview.

RAILROAD NOTICE.

You may for the benefit of the brethren say to them that I have made half-fare arrangements for those going to our Annual Meeting, on the Atlantic and Great Western R. R., known, also, as the "Broad Guage" road

*B*rethren can go this road at any time, Let them buy the regular full fare ticket, going, asking no questions, and at the meeting they will apply to me for a certificate which will return them free at any time previous to the 25th of June.

This road crosses the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago road at Mansfield, where you will change cars and run east about forty-five miles to Smithsville, which is within one mile of the place of the meeting. The privilege is not confined to members.

Some of the principal points on this road are Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield, Urbana, Marion, Galion, Mansfield, Ashland, Akron, Warren, &c.

SAMUEL KINSEY,
Dayton, Ohio.

Dear Brother: As there are many of our brethren who want to know whether we are not to have excursion rates to our A. M. over the Penn'a C., the P. Ft. W. & Chicago, and Pan Handle Railroads this spring, you may say, if it is not asking too much, through the PILGRIM, that I have done what I could but have obtained nothing. C. CUSTER.

MONEY LIST.

S. C. Bashor,	$1.50
B. Cassidy,	65
A. B. Holl,	.50
W. D. Hartman,	2.00
E. J. Beeghly,	5.00
J. F. Weaver,	1.35
J. W. Blanch,	3.72
Jacob Amsburger,	10.80
Eliza Brandt,	1.00
Noah Longenecker,	.50
Isaac W. Shriver,	3.50
Isaac B. Trostle,	2.50
Geo. Brumbaugh,	1.25
P. P. Brumbaugh,	.50
Kate Eshleman,	5.00
Elias G. Beechly,	1.25
Henry Lawver,	1.25
Peter Fleck,	1.25
Jacob Reichard,	1.25
John Knisley,	.60
Abraham Summy,	1.25

GENERL INTELLIGENCE.

REBUILDING CHICAGO.

The Chicago Landourner says: The burnt district now presents a scene the world will probably never again witness. Five square miles of city blocks rising brick by brick, stone by stone, as if by some unseen, mighty creative power. The seared ruins are growing less visible every day, for they are unsightly, and Chicago does not care to show them. Come quickly, O stranger, or only the legend of the great conflagration will remain. Are the heroes of history alone to enjoy the immortality of fame? There are a thousand men in Chicago to-day who, seven months ago, saw their cherished hopes disappear in flames, saw their very birthright, as it were, torn from them. They did not whine. They did not invoke the aid of the gods. They rolled up their sleeves and went at it, as we have it in our good Anglo Saxon. Chicago made no faces at fate. Her men are heroes, beside whom the famous characters of history are tame.

Seven months from the fire, and our docks are crowded with shipping, our granaries are full to overflowing, our merchants are, a large number of them, located in new and commodious buildings, others are in temporary quarters, but well located for trade. And they are doing business. More goods are being sold in Chicago this spring than ever before.

The prospects are bright, even brilliant. Two years from date the census will give us half a million of inhabitants. If you do not believe it, go to the depot on the arrival of any train, and see the new comers, who have determined to cast their lot here and grow up with the new city. They are men and women of enterprise, and will succeed."

BRIGHAM YOUNG ON THE RAMPAGE.

Salt Lake City, April 18.—The Mormon Conference met to-day. In the morning and afternoon about 8,000 persons, including a large number of Gentiles were present. Brigham Young discoursed at length. He thanked God for being permitted to be with his people again, and hoped the time would come when he might have an opportunity, before a court of justice, to prove the falsity of the charges against him. He defied the people of the world to show any stigma against his moral character.

He was glad that neither he nor his brethren had the power of God, 'till they had wisdom to use it, or they might be led to destroy all their enemies. He should demand from those who had been prosecuting them all the papers connected with the cases, that they might know positively who their persecutors were. He praised the deputy marshall who had him in charge, denounced the lawyers, scolded the saints who had not paid their tithes promptly, and finally, with his blessing, closed the conference here until next October.

The Famine in Persia.—Advices from Persia state that the famine in that country is increasing. In Teheran, the capital city, the destitution is becoming widespread; and it is feared that with the approach of summer, the disease and epidemic, which partially abated during the winter months, may again appear. The extremities to which the inhabitants are reduced in their efforts to obtain food are dreadful, the commonest herbs and roots being frequently used to satisfy the cravings of hunger. Numbers perish daily from want and exhaustion. From all parts of Persia a similar condition of affairs is reported. Many of the towns and villages have almost suffered depopulation by the protracted famine.

New Invention.—An experienced railroad conductor at the West has invented a car that opens at the top when it tips over, and thus affords an escape for all passengers. Which ever side lands uppermost immediately opens itself wide, and the dismayed passengers are expected to climb out. It meets with great favor among all travelers.—Exchange.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook, being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. Illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular: or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding. $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

New Hymn Books, English.

Turkey Morocco

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

Plain Arabesque.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Plain Sheep.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	.50
Per Dozen,		5 50

TRACTS.

"ANNXIGUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!

RENNER'S

HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, Dr. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 23, tf. Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

Bro. Renner, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country, A. Hutchison, Oak Hill, Va.

Bro. Renner:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. Wm. H. Baily, Raleigh, Va.

Bro. Renner:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic. I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was, my neighbors are surprised at my healthy appearance. D. S. Stayer, New Enterprise, Pa.

Dr. Renner:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. Wm. H. Ganes, Cool Springs, S. C.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

Huntingdon & Broad Top Rail Road

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871 Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex.	Mail	Stations.	Down Trains. Ex.	Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Lamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.

Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.] $12.50.
Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Firkin Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MAY 21, 1872. NO. 21.

POETICAL.

SOONER OR LATER.

Sooner or later the storms shall beat
Over my slumber, from head to feet;
Sooner or later the winds shall rave
In the long grass above my grave.

I shall not heed them where I lie,
Nothing their sound shall signify,
Nothing the headstones fret of rain,
Nothing to me the dark day's pain.

Sooner or later the sun shall shine
With tender warmth on that mound of mine,
Sooner or later, in summer air,
Clover and violet blossom there.

I shall not feel in that deep-laid rest,
The sheeted light fall o'er my breast,
Nor ever note in those hidden hours,
The wind-blown breath of tossing flowers.

Sooner or later the stainless snows
Shall add their hush to my mute repose;
Sooner or later shall slant and shift,
And heap my bed with their dazzling drift.

Chill though that frozen pall shall seem,
Its touch no colder can make the dream
That recks not the sweet and sacred dread
Shrouding the city of the dead.

Sooner or later the bee shall come
And fill the noon with his golden hum;
Sooner or later on half paused wing
The blue-bird's warble about me ring.

Ring and chirrup and whistle with glee,
Nothing his music means to me,
None of these beautiful things shall know
How soundly their lover sleeps below.

Sooner or later, far out in the night,
The stars shall over me wing their flight;
Sooner or later my darkling dews
Catch the white spark in their silent ooze.

Never a ray shall part the gloom
That wraps me round in the kindly tomb;
Peace shall be perfect for lips and brow
Sooner or later, Oh, why not now.

On the Death of Our Savior.

The tongue, as touched by Seraphs fire,
Seems to strike some golden lyre,
Makes the heavenly music sound,
Wakes the holy anthem round.

Earth has no place that souls can dwell,
No lovely nook, or shady dell
Can charm the spirit half so well
As the thought, we're freed from hell.

The sun itself refused to shine,
When was wrought, that act divine.
The temples veil was wrought in twain,
When we did this pardon gain.

Nature was made in sorrow to quake,
Solid rocks in mountains break,
'Till the Savior "'Tis finished" spake,
Lo! then the chains of bondage.

Behold his hands, his feet, his side,
Do his grief in blood betide,
While wicked men mock and deride,
Weeping saints must stand aside.

In David, opened wide the fount,
On the brow of Caly'rys mount,
And the Jews, did it honor count,
To slay the Savior on that mount.

"Confine him to the doleful tomb,
Set the seal, and fix his doom,"
Wicked, confounded, blinded men,
Christ can break those chains again.

S.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

For the Pilgrim.

A TRUE ORATOR.

The first and most important is, "Be sure you understand what you read, and endeavor to express the sentiments of the author as you would express the same if they were your own, and you were talking." No one can read well who does not fully adhere to this principle. In the second place, those who would excel in reading should cultivate every manly and noble virtue; for no one can fully express noble sentiments unless he feels them. "A true orator," (and we may add, a correct and effective reader) "should be a person of generous sentiments, of warm feelings, and of a mind tuned toward the admiration of all those great and high objects which mankind are naturally forced to admire. Joined with the manly virtues, he should at the same time possess strong and tender sensibilities to all the injuries, distresses and sorrows of his fellow-creatures; a heart that can readily enter into the circumstances of others, and make their case his own." Pulpit. "The dignity and sanctity of the place, and the importance of the subject, require the preacher to exert the utmost power of his views, to produce a pronunciation that is perfectly distinct and harmonious, and that he observe a deportment and action which is expressive and graceful. He should take particular care to avoid a monotony; his voice should rise from the beginning, as it were by degrees, and its greatest strength should be exerted in the application. Each inflexion of the voice should be adapted to the phrase and to the meaning of the words and each remarkable expression should have its peculiar inflexion. The dogmatic requires a plain uniform tone of voice only, and the menaces of God's word demand a greater force than its promises and rewards, but the latter should not be pronounced in the soft tone of a flute, nor the former with the loud sound of a trumpet. The voice should still retain its natural tone in all its various inflexions. Happy is that preacher who has a voice that is at once strong, flexible, and harmonious. An air of complacency and benevolence, as well as devotion, should be constantly visible in the countenance of the preacher, but every appearance of affectation must be carefully avoided; for nothing is so disgustful to an audience as even the semblance of dissimulation. An air of affected devotion, infallibly destroys efficacy of all that the preacher can say, however just and important it may be. On the other hand, he must avoid every appearance of mirth or raillery, or of that cold unfeeling manner which is so apt to freeze the heart of his hearers. The body should in general be erect, and in a natural and easy attitude. The perpetual movement or contortion of the body has a ridiculous effect in the pulpit, and makes the figure of a preacher and a harlequin too similar. On the other hand, he ought not to remain constantly upright and motionless like a speaking statue. The motions of the hand give a strong expression to a discourse, but they should be decent, grave, noble, and expressive. The preacher who is incessantly in action, who is perpetually clasping his hands, or who menaces with a clenched fist, or counts his arguments on his fingers, will only excite mirth among his auditory. In a word, declamation is an art that sacred order should study with assiduity.

JOHN NICHOLSON.

THE USE OF THE TONGUE.

God-fearing men and women are generally suspicious and careful in using the organs or instruments which God gave them for the purpose of expressing to one another the emotions of the heart, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and "The heart of man is deceitful and desperately wicked." Hence the necessity of putting a bridle upon the tongue to guide it into truth, instead of permitting it to run unrestrained in every direction. The chief end of man is truly said to be "to glorify God," to glorify "Him in our bodies and in our spirits." The tongue is one of the many members which comprise the whole body, consequently its only use is to glorify God,—the purpose for which it was created in the beginning. Every other application of it setteth on fire the course of nature,—"on fire of hell" by communicating the destructive elements of sin to the world. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" The city of Chicago was a great matter, a little fire kindled it. The rapidity with which the flames spread from house to house—the great amount of material destroyed, and the great changes and affects produced upon the inhabitants of Chicago, is a great matter, kindled by a little fire, and so the tongue is a little fire kindling a great matter. Although the tongue is naturalty such an unruly member, it is nevertheless the duty of every person to guide it into wholesome paths. And how long must we watch it and be troubled with it? Why just as long as we stay upon the earth. As long as we associate with persons who are more or less addicted to the habit of speaking evil of their neighbors,—as long as there is any danger of bearing false witness against our neighbors, many persons are continually exposed to the danger of falling into this error. It is not only when called up before a magistrate to give testimony, that men are tempted to bear false witness against one another, but this crime prevails more generally at home in the family circle, or when companies of persons happen by chance or otherwise to come together, and begin to speak of others who are not just directly within hearing distance, under such circumstances an excellent way to determine the propriety of what is said, is simply to judge properly whether we speak evil of any one. It is quite proper to speak of the faults or crimes which mankind are subject to commit, but to speak evil or to bear false witness against him or any man, is to bring accusations against him in his absence which we would be unwilling to do in his presence. This is a prevailing, cowardly, mischievious use of the tongue. Whenever we find that we have made such an application of the little unruly member, (and if we examine thoroughly we will find that we have done so,) we should repent; when this is thoroughly done, the habit will be entirely abandoned. The temptation to speak evil of our enemies is sometimes very great, and hard to overcome, but there is a way to escape, and happy is he that overcomes. Angels minister unto him every time he gains the victory over an evil spirit. "Curse not the king in thy chamber for that which hath wings shall tell the matter."

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

LETTER FROM DR. MACLAY.

The following letter of Dr. Maclay's was written for the Christian Advocate and as we think it interesting we copy it:

Jerusalem has been described so often and so well that perhaps nothing new can be written on the subject. And yet to every devout Christian a visit to this sacred city is a new inspiration—he feels as he never felt before. No other city he has seen has ever stirred his soul with such profound, such grand emotions; but when he analyzes his feelings he finds that the objects, scenes, and thoughts which so powerfully impress him have already been the themes of innumerable learned and graceful writers. My first distinct impressions concerning the sacred city were derived from the admirable work on the subject written many years ago by Rev. Dr. Durbin; and to this day, notwithstanding the many learned books that have been published on this fruitful topic, I find that my first impressions are still the most vivid and satisfactory.

My visit to Jerusalem will cover only three entire days, and possibly it may be of service to some other pilgrim to know just how I employed my time. Early on the first morning after my arrival, I engaged a guide at five shillings ($1 25) a day to take me through the city and its immediate vicinity. The first thing I proposed to do was to walk entirely round the city, outside the wall, so as to get a correct general idea of the place. We started from my lodgings at the Prussian Hospice, about 8 o'clock A. M., walked along the Via Dolorosa, passed out by St. Stephen's Gate on the eastern side of the city, and then, turning to the right, commenced the circuit of the walls. At our feet lies the valley of Jehoshaphat; on the opposite side and in full view rises the Mount of Olives. A well-worn path runs entirely round the city, so that we pass along quite easy, and as fast as we desire. Looking down into the valley you see the channel of the brook Kidron, the tomb of Mary, and the most interesting of all, Gethsemane. On the slope of Olivet facing the city, you notice an immense number of flat, oblong stones lying on the ground in all directions; they mark the graves of the Jews, whose dust sleeps here in the the hope of a coming Messiah. Close on our right we observe in the wall of the city what is supposed to be a portion of the ancient wall of Jerusalem, and a little farther on we pass what is called the "Golden Gate," now closed up with stone masonry, the gateway formerly communicated with the temple area. Continuing our walk, we see in the valley on our left the tombs of Absalom, St. James, and Zacariah. A little farther on are the village and Pool of Siloam, and near them is the Mount of Offense. Turning the southern angle of the wall, we pass on our right the Tyropean and the Dung Gate, while on our left we have Mount Ophel and Joab's Well. Zion's Gate is near the south-west angle of the city wall, and just outside of it is David's tomb. The valley of Hinnom is here some distance from the city; but as you proceed along the western face of the wall you find close on your left the valley of Gihon, which comes down from the northward and unites with the valley of Hinnom southwest of the city. Passing the Jaffa Gate you advance a short distance, and then, turning the northwest angle of the wall, you come to the Damascus Gate, a little beyond which you see what is called Herod's Gate, now walled up. Reaching the northeast angle of the wall, you find yourself again on the brow of the valley of Jehoshaphat; and after walking for a few minutes toward the south you return to St. Stephen's Gate, thus completing the circuit of the wall. If a person walks briskly, and without stopping, he can go entirely round the city within an hour. The wall is substantially built, and is kept in excellent condition. The present population of the city is said to be 14,000; its elevation above the sea 2,500 feet. The mountains around Jerusalem are very little higher than the city; Mount Olivet attains the greatest elevation, and that is only 220 feet above it. The others, with but little vegetation or verdure upon them, sweep away to the horizon in broad or more angular undulations, and form a vast tableau, in the center of which stands Jerusalem—beautiful Jerusalem.

At 2 P. M. we started for a walk to Mt. Olivet and Bethany. Descending from St. Stephen's gate into the valley of Jehoshaphat, we saw the spot where, it is said, St. Stephen was stoned. We cross a stone bridge spanning the dry channel of the brook Kedron, look for a few minutes at the tomb of Mary, and some other objects of interest in that vicinity, and then with reverent feelings approach Gethsemane. We enter on the east side by a gateway four feet high and two feet wide. My first impressions were not entirely pleasant or assuring. Portions of the ground had been planted with shrubbery and flowers, each plant being surrounded by a low wooden railing; other portions were littered over with mortar, stones, and the tools of the masons who were at work on the place. But here are the old olive trees, now seven in number; they, at least, have not been tampered with by officious priest, or gardner, or mason. Some of them may have witnessed the untold, the inconceivable agony of the blessed Savior. I selected a quiet corner, and sitting down on a projecting root of one of the trees, read over the story of his sorrow and arrest. I felt as I had never felt before. The place was sacred to me; it was indeed Gethsemane. I plucked a few mementoes of the place, dearer to me now than ever before, and quietly retired.

We now began to ascend Mt. Olivet. It is entirely probable that our path is the one so often trodden by our Lord and his disciples. I felt it to be an inexpressibly precious privilege to walk over the ground hallowed by his footsteps. The summit of Olivet is now occupied by an Arab village, near which stands the Church of the Ascension, the Church of "Padre Noster," and some other buildings. Olive trees are still a prominent feature of the mount. Close by the Church of the Ascension is a tower, from the summit of which I obtained a fine view, westward, of Jerusalem, and eastward, of the Dead Sea, the mountains of Moab, and a portion of the Jordan. The Russians are now building a church on one of the summits of Olivet, a short distance from the Church of the Ascension. We walk on to Bethany by the path often pressed by the feet of Jesus. There is no room for skepticism on this point. These hills change not. We passed on in silence. I had no desire to ask questions; everything seemed plain, even familiar, to me. A home-like feeling came over me; and as we approached the little village, I could scarcely assure myself that I was not entering one of the many villages I have visited during my travels as a missionary in China. We descended with lighted candles to see the tomb of Lazarus. It was empty, of course; Lazarus is not there. We then looked into the house where our Lord so often mingled in the society of Lazarus, and his sisters Martha and Mary. It is a plain building, having only one apartment, some twelve or fourteen feet square. In the center stands an oblong wooden table, and beside it are placed benches, as if for a meal. The place reminded me of many Chinese houses I have spent days and nights in, and I felt rebuked when I remembered that on some of those occasions I had been disposed to complain of my accommodations.

The Sun was sinking low as we descended Olivet and entered the city. Just inside St. Stephen's Gate we saw the pool of Bethesda, and close to it the Church of St. Anna. A little farther on we came to what was formerly Pilate's palace; now it is occupied by a Turkish musical band as a practicing gallery. A few steps from it is the Church of Ecce Homo. Along the street we are now in it is supposed our Savior passed bearing His cross. At a turn in the street a few hundred feet farther on, is a place where it is said He fainted beneath the cross. I could not pass such places without emotion; and in spite of historic criticism and doubts, I felt it a privilege, a luxury, to believe—to weep.

Returning to my room, I seated myself at the open window, which commanded a full view of Olivet, and spent the closing moments of the day in delightful meditation. It was a new experience for me; it will in all probability never be repeated until I am permitted (as I humbly hope) to see the King in His beauty, and be forever with the Lord. Thus closed my first day in Jerusalem—the happiest of all the days of my previous life. From the window where I sit, my eye now looks on the path by which our Lord ascended and descended Olivet, on the scenes familiar to His eye, and at the spot on the summit of the Mount from which He ascended to Heaven. A sacred atmosphere still lingers round the place. Will He not come again? Even so, come, Lord Jesus!

Yours very truly,

R. S. MACLAY.

Jerusalem, March 13, 1872.

IMPORTUNITY.

"Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near."—Isaiah 55:6.

When thinking of the many who have given evidence of deep conviction and Godly sorrow, and yet have never been willing to embrace the truth, but are rather losing ground, the above quotation often is presented to the mind. "Many are called but few are chosen," so we conclude that all of rational minds are called, none excepted. "The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men," not just to some, but all, but each one has the privilege of rejecting or accepting the offered mercy. And O, how many, yes very many, who will not heed the call. All that are called are wanted. The Lord calls none unless He wants them, and He wants all whom He calls. They are not too young when He calls nor are they too old. But when the Lord calls, seek ye Him, then is when He may be found. Every good thought comes from the Lord. Oh! sinner, think of this, He is doing so much for you, He helps us to think of Him to speak of Him; He will help us to pray to Him, and He will help us to do His whole will.

I would say call upon Him while He is near, for He loves you, and pities you, and He will pity you you fear Him, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him." Oh, then flee to Jesus. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him, and unto our God for He will abundantly pardon" The Lord will help you to do all this, but He requires you to forsake your evil ways and thoughts, and accept His way. He says"I am the way, the truth and the life." The way to seek the Lord is to obey Him. "It is finished," the plan of salvation is sealed. We have it here on record; it is through that word that you must seek if you would find. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest, take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Then come to Jesus, learn of Him meekness and holiness of heart, so much so as to observe all His commandments. I would again say, come to Jesus, He is calling you, He wants you, He may not always be near.

H. BEELMAN.

Siddonsburg, Pa

For the Pilgrim.

HOME.

How sweet does the word home sound to the weary traveler when he is wearied and worn with journeying from place to place. Ah yes, he feels happy when he has gained his own dear home and can meet with loved ones whom he has not seen for some time. But should he while journeying get on a strange road and get lost, how glad would he be to meet a guide to point out to him the way which would lead to his own dear home. We are all on a journey to another world. We hope at last to reach a home in heaven. But there is but one way to that happy home, and unless we find that one way, we are lost and will surely perish. We have a guide that points out the right way. It is the Bible, that holy word of God and if we follow that guide we will gain a home, a happy home in the mansions above. But we too often wander far off into forbidden paths of sin and folly and thus grieve the Savior while millions travel the broad road in open rebellion against their creator. I often wonder how it is that they can be so careless and indifferent ot their poor needy souls, that divine and immortal part of their being. O my friends, whoever you may be ,orwhatever station of life you may fill,whether high or low, rich or poor, O, listen to the word of God. He says 'come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Yes, He will give rest to your poor needy souls. He has prepared a home for you in the mansions above. Why do you object to that home? Why do you refuse to follow that guide? If you were traveling through this world without a home, and some friend would offer you a beautiful home, would you not accept it? Certainly you would. In this world we have but few enjoyments, but many sorrows, trials and temptations. But the Savior offers us a home high up in the realms of glory, a beautiful home which exceeds any home that can be found in this world of trouble and sorrow, a home that can be gained without money and without price. A home in which we will be happy for ever and ever. Oh, then let us accept of that home before it is for ever too late. I oftimes think how could we endure to live were it not for the hope that when this lifes work is done, there is a crown of glory laid up for the faithful and a bright and happy home in the heavens above,

Where all our toils are o'er.
Our suffering and our pain;
Who meet on that eternal shore,
Shall never part again.

MARY M. UMBAUGH.

Collamer, Ind.

"MEN AND BRETHREN WHAT SHALL WE DO?" Acts 2: 37.

The querists were guilty of crucifying Christ. So is every one in this present generation that will not come into Christ's Kingdom and suffer Him to reign over them. Oh, dear sinner, you who are constantly striving against God, and are calling for Cesar to be your king, throw down your weapons and say, "Lord what shall we do." Obedience to the terms or conditi ons of salvation, and faith in the atoning blood of Christ, is a cure for sin, and is also a preventative of sin, Christ said the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand, repent and believe the Gospel. Repentance, Faith and Baptism are conditions upon which Christ will apply His atoning blood for the remission of sins, justification and the gift of the Holy Ghost. Those that "are baptized into Christ have put on Christ." And again, "There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ," their sins are all pardoned, they are justified, born of water and the spirit; they are in the sheepfold, and Christ is the Shepherd. They can then sing,

"The Lord my Shepherd is,
I shall be well supplied;
Since he is mine, and I am his,
What ern I want beside?"

Now brethren and sisters, you are happy under the protection of the great Shepherd. Lambs of the flock, rejoice in the Lord; abide in the doctrine and you will have the approval of both the Father and Son. Walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit, seeing you have covenanted with Christ to renounce the sinful practices of the world. Then follow after the Spirit, the fruits of which is love, joy, peace, long-sufferiog, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance, faith, against such there is no law. Peter says, add to your faith virtue, knowledge &c. Do not forget that you were purged from your old sins. Purify your souls by obeying the truth. Christ is the light of the world by command and example, and if we walk in the light, as He is the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin.

DANIEL LONGENECKER.

WORK ON.—Work on, fellow workers in Christ. Your names may not be blazoned abroad among the mighty and honorable, as the world that them. The time cometh when your Lord and Master, your Father who seeth in secret, will reward you openly. To you, who, in your humility, may not then be expecting or hoping such hearty welcome and reward, he will say: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." Will you stand back in amazement at such an unexpected, such a wonderful welcome? Will you say: "Lord when have we done this? It is true, we gladly would have run to thy relief, had we known thy need. But we did not live on the earth when thou didst tabernacle there." And the King shall say those words, your assurance of eternal bliss, "Inasmuch as ye have done it it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." What a hope is this! What a reward, for the now unknown, obscure toilers in this work!

GENTLENESS.—Gentleness is love in society; it is love holding internal course with those around it. It is that cordiality of aspect, and that soul of speech, which assure us that kind and earnest hearts may still be met with here below. It is that influence, which, like the scented flame of an alabaster lamp, fills many a home with light and warmth and fragrance altogether. It is the carpet, soft and deep, which, whilst it diffuses a look of ample comfort, deadens many a creaking sound. It is the curtain, which from many a beloved form wards off at once the Summer's glow and the Winter's wind. It is the pillow, on which sickness lays its head, and forgets half its misery, and to which death comes in a balmier dream. It is considerateness. It is tenderness of feeling. It is warmth of affection. It is promptitude of sympathy. It is love in all its depth, and all its delicacy. It is everything included in that matchless grace, the gentlenes of Christ.

TRIALS.—Grace must be tried; yea, every grace; and nothing tries the grace of a new born heir more than weaning him from the breast. Unbelief within, oppositions without, and the withdrawings of the King's presence, try faith. Deep poverty tries patience, and abounding plenty tries temperance. Cruel workings, reproaches, and insults try meekness; abounding errors, and damnable heresies will try the root of the matter; wealth will try charity; pleasure, beautiful snares, and creature comforts, will try the sincerity of love; feigned hypocrits, half-hearted professors, human applause, and clouds of self-seeking, men-pleasing preachers, will try faithfulness; while every besetting sin that strive for mastery will try the loyality of the heart. The word of the Lord tried Joseph, and the same incarnate word will try every heir of promise. But, when the King tries them in the fire, he sits by as a Refiner.—Huntington.

GETTING RID OF BAD HABITS.—I once heard a minister say: "Suppose some cold morning you should go into a neighbor's house, and find him busy at work on his windows, scratching away, and should ask what he was up to, and he should reply, 'Why, I am trying to remove the frost; but as fast as I get it off one square it comes on another." Would you not say, "Why, man, let your windows alone, and kindle your fire, and the frost will soon be gone." And have you not seen people who try to break off their bad habits one after another without avail? Well, they are like the man who tried to scratch the frost from his windows. Let the fire of love to God and man, kindled at the altar of prayer, burn in their heart and the bad habits will soon melt away."

WAITING FOR THE EVENING TRAIN.—The following beautiful sketch was written by the late Thurlow Weed Brown, for the Wisconsin Chief, in 1859.

The speaker was the oldest of the crowd of people, moving restlessly about the depot. His form was bowed with years and hard toil; his hair was white and his hand tremulous. There was that in his countenance and manner which always wins confidence and respect, and brings up a pleasant dream of a substantial farm house, a worthy family, and a life teaching the principles of industry, integrity and honor.

And the old man will not wait long; for the train is sweeping in on the down-grade. The hours wear away. The Sun is going down, and the shadows are already thickening over the track beyond. And there is but one change on the route—that by the deep river which rolls between this and the other shore.

More than twenty years ago he received a through-ticket, over the straight and narrow way, whose terminus is in the Eternal City. Death is the mighty engine, and for thousands of years it has swept this down grade, hourly with loaded trains. It stops at every station.

We are all waiting for the train. There are the morning and the noon trains; those filled with the children, with the pleasure seeking, and the sorrow-stricken. We know not the time when due, but with noiseless speed they are coming. "All aboard!" has a startling thrill, and the gentle good-night is spoken not again; for no passenger returneth.

Selected by D. Neoley.

THE CONSTRAINING LOVE OF CHRIST

BY GERHARD TERSTEEGEN.

Christ loves us and loves us voluntarily, with a love surpassing the most compassionate, attentive and unwearied affection of a mother, when an infant is sick or hurts itself, and lies weeping and in pain before its mother's eyes. Instead of hating it on account of its pitiable state, she regards the poor babe with heartfelt compassion, and seeks in every possible manner to relieve and comfort it. Christ has similar love towards us fallen and sinful children, especially when we penitently feel and bewail our sins, he then regards us with feelings of the most tender compassion. Poor, penitent soul, thou probably dost not believe that Christ loves thee thus, and looks upon thee in such a manner. Thou thinkest thou art altogether too filthy and abominable, and that, having wilfully plunged thyself into all this misery, He pays no more attention to thee. Hear, therefore, what He says on this subject in Ezekiel 16: 6. "I saw thee lying in thy blood," and as certainly as he sees thee so certainly will He also say to thee when his hoor is come, "thou shalt live." Yea, I say unto thee, thou shalt live. Let us only look unto Him by faith, even as children that are sick are wont to look up with weeping eyes to their mother. A penitent and distressed individual often finds it impossible to believe that his weeping and lamenting are heard and answered. Be assured, my friend, the Lord hears when Ephraim complains, and says, "Is not Ephraim my dear son, is he not a pleasant child." Jer. 31: 20. If this cannot be called the expression of the most compassionate maternal affection, I know of none. We should not dare to ascribe to God such tender love, if the Lord himself had not done so. Ah, ye penitent souls, could we believe it, could we see it, our hearts would likewise melt with feelings of reciprocal filial affection.

Christ loves us, and that voluntarily, with more than the most assiduous maternal love. It is from its mother that a child derives its natural life; so Christ regenerates us and imparts a life to us which is incorruptible and eternal in its nature. A mother nourishes her child from her own breasts, but Christ gives himself, His flesh and blood, to be the food of His regenerate children. A mother cherishes her child, carries it about, and fosters it till it is grown up. She is constantly doing something for her child, and her maternal love causes her never to be tired of attending to it. Ah, who can reflect without shame and astonishment, how the ever-loving God is obliged to have patience with his stubborn children, how we weary Him with our transgressions. Nay, it is impossible to say how much He has to do in training up a single soul. The Lord himself expresses this active, aiding, maternal love, in Isaiah 46: 3, 4, where He says, "hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, which are borne and carried by me, from the birth even to your old age and hoary hairs will I carry you, and will deliver you." The mother preserves her child from every accident, and seeks its welfare to the utmost of her ability. Christ, our ever-loving parent, watches over and protects his offspring incomparably more attentively, lest the evil one should touch them; nay, not even a hair can fall from their heads without His will. Everything that befalls these sucklings of His grace, be it little or great, inwardly or outwardly, is so guided and governed by the paternal love of Christ, that all things must work together for their good.

This love, however, destines the children of grace to experience a variety of trials, temptations and sufferings for their good, and they are often left in such a state of barrenness and darkness as to cause them with Zion to exclaim, "The Lord hath forsaken me, and my God hath forgotten me," but how widely does the soul err from the truth in such a supposition. The Lord himself asks "can a woman forget her child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb: Yea, she may forget, yet I will not forget thee, Lo, I have engraven thee on my wounded hands," (German translation), Isa. 49: 14–16. Oh, my dear readers, this has reference both to you and to me. Ought we not, therefore, to commit ourselves, body and soul, to Christ's more than maternal love and care, both for time and eternity.

PRIDE.

"Better is it to be of an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spirit with the proud." Prov. 16: 19.

If we are of a lowly mind it will be altogether unnatural for us to aspire after high things. Then dear brethren and sisters, is it not greatly to be deplored that this fearful vice, pride, is so prevalent among us, and like a contageous disease is carrying off such vast numbers daily. We see it increasing. Men are seeking only after great honor in the world. Can we thus gain heaven? Oh could we but take St John's admonition, "love not the world, neither the things of the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world." Do we not see too plainly the pride of life holding many of the so called German Baptists under its sway? And is this not a clear evideoce of lukewarmness in religion? Such God has threatened to spew out of His mouth. Happy is the man who can in truth say with David, "Lord my heart is not haughty nor mine eyes lofty." Ps. 131: 1. No one will believe that we have an humble heart as long as we follow all the vain fashions of this world. Brethren and sisters, let us try and abstain from the foolish fashions for the people of the world will rejoice when they see that we are steadfast. Let us not be slothful in warning the people. Reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine, wherever we see that it is necessary, whether they will bear or whether they will forbear. Let us cry aloud and not spare, and lift up our voices like a trumpet, and show the people their transgressions and their sins." Ps. 58: 1. Let us not be found like those watchmen described in Ps. 56: 10. I fear that the reason why the watchmen are dumb and cannot reprove is because so many evidences of pride is still found existing in themselves. "Whosoever will indulge in this vice, pride, cannot escape punishment. For every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord, the joined hand in hand he shall not be unpunished." Prov. 16: 5. "A man's pride shall bring him low and God hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts." Luke 1: 5. Brethren and sisters, let us mark the Lord, and be humble at heart, so we may meet together in heaven, for if we are proud we cannot meet our God in peace. Thus it becomes us to humble ourselves before God with an humble heart, and a sincere desire to worship in humility. In this way we can gain heaven if we are only obedient to Him who had mercy on us, and did send His only Son into the world, and brought a plan of salvation that we might be saved.

Abraham Baum.

Ashland, Ohio.

WHY SHOULD YOU WAIT?

BY M. K. ELLIOTT.

Why are you waiting? Why stand at the door so long before you enter in or do you not intend to enter? "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" Can we say with those servants of old, because no man hath hired us, or no one bid us come? Why Jesus is calling you to come and work in His Vineyard every day. Do not think that His work is hard, for He says "My yoke is easy and My burden is light." But those who are waiting outside of the Kingdom are serving a master who is delighted in having our souls banished from Heaven and God. We should think in a temporal point, no one would serve a master who would take every advantage that he could to bring about their ruin. Perhaps some are waiting for a more convenient season. Remember, all things are ready,—waiting to receive you. Father, Son and Holy Ghost are ready, even the angels will rejoice over your return to the Fold of Jesus. Oh youth, you who are out on the barren mountains of sin and folly, why are you waiting 'till the evil days come? Know you not that in the springtime of life is the best time to serve God and prepare for Heaven? Do you think of coming when your day is almost done, and the time of your departure is at hand? Alas too often death comes in an hour we least expect it, and without a moments warning the poor soul that has so often rejected the invitations of God's spirit is launched into eternity. Again, God sees fit to bring us down by afflictions which are brought about in various ways to accomplish our salvation. We begin to see and feel that we have waited long enough, that this may be the last or eleventh hour's call,—we wait no longer, but arise and begin to call on God to save us 'till life and health is again restored, and then we will serve Him. Sometimes it pleases God to answer such prayers and raise them again in health, but it is often to be feared that they forget those solemn vows that are made on a sick bed, and live as thoughtless as before. Remember friendly reader, God will not always forbear. The day will come when God will execute His wrath. Then should we wait any longer when we know that we are weak and helpless, and that there is no other refuge for us to flee to but Jesus? Do we not hear the voice of merey and love calling us to come to the Fountain of life and drink freely thereof, and we shall never thirst again?

Why should we wait?
To-morrow's Sun may be too late,
And death may seal our helpless state,
Jesus we come to Thee.

Welch Run, Pa

It would sometimes seem as if motherhood were a lovely artifice of the great Father to wean the heart from selfishness by a peaceful and gradual process. The babe is self in another form. It is so interwoven and identified with the mother's life, that she passes by almost insensible gradations from herself to it; and day by day the instinctive love of self wanes as the child-love waxes, filling the heart with a thousand new springs of tenderness.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Friendship is the cordial of life, the lenitive of our sorrows, and the multiplier of our joys; the source equally of an imitation and of repose.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

JOYS OF HOME.

Sweet are the joys of Home,
And pure as sweet; for they,
Like dews of morn and evening, come
To wake and close the day.

The world hath its delights,
And its delusions, too;
But Home to calmer bliss invites,
More tranquil and more true.

The mountain flood is strong,
But fearful in its pride;
While gently rolls the stream along
The peaceful valley's side.

Life's charities, like light,
Spread smilingly afar;
But stars approached become more bright,
But Home is life's own star.

The pilgrim's step in vain
Seeks Eden's sacred ground!
But in Home's holy joys, again
An Eden may be found.

A glance of heaven to see,
To none on earth is given;
An yet a happy family
Is but an earlier heaven.

—John Bowring.

I ALWAYS KEEP MY WORD.

Mrs. Woodward sat by her window late in the afternoon, looking out despairingly upon the March storm which was raging, thickening the air with a blinding mist of sleet and snow, and making the roads impassible with deep-piled drifts.

What should she do? With her ever threatening neuralgia, she did not dare brave the inclement weather herself; Bridget had an ugly cough, she could not ask her to go out in such a storm, and yet it was almost imperitive that some one should go to the postoffice. Her husband was absent from home on business; she had written to consult him on a matter of consequence; his reply to her letter would certainly have arrived to-day; it was important that it should be acted upon immediately, and besides, a few words from him would be such a comfort to her in her loneliness this wild, dreary night.

"If I could only see a boy come by!" she though; "boys are impervious to all sorts of weather."

As if an answer to her wish, she almost immediately afterward heard the clear, careless whistle which usually betokens the advent of a boy; and in another minute here he came, a ragged little fellow, with his head muffled up in an old comforter, trudging along as jolly as you please.

Mrs. Woodward tapped eagerly on the pane, and the whistler stopped and looked inquiringly at the window, which was opened with some difficulty. "Here, my little man," called the lady coaxingly; "step this way a minute. Do you care about earning something to-night?"

"What do you want me to do, marm?" shouted the boy in reply.

"I want you to go to the postoffice and bring me a letter which I am sure is there. Inquire for Mrs. Woodward; and if you bring it safely to me I will give you two shillings. Will you go?"

"I guess I will, marm," said the boy promptly. "Two shillinses don't grow on every bush, 'speshly in winter time. Will you give me the money now, marm?"

"I would if I were sure I could trust you," said Mrs. Woodward, a little disgusted at his greediness, but eager to secure his services. "Will you be certain to bring it?"

"I said I would, marm, an' I alluz keep my word!" replied the boy proudly, looking the lady full in the face. So Mrs. Woodward took out her purse and handed him the promised reward through the window. His eye sparkled under his ragged hat brim, and saying "Thanke, marm," with a vim, he made a little awkward bow, and the next moment was lost to sight in the blinding storm.

Delighted with her success, Mrs. Woodward could take her tea now, and rock her baby to sleep with a quiet mind, in pleasant expectation of a greeting from its absent father. But tea had been taken and forgotten, and the baby had been sleeping serenely for a long time, and still there were no signs of the promised return of her messenger. Eight, nine o'clock struck, and still nothing was heard but the wild wind howling around the house and the sleet dashing against the panes; and the poor little wife, sorely disappointed and indignant, said to herself, "Of course he won't come now; I shouldn't want him to; but why didn't he come before dark? How foolish I was to pay him in advance!"

Just then there was a thump against the kitchen-door. Bridget jumped up from her warm seat where she was nodding over her knitting, and opened it. A figure which would have done for a regular old King Winter, white with snow, and fairly icicled with sleet, appeared on the threshold.

"Well! so you really did come, after all!" exclaimed Mrs. Woodward, who had rushed out into the kitchen.

"I said I would, marm, an' I alluz keeps my word!" answered the boy, as he had done before. "I got the letter in my pocket, marm; if ye'll try an' git it,oat," he added turning to Bridget. "I'm so stiff, ye see, an' a'most numb—"

"Of course, you poor fellow, you're almost frozen!" cried Mrs. Woodward, full of pity. "Don't try to talk till your teeth stop chattering; sit right down here by the stove. Bridget, quick, open the draught, and set on the teapot, we'll soon warm him up, brave little man! I'll just peep at my letter, and come out and see you again when you are thawed."

She went into the sittingroom for awhile, and when she returned she found her little messenger already looking very comfortable under the combined influence of a generous fire, a bowl of steaming tea, and a plate of nice brown doughnuts."

"Ah, that's right; you feel better now, I fancy," said Mrs. Woodward kindly. "And I'm sure I am much obliged to you for my letter; but what made you so late?"

The boy was silent, fidgeted, and looked sheepish.

"Oh, well, never mind," said the lady, pitying his confusion. "I suppose you didn't take this night walk out of choice. But you earned your money harder than I meant you should."

"Oh, I didn't mind that, marm," said the boy, looking up eagerly. 'I was glad to get it any way." And then, as though he could not resist the temptation to seek a little sympathy from one who seemed so kind and charitable, he went on, choking back a something that rose in his throat when he tried to speak.

"Ye see, marm, it's my little sister. She got hurted inside some time back, an' the doctor says she won't never git no better; an' she has the fever on her all the time, an' she's alluz a hungerin' arter oringes an' lemmins an' sich sour things to cool her mouth. But they cost so much, an' mother can't mor'n git along with her washin', and so, ye see, I was glad to git the chance to take poor little Jess what she was a eravin' for, so she might go to sleep easy. That was what I axed the money fur."

"I am very sure it was so," said Mrs. Woodward warmly. "I see you are a good boy. But the poor little girl—how did she get hurt? Can nothing be done?"

The boy's head drooped in shame again. "It was the drink, marm, the father didn't mean it, but he g'in her a push, an' she fell over the stove. No, marm, the doctor he says nothin' can't be done."

"Poor little creature! What a sin and shame!" said Mrs Woodward, her eyes filling at sight of the tears in his.

"I shall go and see her myself tomorrow; you shall not go home tonight in this bitter storm. You shall sleep up in the kitchen loft; Bridget will make you comfortable; in the morning you shall clean the snow off my sidewalk, and I will give you another two shillings, and try and find you a warmer coat than that. Then you shall take me to your sister, and when Mr. Woodward returns he will see what can be done. I know he will be glad to get hold of a boy who 'alluz keeps his word.'"

All this happened some ten years ago. To-day, boys, the faithful messenger who braved the storm that night is confidential clerk in Mr. Woodward's office; his poor, drunken father lies by the side of the little sister, who is gone where she will never be "hurted" any more; his mother lives comfortably in the pretty home he has earned for her; both are true Christians and respected members of the community—all because he "alluz kept his word."—American Messenger.

FOUR SERVANTS OF SATAN.

Dear young friends, Satan has a great many servants and they are very busy, running about doing all the harm they can. I know four of them, and some of the mischief which they have done. They appear, sociable, easy, good-natured, and too much in a hurry. They seem to wait your own time, and entice you when you least expect it.

"O, we want you to enjoy yourselves," they say, "and not to be so particular; and the arguments they use are very taking; at least I must think so, since so many of the young listen to thim, and are led away by them.

And all, I believe, because they did not know in the first place, who was speaking to them. They were deceived. They did not see it was Satan's uniform they had on. Do you ask for their names? Here they are:

"There is no danger." That is one.

"Only this once." There is another.

"Everybody does so," is the third, and

"By-and-by" is the fourth.

If you are tempted to leave God's house, and break the Sabbath day to go for a sail or ride, and "Only this once," or "Everybody does so," whispers at your elbow, know it is false. The great evil of one sin is, that you bring your heart and conscience into such a state that you will be likely to go on sinning; for is not half so much to stop you as there was to prevent you from setting out at first. Hold no parley with "Only this once," or "Everybody does so." Listen to their dangerous counsels, no, not for a moment.

THE BIBLE.

In the poem just published under the name of Miriam, Whittier pays the following tribute to the best books:

"We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful
From graven stone and written scroll,
From old flower-fields of the soul;
And weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the book our mothers read;
And all our treasures of old thought
In his harmonious fullness wrought,
Who scatters in one sheaf complete
The scattered blades of God's sown wheat,
The common growth that maketh good
His all-embracing Fatherhood."

The surest, as the shortest way, to make yourself beloved and honored, is to be indeed the very man you wish to appear.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Brumbaugh Bro's:—Dear brethren. Some time has elapsed since you have had a communication from me, and in return for your many favors, I will give you my reasons for this seeming doviation from duty. From my last letters to you last fall you were apprized of the arrangements then progressing for a discussion of several important subjects with a ministerof the followers of Dr. Campbell.

During the early part of last winter I devoted all my leisure hours to study, and the work of preparation progressed favorably for a season. But the over-taxing of body and mind impaired my health somewhat, and greatly affected my eyes, so much so that for a consid rable time I could neither read nor write without pain.

We had arranged to have our discussion commence on the 15th of April, but for an untoward event that determined me to withdraw from it. The event I allude to was as follows: About the 12th of Feb., the representation of the Campbell party, Chapman L. Lucas had published an article in their organ, the Christian Examiner, Richmond, Va., so replete with mutilated truth, misrepresentation, acrimony and partisan feeling throughout, that I deemed it a useless waste of precious time to debate with him.

For the time and labor expended in the preparation I consider myself richly rewarded. I am now more fully confirmed, if any confirmation was necessary, in the evangelicity of the Brethren's practice on those subjects (Feetswashing, the Lord's Supper and the Holy Kiss.) Rich mines of holy truth have been explored and examined, and treasures lying just beneath the surface of the sacred pages brought to light in the process, are of infinitely more value than all the fleeting rewards of this poor world.

Yours Truly
D. C. Moomaw.

Nashville, Mich., April 15, 1872.

Dear Brethren: I notice in No. 15, of this month, an answer to a query concerning close communion. As I was reared and brought up by parents believing in open communion, and as my mind is not entirely at rest upon this point, the reply prompted me to write a few words in regard to the same subject. I read 1st Cor. 28th verse, "But let a man examine himself and so let him eat." 29th, "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself not discerning the Lord's body." Do not these plain words of sacred truth warn us not to be harsh in our denunciation? Is it just in us to judge? I think we only have to render an account for our own sins. Though we may sit by the side of a sinner at the communion table, would it make us an unfit subject to participate in observing this holy ordinance? I have many friends that differ with me in faith, yet I believe they are striving for a higher and better home in Heaven. Must we exclude such from our communion table? Can we be justified in so doing?

What I have written has been through pure motives. When I am right give me right, and when I am wrong tell me of it.

Yours in love,
W. C. Misener.

Remarks.—What we said in No. 15 we hold as orthodox and all the friends and relations in the world would not cause us to dissent from our position unless we can get a thus saith the Lord for it. We appreciate your sympathies for your friends, but if it comes down to that, our sympathy is as deep, and liberality as large perhaps as any other one in the Brotherhood, but to exercise it in things that belong to the Lord is deceptive and dangerous. The quotation you make from Corinthians is fatal to your position. "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself," &c. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." You say your friends differ with you in faith. In faith we observe the ordinances of the Lord's house. Feetwashing, the Lord's Supper, the Communion, &c. Your friends have no faith in part of these ordinances, and what we call the communion they call the Lord's Supper. If they would commune with us, they would do it through sympathy, or a false liberality, and not in faith, therefore they commit sin, and not decerning the Lord's body, eat and drink damnation to themselves. Where then is the charity in inviting our friends to participate in a thing in which they have no faith and thus cause them to condemn their own souls in the sight of a just God? Faith is the grand principle of religion and without it, it is impossible to please God, and whosoever does anything that is not prompted by an abiding faith in the Lord and the ordinances of His house, commits sin and will not be held guiltless. If your friends are striving for a better home, and have faith in the ordinances of the Lord's house as we practice them, let them come with us, if not, we should not, in their unbelief, bring them into condemnation by participating with us in our communions. It is a mistaken idea that we will have to render an account only for our own sins. We are our brother's keeper and if we deceive or cause him to sin his blood shall be demanded at our hands. If we wish to do our friends the greatest good and exercise christian charity, let us labor for their spiritual good by persuading them to make the Bible the man of their counsel and not give credence to a wrong by exercising false charities.

Somerfield, Pa. May 9th '72.

Beloved Brother:—After our greetings I will inform you that we like the Pilgrim very much. The only objection we have against it is, the paper is bad, but I trust that you will have better before long. Enclosed, you will find $1.25 for Pilgrim of 1872, which you have been kind enough to send me on principle and good faith. May the Lord be with you and bless you with Heavenly wisdom that you may be enabled to do much good to the human family is my prayer, for I must confess that I have received great encouragement from the reading of its pages. Continue to send it as heretofore.—

Yours, J. B.

Remarks. We have received a few other complaints about the quality of the paper. We know that our paper is not of a good quality, but our price is so extremely low that we cannot afford to send much better. For the accommodation of those who desire and appreciate good paper, we issue an extra edition on book paper at $1.50. This is good paper, and we are now sorry that we did not make $1.50 the established price and send good paper. We feel assured that there are but few who could not have paid the extra 25 cents. Those who could not, we could have accommodated by accepting as much as they could afford. Those who are tired of cheap paper, can have good the remainder of the year, or from the first of June, by sending us 15 cents extra, or 2 cents per month.

Dear Pilgrim:—I have just returned home from preaching where we had the pleasure of meeting with some of our dear brethren and sisters, and of hearing the Word of God preached by our dear brother D. C. Moomaw, from the text: "Lord if thou wilt thou canst make me clean." I trust that a number will give heed to the serious call they received from D. C. M., as he faithfully warned sinners of their present and future danger. Dear reader, how earnestly we should all be laboring for the cause of our blessed Redeemer, and for the salvation of precious souls. I often think how we call upon the Lord to "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." If we expect the fulfilment of our prayers, how careful we should be that we forgive all who may trespass against us, for if we are stubborn and selfish with our neighbor, how can we expect God to forgive us?

"How careful then ought we to live.
With what religious fear?
Who such a strict account must give
For our behavior here."

From your sister B. G.
Lafayette, Va.

DIED.

GARMAN.—In the Montgomery Congregation, Va., April 18th 1872, our beloved brother Peter Garman, aged 61 years. Funeral services postponed.

ADKINS.—On the 24th of April 1872, brother Enoch Adkins, of Giles Co, Va., in the 67th year of his life. Funeral services postponed.

Our deceased brother came to the church in the summer of 1870. His early life was passed in the service of satan, to whose interests he appeared to devote his whole heart, but that spirit of Grace that struck the savage persecutor to the earth, also brought the heart of our brother to love and espouse the cause of Jesus. He departed from the scene of conflict in triumph and peace, leaving to his bereaved family the richest of earths legacies; the confidence and hope that he is not dead, but is sleeping in Jesus.

ALL.—On the 57th of April '72, our afflicted sister, Mary J. All, in the——year of her age. Funeral services postponed.

Our dear sister was stricken down with that terrible disease Rheumatism, when about 12 years of age, and has not walked since. She was always ready to praise the Lord, and never for a moment cast away her confidence in Him. She longed and prayed for her deliverance many years, but death seemed to mock her entreaties, and delayed long his coming. About two weeks previous to her death she was seized with Pneumonia, which soon accomplished its work.

Her death was as the death of the righteous. As she came down to the brink of the bitter waters, she met the pale messenger joyfully, exclaiming "Welcome death, I am ready to go." She retained the possession of her faculties in a remarkable degree, and talked calmly and clearly to her friends to the last. She frequently asked them if she were not growing cold and seemed to rejoice when they affirmed to her inquiries. Oh, may my last end be like hers. D. C. Moomaw.

PLANK.—In the Logan District, Logan Co., Ohio, Martha May, daughter of friend Joseph and sister Elizebeth Plank, aged 7 years, 4 months and 9 days. Funeral services by the writer in the English, and Christian Yoder of the Amish Church, in German.

J. L. Frantz.

HAMILTON.—In the Sciota Church, Franklin county Ohio, March 6th, 1872, Elizebeth Hamilton, aged 58 years, 10 months and 21 days. Cause of death, Encephaloid Carcinoma. Funeral services from 1st Peter 4:16, by the writer.

Sister Hamilton was born in Pa., April 15th, 1813, and came to Perry county, Ohio when about six years old. She married Isaac Hamilton March 12th, 1840, and became a member of the German Baptist Church in '42, of which she has been a faithful member until death.

J. F. Caufman.

BOWMAN.—In the Green Mount Congregation, Rockingham county, Vally of Virginia, April 9th '72, Eld. Benjamin Bowman, aged 86 years, 9 months and 15 days. Funeral services by the brethren, Solomon Garber and others, from Phil. 2:22, according to the feeling of the old brother before he died. He wished for the day of his departure.

Our old brother had been in the ministry upwards of 52 years, and has proved faithful to his calling until disabled by old age. The family as well as the Church has lost a good father; but we trust our loss is his great gain. Eld. Jacob Miller.

SNYDER.—On May 11th in North Woodbury township, Blair county, Hannah, wife of Bishop Jacob Snyder, aged 76 years, 8 months and 3 days.

Mother Snyder was a consistent member of the Menonite Church. On the 13th she was buried at the Menonite Meeting House, near Martinsburg.

Announcements.

Please announce through the Pilgrim, the Lord willing, the Lost Creek church, Juniata county, Pa., intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 3rd and 4th of June, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m. A hearty invitation is extended to all who may please to favor us with a visit. Michael Bashor.

Please announce that we the brethren of Cerrogorda Ill., intend to hold a Lovefeast on the 14th and 15th of June. A general invitation is extended, especially to ministering brethren. By order of the church.

Jacob Troxel.

Please announce that we intend to have our Lovefeast on the 31st day of May next in the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin co., Pa., commencing at one o'clock p. m. Preaching next day in the forenoon. An invitation is given to all that have a desire to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

For the satisfaction of those wishing to come, we would say that our meeting house is about ¼ mile from the Sunburry & Lewstown R. R., and the morning train leaves Lewistown at 6:50 a. m. The other train leaves Lewistown at 12:20, p. m. Maitland is our station about five miles from Lewistown. JACOB MOHLER.

Please announce that we purpose holding our Lovefeast at Spring Run, near McVeytown station, Mifflin county, Pa., on the 29th and 30th days of May, 1872. A hearty invitation is extended to ministers and members.

JOSEPH R. HANAWALT.

The following notices were handed to us for publication with a request that we give a general invitation to all and a special one to ministering brethren.

Yellow Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., June 13th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Snake Spring Valley, Bedford Co., Pa., June 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Aughwick, Huntingdon county, Pa., 27th, 28th of May, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., 3d and 4th of June.

Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., 5th and 6th of June.

Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., June the 11th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Waterloo Congregation, Black Hawk Co., Iowa, June 15, 16, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m.

Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., June 14th commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. 5½ miles southwest of Plymouth. Those coming on the Mail Train will stop off at the Summit, three miles west of Plymouth.

Fawn River Congregation, Lagrange Co., Ind., June 15, 16, commencing at 10 o clock a. m. Six miles east of Lima at the house of bro. Eli Horner.

Urbana Ill., at the house of bro. George Dillings, June 22, 23. Brethren coming from the North or South, on the Ill. Central railroad, will stop off either at Thomasboro, or Champaign City. Those coming from East or West, on the Indianapolis and Bloomington railroad, will stop off at Mayview.

EDITORIAL.

TOO MANY MINISTERS.

From a late No. of the New York Observer, we notice that the Presbyterian Church is beginning to feel on the subject of beneficiary education. They declare themselves overflooded with ministers, having in the field about one-third more than is needed, and points to the custom of gratuitous education as the source from which the evil springs. Here is the expressed sentiment of many of their best ministers and lay members.

"They regard the beneficiary system an evil, not a good. They say that men are fostered and forced or carried into the ministry who ought not to get in; that gratuitous education for a profession is a premium offered to incompetency and laziness, and that the ministry is now overstocked, burdened and degraded by the induction of dead weights through this agency."

Where is the observing man that cannot attest to the truthfulness of the above? Have not our own eyes seen it, and our own minds expressed it? Are not our pulpits thronged with aspirants because they detest manual labor, rather than because their souls yearned for the salvation of sioners? We remember hearing a schoolmate say: "The ministry is the pleasantest and most honorable profession that a young man can enter." That young man thought it beneath his dignity to labor, and appeared to have in no way a religious turn of mind, but from a professional standpoint, made choice of the ministry as his calling. We think of a number just now, who entered the ministry because they thought it one of the pleasantest ways of gaining a livelihood. No wonder that the fleece is more sought after than the sheep. The idea of studying for the ministry is becoming so pat that all who go to school are supposed to be aspirants for sacerdotal orders. We were frequently asked: "Are you not studying for the ministry?" Here is where the abuse of education comes in, as it has no more to do with the ministry than with farming, building houses or working the bellows. We taught such querist that there are qualifications necessary for the ministry that education cannot supply, and that our ministers are called of God through the voice of the church—but we will hear what another distinguished officer of the Presbyterian church says.

"No collection is taken up in our church to which I give so grudgingly as that for the Board of Education. I have been familiar with the education provision for ministers seventy years, having been, when a youth, a fellow student of two with one of our pastors. Not a single one educated by the Church from this quarter in all that time has been worthy of support. Most of them have been young men too inefficient or unwilling to earn a living by work. Perhaps some were like the son of a very respectable man who said to me, "One of my boys is very smart, he will be a lawyer; another will make a pretty good doctor, but the third is only fit to be a minister."

Here is the point exactly. The ministers are not called by God, but by father or the minister. They may be perfectly honest in their conclusions, but perhaps if God had their professions to choose, He would put them to hoeing corn or stubbing briars Therefore our author is made to say:

There are hundreds in the ministry who ought to be in other employments. They have wholly mistaken their calling.

This fact was forcibly illustrated to us not long since in an aspirant for the holy calling. He entered the pulpit with true dignity, opened the Holy Book and laid upon it the well written sermon, and then commenced the gestures to make it go, but it wouldn't go no how. The promptings of the Spirit were not there, hence he must fall back upon the rules of oratory, from whence he expects his aid. Seeing such results, another says:

I believe the beneficiary system wrong in principle, evil in practice, and ought to be abandoned.

If he had left out the word beneficiary and condemned the whole system of manufacturing ministers, he would have hit the truth squarely.

It is wrong in principle, because it is paying a premium to those who are either too proud or too lazy to make an honest living by the labor of their own hands, but are willing to sponge the last mite from the poor widow who should devote her small pittance to the feeding and clothing of her children.

It is wrong in practice, because it puts men in positions for which they are not qualified, and who, for the greed of filthy lucre, corrupt the church and destroy the flock, and ought to be abandoned, because it is a glaring imposition both upon God and His people.

In substantiation of this position we noticed in one of our Southern exchanges that many of the Churches there are in a deplorable condition. Why so? Simply, because the people, as a result of war, have become impoverished and cannot afford to hire these professional ministers and as a consequence, the sheep are without a shepherd and their churches crumbling into neglect. Had these ministers been called of God they would have remained with the flock, and like Paul administered to their own wants by the labor of their hands. No true minister will forsake his charge on account of dollars and cents, but our exchange says: "For want of support, they have left their charges and went to other callings—the practice of law, school-teaching, agencies, &c. How does that correspond with John 10: 11? "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." He is not only willing to spend and be spent for them, but to save them from the ravages of the wolf his life is made a ransome, but of the hireling, it said: "The hireling fleeth because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep." The question may arise, are there any such hirelings? We answer emphatically, yes. While teaching, we boarded with a kind old gentleman at whose house their minister paid frequent visits. He and the church got into difficulties about some local transaction and finally resulted in a downright fuss. One evening we met the minister and after considerable complaining against the flock, he said: "Well, if they pay what they owe me, I will leave, and I don't care what becomes of them." This was no exceptional case, as he had a good standing and held a prominent position in their synod.

On account of this abuse of education many of our brethren have taken a decided stand against the introduction of a school in the brotherhood, and when we look at possible results from this standpoint, we can make every allowance for them. But so long as we carry out the Gospel order of calling ministers, education cannot run us into this abuse, as none can preach unless sent by the church, and if it is right, none will be sent who have not the proper qualifications.

After seeing what we have, and taking a sum of the results, our prayer is: God save the brotherhood from a hired ministry.

PERSONAL.

ELD. J. MYERS.—All right, thank you.

JACOB WEAVER.—Your money is received and the Tracts are sent.

SISTER B. G.—Fannie M. C.'s PILGRIM is sent—to end of year, 85 cents.

JACOB TROXEL.—Your previous announcement with contribution was not received.

END WITH THE YEAR.—We prefer to have all subscriptions to end with the year. Send at the rate of three cents per number.

BAD PAPERS of May 11th. We run short and were, therefore, compelled to send out damaged papers to some of our subscribers.

SISTER HARRIET E.—Your contribution will appear as soon as we get home from A. M. and have time to attend to it. The extra copies will be sent.

PLEASE NOTICE PILGRIM of May 11th is numbered 21 instead of 20. There will be two Nos. 21 and no 20. Remember this, and do not write us for 20 as you have it, but wrongly numbered.

D. NEGLEY.—Your contribution is on the book and will appear in our next. So far we have been on a push all the time, and in consequence some of our contributors have been neglected, but we hope they will bear with us, as it is not done intentionally.

JONAS GRAYBILL.—Sister E. Harris' name was not on the list. We cannot tell whether we overlooked it, or whether you failed to send it. We have now entered it. The money is received and credited. The Tracts are sent. Please accept our thanks for the aid you have given us.

MONEY LIST.

Nancy Bechtal	$1.25
Dr. Jacob Beechly	1.25
M A Moomaw	75
P Boyle	1.25
J D Trostle	1.25
Harriet Early	50
Jonathan Myers	6.50
Jonas Grabill	16.45
D H Bonebrake	60
Elias Hashman	50
M L Spires	2.00

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

RELIGION OF THE CENSUS.

The statistics of the religion of the United States just completed at the census office, shows the total number of the church organizations up to the first of June, 1870, to be 63,451; the total number of church edifices to be 63,071; total church accommodations to be 21, 659,562, and the aggregate value of church property to be $354,-429,581. The statistics of the church accommodations for the principal denominations are: Baptist, regular, 3,797,116; Baptist, other, 363,019; Roman Catholic, 1,990,511; Congregational, 1,117,212; Episcopal 991,051; Lutheran, 997,332; Methodist, 6,528,-209; Presbyterian, regular, 2, 198,-900; Presbyterian, other, 199,311. The value of the church property owned by these denominations are: Baptist, regular, $39,229,211; Baptist, other, $2,378,999; Catholic and Roman, $60,985,556; Congregational, $25,069,698; Episcopal, $56,514,549; Lutheran, $11,017,717; Methodist, $59,851,121; Presbyterian, regular, $17,828,722; Presbyterian, other, $5-436,134.

NEW ROMAN JOURNAL.—The following is the programme of the Esperance de Rome, the new Liberal Catholic journal of Hyacinthe and Dollinger: "A new national Council to be held to decree the following things—Purity of Christian doctrine as it is taught in the New Testament, and removing all that has been added by popes and councils. Independence and separation of the Church from the State. Election by universal suffrage to all ecclesiastical offices. Abolition of the Latin tongue in worship, and the forced celibacy of the priests. The Church to be self-governed, and to this end to have councils or assemblies."

The following manifesto, from the Old Catholics in Spain, shows that the leaven of the Dollinger movement is working even in the land of the Inquisition:

"1. Purity of doctrine according to the New Testament, to the exclusion of all decrees of councils, Papal bulls, decrees with encyclicals.

"2. The separation and independence of Church and State.

"3. Election to all ecclesiastical offices by universal suffrage.

"4. Abolition of the use of the Latin tongue in all the services of the Church; abolition of forced celibacy of the clergy; the abolition of all payments for the sacraments and services of the Church.

"5. The self government of the Church by periodical assemblies and councils."

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SYRIA.—Particulars are being received concerning the late earthquake in Syria. The number killed in Antioch was less than 300, but 1,600 are known to have perished in the surrounding towns and country. The American Protestant church in Antioch was injured, and four Americans killed. The distress of the people will be limited, as the supply of provisions is moderately good, and the prospects for crops very fair.

SHIPWRECKS.—The number of Marine disasters on the French coast since 1837 is officially estimated at 950 vessels, valued at $ 30,000,000, averaging about thirty vessels annually.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt at several points in Mississippi recently. At Fayette, in Jefferson county, it was so severe as to leave a large crack in the walls of the college.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way." $3

Menno Simon's
COMPLETE WORKS.

In English, translated from the original Dutch or Holland, giving the whole of the great Reformers writings on the subject of Baptism. Price in full sheep $4.50; by mail $5.14.

Address, JOHN F. FUNK & BRO.,
May 2:-3m. Elkhart, Ind.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	- - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	- - -	1.00
Turkey morocco,	- - -	$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen,	- - -	5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S
Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!
RENNER'S
HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, DR. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 23, tf. Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

BRO. RENNER, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country, A. HUTCHISON, Oak Hill, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. WM. H. BAILY, Raleigh, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic, I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was, my neighbors are surprised at my healthy appearance. D. S. STAYER, New Enterprise, Pa.

DR. RENNER:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. WM. H. GANES, Cool Springs, S. C.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871 Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 48	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	PleasantGrove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48		7 18
Le 7 30	10 00	Saxton	7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Firm Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, MAY 28, 1872. NO. 22

POETICAL.

"ROCK OF AGES."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me"—
Thoughtlessly the maiden sung,
Fell the words unconsciously
From her girlish, gleeful tongue;
Sang as little children sing;
Sang as sing the birds in June;
Fell the words like light leaves down
On the current of the tune—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Let me hide myself in thee."
Felt her soul no need to hide;
Sweet the song as song could be—
And she had no thought beside;
All the words unheedingly
Fell from lips untouched by care,
Dreaming not they each might be
On some other lips a prayer—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me"—
'Twas a woman sung them now,
Pleadingly and prayerfully
Every word her heart did know;
Rose the song as storm-tossed bird
Beats with weary wing the air,
Every note with sorrow stirred—
Every syllable a prayer—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me"—
Lips grown aged sung the hymn
Trustingly and tenderly—
Voice grown weak and eyes grown dim,
"Let me hide myself in Thee."
Trembling though the voice and low,
Ran the sweet strains peacefully,
Like a river in its flow.
Sung as only they can sing
Who life's thorny paths have passed;
Sung as only they can sing
Who behold the promised rest—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me"—
Sung above a coffin lid;
Underneath, all restfully,
All life's joys and sorrows hid.
Never more, oh, storm-tossed soul,
Never more from wind or tide,
Never more from billows roll,
Wilt thou need thyself to hide.
Could the sightless sunken eyes,
Closed beneath the soft gray hair,
Could the mute and stiffened lips
Move again in pleading prayer,
Still, aye, still, the words would be,
"Let me hide myself in Thee."

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

GROWING IN GRACE. NO. 1.

2 Peter, 3: 18.

Essentials to growth in grace. In the vegetable kingdom, among the essentials to growth, are the following: seed, soil, moisture, warmth and light. In the animal kingdom, in addition to some of these, food and exercise are also essentials to healthy and vigorous growth.

In the spiritual kingdom, every vital, soul-saving truth is an incorruptible seed, and every human heart is soil in which that seed may and should take root, spring up, and branch out into those heavenly graces that so greatly adorn Christian character and constitute true Christian manhood,—the result and evidence of real growth in grace.

But as in nature, so in the kingdom of grace, there may be both seed and soil, and yet, unless the latter is prepared for and receives the former, there will be no growth. Alas! how meager is the growth in grace, in the favor and friendship of God! How little of the vast amount of heart-soil is brought under the tillage of the great Husbandman and made to produce the fruits of righteousness! Millions of human hearts are like so many fertile but neglected acres in a distant unknown land. I refer to the heathen. How can these benighted people obey the injunction "grow in grace?" of themselves, without the light of the Gospel, they can neither grow in the favor of God nor in those graces that His favor alone can make attainable. What are the Brethren doing to preach the Gospel to every creature? Let those answer who are opposed to education and all those measures of more aggressive denominations that are calculated to put the Bible in the hands and its inspired truths in the hearts of all for whom Christ shed His atoning blood.

Growth in grace is impossible, not only to the heathen, but also to the unbelieving in Christian lands. The carnal mind is at enmity to God and is not subject to His laws. Sinners are scions of the wild olive and while such, can no more grow in the favor of God than can an evil tree produce good fruit. God is angry with the wicked every day, and sooner or later unless they change, they will feel the the blighting curse that Christ pronounced upon the unfruitful fig tree. For every weed of sin that we permit to grow in the heart, some Gospel grace must be uprooted, and while the former grows, the latter will wither as does the delicate plant that is torn from the sod and thrown upon the beaten highway. The wicked may flourish as the green bay-tree, but they can not grow in grace. Like our blessed Master, they may grow in stature, and like Him they may, alas! even grow in the favor of men, but not like Him, can they grow in the favor of God. The fruits they bear may look nice outwardly, but within there is a worm that the flames of the fiery lake cannot kill. They are not the fruits of the Spirit. To grow in grace then, it is necessary to be in grace,—to be a living branch in the vine Christ Jesus.

Warmth is essential to growth. Love is the warmth most essential to a growth in grace. The stately plants of tropical climes will not thrive in the polar regions, neither can Christians grow in grace and become strong men and woman in the Lord if their hearts are not warmed by fervent love to God and deep sympathy for one another. The greatest command is that which requires us to love God, and the next greatest that which teaches us to love our fellow men. Do we really obey these commands? Or do some of us, by laying too much stress on unimportant matters, neglect the weightier matters and instead pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin? It seems to me that this is the case when the members of a congregation are distant, cold, unsociable and apparently afraid of one another; no matter how strict they may be in discipline, dress, dogmatism, or any thing else that properly belongs to the "mint, anise and cummin" class, if an arctic climate is felt an arctic growth will be the result. When the orange tree can blossom amid the snows of Lapland, then perhaps, can Christians grow in grace while the heart is filled with pride, envy, ill-will, self-righteousness, or anything else that banishes that pure love which casts out fear.

Light is essential to growth. As the sunshine gives health and color to the plant, so the light of Divine truth illuminates the soul that sits in darkness, and enables it to attain a strong and healthy growth in grace. Christians may walk in the light of a heavenly luminary whose brightness as in the days of Paul, exceeds that of the noon-day Sun; and unless they do walk in this light, unless their minds are enlightened by the teachings of the Gospel, they will fall into many errors that will hinder their growth in the Divine life. It is said that plants will turn to the light, will seek to expose every part to the kissings of the sunbeam. Christians might, as a role, imitate the plant in this respect and they would grow in grace all the faster for it. If we close our eyes to the light of the Sun of Righteousness our growth will be like that of the plant that grows in a cellar or dungeon. Growth in knowledge goes with a growth in grace.

I meant to speak of the food, moisture and exercise essential to a growth in Divine life, but as the spiritual application is easy, and as my article is getting too long, this may suffice for the essentials to a growth in grace.

Z.

Tremont, Pa.

A TURNING POINT.

"The turning point in my life," said a gentleman, "was when I was a boy, not going to a low circus. Some kind of low show and circus came into town, and of course all the boys were dying to go. My mother did not want me to go. I might have stolen off. I had money enough in my pocket, the boys did all they could to persuade me, and more than all, people were going in squads to see it. It is easy to go with the multitude; it is so hard to make a stand, break away and go the other way.

"That is exactly what I did. I 'mastered the situation.' I mastered myself, and did not go.

"It was the resolution then called out, perhaps for the first time, which has, under God, served me many a good turn since, and made me what I am."

BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG.

The propriety of publishing books adapted to the young mind is a subject that is forcing itself more and more upon the minds of many of the Brethren. In the fear of God we submit a few thoughts upon the subject. The welfare and prosperity of the Church are more dear to us than aught else, and the course that is calculated to perpetuate the faith and land-marks of our forefathers is the course I wish to pursue. Anything that is calculated to engender a spirit of innovation or departure from the true faith, and practice of the Christian religion I shall oppose if I can know how. That we, as the Church of Christ, heretofore have done but little in the matter of publishing books, tracts, &c., especially for the the young, is no good reason why we should not become active in the matter. The most effective weapons in time of danger, is the one to use. When an enemy comes with swords and spears, it will do to meet them with the same, but if they come with guns of long range it is folly to go out to meet them with swords and spears. This illustration is presented to show that we must, if we expect to conquer, meet the enemy with similar weapons. If the enemy comes, as he does, with a flood of false theology, put up in such a way as to find its way to the minds of our children, and thus poison them, we must have an antidote, or they will die—yes, be lost to us forever. We have an antidote, says one, and that is the Bible. True, that is the very antidote we want used; but, suppose they don't take it what then? Of course the poison will accomplish the very thing it was intended. The offering of a remedy will do no good unless it is taken. We cannot force our children to take mental food, therefore can it be improper to extract from the Bible the very essence of the religion it teaches and deal it out to our children in such a way as will give them a relish for it, and thus get the mind infused with the divine truth, and they will seek the fountain-head from whence those droppings came—The Bible itself.

This is the day of reading, and the day in which the printing-press has power, and it is being used to the dissemination of false doctrines and man-made religions. Can not the press be used as a strong power to counteract this influence. If the printing-press has been instrumental in putting the Bible into every house, can it not be instrumental in fastening in the hearts of our children the blessed truths it teaches. We can not keep our children from reading those false doctrines. The Union Sabbath Schools often have them, or what is equally as bad, not the whole truth. On our high-ways they are scattered. In dime and two dime papers they come with cheering voice, but it is often the "charoner," that charms souls on to ruin. As well try to keep our children from breathing impure air in a boggy swamp as to get them to avoid the poisonous mind food in these days. The only way is, to provide pure, healthy food in its stead. Let literature, adapted to the young mind, flow freely from the press, as pure as the Bible itself, and then let it have an avenue through the Sabbath Schools, or in any other way, so that it reaches our children, and the very thing we now deplore in the Church will find a check. That is pride, and that don't be so particular, the people are every whit holy, spirit. I repeat, let our children be taught from their childhood all that we would have them be after baptism, and we will have little or no trouble to walk as the Church demands. But, on the other hand, let them grow up surrounded by the influences of pride, such as is exhibited in those so-called Union Sabbath Schools, and read almost daily those liberal views on religion so prevalent now, or novels and other light reading, and then when they become members of the Church, if ever they do, is it any wonder that they have liberal views on many things, and are dissatisfied often with the Church rules? A Roman priest once said, "Let me have the child the first seven years of his life, and then I don't care who takes him; he will be a Catholic." There is much truth in that. How important, then, that we place in the hands of our children books, from the very first of their reading, that will be calculated to lead the mind into the proper channel. We do not wish to discard the Bible, but from that can we not draw a library that will harmonize with its sacred and sublime truths, put in such language and arrangement that will please and instruct the young mind? We have thought much on this, and our conclusions are not from the impulse of the moment. Could we in any way see that evil would result from the course we advocate, we would never more speak in favor of it. If it would result to the advancement of our Master's cause, and be an auxiliary whereby our children be gathered into the folds of the Church, we say God speed the day that will bring about such consummation.

J. S. FLORY.

NEVER, O NEVER DESPAIR.

"And David said in his heart, I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul; there is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the Philistines. 1 Sam. 27: 4.

This is intended as a sequel to my former articles on the "Advantages of Afflictions."

While Saul was cruelly persecuting King David, the Lord had delivered him the second time into David's hands, who spares his life. When, after arresting his attention, the more generous feelings of Saul seem to have been touched by the appeal of David, and said to him "blessed be thou my son David; thou shalt both do great things and also shalt still prevail." But the latter remembering the former treachery and malignant passions, when aroused, of his enemy, therefore, "he said in his heart, I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul, for they have driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, go serve other gods." Yet in this great trial of temptations that the Psalmist felt he put his dependence on God, and looked to him for support as is indicated in the 141st Psalm, which he composed just before his flight into Gath. He there begs of God grace, that he may not sin against him with his tongue, nor be drawn into any idolatrous practices by living among the Philistines, "and David said unto Achish, If I have now found grace in thine eyes, let them give me a place in some town in the country, that I may dwell there. Then Achish gave him Ziglah that day." "When a man's ways please the Lord he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Prov. 16: 7. The Spirit of the Lord was not only with and upon David, but it manifested itself also in raising up and drawing to him "Men of might, and men of war, fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were as swift as the roes upon the mountains. Captains of the host, one of the least, was over, or could resist a hundred, and the greatest a thousand," of the enemy, and who came in the demonstration of the spirit and of power and said: "Thine are we David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse. Peace, peace, be unto thee and peace be unto thy helpers for thy God helpeth thee." 1 Chron. 12: 8, 18.

As the Temporal Kingdom David was rearing up, is typical of the spiritual kingdom Jesus came to establish in the hearts of his followers, so from the time of David's anointing to be King, and his great victory and achievement over the giant Goliah, and the whole Philistine army, his kingdom began to increase and gather strength, and Saul and his kingdom to decrease and get weaker. So also did his trials and afflictions increase, as the opposition and persecution increased and raged through Saul, to that extent, as even to despair of his life, if he should remain longer in any coast of Israel." "And David arose and passed over with his six hundred men that were with him unto Achish," among the most bitter enemies of the Israelites, and of the Lord, though then at peace with him. Yes, and even on his way to Ziglah, he was reinforced by a number of mighty men of war, some of which were captains of thousands, who rendered him essential service in a severe conflict to which he was soon called and in which he gained a complete victory over the Amalekites and greatly enriched himself with the spoils.

Our Savior, in one of His parables, compares the Kingdom of Heaven to a grain of mustard seed, which is very small "but when it is grown it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree." In the rich and fertile soil of Palestine, the expansion of a small seed containing within itself the elements of the future plant, as the acorn does of the oak, illustrates the contrast between the infancy of the Church of Christ, its progress and final prosperity, as well as between the first glimmering of light, and early fruits of God's grace in the soul, and the growth, progress, and full development of Christian character in the believer. Again we may perhaps more properly compare the life and trials of a christian, the infancy of his faith and strength, to a tree whose top is small, while the root is young and shallow, hence is not so liable to withstand the shaking winds and tempest, as the large high grown trees are. But as the top rises higher, so the root grows greater, and takes deeper hold to cause it to endure its greater assaults of storm and tempests. So also is it with the Christian Pilgrim, who from a small beginning gradually increases in strength taking deeper root as he grows in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, though he may and will be, more or less, greatly harassed and assaulted with trials of temptations, persecution and afflictions, which if steadfastly resisted in the faith, will eventually only serve to increase the same, and establish him the more. Though he may be assailed if need be, with great trials of temptation, but by faith in and through Christ, the captain of our salvation, we may triumph, and behold him walking on the troubled sea, saying "It is I, be not afraid." Again there may be seasons when one is almost ready to conclude and say with David in despair, "I shall one day perish, by the hand of my pursuer." Especially may he think so, if his soul be under the influence of perplexing temptations, &c. These says Dr. Owen, "May so disturb the soul for a season that it may not be able to form a right judgment of its state and progress. A ship at sea may be so tossed by a storm, that the most skillful mariners may be unable to discern whether they make any headway, while they are carried on with success and speed. The very act of resisting these temptations may, and will, contribute to the invigoration of the believer's spiritual nature in a degree, over which, when the tempest subsides, he will find reason to rejoice.

Usually in the allwise providence of God, the greater the trial and conflict, from whatever cause they may originate, whether from spiritual enemies, "the rulers of the darkness of this world," persecution, or bodily afflictions, the greater the consolation and spiritual strength derived. So that in every conflict the combatant gains renewed power, is reinforced, so that he can contend and fight more valiantly, and successfully and come off "more than conquerer Him through that loved us, and gave himself for us."

D. NEGLEY.

Welch Run, Pa.

LOVE.

"Jesus said unto him, thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, "Thou shalt love shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On these two commoandments hang all the law and the prophets. Mat. 22 : 38, 39, 40.

Dear members, we should all be in possession of love, for God is love, and if we dwell in God, we dwell in love. Love will never harm any one, but will do good unto all, both saint and sinner, friend or foe. There is no need to say we love God, for if we do, and keep His commandments, it is manifest, for there is no internal without an external. So love will manifest itself without telling it to those around us. If a man would say he loved God, and is not willing to keep the commandments, it is not yet manifest. Obedience to the commandments is the way, and the only way, that we can truthfully declare our love.

Then, dear members, if we love God we will not be slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord and one another with all our heart, mind and strength ; and also try to get others to serve Him. Our highest aim will be to have God honored, for we feel that He is truly worthy. God loved us first and if we love Him we will feel willing to do all He commanded. The mother of Jesus said to the servants, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." Now if we love God, we will love the brethren, and not only so, but our neighbor, and if we do, we will do them good. So we will do good to our enemies, for no must love them said our blessed Master. Jesus says, "By this shall ye know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Love will never prompt us to speak evil one of another. Love will not divide us but it will unite us. The body of Christ was not a divided body ; so the church can not be divided, for Jesus prayed that His followers should be one, as He and His disciples were one.

The word of the Lord came unto the prophet saying, "Thus saith the Lord, I remember thee, the love of thine espousal." Jeremiah 2 : 2. Oh let us all remember that we are espoused to one husband, that we might be presented as a chaste virgin to Christ. We do not believe that when Christ comes to gather His children, He will seek for two wives, as Christ is the bridegroom, and His church is the bride or wife, not the wives. The Revelator says, 19 : 7, 8. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to Him ; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white ; for the linen is the righteousness of saints." Without love we cannot get the robe of righteousness. Pure and undefiled love will have its watch and pray that we lust not after the evil things of this world. Our affections will be on the things we love, for the things we love best we think the most of ;—it is impossible to forget those whom we love.

Our neighbor comes in next, and to love him as ourself will require us to do much for him, as we will do much to make ourselves comfortable. We love to read the PILGRIM, and it may be our neighber would like to read it too. Then if we have the means to help him to it, and do not, we do not show that we love him. Also in many other things our neighbor may be needy, and if we do not help him, we do not manifest our love for him. Actions speak louder than words, and the tongue may love more than the heart. This is the reason there are so many poor and needy neglected ; but we thank God that He will not neglect them if they are honest poor. If such live to the honor and glory of God until they die, they will be rich in heaven.

We will now give some references speaking of love, and we hope the reader will look them up.

Matt. 22 : 37, 38, 39, 40. 5 : 44. 19 : 19. 10 : 37. Mark 10 : 21. Luke 11 : 45. 7 ; 47. John 15 : 9. 5 : 42. 15 : 10. 14 : 23. 21 : 15, 16, 17. 3 : 16, 19. 11 : 36. 12 : 43. 13 : 1, 23. 19 : 26. 20 : 2. 21 : 7, 20. 14 : 21, 28. 15 : 6. 16 : 27. 17 : 23, 26. 3 : 35. 11 : 17. Rom. 16 : 9. 13 : 10. 15 : 30. 2 Cor 5 : 14. Gal. 5 : 6, 13, 22. 1 Thess. 1 : 3. Heb. 6 : 10. 1 Thess. 5 : 8. 2 Thess. 2 : 10. Heb. 13 : 1. 4 : 8, 6, 16, to the end of the chap. Ephr. 1 : 4. 3 : 17. 4 : 2, 15. 5 : 2. Col. 2 : 2. 1 Thes. 3 : 12. 5 : 13. Rom. 5 : 5. 2 Cor. 13 : 11. 2 Thess. 3 : 5. 1 John 2 : 5. 3 : 16. 17. 4 : 9. 5 : 3. Rom. 5 : 8. 12 : 9. Gal. 5 : 14. James 2 : 8. Rom. 13 : 8. 1 John 1 : 7, 11, 12. 1 Pet. 1 : 22. 1 Pet. 1 : 8, 2 : 17. 1 John 2 : 15.

JOHN KNISLEY.

Plymouth, Ind.

A MILLION OF MONEY.

There lived and died, not long since, in the west of England, a gentleman of wealth and position, whose death was attended by circumstances of the deepest solemnity. He had been left an orphan early in life, and the property bequeathed to him gradually accumulated until he became of age. The day he completed his twenty-first year, a large dinner was given by him to his tenants and numerous friends. When the cloth had been removed, one of the former proposed the health of their host, wishing him "long life and prosperity."

He rose almost immediately to reply, thanked all for the kind manner in which they had responded to the toast, and referring to the mention made of "success in life," added with great emphasis and determination that he intended to make a million of money, even if he went to hell for it.

Many seemed momentarily stunned at the awful resolution, but wine was flowing freely, and their spirits rose high, so the transitory effect speedily passed away. Many years also rolled rapidly by, until it seemed as though his desire would be realized. Everything succeeded with him. Every mercantile speculation prospered, and money came in with great rapidity. Wealth brought a large circle of friends and every comfort in its train, while, to crown all, he was returned to Parliament, as one of the members for the country.

Hitherto he had been living an ungodly life—that is "without God in the world." The glittering show of this present evil scene engrossed his attention, and absorbed every thought from morning until night. He had been left for many years to "go his own way," but the Lord in his providential dealings, saw fit to lay him on a bed of sickness and bring him even to the very door of death. At first everything was treated in an off-hand, careless manner, but the disease took speedily so serious a turn, that the worst apprehensions were entertained. The best physicians were called in, friends telegraphed for, consultations held, an operation decided upon, and every preparation for settling his worldly affairs on the following Thursday, in case of an emergency. So anxious indeed, had he become lest he should not live until then, that he sent for his favorite physician, saying "Doctor, I will give you a hundred pounds if you make me live till Thursday." He was told that the utmost was done for him and more than that was impossible. This was not sufficient, for on the following day he cried out in his mental agony, "Doctor, I will give you a thousand pounds if you make me live till Thursday." Receiving the same reply, he became so enraged, that with all the passion his poor frame was capable of, he cursed and blasphemed the name of the Most High, ordered his medical attendant out of his presence, bidding him never to visit him again.

Soon after this, a faithful old servant came rushing from his room exclaiming, "I could bear to hear my poor master curse and swear, but I cannot remain now. He says he sees a dreadful creature who has come to take him away." Thus alarmed, his relatives rushed to his dying couch, to find only the poor corpse with all its features agonized and distorted, as if the very devil himself had come and literally torn body and soul asunder. When the will was read, it was found that he had made "A million of money!"

"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, ? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Mark viii. 36 : 37. "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish, it is that they shall be destroyed forever." —Psalm xcii, 7. "All flesh is as grass, and the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away, but the Word of the Lord endureth forever."—1 Peter i. 14 : 25.

Dear reader, are you treasuring in your heart anything that keeps you from deciding at once for Christ? Satan cares little what it is, so long as the result is the same. His one desire is to keep you from being occupied with Christ—the source and spring of all blessing to the soul. Thus it is that he presents to your heart the very thing which suits it exactly. It may be "A million of money," and it may be a dress, a shawl, or a bonnet. A toy would suit his purpose as well as a kingdom, provided it be but that which keeps you from receiving the Lord Jesus Christ "by faith unto salvation." Satan knows, and devils know, what man so oft refuses, that

"None but Jesus
Can do helpless sinners good."

—The Christian.

A little wrong done to another, is a great wrong done to ourselves.

They are always impaired by affliction, who are thereby not improved.

An honest man is believed without an oath, for his reputation swears for him.

How the slight pebbles fret the wave. Would the wave, if not fretted, make that pleasant music?

SWIFTNESS OF TIME.

How swiftly time glides by and is lost to us forever. How important then that we judiciously improve this time that is so kindly allotted unto us. We are placed in the world for a noble purpose, to make the needful preparations for the world to come. We are surrounded with many advantages and privileges far superior to those of many of our fellow creatures whereby we can be more fully prepared for this great and important work. We are in possession of health, strength and sound minds, inestimable blessings, and all bestowed through the mercies and loving kindness of our Father in Heaven, who, in return, wishes our all devoted to His cause. He has given us time, place and opportunity to make this preparation, yet how sadly do we misuse these golden opportunities by living careless and unconcerned, engaging in the frivolities of the day, seemingly unconscious of the truth that time is fleeting by.

Time, this precious boon will not always be ours. Our days are numbered, and perhaps if we knew to what extent our lives would be prolonged, we would be more zealous in improving the time that is now in our possession. The present only is ours. The future is unknown to us. The past we have experienced, and when we take a retrospective view over our past lives we discover where we in many instances allowed precious time to pass by unimproved. That time is lost, and we necessarily suffer the consequences thereof. In youth the mind is more susceptible, hence impressions and habits that are formed while young, have a correlatory bearing on the character in riper years. This time, then, is the most important period of life as it shapes the conduct and principles for future responsibilities.

Youth is also the time to serve the Lord. No other time is more appropriate. How much better to give the heart to Jesus while young, before "the evil days come,"—before wandering so far in the paths of sin. It is a duty all justly owe to God before entering upon the responsible cares and duties of life. It is also a pleasant service, one that affords more real enjoyment than all the giddy amusements of the world. Time once past can never be recalled, and if we spend it while here to no advantage, we will reap no reward at the great day of final accounts.

Our lives are uncertain, death is in the land and is calling many from earth away. We know not how much time we may have, perhaps but little, and such a great work to perform. We do know that time is rapidly passing by, and with it many are hurled from time to a vast eternity, there to give an account of the time which they spent while here. How many have, upon a dying bed, when viewing their past lives that has been spent to no good purpose,—who having neglected the "One thing needful," been made to exclaim, "If I only had my time to live over again, I would do better and lead a different life, but now it is too late, too late." Too late, after perhaps living until the head is white with age; having had so much time to make peace with God,—so many privileges and blessings have been strewn in their pathway, and yet all have been rejected, and now it is too late. The time is passed and cannot be recalled. The day of grace is about to close, and the departing soul can only mourn over the great mistake of misusing the precious time that God had so graciously given to prepare for the great change that must now soon take place. Should this sad scene not stimulate others who might be thus rejecting God's mercies, and arouse them from their lethargy to see the great mistake of spending the morning of life enjoying only the carnal pleasures of this world?

Dear young friends, now is the time to come to Jesus. Do not wait for a "more convenient season," that season may never come. The Savior has often knocked at the door of your hearts for admittance, and yet you refuse to leave the Heavenly stranger in,—have rejected the gentle calling of Him who says in accents of love, "Come unto Me." The Master has often called for you, and still you procrastinate your return to Him. You no doubt have been almost persuaded to go with the people of God, but finally concluded to wait awhile. You may think you are young and have time yet, but remember time is fleeting by. Perhaps while you are halting between two opinions, not quite willing to decide for Christ, death, that cruel monster, may visit you and claim you as a victim, and then it will be too late, your destiny will be forever sealed. The world offers many pleasures and allurements but they are all of a transitory nature, and are not worthy to be compared with the happy seasons and sweet enjoyments that are derived from the service of Jesus. May we all be awake to our souls' interest and not suffer precious time to pass by unimproved.

"Oh time! how few thy value weigh,
How few will estimate a day;
Days, months and years are rolling on,
The soul neglected and undone."

W. A. CLARK.

James Creek, Pa.

Sweet is the look of sorrow for an offence, in a heart determined never to commit it more.

THE GOODNESS OF GOD.

In all the earth there is no name like the name Jehovah. Throughout all the earth there is no heart like His. There is no love or welcome such as He grants to them who come unto Him. He invites all to come back, to enter into and to dwell in Him. If we be humble, though we be cast into the extremeties of life He will not disdain us. If we are humble and contrite He delights to dwell with us. We should rejoice that He is thus welcoming all those who seek Him, helping their infirmity, and that His mercies extend not only to those who come unto Him, but that He is awaking, by His word and spirit those that sleep and those who are dead in sin, and by all His influences drawing souls back unto Him, their source and their head. We should thank the Lord continually for all His mercies to us. We should consider the goodness of God, "wherein He hath helped us," and when we have brought before the mind all the bounties and blessings it can comprehend we should remember that there are many others which we do not understand. The gifts of God to mankind are more numerous than the leaves in summer. They shine more brilliantly than the stars at night, illumining our way all through life—filling it with comfort and blessedness, and their full purposes of good to the soul are yet unfulfilled. God is long suffering toward us, waiting for us to be able to appreciate and to enter into the fruition of His nature. As we wait for our children, watching them and taking care of them until they come up to us, so the Lord waits upon us to bless us abundantly more than we can imagine. When we arrive in the other and better world, when we have come to the measure of the stature of perfect men in Christ Jesus, our eyes shall be cleansed, then we shall see how thickly God's mercies were strewn along our pathway through life. All men should rejoice in God's immeasurable generosity, and in the out-flowing, ever-pouring abundance of His thoughts and goodness to them, notwithstanding their rebellious, unworthy natures. What is man that he should withstand God's holy nature? Fear, guilt, remorse or humiliation should not take us away from God, for it is because of our weakness, our infirmities and our wickedness that He desires us to come to Him, that He may strengthen, forgive and cleanse us from all sin, and that He may establish us forever in His righteousness. We should not keep away from God because we have been selfish, neither by reason of tribulation or sickness should we refuse to be filled with the unbounded love of God. Under all the varied circumstances of life we should look up to God as the author and finisher of that faith the end of which is the salvation of the soul. Oh that men would everywhere be willing to be won by the goodness and gentleness of a merciful, indulgent God, that they might know His greatness, His power, and His willingness to accept abundantly their feeblest endeavors to come to Him,—that they might understand how He will not break a bruised reed nor quench smoking flax until He brings forth judgement unto victory. But, alas! among the innumerable host are only a few, here and there one, who are walking upon the narrow way, who are striving "to enter in at the straight gate." For the goodness which God gives unto many they return ingratitude. Their evidences of indifference and disobedience are heaped up before Him like mountains of iniquity. But if they come out from darkness and turn to God to seek Him He will be found of them. He will cause their burden of sin and guilt to roll away and instead will give them a burden that is light and a yoke that is easy. He will permit them to see, by faith, that there is beyond the tearful, clouded days of this life, a place where the weary are forever at rest. God helps all His cross-bearing children to see, even under the most distressing circumstances, to find a comfort—a soul-cheering view of the goodness which is laid up for them in heaven. All who are sorely tried with pain, with burdens, with cares and weariness, until they almost loose the ambition of life, for whom there seems to be nothing but a rough path down to the grave, whose earthly prospects are as a shattered mirror, to all such there remaineth a rest that no storm can disturb. Our earthly friends will leave us, the enjoyment of health will soon be gone, our earthly treasures will fly away, worldly honor is as a bubble, all things terrestrial are passing away. But the goodness of God—they that are born of Him will endure forever.

God gives glorious privileges unto men, but many disregard them. They do not see them. They grovel thro' life with their minds uncultured, undeveloped. Oh, that they might be filled with anguish that they should bear such souls, which are so benighted—missing the enjoyment of the goodness of God. When the conscience is stained with sin, when the heart is filled with guilt—when our lying down and rising up is in company with fears and remorse God will abundantly bless and forgive if we turn our faces toward His loving kindness and His forgiving love. May the time speedily come when all men shall be taught of God, and shine forth in the beauty of true religion, and may His kingdom come until the whole earth shall be filled with His goodness.

J. B. G.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

"BEHOLD, I COME AS A THIEF."

"Behold," saith the Lord Jesus, "I come as a thief"—that is unexpectedly. "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up; therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

"Behold, I come as a thief"—that is, in the dead of night, when men are all fast asleep. So will the Lord Jesus come at a time when the world are altogether asleep in spirit—altogether unaware and thoughtless—none of them thinking of any such things at all—all just thinking that things are going on as usual, for their time at least.

"Behold, I come as a thief"—that is, to find men unprepared. "For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark; and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

"Behold, I come as a thief"—that is, suddenly. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even to the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

Solemn, awful, startling words! full of comfort, indeed, to those who know and love the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior and their Friend—"whose they are, and whom they serve"—but full of terror, alarm, destruction, and despair, to those who know Him not and love Him not.

To those who love Him, and are looking for Him, Christ will come to bring blessing and glory; to those who love Him not, but love the world, and live for it, He will come to bring judgment and punishment—the day of perdition of ungodly men.

Yes—there is an awful day coming for the world! Some morning, when all are going about their day's business or pleasure, just as usual—or some night, when people are asleep in their beds, or awake for deeds of darkness—when "the adulterer has waited for the twilight, saying, No eye shall see me"—and thieves "in the dark break through houses, which they marked for themselves in the daytime"—suddenly, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, the heavens will open—a light brighter than the sun will make the noonday look pale, or break in upon the darkness of night—and "then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Then what will sinners do, when the angel's trumpet blast shall resound through earth and heaven, and they shall feel in that tremendous moment that they have trifled too long, and that now it is too late, and all is lost for ever and ever!—Silverdale Tracts.

THEY WILL NOT LEARN.

The world learns its lessons slowly. Many of the world do not learn its lessons at all. The young are everywhere growing up amid the ruins of other lives apparently without inquiring, or caring for the reasons of the disasters of life, fortune, reputation, that are happening, or have happened, everywhere around them. One man, with great trust of money in hands, betrays the confidence of the public, becomes a defalter and takes his life. Another led on by power and place is degraded at last to a poor demegogue without power and influence. Another makes a surrender of himself to sensuality, becomes a disgusting thing, with heart and brain more foul than the nests of the unclean birds. Another by tasting and tasting the wine cup becomes a drunkard at last; and dies in horrible delirium, or lives to be a curse to his wife, children and friends. A young girl, loveing not wisely; but too well yields herself to a seducer, who ruins and forsakes her to a life of shame, and a death of despair. Not one girl but thousands yearly, so that a great company of those whose robes are soiled beyond cleansing, hide themselves in the grave; or keep filled to repletion the ranks of prostitution. Again and again in instances beyond counting, are these tragedies repeated, in full presence of the rising generation, and yet seem to grow no wiser.—Selected. D. F. G.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querrulous heart would make it!
To the soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the winter storm prevaileth.

Better to hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep thro'
When the ominous clouds are rifted!
There never was a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoard of treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are ready and willing;
Than to snap the delicate, minute threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

TWO SCENES.

A gentleman took his son to a drunken row in a tavern, where the inmates were fighting and swearing, and said he.

"Do you know what has caused all this?"

"No, sir."

His father, pointing to the decanters, said "That's the cause. Will you take a drink?"

The boy started back with horror, and exclaimed, "No!"

Then he took the child to a cage of a man with delirium tremens. The boy gazed upon him affrighted, as the drunkard raved and tore and thinking the demons after him, cried! "Leave me alone! leave me alone! I see 'em, they're coming!"

"Do you know the cause of this my boy?"

"No, sir."

"This is caused by drink; will you have some?" and the boy shrank back with a shudder as he refused the cup.

Next they called at the miserable hovel of a drunkard, where was squalid poverty, and the drunken father beating his wife, and with oaths knocking down his children.

"What has caused this?" said the father.

The son was silent.

When told that it was rum, he declared that he would never touch a drop in his life.

But suppose that lad should be invited to a wedding feast, where, with fruit and cake, the wine cup is passed, amid the scenes of cheerfulness and gayety, where all the friends are respectable, beloved, and kind to each other, and he should be asked to drink, would he refuse? Or suppose him walking out with his father on New Year's day, to call on his young lady friends, to enjoy the festivity of the ushering in of the New Year. With other things, wine is handed to him by a smiling girl. His noble hearted father, whom he loves, presses the wine glass to his lips and compliments the young lady on the excellence of its quality, what wonder if the son follow his example?—Emblem Annual.

Selected for the PILGRIM.

OUR VALUE.

Children, you are worth more than many sparrows. You are of more worth than all the birds that fly. Not because God made you and did not make them. The same great Creator gave life to all things that live, move and have their being. Nor are you worth more than they, because you are larger. True worth does not depend on size. Nor is it because you are better dressed than the birds, for your clothes are not so pretty as theirs. Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like the peacock, the humming bird, or the goldfinch. Nor are you worth more than they because you can sing more sweetly than they, for the notes of the lark, the thrush and many other birds, are sweet indeed. Nor is it because you live longer than the birds; many little children die as soon as the sparrows, and some birds are said to live as long as the oldest men. Do you ask why you are of more value than many sparrows? I answer, you have a thinking mind. Birds know how to get their food, to make their pretty nests, and do many other things. God gave them this skill, but they cannot think as you can. There has been some children who have had very thoughtful minds. Little children grew up to be very wise. They became wise in the study of the stars, the air and the earth. Some have grown up to be learned about trees and flowers. Some about birds and beasts. Some about one thing and some about another, with their minds they have sought to know much of the works of God. So you may learn a great deal about his works, and also of his Word. The little child who loves to pray and loves the Savior too, and sing as angel's do, shall dwell where all is joy, peace and love. A harp of gold he then shall have and sing the power of Christ to save

ELIZA A. HOWELL.

FAIR PLAY.

Hearth and Home talks thus to boys:

"Fair play in play is the foundation for fair play in life. To play unfairly is to steal. By the rules of the game you have certain rights and your opponent has rights. These rights, like all rights, are of the nature of property. If you take the slightest advantage to which you are not entitled, you are to that extent—well, thief is a hard word to use. But I will let you or any other conscientious boy say what one is who takes that which does not belong to him, and thus infringes on the rights of another.

The boy who plays fairly is sure to make an honorable man. I should not like to say that the boy who plays unfairly will grow to be a rogue, But I will say that the boy who takes unfair advantages in a game shows a weak moral nature and cannot be depended on in a pinch.

HOW TO DO GOD'S WILL

A Sabbath School teacher instructing his class on that portion of the Lord's Prayer, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," said to them, "You have told me, my dear little children, what is to be done—the will of God; and where it is to be done—on earth; and how it is to be done—as it is done in heaven. How do you think the angels and happy spirits do the will of God in heaven, as they are to be our pattern?

The first child replied, "They do it immediately."

The second, "They do it diligently.'

The third, "They do it always."

The fourth, "They do it with all their heart."

The fifth, "They do it although," Here a pause ensued, and no child appeared to have an answer; but, after some time, a little girl arose and said: "Why, sir, they do it without asking any questions."

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Pilgrim:—It is Sabbath morning,—blessed Sabbath. After spending part of it in perusing the pages of Divine Truth, I have concluded to drop a few lines for the PILGRIM, or its readers.

We have no abiding city here,—sooner or later we must be called away from time to eternity. Then, as we all know that we must go to the cold and silent grave, while we have the time and privilege, let us work, for the night cometh when no man can work. Let us not put off the good cause of Christ, like Felix of old, for a more convenient season. Dear brethren and sisters, let us become more and more earnest in searching after the plan of salvation. Let us hold out faithful to the end, for the crown is not in the beginning, neither in the middle, but they that endure unto the end shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. Let us prove faithful that our names may be written in the Lamb's book of life, so that when our eyes shall look upon the book of Redeemed souls, our names may be there, as the sentence shall be pronounced at that great and notable day of the Lord, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." There we can spend eternity in singing and praising our Maker, "For eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what God hath prepared for those that love Him." Then if our Heavenly Father has prepared such a joy for them that do His will, let us be one in that happy number.

Dear young pilgrims, let us improve our time while we are yet young, for the Bible says, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Let us fear God and keep His commandments for this is the whole duty of man, for God shall bring every work into judgment whether it be good or whether it be evil. We may think we are young, and can therefore enjoy the pleasures of this world for a season, but let us remember the lily of the field which to-day is, and to-morrow may pass away. Though we have the prospect of a long life to-day, to-morrow we may be numbered among the pale nations of the dead. When we come to examine ourselves, we have nothing of our own, we are but weak instruments in the hands of God. We are here on this sin-polluted and blood-stained earth, yet we have the glorious promise of being washed white with the blood of the Lamb. Is that not a glorious promise? Is it not worth striving for? On earth we meet with troubles and trials, and oft must give that sad farewell to meet no more, but if we live a Christian life, we have the glorious promise to meet in a better world where we need not separate, but can sing the song of Moses forever and ever.

"A few more Suns shall set,
O'er these dark hills of time;
And we shall be where suns are not,
A far serener clime,

A few more struggles here,
A few more partings o'er;
A few more toils, a few more tears,
And we shall weep no more."

From your young sister,
MARY HOOVEN.

Middleburg, Ind.

EASTON, W. VA, }
May 15th '72. }

Dear Pilgrim:—Days come and go, seasons change—the bloom perfects and the fruit ripens from year to year, and we count it All as a tale that is told or a song that is sung.

The day leaves its impress on the heart and brain, the seasons bring their vicissitudes, and the flower and fruit typify our life hid under the shadow of emblems, yet we go our way giving little heed to the lessons of nature, or the teachings of conscience, or the promptings of love.

Yes, I was glad when they said unto me, let us go up unto the house of the Lord, as we did on last Saturday and Sunday at "Fairview." My heart testified that it was good to be there, for the Lord met with us, and that to bless. The words fitly spoken will not return void, for I am sure they fell in good ground, and in that future, towards which we are all tending the garnered sheaves will show how great has been the harvest.

Those who were there and participated in the feast of love, will long remember it as the Holiest of Holies, where the soul entered Divine presence and found peace. It was good to be there, for it was the beginning of a new life to some who had been groping in darkness, and to others it was a renewal of the covenant long since made, a strengthening of the bonds of love, and a visible drawing towards the Invisible. Let us not forget our teachings, and grow cold and hard again, but let us have zeal serving the Lord and keeping His commandments. Then shall we have a right to the Tree of Life and enter through the gates into the City.

In the one hope,
L. H. MILLER.

Dear Brethren:—From time to time I shall endeavor to keep you advised of our affairs in this part of the "moral vineyard."

The winter that is just passed was one of unparalled rigor, and in consequence much suffering and privation was endured by the people. I said "endured" but I should not have used the term as the sequel will show. The cold season commenced about the 25th of December '71, and continued with great severity until about the 25th of March '72. The "oldest inhabitant" has no remembrance of such a winter. Many cattle perished in this and adjoining counties, and those that survived are much deteriorated in value.

Our county has been very sickly several months. Scarcely a family have escaped the sad visitation. I can number as many as fourteen that have died since Christmas, all within the compass of a few miles. The disease is a malignant type of Pneumonia, though not all resulted from that cause. Others of our neighbors are now lying in a dangerous condition. I pray that the Lord will in mercy soon stay the rod of chastisement.

Among the number of deaths, are five of our members. Our congregation has suffered a heavy diminution of numbers from this cause and from emigration since I wrote you last, and since that time we have added but one by baptism. We have lost none by expulsion, so we may hope that one soul at least is gained for Heaven, which you know is a rich reward for our feeble labors. One soul is worth more than all the world

Yours in the Faith.
D. C. MOOMAW.

Announcements.

Please announce through the PILGRIM, the Lord willing, the Lost Creek church, Juniata county, Pa., intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 3rd and 4th of June, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m. A hearty invitation is extended to all who may please to favor us with a visit. MICHAEL BASHOR.

Please announce that we the brethren of Cerrogorda Ill., intend to hold a Lovefeast on the 14th and 15th of June. A general invitation is extended, especially to ministering brethren. By order of the church.
JACOB TROXEL.

Please announce that we intend to have our Lovefeast on the 31st day of May next in the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin co., Pa., commencing at one o'clock p. m. Preaching next day in the forenoon. An invitation is given to all that have a desire to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

For the satisfaction of those wishing to come, we would say that our meeting house is about ¼ mile from the Shoburry & Lewstown R. R., and the morning train leaves Lewistown at 6:50 a. m. The other train leaves Lewistown at 12:20, p. m. Maitland is our station about five miles from Lewistown. JACOB MOHLER.

Please announce that we purpose holding our Lovefeast at Spring Run, near McVeytown station, Mifflin county, Pa., on the 29th and 30th days of May, 1872. A hearty invitation is extended to ministers and members.
JOSEPH R. HANAWALT.

The following notices were handed to us for publication with a request that we give a general invitation to all and a special one to ministering brethren.

Yellow Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., June 13th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Snake Spring Valley, Bedford Co., Pa., June 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Aughwick, Huntingdon county, Pa., 27th, 28th of May, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., 3d and 4th of June.

Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., 5th and 6th of June.

Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., June the 11th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Waterloo Congregation, Black Hawk Co., Iowa, June 15, 16, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m.

Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., June 14th commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. 5⅛ miles southwest of Plymouth. Those coming on the Mail Train will stop off at the Summit, three miles west of Plymouth.

Fawn River Congregation, Lagrange Co., Ind., June 15, 16, commencing at 10 o clock a. m. Six miles east of Lima at the house of bro. Eli Horner.

Urbana Ill., at the house of bro. George Dillings, June 22, 23. Brethren coming from the North or South, on the Ill. Central railroad, will stop off either at Thomasboro, or Champaign City. Those coming from East or West, on the Indianapolis and Bloomington railroad, will stop off at Mayview.

Please announce that we intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 6th and 7th of June, in the Maiden Creek church, near Mohrsville, Berks county, Pa. We give a general invitation to all, and especially to the ministering brethren. Those who come by railroad will stop off at Mohrsville station, on Reading & Pottstown Railroad.
JEREMIAH ROTHERMEL.

MARRIED.

GRIFFITH—MOSIER.—On the 14th inst., by Eld. J. P. Hetric, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. Wm. N. Griffith and Sally A Mosier, both of George's township, Fayette co., Pa.

DIED.

DICE.—In Shoal Creek congregation, Newton county, Mo., April 12th, 1872, brother Philip Dice, aged 60 years, 11 months, and 15 days.

The deceased was born April 28th, 1811, in Perry county, Pa. He was a worthy brother. He joined the Brethren in 1830, in 1851 he was elected deacon and served 8 years; he was then forwarded to the ministry in which he served 14 years. His complaint was heart disease and dropsy, from which he suffered eight weeks, but bore it patiently, often saying his sufferings would be remembered in heaven. Funeral text from 2 Timothy, 4:5–8, carried out by the undersigned. This text was selected by the deceased a few days before his departure. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors. He was well known, and his sociability and friendliness to every one he met caused the citizens to regret his loss. He left a sorrowing widow and six children. The widow and four children are members. The brother, from the time he joined the church, did not take part in government affairs, and had not voted for twenty-two years; his firm belief was, one denying the world, should take the New Testament as a guide for eternal happiness. ELD. D. HENDRICKS.

RITCHEY.—Near Bloody Run, Bedford county, Pa., May 14th, 1872, our worthy friend Daniel Ritchey, aged 32 years, 2 months and 19 days.

He leaves a dear companion and three little children. The subject of this notice, like many others, made no confession of faith, though in his last hours became much alarmed about his future salvation. On the day of his death I was sent for, but sorry to say death was staring him in the face when I came. He could only say, I wish to become a member of the church, but I have neglected my duty and now it is too late. I must now leave this world. After prayer he became somewhat reconciled, and in his last hour sang "Angel, O sweet angel, come to me." I, as an eye witness to the above very pitiful case, would say to those out of the ark of safety, take warning from the above and prepare to meet thy God. Funeral discourse from John 5:25; by S. A. Moore and the writer to a very large assembly. HENRY HERSHBERGER.

FRICK—In the Beaver Creek congregation, Dayton, Ohio, May 8th, 1872, Lizzie L. Frick, daughter of brother Wesley R. and sister Elizabeth Frick, aged 1 year, 6 months and 4 days. Funeral services by the Brethren from 2 Samuel 14:14.
B. F. DARST.

CROP REPORTS.

As a report of the growing crop may be interesting to our readers we will give from such localities as heard from.

PENNSYLVANIA, Maryland and Virginia as far as reported, expect light crops—cannot, under the most favorable circumstances, exceed a half crop of winter sown grain, and thus far, the weather continues to be quite unfavorable to Spring crops. Fruit promises fair and is now well set.

INDIANA. From Indiana we have the following: De Kalb county. The wheat crop in this vicinity continues to grow better, and if we have a favorable summer, may be a fair one yet.

Allen Co. The wheat in the northern part of this county, also in Noble, promises well.

Lagrange Co. Experienced judges inform us that the average wheat crop of this county will not fall under ten bushels to the acre. The present weather is remarkably favorable to the growth of the young wheat plant, and the fields begin to make a handsome show.

IOWA. From such parts of Iowa as heard from the reports are promising and expect large crops.

CALIFONNIA. Prospects are still improving and harvest is rapidly approaching.

OREGON has been quite wet, but they expect a plentiful harvest.

As many of our readers desire a general report, we would be pleased to have an item of information for this department from every county where the PILGRIM circulates. Will our readers please remember this and let us hear from them. Put it on a separate slip of paper and let it be short, something like the reports from Indiana. If our readers would see to it that we get a report from each county throughout the States we could make the Crop Report both interesting and useful.

EDITORIAL.

THE PUBLICATION OF BOOKS AND TRACTS.

We this week copy from the Visitor an article from the pen of our Bro. J. S. Flory that we think should have more than a passing notice. We solicit for it a careful reading, as we think the ideas presented are founded upon truth, and hope it may be the means of awakening an interest in this important subject.

We, too, have thought much of having suitable books published for our youth, and have felt that we, as a church are, perhaps, not making the effort we should through the instrumentality of the press.

The press can be made a powerful instrument for good as well as for evil, and at the present it seems that the messengers of satan are employing it as a means for the promotion of their work. To-day our land is flooded with such literature as is baneful in all its bearings. Our youth are devouring it with greed, apparently unconscious that their lies beneath the vile scepter sapping the very essence of all that is good and truthful.

This influence should be averted, and it can be done by meeting it on its own premises. The press is used as an instrument to battle against truth, and if we who profess to be founded and grounded on the truth expect to predominate, we must use the same means for defense with skill and alacrity.

The word of God is "quick and powerful" and if we will only use it skillfully, it will indeed be "mighty through God," to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan. But if we will depend on the strength of the weapon alone, we cannot expect to gain the victory. We must be ready to hurl a death blow at every appearance of evil, and we do think that, at the present day, this can be done successfully through the press. Then as satan will make inroads to the soul through various channels, we should be prepared to meet him in these channels. This we may do by presenting truth through the same medium, and as the press is, at the present day, one of the most powerful means of diffusing error, should we not try to make it a powerful means to spread the truth? Some will contend that the Bible is sufficient for our youth to read. Certainly it is as Bro. Flory says, if they would read it. But as our youth are not inclined to read it, should we not employ every means to form an interest and create a relish for the truth.

Just here we want to remark to those who would have no literature but the Bible that there is an apparent lack of duty in supplying the demands that are made for the Bible. The American Bible Union found, in the United States, 73,732 families who were destitute of the Bible the past year. Now it does seem to us that we shou'd of all others, be the most interested in having the Bible, at least, distributed throughout our land, yet to our knowledge there has been but little spent for this purpose. Is popular christendom alone to do this work? or is it the duty of us who profess to be the followers of the meek and lowly Lamb, to spend and be spent for the spread of the truth. Are we doing our duty? Have we the zeal we should have? These are questions that have been brought to our mind quite frequently, and as all will admit that the Bible should be placed within the reach of all classes and all nations, we think they should enlist the attention of the Brotherhood. Oh may every brother and sister think of these things, and it we suffer ourselves to be led by the good and Holy Spirit, we certainly will be led to the performance of that which is right.

The publishing of books, tracts, &c. inculcating the principles of true christianity, and especially adapted to the young and others is a subject that is engaging the attention of those who believe that this method may be the means of spreading the truth, and instilling correct religious principles in the minds of our youth, yet there is one consideration that appears to be overlooked, and that is, how shall this work be accomplished? There are many who think that we should have books published by the Brethren suitable for our Sabbath schools, and that the publication of such books should be begun at once. This if done at all, at the present, must be entered into as a private enterprise, with all the objections, prejudices, &c., to encounter. Among the Brethren there are as yet, comparatively, few Sabbath schools, and perhaps one-half of these would not procure books if they were published. And in view of the opposition they would meet on the part of some, and the expense with which the publication would be attended, the way for the commencement of the work has not yet appeared clear to our mind. If there were some wealthy brother who could afford to lose considerable, and was enough interested in the work to do so, such an one might commence the work. If we had the means as some have the fear of pecuniary loss would not be taken into consideration, but as it is our duty, as the Scriptures teach, to provide for our own house, or in other words, make an honest livelihood, we deem it not prudent to rush inconsiderately into such enterprises as may, in all probability, bring us into straitened circumstances. We have considered the matter carefully—made investigations as to the expense and think we have made pretty accurate calculations, and we cannot yet see but what the getting up of a Sabbath school library, will be attended with considerable of a loss on the part of the publisher.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, you may think that publishers are rather penurious, and that we always have an eye single to our pockets, and it may be a little too true, yet we emphatically denounce being more so than our readers. We are willing to bear our part of the expenses of any laudable enterprise, and we believe that if we as a church, could be roused up to the importance of making a greater effort to proselyte the world to the faith once delivered to the saints, with a decreased appreciation of money, things would soon present a different aspect. These two things, we fear, are great barriers in the way to the dissemination of the truth. We have been made to feel so from observations and from what we have learned. We now have on hands a lot of tracts that we think are red-hot shots at what is a very prominent error in the world to-day, yet from present indications we hardly expect that half of them will be called for. Why is it? Is there not a place for them? We think there is, and many thousand more might be distributed profitably if the proper course were taken. Some brethren will buy one copy, some a a dozen; and a few fifty, or as many as they think they can sell. Nor is this all, some may purchase 50 tracts, which according to our rates are 5 cts apiece, and sell them for 10 cts. Now we don't know whether this is done, and we suppose that brethren think they should have something for their trouble, but it is not the feeling that tract distributors should have. Why not the members of each church raise $4.00 and purchase a hundred of them and distribute them? At $1.00 per hundred each tract costs but 4 cts, and if this was generally done we could afford to put them at much lower rates. But the trouble is, our brethren call for only what they can sell, being cautious that there is no loss in cents and the result is, they do not get into the hands of the proper persons. Those who are believers in the "Anxious Bench Religion" are not going to buy them. Just so it is with books that embody the principles of the church, if we want them to have a proselyting influence we must put them into the hands of the world. And so it will be with our Sabbath-school books, we must put them into the hands of our youth. Popular christianity are yearly spending thousands of dollars thus, and by this means much false theology is instilled within the children of men. Brethren let us go to work with a zeal worthy the cause, showing indeed that we are a people zealous of good works.

A HANDBILL.

The following is a copy of a handbill recently posted in New Orleans:

"BENEFIT of Christ's Church Parochial School.—Near the dancing platform, a splendid booth and a large canvass tent, with seats reserved for the accommodation of ladies and children. The patrons of this Church, as well as the public, will here find a soda-water stand and confectionery, a restaurant filled with everything to satisfy the appetites of Epicureans; and, also, stocked with the choicest kinds of liquors, cigars, &c."

A SPLENDID BAR,

We copy the above to show our readers what means are employed to enhance the pecuniary interests of a creed that call themselves Christians. This bar is to be opened for the benefit of what is called Christ's Church, but to our mind it is simply preposterous to suppose that He will recognize them as His. If Christ ever appears at that fair, He will come with a scourge of cords and drive away those who dishonor His name by employing such means for the support of what they term His church. Call it a church if you will, but we believe it nothing more than satan's subjects, under the pretended name of Christians, trying to pilfer from their brethren, for the furtherance of their hell-begotten work. O God save the world from such wickedness.

As many of our brethren may not have yet heard from our A. M., we clip the following from an exchange:

The annual meeting of the German Baptists met with a severe loss by the storm on Saturday night. The canvas covering was blown down and torn badly, Sabbath morning finding them without a shelter of any kind save that offered by the surrounding barns and houses. There was preaching during the day at every church within four miles of the ground, and at several places on the ground. The arrivals are still large. To-day scores of men and women are busy repairing the canvass, &c., and with no further bad luck Tuesday will see them all under roof, and the meeting organized. Newspaper reporters are here from all the surrounding counties. —Commercial.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

Corals and Coral Islands.

Prof. Dana, of Yale College, in his new work on Corals, says that the chief source of coral is the secretion of a living organism, occupying the lowest part of the scale of animal life, and which is known in modern science, under the name of polyp. Coral is the stony frame which belongs to these animals, as a skeleton belongs to an individual of the higher orders of the animal kingdom.

"If we are astonished," he remarks, "that so great deeds should proceed from the little and low, it is because we fail to appreciate that little things, even the least of living or physical existences in nature, are, under God, expressions throughout of comprehensive laws—laws that govern alike the small and the great. It is not more surprising, nor a matter of more difficult comprehension, that a polyp should form structures of stone called coral, than that the quadruped should form its bones, or the mollusk its shell. The processes are similar, and so the result. The coral-made land is seldom more than ten or twelve feet above high tide. When first seen from the deck of a vessel, only a series of dark points appear just above the horizon. Soon after, the points enlarge into the plumed tops of cocoanut trees, and a line of green is traced along the surface of the water. As you approach still nearer, the lake and its belt of verdure are spread out before the eye, presenting a scene of rare interest. The surf beating loud along the margin of the reef, affords a strange contrast to the white coral beach beyond, the dense foliage of the grove and the embosomed lake with its tiny islets. The water of the lagoon, although but ten or twenty fathoms deep, is often as blue as the ocean. Where patches of sand or coral knolls rise near the surface, shades of green and yellow are intermingled, the green of a delicate apple-color, quite unlike the muddy tint of shallow waters. The belt of verdure is usually broken into islets separated by intervals of bare reef, so that, in fact, the larger coral islands are a string of islets along a line of reef."

TRAVEL TO THE YOSEMITE.—A California paper states that the new town of Merced, fifty-seven miles from the main line of the Central Pacific Railroad, has been laid out and is to be supplied with a fine hotel. Merced will be the railroad terminus and point of stage departure for Yosemite, by both the Coulterville and Mariposa routes. The distance from Merced to the great valley by each route is the same, 80 miles. The mode of travel by the Coulterville route will be by stages to "the top of the hill," as it is called, a distance of 73 miles, thence on horseback 2½ miles down into the valley, and thence in open carriages through the valley to the hotels, a final distance of five miles. The mode of travel by Mariposa will be by Fisher & Co.'s new passenger barouches to Clark's, a distance of 56 miles from Merced, thence by saddle horses into the valley, 24 miles. The rate of charges to tourists will be as follows: San Francisco to Merced, (138 miles) fare, $7.50; Stockton to Merced, (67 miles) fare $4.50; Sacramento to Merced, (114 miles) fare, $3.50. The full fare by stage and saddle horse from Merced to the valley by either route will probably be about $14.50. The total through fare for passage from San Francisco to the valley will therefore be about $22.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding. $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way." $3

Menno Simon's

COMPLETE WORKS.

In English, translated from the original Dutch or Holland, giving the whole of the great Reformers writings on the subject of Baptism. Price in full sheep $4.50; by mail $5.14.

Address, JOHN F. FUNK & BRO.,
May 2:-3m. Elkhart, Ind.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid,	$1 00
Per Dozen,		11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid,	75
Per Dozen,	"	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid	$ 1 00
Per Dozen		11 25
Arabesque plain,		1.00
Turkey morocco,		$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid,	50
Per Dozen,		5 50

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 29-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

☞GLAD HOSANNAS. We now keep on hand, for sale, the above music books which we will send, post free, at the retail price, 30cts, to all who may wish them.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY!

RENNER'S

HERB LIVER TONIC.

A certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Headache, in fact all diseases arising from a torpid liver, or impure blood, a great thing to build up the system and prevent disease.

Price $1.00 per bottle. Medicine sent by express. Wholesale price on trial for $2.00.

Address, DR. F. C. RENNER,
apr. 23, tf. Ladiesburg, Md.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hear what ministering brethren and others say about it:

BRO. RENNER, your medicines have the best name of any medicine ever sold in this country, A. HUTCHISON, Oak Hill, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your Liver Tonic cured my disease, I thank God for the great discovery. It has also cured a remarkable case of Scrofula near here. WM. H. BAILY, Raleigh, Va.

BRO. RENNER:—Your remedies are just what we need. I had the Dyspepsia, and tried Fahrney's, Shenk's and others, and lastly the Liver Tonic, I used but two bottles and am happy to say that I am heavier now than I ever was, my neighbors are surprised at my healthy appearance. D. S. STAYER, New Enterprise, Pa.

DR. RENNER:—Your remedies are doing wonders here. WM. H. GANES, Cool Springs, S. C.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871 Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

Up Trains. Ex.	Up Trains. Mail	Stations.	Down Trains. Ex.	Down Trains. Mail
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48	Saxton	7 18	Le 2 52
Le 7 30	10 00		7 00
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 06	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Marking Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JUNE 4, 1872. NO 23

POETICAL.

OH, WHERE ARE THE LOVED AND THE LOST?

BY MRS. H. A. RAOADAUGH.

Oh, where are the loved and the lost ones
Who left me in tears long ago?
Do they sleep neath the clods of the valley,
In their narrow homes dark and lonely,
Where the myrtle and hyacinth grow?

Are the dear eyes whose glances so tender
Once only my heart strings could thrill,
The strong form which lovingly ever
Was truly my shield and protector,
Forever in death to be still?

And the little ones who in life's morning
Were the joy and the pride of my heart,
Sweet Belle and dear Charlie and Orie,
Whose soft arms seem still to enfold me,
In the silence of death must we part?

No! My soul has had beautiful visions
Of a land which no mortal eyes see,
And the shining ones draped in God's Glory,
With rapture repeat the sweet story
Of Jesus whose blood set them free.

I know that my loved ones are with them,
In the pure robes of righteousness clad,
And the dear eyes will shine on me ever
When I too cross the cold, silent river
Up to their bright home with our God.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

WHEREIN DO THE SORIPTURES FORBID US TO FOLLOW THE FASHIONS.

"And they that use this world as not abusing it; for the fashion of this world passeth away."—1st. Cor. 7:31.

There are many other passages in the Holy Scriptures that are nearly equivalent to this: "For here we have no continuing city," &c.

There is not the least difficulty in the way when we undertake to find professors of religion who speak against what they suppose to be extravagance. It is not a difficult matter for us to inveigh against something with our eyes and our thoughts. It does not take any person who has common sense very long to see that fashion rules, and that it is a despotic tyrant, but to find two persons whose thoughts are in harmony with each other and with the Word of God in regard to the use or abuse of these ways and things of the world, is not an easy task. There are persons who scarcely ever or never think of anything but extravagance in dress when they speak of the fashions. They are God's creatures. I honor their zeal and their tenacity to the principle of self denial; for Christ and His apostles did bear witness against excessive addiction to vanity of dress; but whoever thinks that the word fashion, as it is used in the Scriptures is less applicable to other things, is certainly in error. There are also those who say, and sometimes boastingly too, that they do not follow the fashions of the world to any degree. I pity them. Again there are others who believe that the word fashion, as it is used in the Scriptures, and as it should be used by Christians, covers everything equally that is earthly, and that the Scriptures forbid extravagance, inordinate affection, and excesses of all kinds. This is my view. The inspired apostle does write, "In like manner also, that woman adorn themselves with modest apparel." In this comprehensive precept the adorning of the body is not forbidden, but it is restricted. "With shamefacedness and sobriety." This certainly refers directly to the feelings, restricting or limiting boldness, forwardness, &c, not with braided hair, or gold, or "pearls, or costly array." Such language certainly has direct reference to the wearing of silk and satin; to the weighing down of hands with rings, to the wearing of jeweled necklaces and all manner of glowing gems. Surely it refers directly to the literal braiding of the hair, wearing diamonds, pearls, jewels, rubies and all manner of Flora McFlimsey flunkyisms. These outrageous vanities should be despised and abandoned by the followers of the meek and lowly Lamb of God, and all those persons who are so empty-pated and silly-headed as to profess to be the followers of Christ, when they are trying to follow the various fashions, having their hearts, not upon Christ or things above that will endure forever, but upon the fashions of the world which pass away, all such persons should be meekly and gently taught to abhor these carnal propensities. But while attempting to bear witness against the extravagant use of anything, there is great danger of falling into the very error we are trying to expose. There is such a thing as making the apostles "mean just what we want to have them mean" and every person certainly has the privilege to express his best opinion regarding truth. I do not believe that the apostles bore witness against taste or love of what is truly beautiful. They certainly did not bear witness against reason, purity or virtue. I do not believe that the apostles intended to introduce total abstinence from any of the things of which they speak when referring to the adornment of the body. This may appear to some quite contrary to what they believe,—that he meant that there should be no braiding of the hair at all by any person, and that there should be no gold, or pearls, or costly array worn by any person anywhere. But we find that one of the apostles also writes,—"The love of money is the root of all evil." This passage of Scripture certainly refers directly to, and concerns and condemns all persons who have an inordinate affection for money.

Where are the persons who are ready to say the apostle meant by his language to introduce total abstinence from the use of money? There are none. All agree that the apostle meant by this language to strike at avariciousness or covetousness. It is truly sad,—sad to tell that there are at the present day more professors of the religion of Jesus Christ, in whom the brains of the thing is the love of money, than in whom other fashions rule. But "every creature of God is good, and to be received with thanksgiving," hence it is the abuse and not the use of anything which is forbidden in the Scriptures.

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

NO TIME TO PRAY.

In this age of worldly wisdom and the rush for place and position, how few find time to pray. Not even when night draws her sable curtains around her teeming millions, do they with folded hands and reverend mein utter even that childhood's prayer—"Now I lay me,"—or better still that sweet pathetic petition embracing all our wants, all our needs—"Our Father who art in Heaven."—Oh! if they only appreciated the blessedness of that sweet communion with the Sacred Presence, where heart speaks to heart, soul to soul and soul to God, they would never again forego an opportunity to enkindle and keep alive the sacred flame on the altar of the heart, or would prayers so often fall to the ground unheard and unanswered. If our hearts are touched with a live coal from off the altar we need never fear the result, for to be Christ-like the fire must forever burn and constant fuel be added thereto, lest the holy flame go out forever, or be supplanted by "strange fire" whose touch is desolation and death.

As in the act of writing the thoughts run in advance of the pen, so in prayer we lose sight of self and sensual things, and press forward to meet and hold free intercourse with Him, our Savior. Prayer to be acceptable must be a free-will offering, and an offering of first fruits, in which every idle thought—every vain desire—every wandering of the mind must be brought into subjection. No time to pray. Ah! when we find time to die, the soul shrinking back in herself in dismay sees too late the wasted moments in which salvation might have been found.

The sands of life are less'ning day by day,
Therefore O Pilgrim,—pray!

L. H. MILLER.

Education does not commence with the alphabet, it begins with a mother's look—with a father's nod of approbation, or a sign of reproof—with a sister's gentle pressure of the hand or a brother's noble act of forbearance—with handfuls of flowers in green dells, on hills and daisy meadows—with birds nests admired but not touched—with creeping ants and almost imperceptible emmets—with pleasant walks in shady lanes, and with thoughts directed in sweet and kindly tones and words to nature, to beauty, to acts of benevolence, to deeds of virtue, and to the source of all good, to God himself.

He who has struck his colors to the power of an evil habit, has surrendered himself to an enemy, bound by no articles of faith, and from whom he can expect only the vilest treatment.

THE AFFECTION OF A PARENT.

Now that I am a father, and know the affection of a parent, would I not defend from every danger, would I not bestow every good thing, would I not implore every blessing on my tender off-spring would I not rear and cherish their infant state, correct and educate their childhood, reprove and admonish their manhood, would I allow these little creatures to play with sharp pointed knives, to sport on the brink of a rapid stream, or dance about a pits mouth, would I permit them to hold in their hands the berries of the deadly night shade, or to put a cup of poison to their lips?

However indulgent, would I suffer them to refuse my commands, or to spit in my face, and if they labored under any disease that threatened their precious lives, what pains or expenses would I spare to procure them relief, if assured that a physician lived somewhere that could heal them without fail. Would I not send to the uttermost corner of the land, would I not travel to the ends of the earth? But hear me, O, parents, and let me hear myself, if our affection ends here, we are monsters of cruelty. Would we pluck them from brier and water, and yet permit them plunge into the fire of hell; and lie under the bellows of Jehovah's wrath? Will we snatch from them the sword pistol or knife? Will we allow them to wound themselves to the very soul with sin? Will we chastise their impertinence to us and wink at their spitting in the very face of God by open acts of sin? Are we desirous to have them early well bred and yet let them live in the neglect of prayer, which is the highest disrespect that can be put on the Author of our being. In a word, is this the sum of our kindness? Is this the height of our ambition for our dear children to see them happy in time, in the affairs of this life though they should be miserable beyond description through eternity. Their bodily pains excite our sympathy, and we will do all in our power to have their diseases healed and yet do nothing for their souls, though they pine away under sin, and suffer all the ravages of the second death, nor bring them in our prayers to the physician of souls, to the Savior of sinners. Then were my children ever so many, I have but one request for them all. That is, that they may fear and serve God here, and enjoy time forever. No matter though they sweat for their daily bread, this is entailed on all mankind. Let them toil and spin for their apparel, but let them be covered in the surety of righteousness. Again whatever bowels of compassion I feel towards my tender offspring, such pity will the Lord show towards those that fear Him.

AN OLD PILGRIM.

SELECTIONS.

"I AM A CHRISTIAN."

It is related of Sanctus, one of the early martyrs, who suffered in the latter part of the second century, that when examined with the most excruciating tortures, and questioned concerning his name, his city, his nation, and whether he was a slave or a freeman, no other answer or confession could his tormentors extort from the heroic man, save, "I am a Christian."

In these days of pride and vain-glory; of regard for names and sects and parties; of restless endeavor to secure the honor that cometh not from above; is it not well to pause, and consider the difference between the motives that govern men now, and those that led this primitive Christian to maintain his simple, yet glorious confession amid the direst tortures, and in the face of death itself?

"I am a Christian." We see here no pride of kindred or of nation; no pleading of family circumstances or relations; no urging his services to the State, or his personal goodness and uprightness; no selfish hope of release; and especially no thought of denying his Lord, to tarnish the glory of his testimony. He had experienced the power of the cleansing blood. He had tasted the pure waters of salvation. He had known the indwelling of the Comforter. In seasons of danger and of suffering he had proved the truth of the promise, "Lo, I am with you always," and had felt the sustaining power of the "everlasting arms." And now, in that hour of final conflict, he was ready to confess that worthy name by which he was called, and that only. It was enough for him to be a Christian, and to suffer and die for the sake of Christ.

Alas, how different it is to-day! In how much of the Christian service of this age is self exalted, and Christ dishonored! In these days of enlightenment and learning, when so much is thought of talent and intellectual ability, and so little of prayer and faith, how few of Zion's watchman can say with Paul, "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified?" In how much that is said to be done for the glory of God, is God almost forgotten! How much there is of self-gratification, how little of real self-denial, in the modern Christian warfare! How hath the offence of the cross ceased!

And has the church become a greater power for good in the earth? It is true that she is far greater in numerical strength, and in worldly wealth and splendor, than she was in primitive times. It is true that the "Gospel of the kingdom" has been so preached in all the world, that numbers have turned from idols to serve the living and true God, from every nation under Heaven. But has the church the living energy to elevate and save men to-day, that she had when a single itinerant preacher had "fully preached the Gospel of Christ" "from Jerusalem and round about unto Illyricum," laboring with his own hands, that he might not be chargeable unto any? Is there more done for the glory of God to-day, or have his people more peace and joy, than when "all that believed were together and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need?" And then, "continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people"? How natural the result that is immediately recorded: 'And the Lord added unto them daily such as should be saved."

Fellow Christian, how is it with your heart? Has your acquaintance with Christ been so intimate and sweet that He is to you "The chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely?" Or has "The lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life," so abated the ardor of your early love that you have ceased to find in Him the sum and center of all your peace and blessing? Do you find your meditation of Him, the study of His Word, and the time spent in communion with Him, the most profitable and precious time of your experience? Or are you so hurried with worldly duties, and pressed with worldly cares, that you have no time for such sweet employ? Do you drink from the Fountain of living waters and find satisfaction? Or do you still seek in vain to quench your feverish thirst from the bitter streams of earthly pleasure and earthly fame? In short, is Christ all and in all to you? Or does the world take the greater part of your thought and care?

These are important questions. Let us weigh them well. Christ is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. We can experience the same precious nearness now that those did who counted not their lives dear unto them, but were willing to suffer the loss of all things, that they might win Christ. If we would know the peace and share the hope of such, we must follow their example; and when the crown which they were assured was laid up for them shall be bestowed, we also may be presented "faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy."—The Christian.

PROTESTANTS WORSHIPPING THE POPE.

I cannot resist the inclination to say a few serious words to our Protestant friends who come to Rome in these days, seek a presentation of Pius IXth, and kneel at his feet. It does seem to me, that they must be ashamed to go home and tell of it. People will go to see anything—a two-headed baby, Bengal tiger, bearded woman, hero of a thousand murders not excepted, and the visit may be excused. But that they should kneel or kiss, his hand, is too abominable a departure from the faith of their fathers. At one time, they made excuse that they only kneeled to the earthly monarch. Now, that excuse is wanting. They can only kneel to the vicar of Christ, because no earthly or spiritual potentate save a king or queen, and the Pope, as Christ's representative, demands such humiliation. Daily we are told by American Catholics, daily we read in Catholic journals, how English and American Protestants feel themselves constrained to render to the pontiff the honor and worship due him. Never does one of our friends thus humiliate himself and us, but we hear of it. Here, we may not say all we feel. The rights of hospitality almost forbid it. But we can no longer refrain from sending home a hint to those upon the watch-towers there, not of blame for those who have offended by doing "as everybody else did," but of warning not to play in the hands of our enemies, not to deify a very sinful old man, not to seal approval of the deeds of a child-stealer, a perverter of the truth, a blasphemer, an enemy of all progress, and of all truth. The bitterness which wells up from the heart of this poor old man to his lips, is frightful. The other day, in receiving a society got up for the keeping of all the old feasts of the Church, and pledging its members to idle away at least one-third of their time, the Pope made a speech in which he spoke of all who had brought about the change of government here, as "wretches," "rascals," "spit up from hell," &c. Of course, he simply intended to indicate Victor Emanuel; and thus he spoke of their king to his Roman subjects. "Driving us from our lawful principality, and usurping all rights of civil power," is applicable to Victor Emanuel alone. "Curse not the king in thy bedchamber," said the wise man. Let our friends at home recall the history of Pius IX., his thorough knowledge of and pretended assumption of liberal principles, his treachery to his own people, blessing them to go forth and fight against Austria and then withdrawing his permission, his repeal of all liberal laws, his private and public cruelties, his kidnapping of the Mortara child and others, his acknowledgment of the Southern Confederacy, his outrageous insolence towards American Protestants, his long abuse of almost unlimited power, his attempt to fling back the world into worse than heathen darkness by the two dogmas of the Immaculate Conception and his own infallibility, and then decide whether they should wound the Protestants of Italy and delight the Ultramontanes of Rome by kneeling at his shrine.—N. Y. Observer.

A LETTER OF CONSOLATION, TO AN AFFLICTED WIDOW.

Grace and peace be unto you, and kind greeting, sincerely beloved sister in the Lord, whom my soul loves. The merciful Lord having called you to widowhood, my paternal and faithful admonition to you is, as a father to his children, to bear with your lot as becomes holy women, and to serve the Lord, with the pious Hannah in the holy temple, that is, in his church, or a new and upright conscience, with fasting and prayer, night and day; treat, at all times, the needy saints, as the virtuous widow of Sarepta in Zidou treated the faithful Elijah, at the time of drouth and panic, when she received him in her house, and fed him with her handful of meal and a little oil; and the meal of the holy, divine word, from the measure of your conscience, and the joyous oil of the Holy Spirit shall not be withheld from you. And, if the new son of your spiritual birth, do sicken a little and lose his breath for a time, through the weakness to which a widow is naturally subject—yet our true Elias, Jesus Christ, will again animate him through his grace, and again restore you to cheerfulness; for, as the Scriptures teach, you receive, love and serve him in his members.

Beloved sister, understand me aright I speak of the needy saints, and no further. Those who have enough of their own, do not need your aid services. True christians should not put each other to unnecessary expenses. Faithful sisters, walk prudently; fear your God sincerely; crucify your flesh and its lusts; withstand the enemy and his enchantments; bear everything piously; do not imprudently cause anybody trouble; diligently attend to your occupation, household and children; carefully shun all unchastity, vain babbling, pomp and splendor; earnestly avoid being led by the temptations of the flesh, that you do not become like the widows who lost their first faith, and followed after the devil, as Paul says; from which may the merciful Father ever save you. Receive in love, this, my brief greeting, written to you in true, paternal affection, and reflect upon it diligently. The saints here greet you. Greet all pious friends. Pray for me. The eternal, saving power and fruit of the precious blood of Christ, be with my chosen much beloved sister, in eternity, Amen.

Your loving and well wishing brother, MENNO SIMON.

May 18th.

MANNER.—Be careful to speak in a tender, kind, and loving way. Even when you have occasion to rebuke, be careful to do it with manifest kindness. The effect will be incalculably better.

A PROVERB.

Eccl. 10 : 15.—"The labor of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city."

This seems to have been a common proverb. Having spoken of wisdom, and shown some of its advantages, the wise man speaks of folly, and shows its disadvantages. In what precedes, we learn that fools talk a great deal to no purpose. Surely the serpent will bite without enchantment, and a babbler is no better. The words of a wise man's mouth are gracious, but the lips of a fool will swallow up himself. The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness, and the end of his talk is mischievous madness. A fool also is full of words: a man cannot tell what shall be, he says, and then repeats the same thing. And what shall be after him, who can tell? As one said, "Blessed be nothing; for they who have not, cannot lose." So we may almost be tempted to say, in view of much talking to no purpose, or to some evil purpose, "Blessed be silence; for they who say nothing will do no harm with their tongues." Hence the resolution of David, in some circumstances at least, is to be commended, "I said, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue: I will keep my mouth with a bridle," or muzzle, as in the margin. This is often wise and prudent, for a fool uttereth all his mind; but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.

Not only do fools talk much to no good purpose, but, as in this proverb, we see that they also toil much to no purpose. Whatever they undertake, their labor wearies them, because they do not understand it. Even so plain a matter as going to the great city by the public thoroughfare, is a labor and a weariness, because they do not know the way. They make a blunder of the easiest and plainest matters, and so tire themselves with it. The labor of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city, or to do the simplest, plainest and easiest thing.

This is doubtless designed to have a spiritual application. In so applying it, notice three things:—1. The city to which we should aim to go. 2. The way to this city. 3. The foolish who weary themselves with their labor in going there, or trying to, and the reason of it, because they know not the way to the city.

W. J. M.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

WANDERING THOUGHTS.

Oh how beautiful is earth, just being freed from its icy fetters! Nature seems all aglow with beauty and loviness. The fields are waving with their mantle of living green, while the meadows and forest are bedecked with nature's most lovely flowers. The feathered songsters are singing their merry matins while the messenger of light, in all its primitive glory, scatters night away. Everything around seems to whisper, peace, unalloyed peace be thy lot oh man, the highest and noblest workmanship of God! Ah, peace did I say? Yes, nature says peace, the Heavens while dropping of their fullness in refreshing showers, says peace, and God the Creator and bountiful bestower of all good, says peace, but man says, no, not peace, I want it not, my craving soul desires not its sweetness. "Oh that my people knew the things that belong to their peace."

Brought into the world, surrounded by religious influence—led to the morning and evening altar, there taught to lisp the name of Jesus and implore a Spiritual God for a strong arm to shield, taught to drink from the Word of Inspiration the water of life, and feed on the Bread of Heaven by sitting under the droppings of the sanctuary, yet after all this, our ungrateful hearts lusts after the pleasures of sin, and prompts us to sow to the flesh that we may reap corruption.

Everything is made for the special benefit of man, yet in his blindness he seems disposed to convert all in to a curse that it may the more effectually work out his destruction. It is strange—passingly strange, yet true. Thousands are daily crowding the broad way that leads to hell, notwithstanding it is a perfect gore of blood and dinned with the despairing yells of the lost and damned. Satan may plant his wayside flowers and evergreens to screen the lurking place of the devouring lion, and stagnate the crazed brain with the intoxicating cup, yet the visions of hell and despair are there and warn the benighted soul of his approaching ruin. Fashion's god in all her gaudy show cannot conceal the cloven foot behind her hellish chains. Sinners must see their inevitable doom, yet they will sip from the golden cup, and die. Oh the lost, THE LOST.

In midnights darkness, their lamentations greet our ears with the piteous cries for a drop of water to cool the parched tongue. Is it possible that men, and women too, will voluntarily choose the dungeons of hell, when all the glories of heaven are offered so freely—freely, without money and without price? IT IS "Broad is the road and wide is the gate that leads to destruction and many there be that go therein."

Then ye harbingers of God, ye messengers of salvation, AWAKE, ARISE, go forth, sound loudly and long, the trumpet of salvation and gather the wanderers in, and your crown shall be a crown of life dazzling with a jewel of the brightest hue for every soul saved from the eternal burnings.

How our thoughts have been wandering. We intended to say that spring is here in all its loveliness—that the heavens which seemed to have turned into brass, of late commenced dropping in showers so refreshing that everything seems to be aglow with beauty and loveliness. The dust is laid, the smoke driven away and the air has become so balmy and fragrant that our heart was made to overflow with gratefulness to the bountiful bestower. In this mood I seated myself to indite a few "wandering tho'ts" for our PILGRIM which makes its weekly visits to our door burdened with the manna of life. Long may it outride the storms of sin and satan and be the means of gathering many storm-beaten souls into the haven of eternal rest.

SAMARITAN.

WISDOM.

There never was a great man unless through divine inspiration.—Cicero.

Conversation is an art in which man has all mankind for competitors.—Emerson.

The guilty mind debases the great image that it wears, and levels us with brutes.—Harvard.

The superiority of some men is merely local; they are great because their associations are little.—Johnson.

If you have improved your understanding and studied virtue, you have only done your duty, and thus there seems little reason for vanity.

You must never be satisfied with the surface of things; probe them to the bottom, and let nothing go till you understand it as thoroughly as your powers will enable you.

A man has no more right to say an uncivil thing than to act one; no more right to say a rude thing to another than to knock him down. A man's own good breeding is the best security against other people's ill-manners.

The tablet of the heart should be kept so pure in purpose and so spotless from deception, evil thinking, and wrong-doing, that a gainsaying world will be able to discover no more disfiguring blot than appears on a beautiful record of snowy whiteness.

DR. ARNOLD, of the Rugby School, England, made this reply to one who asked him why he continued to study his lessons over and over previous to going before his class to teach: "Because I prefer my students should be supplied from a running stream rather than a stagnant pool."

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT.

TEN HARD DOLLARS.

A Story for Boys.

BY DR. J. SPAULDING.

My father was a poor man. A large and growing family was dependent on him for its daily bread. Coming home one wintry evening, from a week's toil in a neighboring town, with ten hard-earned dollars in his pocket, he lost them in a light snow. Long and fruitless was the search for them. After the snow was gone, again and again was the search renewed with the same result. The snow fell and melted again for a whole generation, and still the story of the lost dollars was fresh in our family circle; for a silver dollar to a poor man in those days was larger than a full moon.

About a mile away lived another father of a family in similar circumstances. He, too, knew how much a dollar cost dug out of the heart of a rocky farm. At least once or oftener every week, for forty years, he had occasion to pass our door, giving and receiving the common neighborly salutations, and every time with a weight increasingly heavy on his conscience. But all such pressure has its limit; and when that is reached the crash is greater for the severity of the strain. In this instance it was as when an old oak rends its body, and breaks its limbs in falling.

One day, completely broken down, he came to my father with tears, confessing, "I found your dollars lost in the snow, forty years ago. They have been hard dollars to me, and I can carry them no longer. I am come to return them and ask your forgiveness; and as soon as I can I will pay you the interest."

The scene was like that when Jacob and Esau met "over the fork of Jabbok."

He did not live long enough to pay the interest, but quite long enough to furnish a practical comment on the text: "The spirit of a man will sustain his infirmity; but a wounded spirit who can bear?" Who will say that conscience though slumbering in this life, will never awake to punish the offender in the life to come?

If any man wants hard money, let him get it dishonestly, and he will find it the hardest money he ever saw—hard to keep, hard to think of, and hard to answer for in the judgment day.—Christian Weekly.

"HONOR BRIGHT."

"Will you, now, truly?"

"Yes, honor bright."

That was all I heard of the talk as I looked down at the eager face, that passed my window, and it set me to thinking. I have no idea what kind of a compact the boys were making, but whatever it was they evidently thought it was made specially sure and sacred by those two words, "Honor bright!" You all think so, I believe, you boys and girls; there is an unwritten code of honor among you, which makes it quite right and proper to break certain kinds of promises, if it suits your convenience, but very disgraceful to break others—the honor bright kind. May be you get it from your elders, or, what is more likely your elders learned it when they were boys and girls, and carried the bad principle with them, out of small transactions into great ones, until there is no telling the mischief it has done.

That is a very good motto—Honor bright—and I wish you would all adopt it, not for special things, but for every word and action of your whole lives. If you make a promise, in great things or small, fulfill it carefully, sacredly, honor bright, no matter how much it costs you, provided you have not pledged yourself to a wrong. If you have, there can be no honor about it, except in frankly saying, "I made a bad promise; I am ashamed of it; I cannot keep it," and do not let any foolish notion about honor make you stick to the wrong.

You don't want to do this thing? No; but you said you would. Now stick to it, honor bright.

You didn't promise to do it? No; but you know it is expected of you. Do it, honor bright.

Nobody expects it of you? Well, but you know you ought to do it, and do you remember the Great Captain who expects every man to do his duty? Do it, honor bright.—Little Corporal.

MANNERS.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Some little boys and girls think it matters little what they say or do to strangers.

They are very polite and civil to acquaintances, but forget their manners when addressing others. This is quite wrong. Every person has rigths which the true gentleman always recognizes. Civility always requires us to avoid that which is displeasing to others. It is not manly to pass a person on the street without giving him an opportunity to recognize you. Manners demand of every one to notice friend or stranger with a pleasant word or some sign of recognition. How often the burdened heart might be relieved of its load, if a kind word were spoken at the right time. Then again some will be all smiles and favors among friends and strangers, but very unmannerly at home. The Bible teaches us that we should ever prefer the honor of others to our own. If we observe the teachings of Christ, we find them characterized by love; and he that is guided by it will always be civil, polite and agreeable, for love worketh no ill to its neighbor.—Herald of Truth.

Our feelings follow our thoughts, and go apart as far as east and west. One thinks of his children as sent of God, to be brought up for his service. He will say of his dead child that "God took it to himself." Another will think of his child as his heir who shall increase the family name, and he will write upon the monument of the dead son, "Snatched from its despairing parents." Love and hate, despair and hope, differ not more widely, than the thoughts that give rise to them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Pilgrim: I will give you a brief report of travels. I left home on the morning of April 11th en route for Indiana. Arrived at Bourbon the morning of the 12th. Found Salem College all alive, and the students of my acquaintance all doing well. On the 13th went to Plymouth where I met my uncle, Bro. Samuel Bieler, who took me to his home and cared for me until Monday morning, 15th.

We enjoyed three interesting meetings with the brethren and sisters of the Union congregation at this place. Brother John Kniseley is the elder. Here the Brethren have a very interesting Sunday school. I had the great pleasure of meeting with them on Sunday afternoon. The school is just in its infancy, but is certainly a large, interesting infant, bidding fair for future usefulness. It was organized two weeks before I was there. The attendance was large and the interest good. The attendance on the day I was present was 112. On Sunday previous the attendance was 137. Chapters reported read through the week, 879. Chapters read in the three weeks 2397. The members are alive and working here now, and if they can keep the enemy at bay they, no doubt, will prosper. May God help them. There was an addition here on Sunday. Fifteenth, started to South Bend, Ind., but being storm-staid, a heavy snow storm in the afternoon, I did not reach South Bend until the 16th. Remained visiting in the Bend until the afternoon of the 17th. Was taken to the Whitmore Meetinghouse in the evening, and lodged with my relative brother, David Miller, and the next morning was taken to the D. M. of the Northern District of Ind. Had a pleasant meeting. As there was some difference of understanding among the brethren concerning Salem College, at Bourbon, that question commanded some interest. It was finally decided that the "School at Bourbon, called Salem College, is the property of the church of the Brethren or German Baptists of the Northern District of Indiana." Brethren from a distance can rely upon that Institution as belonging to the brethren of Northern Indiana.

After the D. M. closed I was taken to Bourbon, and on Saturday visited our esteemed old brother and sister, Eld. George Shively and wife. Found them both feeble. They are living in the house with their son, Eld. David Shively. On the evening of the 21st at 9:20, I took the train homeward bound, and arrived the 22nd. Found all well. Thanks to God.

Yours as ever, J. WISE.

The Churches in Marion County Iowa, to the Brethren throughout the United States, greeting:

Whereas, our beloved brother David Sink has, by misfortune and disappointment in business, become involved in debt beyond his power to extricate himself; and as he is a Minister of the Gospel, in the second degree, and a faithful and worthy brother, whose labors are much needed here and elsewhere; and as the members here are in limited circumstances, and have done about all they can to help brother David out of his troubles—

Therefore, we ask all the dear Brethren everywhere to lend a helping hand, in the name of the Lord, to remove the shackles from off the hands of this beloved laborer in the Vineyard of the Lord.

The following amounts have been raised and applied to the payment of his liabilities:

By the Church here, $200 00; by Monroe, Decatur, and Appanoose counties, collectively, $210 00; leaving $700 00 unpaid.

Money may be sent, by mail, to English Settlment, or by express to Pella, both in Marion county, Iowa. Addres, Jonathan Beard, who is appointed by the Church as receiver.

JONATHAN BEARD,
Minister.
J. J. SHOUP,
JAMES WRAY,
D. L. BOWMAN,
DAVID PHILIPS,
Deacons.

Feb. 23, 1872.

UNIONVILLE, IOWA.
March 13, 1872.

Having examined the plea from from Marion County Church, we desire to say to the Brotherhood at large that we are somewhat acquainted with the case of Bro. D. Sink, and that we have known him for some years; that we esteem him a worthy, faithful, humble brother, every way worthy of the charity of the Brotherhood; that he is an able Minister of the Word, and may be made extensively useful if he can but be relieved of the burden that hangs upon him in consequence of his unhappy condition. We, therefore, earnestly hope that the call of his Brethren and fellow-laborers will be favorably considered, and met with a cheerful and abundant response. Let every one that hath give to him that needeth a little. A very little from each one will suffice. God loveth a cheerful giver. Be not tardy; give not grudgingly; give cheerfully and with a willing mind, and look to the Lord for the reward. Whosoever hath this world's goods, and seeth his Brother hath need, and shutteth his bowels of compassion toward him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? Let us not love inwardly, nor in tongue, but in deed and in truth.

Eld. ABRAHAM REPLOGLE.
Eld. DANIEL ZOOK.

EDITORIAL.

OUR CONFERENCE.

In accordance with the wishes of many of our readers we submit the following account of our trip to Annual Conference,and report of its proceedings.

On Thursday eve, 16th, we took the train at Huntingdon and was agreeably surprised in meeting our delegate, J. R. Hanawalt, also our respected Bro. Samuel Longenecker and his family who were on their way towards their new home in the distant West. It is with much regret that we give him and his interesting family the parting hand, but thus appears the will of the Lord. Bro. Samuel thinks it was getting a little dark "down there" and therefore concluded to follow "the light." May his lot fall where it shines in all its noonday glory, and may souls be the hire of his labor.

At Altoona we met L. Furry and John Replogle, who were to be our traveling companions and colaborers. Our thoughts by the way were not as pleasant as we sometimes have on similar occasions, from the fact of it being after night and on account of the dryness of the weather, the hills and mountains seemed to be all on fire which made it extremely smokey and unpleasant. After a long and wearisome night the morning came and found us far beyond the Alleghany mountain. A few hours more, and we were at Canton, Ohio, our stopping place, where we had made arrangements to tarry over Sunday. At this place we were met by our friend and relative, Andrew Markley who took us to his home, in the Nimishillin Congregation. After having our bodily wants attended to we felt like making good use of the time and as Congress Lake was only about four miles distant, the subject of fishing was introduced. Notwithstanding our Master had called us to be fishers of men, we thought it would be a good pastime to catch a few fish. Soon the team was at our service, and off we went for the Lake. This is a beautiful sheet of water about two miles long and perhaps a half mile or more wide, and abounds in fish of all sizes, the Bass being the most desirable and the speckled Shad the most bountiful. When we arrived at the shore and our old Peter saw the ship his doubts arose high and fear took hold upon him, not being certain whether or not, his faith would sustain him in the trying hour,should the craft skip over and spill us in the deep; therefore concluded to remain on shore till a trial trip was made. This was to be made in what is called "spearing." The boats will carry from ten to twelve—across the front, is placed a board upon which stands the principal spearsman having in readiness a spear with a handle some twelve feet long, and when a large bass comes within reach, he takes his aim and seldom misses his mark. The weather being unfavorable, we did not succeed in taking any in, but the ride to us was altogether agreeable. By our return, Peter's love for fishing had conquered all his fears and was ready to embark. This time we took the angles, and after a short ride, we anchored for operation. In we threw and out we pulled but ill was our luck. Remembering of old brother Peter's luck while fishing on the "wrong side," we took the necessary precaution and by a few changes succeeded in taking a few in, but in going to the shore our ship showed no signs of sinking. We enjoyed our visit to Congress Lake much, and felt well repaid for our time and trouble.

On Saturday A. M. there was an appointment for preaching in the Nimishillin Church, also in the evening, Sunday forenoon and 3 o'clock P. M. At this place the Brethren have a pleasant and commodious church house, but the number or size of the Congregation we did not think of learning. Henry Brumbaugh is the elder, assisted in the Word by D. Bowers, J. J. Hoover and think another whose name we have forgotten. The Church seems to be in a prosperous condition and the members alive to their duty. The congregation being largely German, L. Furry exercised in that language while we, assisted by others, labored in the English. The meetiogs were well attended and considerable interest seemed to prevail during the meetings, and some were added to the church.

In this vicinity we have a number of relatives whom we would have been much pleased to visit, but our time being so short, we could not, so we hope none will feel unkindly towards us on that account. On Monday morning we were again conveyed to Canton where we met a large number of brethren and sisters who were awaiting the train. The crowd was so great that there were fears entertained that all could not get aboard, in consequence of which, there was a general cram on the arrival of the train, that reflected no great credit to the assemblage. We profess to be christians but such jamming and crowding does not seem to be in harmony with the spirit of true christianity. Of all people we should be the most mannerly and polite, but we surely think that we sometimes forget it. The occasion gave opportunity to the nimble fingered gents and they made use of it, as we afterwards learned that some were minus their pocket books.

OUR ARRIVAL.

On our arrival, the tent for the holding of the meeting, which could be seen from the railroad, presented quite a novel appearance, and from the appearance of the living mass surrounding it, and prospective and soon realized showers, we had no flattering opinion of what our accommodation should be, but through the the courtesy of Bro. Samuel Longenecker we found all that we desired, a home during the meeting, at the house of our kind friend Samuel Brenizer, to whom we feel deeply grateful and hope that he may not only be blessed in basket and store, but may he receive abundance of that food which maketh glad the soul.

TENT ACCOMMODATIONS.

The tent was 240 ft. long and 80 wide with a partition through it, one part for the Conference and the other for eating. The covering was of canvas or muslin and amounted to about 4000 yards.

The arrangements were well made and the provisions ample. For the accommodation of spectators and those who would rather pay than crowd, there were several boarding tents on the ground were provisions were retailed at reasonable rates, so that there was no cause for complaint or necessity for performing a miracle.

Judging from the accommodating spirit manifested, the Brethren there have liberal and free-hearted neighbors, as their doors, everywhere, seemed to be thrown open for the entertainment of the strangers thrown in their midst. This is a highly commendable spirit and speaks well of those who carry it out.

CHURCHES OPENED FOR THE BRETHREN.

Not only were the houses thrown open, but also the churches in the whole surrounding neighborhood. What the results of this preaching may be is for the future to develop, but we were made to fear that it may not be so profitable as it might be. Our reason is this; instead of presenting the truth in its simple purity and power, as is done on ordinary occasions, it is fixed up in style and mystified by taste, thus mistaking the duty of teaching for that of pleasing which may call forth the approbation and flattery of the worldly but leave the hungry soul, hungry still. Notwithstanding this element may have prevailed to some extent, yet we had the pleasure of listening to some very excellent and instruetive sermons during the evenings, and hope they may have a beneficial effect on the surrounding neighborhood.

The attendance of the meeting was not unusually large—not as large as they have been heretofore in the west, and on this account tolerable good order was maintained during the meeting, and all had the satisfaction of hearing what was said. The weather was rather favorable notwithstanding the rain, of which there was not enough to seriously affect the progress of the meeting, yet sufficient to effectually lay the dust which would have been much more oppressive than the rain.

The feelings that characterized the meeting was rather good except in a few cases, when bigotry took possession of reason and things were said that reflected no very great honor to the speaker. Some said too much and perhaps others said too little, which are the most praiseworthy, we shall not decide, but we would rather grieve over our thoughts than our expressions. The discussions were spirited and lively and sometimes very pointed and a little too personal, yet there was considerable forbearance manifested, and respect had toward each other's views.

THE COUNCIL OF ELDERS.

Many, no doubt, are anxious to know what was accomplished in this Council. Not being on the ground until Monday P. M. we have no notes of its deliberations, but we learned that the meeting was in session all day, in a church near by, and had some warm discussions on the point of difference and in the end accomplished but very little by way of removing the difficulty. They finally passed a decision, to be submitted to A. M., by 84 yeas to 14 nays, virtually readopting the answer of 1871, which in substance is this: Those practicing the double mode shall not change to the single mode. Those practicing the single may continue to do so, but if they organize any new churches, the double mode shall be introduced. Although it passed the council of elders by a large majority, when it came before the general council, it was largely defeated, and the answer amended as our report will show.

OPENING OF THE MEETING.

The meeting was opened by singing and prayer, after which the following officers were announced.

Moderator, H. D. Davy.
Assistant Moderator, D. P. Sayler.
Secretary, James Quinter.
Clerk, John Wise.
Assistant Clerk, D. P. Sayler.

After a short address by the Moderator, the Meeting was organized and the following Districts represented by the respective delegates.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eastern, { Jacob Rhinehard. David Garlach.

Middle,	Joseph R. Hanawalt.
	J. W. Brumbaugh.
Western	John Wise,
	C. G. Lint.
	MARYLAND.
Eastern	D. P. Sayler.
Western	David Long.
	VIRGINIA.
No. 1.	Abraham Naff,
	B. F. Moomaw.
No. 2.	Solomon Garber,
	J. Thomas.
West Va.	Abraham Malsby.
	OHIO.
N Eastern	Jacob Garver,
	Conrad Caylor.
N Western	John Brown,
	D. Brower.
Southern	H. D. Davy,
	Samuel Garber.
	INDIANA.
Northern	D. B. Sturgis,
	Jacob Berkey.
Middle	Jacob Metzgar.
Southern	R. H. Miller.
	ILLINOIS.
Northern	Samuel Lehman,
	Enoch Eby.
Southern	John Metzgar,
	J. R. Gish.
	IOWA.
Northern	E. R. Beeghly.
Middle	C. Long.
Southern	Daniel Zook.

KANSAS & NEBRASKA.
William Gish.

As we intend to give our readers the Minutes of A. M. in full, we will, in this report, only give the substance, and notice those only which we think will be of special interest to our readers. In giving the arguments we do not claim to give a verbatim report, but the leading ideas presented, omitting those of a personal character.

LIFE INSURANCE.

Query. What shall be done with a brother who gets his life insured, and insists that there was no wrong in it, and refuses to withdraw his insurance?

This query called forth some arguments pro and con and was presented to the meeting on account of previous decisions being too indefinite. The Church from which the query came had a case, and for want of something definite, could not act in the case, therefore A. M. was urged to give something definite. The disposition of the meeting was to withdraw it at once but was objected to from the fact that delaying it would be an opening for future trouble. The bulk of argument brought against the organizations is on account of lack of knowledge of them. When it is argued that they are intended to prolong life it shows plainly that their design is not understood, yet this was one of the objections brought against the institution. Such brethren would do themselves a favor by remaining quiet on questions which they do not understand or else become posted. As the discussion of this query was neither interesting nor instructive we shall not occupy space with it. Query withdrawn and will not appear on the Minutes.

EXCESSIVE USE OF TOBACCO.

A request to reconsider Art. 20 of 1870 in regard to the excessive use of tobacco.

A move was made to table but was objected to by many.

SAMUEL LEHMAN: Brethren, on this subject we have a number of decisions all of which are sufficiently stringent and all that is necessary to suppress the habit is to carry out its decisions, therefore I think it would be better to stop discussing it and let every church endeavor to carry out that which we already have, &c.

A. LEEDY. That the excessive use of tobacco is an acknowledged evil all must admit, and I therefore claim that it should be classed with other useless things as named in Matt. 18th. The church has been laboring for its suppression for years and still there is nothing accomplished and will not be until more stringent measures be adopted.

SAMUEL MURRAY. Housekeepers would, no doubt, try to carry out the decisions of A. M. in regard to the use of Tobacco, but by so doing some members become offended and thus cause trouble and bad feelings among the members of the church.

D. Yonce bears evidence to Bro. Murray and gives his experience in trying to suppress its use—a brother become offended at it and goes home.

JACOB STEEL. Objects to having it classed among other superfluities, and contends that it may be both good and useful when received with thanksgiving. Art. 12 of 1827, read.

J. KNISLEY. We cannot expect to decide against it entirely, but we can use our influence against and try especially to keep brethren from using it while in the house of worship. (We would add, all other houses.—ED.)

H. R. HOLSINGER. There is no necessity of anybody being more radical on the Tobacco question than I am, but I think the better way of suppressing it is to discuss it through the periodicals and by preaching against it, thus keeping it before the brotherhood by agitating it. * * * * As it is used for medical and mechanical purposes brethren may raise it when to be used in this way, but they should not eat it.

J. R. HANAWALT. I have never agitated nor written on the subject of Tobacco, but am opposed to the using of it. 1st. It leads to filthiness. The habit invariably grows on the users until they become so fond of it that they become intemperate in its use, and the result is filthiness which is no christian grace.

2d. It is superfluous from the fact of it being used neither for food nor medicine, but for the gratification of the craving of a cultivated taste.

It is opposed to self-denial as many admit that they are sorry that they ever commenced using it, but the cravings for it are so strong that few are willing to deny themselves of the use of it. Again, we cannot set that example for our children that we should. Parents cannot well advise their children against the use of a thing which they use themselves, the example destroys the force of the precept. I have raised a family of children and none of them use tobacco. I know of others who raised children and advised them against the use of, but still use it, because they followed the example of their parents.

PETER NEAD says that it is not only superfluous, but a nuisance, and objects to its further discussion.

M. MILLER. I am glad to hear so many voices against the use of Tobacco, as I consider it a wasting of the Lord's money, and urge that there be something to go from this meeting against the excessive use of it. Brethren can certainly deny themselves the use of it while in the church, as they can lay it anywhere on the outside and no brute will take it from them.

Decision of 1870 readopted and placed upon the Minutes. For the satisfaction of those who respect the "ancient landmarks" we will here insert a few of the most ancient decisions of the Brethren on this subject.

Y. M. 1817. Art. 1. Concerning the use of Tobacco, it was in union considered, that if a member should be contaminated with it, such should be admonished to quit it, and if it would not be told, such a member could not be elected to any office in the church.

Y. M. 1822. (Miami) Art. 5. Concerning the abuse of Tobacco. This has been before the meeting already before this, and was always considered a shamefully bad habit (German Untugend)—and everything bad, says the apostle, is sin, and sin defileth the body; and another apostle says, that your bodies together with soul and spirit shall be holy.

Y. M. 1827. Art. 12. Concerning members who engage in the raising of Tobacco? Considered, that members should have nothing to do with such things, by which so much mischief is done, and so many men (and woman too) are led captive, as is the case with Tobacco.

HIGH SCHOOLS.

Is it according to the Gospel and the order of the Brethren, to erect High Schools? See Acts 4: 14, 2 Cor. 6: 14–18 and Rom. 12: 16.

On the subject of schools and education there was much said but the arguments were so foreign to the query that it was difficult to determine what was before the meeting. We have a pretty good report of what was said but the meeting thought the discussion so uncalled for that it tabled the question and resolved that there should be no report given of it, and we can assure our readers that you lose nothing by us withholding it. The want of a liberal education is rapidly growing among the Brethren, and we believe that the time is not distant when our children will have opportunities of obtaining a good education independent of worldly and sectarian institutions.

PORTRAITS OR LIKENESSES.

Does this A. M. understand that according to former decisions, brethren are to destroy their likenesses?

We have a report of this question but think it neither interesting nor instructive, therefore will withhold it and only give the general expression of the meeting.

The leading opinion is that our members had better not have their pictures taken and so we are advised, but the design of the decisions referred to, when it says "put them away" was not to destroy them, but should not keep them for public display. This we think is right, as we cannot help but think that when brethren have their rooms ornamented with their own profiles they hang themselves up to be idolized. It may not be expected that they will be worshipped, but they do expect them to be admired and commended which is about the same—somewhat limited. The final decision was: This A. M. understands the phrase "put them out of the way," to mean, make no public display of them.

APPOINTING COMMITTEES.

An appeal to A. M. to give District meetings the power of appointing Committee to settle difficulties and to make their decisions final.

This move was well accepted by a large number of the meeting and was put on passage several times but was stopped by a few dissenting voices. Its primary object was to unburden the Annual Meeting and diminish the incumbent expenses which certainly is a consideration when committees are sent several hundred, or even a thousand miles, as it sometimes happens. Objections are offered claiming the committee called within the District may be somewhat involved and therefore the aggrieved party may not get justice. To obviate this there was an amendment offered allowing the committee to be chosen outside of the District. This did not seem definite enough not designating who were to appoint the committee. Another amendment was proposed delegating that power to the elders of the District, granting them the privilege of selecting the committee within the district or outside of it as they might see proper. The greatest objection was, that it debars expelled members from appealing to the churches highest authority and was postponed for further consideration.

INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Does the Gospel teach that we are bound to assist each other in case of loss? If so, will it be wrong for the Brethren to form themselves into Insurance Companies?

This Query has been before the District and Annual Meetings at different times but defeated, not because the Church sees anything wrong in the priuciple but on account of troubles that may result from it, should it adopt au institution of this kind. The argument is something like this: If the Brethren were to have a Fire Insurance Co. of their own, all those who would enter that Company would feel mutually bound to help each other, therefore should those who do not enter the Company, meet with heavy losses, those who do belong would not feel themselves under obligations to help them because they are not members and thus might jeopardize the principles of our christian liberality. This may seem to be a plausible mode of reasoning, but is really no basis upon which to build an objection, as it would certainly, in no way, tie the hands of those who wish to be liberal, bot if there would be any who would refuse to enter an organization of that kind on account of penariousness, or unwillingness to help bear his brothers loss they certainly would not deserve much sympathy from the society or anywhere else.

After some discussiou it was tabled.

Reinstating Ministers.

Can ministering brethren who have fallen into the gross crimes mentioned in 1 Cor. 5th chap. be reinstated into their former position?

Ans. We think they may under some circumstances when done by the voice of the church aud with the consent of, at least, three elders.

P. R. Wrightsman objects to the passage of the answer because he thinks there are cases that should never be reinstated in ther office.

J. Wise says there are degrees in the character of the crime, therefore there should be degrees in the penalties attached thereto.

The following amendment was offered and then put ou passage: "but there are some cases so grievous that they cannot be reinstated."

Change of holding A. M.

Will not this meeting urge a change in holding our A. M., as the present system is very unsatisfactory? A reconsidering of Query IV of last A. M. is desired.

The primary object of this Query was not so moch to curtail the expenses of the Meeting, as to have a fair and equal representation. The change called for was about this: Let the District meetings be held as formerly, but instead of sending two delegates, send only one and then let each individual church send one—these delegates to compose the A. M. and transact its business, and all others remaining at home. The idea of curtailing the privileges of any in attending A. M. was objectionable, and the answer of Query 4 of 1871 was readopted. "We think it best not to make the change asked for, at present."

Privileges of Elders.

Will this District Meeting approve of asking Annual Meeting to permit all the Elders who attend Annual Meeting equal privileges on the Standing Committee and all the councils of Annual Meeting?

This query was weakly defended and was tabled without much discussion, as in the general conference all have about equal privileges and elders not delegated are only debarred from the Committee room which, perhaps, when all is considered, is well enough.

Feetwashing—Mode.

The Still Water Church of Southern Indiana petitions this A. M., to make no change in regard to feetwashing.

On this question there was a long and warmly contested discussion occupying the greater part of two sessions and of it we have a report of almost ten pages of foolscap paper which, if written out, would make, at least, one third more. After the discussion, we were advised by a number of brethren whom we felt sure, had the welfare of the church at heart, not to publish it. This we did not promise, but on our return home and after giving our notes a careful examination we came to the same conclusion as did some of the brethren who heard the discussions: "There was much time wasted in discussions that were not to the point and in repeating what others said." If this is so, which all that were present will admit, shall we continoe to waste time and space in publishing it?

Another reason for not publishing it is; we think that it would not have a salutary effect upon the world to see that we make so much ado about such trifling differences of opinion, therefore we hope that our readers will compliment us in doing that which may be for the promotion of the cause we are advocating.

The Committee of investigation, after a careful search, found that in America the single mode was first introduced in 1721 and the double mode in 1722. In the council of elders it was argued that the latter mode should have the preference because it became the general and almost universal practice and for the sake of a union in practice the minority should submit at least so far as to organize no new churches in the single mode nor change from the the double to the single, but when it came before the general council, this was objected to, and it was plainly to be seen that the popular voice of the meeting was in favor of the single mode or of the granting each church the liberty of taking the voice of its members in regard to the mode to be used. We do not say this because we are biased in favor of the single mode, but from honest conviction as presented at the meeting, as we are perfectly satisfied with the practice in use, but while it was acknowledged by the general conference that either practice fills the command, we are in favor of a liberty of conscience and therefore shall not shun to give our accepted expression of the meeting, as we did contend and do yet, that the agitation of the question will never cease until this liberty is fully and plainly given.

The following answer or amendment was finally submitted and passed: "There be no change in the mode of feet washing, and that there be no further discussion."

This is an amendment to the petition of Southern Indiana, and was allowed to pass with this qualification or uuderstanding: "That A. M. makes no change in the mode of feet washing, but individual churches can change from the double to the single, or organize new churches in the single mode if done by the voice of the church but if any difficulties arise therefrom, A. M. will not be responsible, therefore those churches that will do it will be held responsible for the result.

The meeting was asked at different times, what would be done with a church that might get into trouble about it, but there was no answer given and none appeared to know.

We have now given about the substance of the action on this question, and hope it will be accepted as the very best the church could do under existing circumstances.

Original Name of the Church.

There was a petition presented asking A. M. to readopt the original name of the church called "Brethren." After a short discussion it was tabled.

We are "Brethren" and not German Baptists, and the best way to get rid of such an outlandish title is to cease using it. We do not use it, neither do our other periodicals. If all our brethren would have their writings drawn in the name of the "Brethren," which will not annul those drawn differently, "German Baptist" would soon become obsolete without any special legislation.

Concluded Next Week.

Announcements.

Please announce through the Pilgrim, the Lord willing, the Lost Creek church, Juniata county, Pa., intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 3rd and 4th of June, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m. A hearty invitation is extended to all who may please to favor us with a visit. Michael Bashor.

Please announce that we the brethren of Cerrogorda Ill., intend to hold a Lovefeast on the 14th and 15th of June. A general invitation is extended, especially to ministering brethren. By order of the church.
Jacob Troxel.

The following notices were handed to us for publication with a request that we give a general invitation to all and a special one to ministering brethren.

Yellow Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., June 13th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Snake Spring Valley, Bedford Co., Pa., June 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

Lost Creek, Juniata Co., Pa., 3d and 4th of June.

Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., 5th and 6th of June.

Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., June the 11th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M.

Waterloo Congregation, Black Hawk Co., Iowa, June 15, 16, commencing at 1 o'clock p. m.

Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., June 14th commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. 5½ miles southwest of Plymouth. Those coming on the Mail Train will stop off at the Summit, three miles west of Plymouth.

Fawn River Congregation, Lagrange Co. Ind., June 15, 16, commencing at 10 o clock a. m. Six miles east of Lima at the house of bro. Eli Horner.

Urbana Ill., at the house of bro. George Dillings, June 22, 23. Brethren coming from the North or South, on the Ill. Central railroad, will stop off either at Thomasboro, or Champaign City. Those coming from East or West, on the Indianapolis and Bloomington railroad, will stop off at Mayview.

Please announce that we intend to hold our Lovefeast on the 6th anb 7th of June, in the Maiden Creek church, near Mohrsville, Berks county, Pa. We give a general invitation to all and especially to the ministering brethren. Those who come by railroad will stop off at Mohrsville station, on Reading & Pottstown Railroad.
Jeremiah Rothermel.

Please announce that the brethren at Shade Creek, Somerset Co., Pa., intend holding a Lovefeast on Sunday June 23rd, commencing at 10 A. M. A general invitation is extended. John Custer.

The Lord willing, the Sandy church of Columbia and Stark Cos. Ohio, expect to have a communion meeting on the 26th of June, at Bro. John Hestand's, near North Georgetown. An invitation is given to brethren & sisters, and all who may desire to attend. J. A. Clement.

MONEY LIST.

Jeremiah Rothermel,	$1.50
G. M. Sizer,	1.25
Emily A. Whitten,	1.25
S. A. Moore,	10.00
B. F. Kittinger,	.70
Amos T. Gregg,	1.25
John H. Caybon,	.90
Isaac Showalter,	2.50
Daniel Leedy,	2.00
Franklin Sprankle,	.62.
Jesse Calvert,	10.00
Samuel Lapold,	1.25
Jonas Kauffman,	1.25
Jacob Wilt,	1.25
D. Brower,	1.25
George Irvin,	1.25
Wm. Lichenwalter,	1.25
David Heoff,	1.25
H. D. Davy,	75
Henry Wenger,	1.25
Peter Lichty,	1.25
Lewis Kimmel,	1.00
J. J. Wagner,	1.25
Michael Bechtel,	1.25
Samuel Brallier,	1.25
Addison Baker,	1.25
John Brower,	1.25
Barbara Kauffman,	1.25
Henry Zimmerman	80
Saloma Peck	1.25
Hiel Hamilton	90
Ellen A. Remley	90
Tobias Krider	80
Wm Radford	75
Noah Coleman	75

AGENTS WANTED FOR
"JESUS."
By CHARLES F. DEEMS, D. D.
[illegible] The most popular and [illegible] selling religious work ever issued. [illegible] address U. S. PUBLISHING CO., N. Y.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

ORIGIN OF TINTED PAPER.

More novelties are the result of accident than is generally supposed.—The origin of blue-tinted paper came about by a mere slip of the hand. William East, an English paper maker once upon a time set his men to work, and went away on business. While the men were at dinner, Mrs. East accidentally let a blue-bag fall into one of the vats of pulp. Alarmed at the occurrence, she determined to say nothing about it. Great was the astonishment of the workmen when they saw the peculiar color of the paper, and great the anger of Mr. East when he returned and found that a whole vat of pulp had been spoiled. After giving the paper made from it warehouse room for four years, Mr. East sent it up to his agent in London, "to be sold for what it would fetch."

"For what it would fetch!" said the agent, not understanding the meaning; "well, it certainly is a novelty, but he must not expect too much.' So he sold the whole at a considerable advance upon the market price, and wrote to the mills for as much more as he could get. The surprise of Mr. East may be imagined. He hastened to tell his wife, who found courage to confess her share in the fortunate accident and to claim a reward, which she received in the shape of a new cloak. Mr. East kept his secret, and for a short time supplied the market with the novel tint, until the demand far exceeded the supply, and other makers, discovering the means used, competed with him.

ORIGIN OF FOOLSCAP PAPER.

The term foolscap, to designate a certain kind of paper, no doubt has puzzled many an inquirer. The origin is not only amusing, but historical. Charles I. of England, granted numerous monopolies for the support of the Government. Among others was the manufacture of paper. The water-mark of the finest sort was the royal arms of England. The consumption of this article was great, and large fortunes were made by those who had purchased the exclusive right to vend it. This, among other monopolies, was set aside by the Parliament that brought Charles I. to the scaffold; and, by way of showing contempt for the King, they ordered the royal arms to be taken from the paper, and a fool with his cap and bells substituted. It is now over two hundred years since the fool's cap was taken from the paper, but still the paper of the size which the Rump Parliament ordered for their journals, bears the name of the water-mark placed there as an indignity to Charles.

CURCULIO ON PLUMS.

A correspondent says that he wraps plum trees, below the lower limbs, with cotton, which he keeps wet with camphor and spirits of ammonia. He wets the cotton twice a week, and the result has been a good crop of plums and no curculio. A correspondent in another journal says:

"I have seen various methods for keeping these insects off plum trees, but none so simple or yet so effectual as the following: Soak corn cobs in sweetened water until thoroughly saturated, then suspend them to the limbs of the trees a little while after blossoming, being sure to burn the cobs after the fruit ripens, as they will be found full of the young insects. A good plan is to change the cobs every few weeks. My theory is this—that the insects deposit their eggs in the cobs in preference to doing so in the young plums. The first season I tried it upon one or two only, and in the summer was rewarded by a good crop of as fine plums as ever ripened, while those on the other trees fell off when about half grown. I have since tried it more thoroughly and have never known it to fail.

A WATERSPOUT IN IOWA.—During a terrific rain storm which passed over northwest Iowa and Dakotah on the night of the 15th of May, a huge waterspout descended to the earth, striking a few miles from White Swan, Dakotah, covering the ground for a great distance around with water to a depth of eight to thirty feet. Fortunately it did not strike in the vicinity of any settlement and nobody was injured; but considerable stock was drowned and the Mississippi River telegraph line was demolished for a great distance and covered with earth and uprooted trees.

Advertisements.

GOOD BOOKS.

A large number of our patrons are receiving our books as noticed below, as premiums, and express themselves highly pleased with them. Others who are not agents, have enquired whether we keep them for sale. We have now made arrangements with Mr. Wells to furnish any of their publications post paid at publishers prices. Orders for books must be accompanied with the cash, and plain directions for sending them.

Conversion of St. Paul. By George Jarvis Geer, D. D. 12mo. fine edition, $1. Plain edition, 75 cents.

Footprints of Life; or, Faith and Nature Reconciled.—A Poem in three parts. The Body. The Soul. The Deity. By Philip Harvey, M. D. $1.25.

Fruit Culture for the Million. A Handbook. being a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees. Descriptions of the Best Varieties, and How to Propagate them. illustrated $1.00.

Hand-book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol. 2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting, or Domestic Economy. By Solon Robinson. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of both sexes, Relating to the Formation of Character. Choice of Avocation, Health, Conversation, Cultivation of Intellect, Moral Sentiments, Social Affection Courtship and Marriage. By Rev. G. S. Weaver. Muslin, $1.50.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. Husbands, Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, etc. By Rev. William Aikman, D. D. A work which should be found in every family. $1.50. Extra gilt, $2.00.

Man and Woman: Considered in their Relations to each Other and to the World. By Henry C. Pedder. 12mo, Fancy cloth. Price $1.00.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., LL.D. One vol. 12mo, $1.00.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. Including Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By Wm. Pittenger. $1.50.

The Emphatic, Diaglott; or The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word for-word English Translation. A Work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4,00; extra fine binding, $5.00.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75cts.

Weaver's Works for the Young. Comprising "Hopes and Helps for the Young of both Sexes," "Aids and Aims for Girls and Young Women," "Ways of Life; or, the Right Way and the Wrong Way," $3

Menno Simon's
COMPLETE WORKS.

In English, translated from the original Dutch or Holland, giving the whole of the great Reformers writings on the subject of Baptism. Price in full sheep $4.50; by mail $5.14.

Address, JOHN F. FUNK & BRO.,
May 2:-3m. Elkhart, Ind.

New Hymn Books, English.

TURKEY MOROCCO

One copy,	post-paid, - -	$1 00
Per Dozen,	- - -	11 25

PLAIN ARABESQUE.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

PLAIN SHEEP.

One Copy,	post-paid, - - -	75
Per Dozen,	" - - -	8 50

Ger'n & English, Plain Sheep.

One Copy	post-paid -	$ 1 00
Per Dozen	- - - -	11 25
Arabesque plain,	- - -	1.00
Turkey morocco,	- - -	$ 1.25.
Single German	post-paid, -	50
Per Dozen,	- - -	5 50

1870 1872

DR. FAHRNEY'S
Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

A tonic and purge, for Blood Diseases. Great reputation. Many testimonials. Many ministering brethren use and recommend it. Ask or send for the "Health Messenger." Use only the "Panacea" prepared at Chicago, Ills., and by

Dr. P. Fahrney's Brothers & Co.,

Mar. 20-pd. Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

A number of responsible advertisements not conflicting with the design of our work will be admitted on our outside pages on the following terms:

Single insertion, per line,	10 cts.
Three months, per line, each time,	8 cts.
Six months, do do do,	6 cts.
One Year, do do do,	5 cts.

☞ Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance; standing advertisements quarterly on presentation of bill.

TRACTS.

"ANXIOUS BENCH RELIGION EXAMINIED," by Elder J. S. Flory, is a Tract now ready for distribution, of which the following is a brief synopsis of the contents: A short and pointed address to the reader. The motive that prompted him to write, and his responsibilities as a minister; The peculiarities attending this type of religion; The feelings there experienced, not imaginary but real, The key that unlocks the wonderful mystery; It is not the workings of God after the order and plan of salvation; Man's endowment, his imitative principle—emanated from God; Spiritual influences and intercourse; Relation existing between man and God, and man and man; The fraternal bond and our natural affinities established by the "so called" sciences of Electro Biology; Mesmerism and Psychology or science of the soul, also, "Spiritualism" "Spiritual Rappings," &c. The causes by which the feelings are excited; Sympathy of the nervous system, and how that momentary feeling of joy is brought about, called, "Experimental Religion; Similar feelings may be brought about when there are no religious pretensions; Our reasons why we think this modus operandi of getting religion is not according to the Gospel, and then concludes, by pointing out that form of doctrine as taught by Jesus Christ, and recorded by His faithful witness.

These tracts will be sent to all post paid, on the following terms: Single copy 10cts, 10 copies 70 cents, 20 copies $1.20, 50 copies $2.50, 100 copies $4.00.

Trine Immersion.

A discussion on Trine Immersion, by letter between Elder B. F. Moomaw and Dr J. J. Jackson, to which is annexed a Treatise on the Lord's Supper, and on the necessity, character and evidences of the new birth, also a dialogue on the doctrine of non-resistance, by Elder B. F. Moomaw. Single copy 50 cents.

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD

Winter Arrangement.

On and after Saturday, November 25th, 1871 Passenger Trains will arrive and depart as follows:

UP TRAINS. EX.	UP TRAINS. MAIL	STAIONS.	DOWN TRAIN. EX.	DOWN TRAIN. MAIL
P. M.	A. M.		A. M.	P. M.
Le 5 40	8 10	Huntingdon	9 00	Ar 4 38
5 47	8 20	Long Siding	8 49	4 29
6 00	8 34	McConnellstown	8 34	4 13
6 07	8 41	Pleasant Grove	8 27	4 06
6 20	8 53	Marklesburg	8 14	3 51
6 33	9 06	Coffee Run	8 02	3 36
6 40	9 14	Rough&Ready	7 53	3 28
6 54	9 28	Cove	7 38	3 13
7 00	9 33	Fishers Sum'it	7 33	3 08
Ar 7 15	9 48		7 18
Le 7 30	10 00	Saxton	7 00	Le 2 52
7 47	10 18	Riddlesburg	6 43	2 34
7 54	10 26	Hopewell	6 37	2 26
8 12	10 46	Pipers Run	6 20	2 08
8 32	11 05	Tatesville	6 00	1 48
8 47	11 20	Bloody Run	5 48	1 34
8 52	11 25	Mount Dallas	5 44	1 30
8 59	11 32	Ashcom's Mills	5 37	1 22
9 04	11 36	Lutzville	5 33	1 18
9 09	11 40	Hartley's Mills	5 29	1 14
9 16	11 47	Jamesons	5 22	1 07
Ar 9 23	11 54	Bedford	5 15	1 00

JOHN M'KILLIPS, Supt

THE PILGRIM,

Published by J. B. Brumbaugh, & Co.
Edited by H. B. & Geo. Brumbaugh.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

D. P. Sayler, Double Pipe Creek, Md.
Leonard Furry, New Enterprise, Pa.

The Pilgrim is a Christian Periodical, devoted to religion and moral reform. It will advocate in the spirit of love and liberty, the principles of true Christianity, labor for the promotion of peace among the people of God, for the encouragement of the saints and for the conversion of sinners, avoiding those things which tend toward disunion or sectional feelings.

TERMS.

Single copy, one year,	$1.25.
Book paper, " "	1.50.
Eleven copies, [eleventh for Agt.]	$12.50.

Any number above that at the same rate,

Address.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.
James Creek,
Huntingdon county Pa.

Herald of Pilgrim.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS WHICH OUR FATHERS HAVE SET."

VOL. 3 JAMES CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA, JUNE 11, 1872. NO. 24

POETICAL.

For the Pilgrim.

THE GLORIOUS LAND.

BY MAGGIE LETHERMAN.

The Bible reveals a glorious land,
Where purified angels and spirits dwell;
Where pleasures ne'er end at God's right hand,
And anthems of praise forever swell.

Chorus:

In that glorious land,
What a happy band!
Ere long we shall stand
And sing with them,
In the city of God, Jerusalem.

Out gushing beneath the throne of God,
And of the blest land at his right hand,
Thence runneth the crystal streams of life;
A fountain of joy in that glorious land.

In the midst of the street on either side,
The tree of life arching the way o'ershade,
With health-giving foliage far and wide,
No sickness that glorious land invade.

Twelve manner of fruit hang pendant there,
And all who partake shall never die.
With Jesus they dwell and ever share,
The joys of that glorious land on high.

The afflictions or life are brief and light,
While faith looks beyond the dark Jordan strand,
There goldenly shine the mansions bright,
Which Jesus prepares in that glorious land.

Then come my dear brethren let us haste,
To finish our work with unfaltering hand,
And soon the sweet joys of heaven we'll taste
With all the redeemed in that glorious land.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

For the Pilgrim.

THE GREAT COUNSELOR.

"I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in fire that thou mayest be rich." Rev. 3 : 18

In this text we have presented, a wise counselor, the advice He gave, and the result of adhering to it. Solomon says, where no counsel is, the people fall. The truth of this declaration is frequently demonstrated. When men have so much confidence in their own personal worth or ability as to consider their own judgment superior to all others, they seldom meet with successs in things of a temporal nature. We, as the children of one Common Parent, all sustain a certain relation to each other, and so close is that relation, that there exists a general dependene one upon another. And as we are not all endowed with like capacities we should feel this dependence, and the opinions of others treated with due respect. If some kind friend should be enough interested in our welfare as to advise us in reference to the retaining of our health, or the best way of conducting a vocation in which we are engaged, we should not disregard it. The counsel of others may be a great auxiliary to the performance of the world's work.

There are those too, who may feel it their duty to advise us in reference to things of a divine nature, and while it is just and proper that we should give their views credence, yet it is also our duty to discriminate between right and wrong. It is merely our duty to receive the counsel of others and then we must be able to determine of its merits for ourselves. Especially is thisso in reference to things of a spiritual nature, for the person who is not able to determine whether counsel is in harmony with the Great Law of Right, will not be held accountable.

Two things are especially requisite to the person who gives counsel in reference to things temporal. First, a good motive. Second, a practical knowledge and experience. When men give us advice in reference to secular affairs, our first consideration is, what is their motive? Have they really my good in view, and is their knowledge and experience such as will warrant me in adhering to their counsel? The same rule will apply in reference to things of a divine nature. "The heart of man is deceitful and above all things desperately wicked," and may advise us through sinister motives. This, however, can only be so in reference to the means that God has employed for the salvation of the soul. When we are advised to forsake sin, and accept the means that God has given for the cleansing of the soul, we cannot err in adhering to it, but when it comes to determining what these means are, then we should be on the alert as to their motives and the knowledge they have of true Christianity.

We have now noticed that counsel is good, and it is our duty to receive it from the relation which we sustain to each other. We now have in view a counselor that from the relation we sustain to Him, we are placed under obligations to receive His counsel. This counselor is Jesus, and is the one referred to in the text. We have already noticed that it is our duty to receive advice from an earthly counselor, and that we must be able to decide for ourselves whether it is proper to adhere to it; but the counsel that Jesus gives, it is not only our duty to receive, but it should be brought to bear, practically, on the doings and the governing of our lives generally. Neither are we to exercise our own judgment in reference to it, for His ways are above our ways.

To show the consequence of disregarding the counsel of God we refer to a certain class of individuals that did reject His counsel. "The people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, and were baptized, but the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, and were not baptized. In this instance the counsel of God was to be baptized, and those who adhered to it justified God, but those who rejected it, met His disapprobation. Many are the evidences to which we might refer to prove that we are in duty bound to adhere to the counsel of God, but let this suffice.

We shall next notice that we should receive the counsel of Jesus from the nature of the relation which we sustain to Him. In the earliest period of the existence of all things, man rejected the counsel of God, and by this means brought himself into a position in which there was no arm to save, nor eye to pity. But notwithstanding the wrath of a just God had been kindled, His mercy was again drawn forth, and shortly after the transgression a promise was given that man should again be reinstated into the favor of God. Although this promise was long in the future, the time for its fulfillment finally came, God sent His only Son into the world to suffer the taunts and sneers of a wicked and perverse generation, and finally subject Himself to the death of the cross. Thus it behooved Christ to suffer for our sakes. Our redemption is paid for, the price of which is, the thrice precious blood of Jesus. Thus by the suffering and death of Jesus we are placed in a relation to Him that should bring about a deep feeling of indebtedness, and if we feel this indebtedness, we certainly will try to meet His approbation, which can be done alone by a compliance with His counsel. Saith God; "This is my beloved son, hear ye him." And as predicted by prophecy, the government is now on His shoulders and His name is called the Wonderful Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Now friendly reader take, if you please, a view of the relation you sustain to Jesus, what He has accomplished, how He suffered, how He died, and all for your sakes, and surely the warmth of God's love must penetrate your hardened hearts. When we look around us and see the apparent indifference that is manifested toward the plan of Redemption, it really startles and agitates the mind of those who have tasted of the goodness of God and realized the preciousness of Jesus. Oh, kind reader, how can you be so cold and indifferent? We feel sure you could not treat an earthly friend with such indifference. We have known very small deeds of kindness to be the cause of very strong attachments, so much so that their counsel was sought after and received with the greatest confidence, and their actions, conduct and habits were imitated. Has not Jesus done more than any earthly friend ever can or will do for you? Why not then receive His counsel? Why not have confidence in Him and try to imitate His character? May you, dear reader, be enabled more and more to appreciate the love of God, and then indeed will the counsel of God be received, for saith Jesus, "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments."

We shall now briefly notice the latter part of our subject, the result of adhering to the counsel of Jesus. The idea presented in the latter part of of the text is an incentive in addition the Scripture. So we were willing to come and glad to be received into the church militant here below, that we might become a follower with the saints in His Church triumphant, and so we were led by our old brother Daniel Garber, down into the liquid stream, and was baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, for the remission of sin, or by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior, that being justified by His grace we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

We are now in Christ. He will hide us it matters not who pursues us. In Christ we are safe. By the angels we are hailed as kindred spirits, and by the Lord we are embraced and crowned as one of His adopted family, and a joint heir with Christ we are happy.

A word to you, dear reader, whose eyes may fall upon these lines. We hope that you will not have to go through such a difficult task as we had in finding the true church, the Church of the living God. Yes, if we are faithful and obedient, we can say the Church of the living God. The most of you are in a land of Gospel preaching, but how could we hear without a preacher? We could clasp our Bible to our breast and say Lord is there a people on the face of the earth that doeth thy commandments? O dear ministers, enlarge your circuit and go out among strangers, and preach to them Jesus and His Word. Perhaps you may find some poor penitent souls that are seeking Christ and knoweth not where to go. Point them to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. We know that some of us have much trouble and sorrow in coming to Christ, and not only so, but we glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

Now dear brethren and sisters, we should feel bad if you should say that this is only old wives fables, and that they have been trying to climb up some other way than by the Gospel. I tell you nay it was the lack of opportunity. The Gospel is our faith, but should it be so by reading the Gospel and becoming in great trouble, knowing that we would be lost if we did not repent and come to Christ, and when we are crying day and night unto Him and no one to teach us the way, do we think brethren that the Lord would cast us off entirely? I tell you that He will avenge them speedily. "Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." Your humble sister.

HARRIET EARLY.

Lima, Ohio.

SELECTIONS.

EXTRACT FROM THE BLOODY THEATRE.

For our edification and to show what some of our brethren in tribulation had to suffer for the sake of Jesus, we will give an occasional extract from "The Bloody Theatre." It is a rare work, and we suppose, but few of our readers ever had the pleasure, or perhaps we had better say, experienced the sorrow in reading its pages.

Algerius, a student of Padua, is miserably burnt at Rome, A. D. 1557. The account of his death follows.

A letter full of consolation, written by Algerius, who was offered for the testimony of Jesus, A. D. 1557.

To the beloved brethren, and fellow servants of Jesus Christ, who have come out of Babylon unto Mount Zion, whose names I do not omit without cause: Grace, peace, and mercy, be with you from God our Father, and Lord Jesus Christ our Savior. Amen. To mitigate, or, at least, partially to alleviate, the pains which you suffer on my account, I would have you to be participants of that consolation which I realize, so that you might rejoice with me, and shout for joy in the presence of the Lord.

I will relate something incredible; that I have found honey in the lion's carcass. Who will believe what I relate? Who can believe it?

I have found great pleasure in a dark dungeon; and in a place of bitterness and death, I have found rest, and hope of salvation. In the abyss or depths of hell, I have found joy; where others wept, I rejoiced; where others feared greatly, there was I strengthened; who can believe this? I have found great pleasure in this sad condition; in a lonely corner, I had glorious company, and in the severest bonds, perfect rest. All these things, beloved brethren in Christ, I enjoyed at the munificent hand of God. Behold! he that was before afar off, is now with me, and him who I imperfectly knew, I see plainly; him whom I saw at a distance I now see face to face; he whom I desired, now tenders me his hand; he comforts me; he fills me with joy; he banishes all bitterness; he renews my strength and consolation. Oh! how gracious, the Lord is, who will not suffer his servants to be tempted beyond their ability. Oh! how easy and agreeable is his yoke! There is none like God the Most High, he who preserves and refreshes those who are tempted; he heals the wounded. None is like unto him. Beloved brethren and sisters, learn to know how gracious and merciful the Lord is; he who visits his servant in their trials; he that vouchsafes to assist us in our tabernacles. He gives us a joyful mind and a peaceable heart.

Will the blind world believe these things? No! but because they are unbelievers, they will rather say: You will not long endure the heat, the cold, and the solemencies of the place; how will you then endure the cross, the thousand fold derisions, the wrongs, defamation, and intolerable ignominy? Should you not have regard for your country, your parents, your honor, and your fame? Can you wholly deny yourself of all honor and your acquisitions? Will you forsake so much, and all for nothing; that cost you so much labor and pains; besides much watching, sweating, assiduity, and anxiety? Why did you trouble yourself so much from youth up? Have you no fear of death, which awaits you, though you are innocent! Oh! what a foolish thing it is, when you can avoid all by one word and escape death, and still you will not do it! Oh! what folly, when you can obtain so many privileges from pious members of the council and enlightened men, that you are unwilling to receive them.

But listen! you blind and dying men, what is hotter and more caustic than the fire which is prepared for you? What is colder than your own heart, which is yet in darkness, and has no light at all? What is more obdurate, confused, and restless, than your life? What is more despicable and envious than your age? Tell me what country and home is more delightful than heaven? What treasure is greater than everlasting life? Who are our parents and friends, except those who keep the word of God? Where is there greater joy, riches, and honor, than in heaven? Tell me, senseless man, is not all knowledge given, that we might know God? If we do not know him in truth, we spend all our labor, watching, toiling, and sweating, to no purpose. Answer me, unhappy men, what comfort or consolation can he have, who does observe the word of God, in which we all rejoice? How can he say, that I fear death, if he himself has died unto sin, and thus prefers death before life. For if Christ is the way, truth, and the life, can life then be found out of Christ? Heat is a refreshing breeze to me; winter is a time of rejoicing to me in the Lord. I do not fear the burning of fire; why should I then dread a little heat? And can he be punished by cold, who consumes, melts, and falls asleep in the love of God. John I. 5. 2 Cor. v. 1. John xx. 31. Luke xi. 28. Matt. xxx. 21. Rom. i. 25. 1 Tim. v. 6. John xiv. 6.

True, the guilty and evil doers cannot abide this place; but it is a pleasant place to the innocent and righteous; here flows honey, here flows the heavenly drink, here flows milk, and here is an abundance of every good thing. It is true, indeed, the place is considered as a filthy glen, but to me it is an open champaign, and one of the finest places in the world.

Tell me, miserable men, whether I could have a park more pleasant than this place; for there I behold kings, princes, states, and people; there I see war, slaying and killing; some conquering and being conquered; others rising to pinnacles of fame. But here is Mount Zion, where I ascend to the heavens. Christ Jesus is before my eyes; I am surrounded by the fathers, the prophets, the evangelists, the apostles, and all the servants of God. He (the Lord) folds me in his arms, and cherishes me; those admonish me; these show me the heavenly things; some comfort me; others lead me into the midst of music and singing.

Shall I then say that I am alone among so many? For I have companions to imitate, and others to console me, because I see some crucified; one's head cut off; some stoned, others cut asunder; some roasted, or cast into ovens or chaldrons of oil; one's eyes are put out, another's tongue torn out; one flayed, others have their hands and feet cut off; some are cast into fiery ovens. Nay, it would take too much time to describe all. Again, I see others who have endured great pains and tortures, and all that they might be free from all pain. For all these there is but one specific, which can cure them all, that gives me power and life, and makes me willing to endure all this anxiety and suffering, which is but momentary, and is but a trifle. This is my confident hope which I have placed in heaven. I fear not those who speak evil of, and persecute me without a cause; for those he will cast out and extirpate, who is in heaven, but these he will heal. I shall not be afraid of a thousand men who shall surround me; for the Lord my God will, at all times, deliver me; he is my protector and Savior; he is my captain; he will defeat them who oppose me without a cause. He will break the jaws of the wicked; for from him we have salvation and blessing, and to him be the power and the kingdom. The ignominy which we suffer for Christ's sake, brings us exultation and rejoicings. For thus it is written: Blessed are ye, when men, shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you for my sake; for this is honor, glory, and power of God; and his Spirit shall rest upon. If we are assured of our salvation, we are not to regard the unjust derision of those who speak evil against us. Heb. xiii. 6. Here I have no abiding city or resting place, my city and house is heaven; I seek the New Jerusalem which I see approaching me. Heb. vi. 6. 2 Cor. v. 1. Rev. xxi. 2. Behold I am on the way thither, to the place of my pleasing home, my treasure, my parents and friends; my joy and honor; I doubt not, that I will obtain all these. All earthly things are but mere shadows; they are all perishable; a vanity of vanities to those who have not the hope of realizing life everlasting.

Continued next Week.

THE WAY TO SPOIL GIRLS.

SELECTED BY S. G. KELLER.

First. Be always telling from her earliest childhood, what a beautiful creature she is. It is a capital way of inflating the vanity of a little girl, to be constantly exclaiming: "How pretty!" Children understand such a flattery even when in the nurses arms,and the evil is done to the character in its earliest formation.

Second. Begin, as soon as she can toddle, to dress her out in fashionable clothes and rich dresses. Put a hoop upon her at once, with all the artificial adornments of flounces and feathers, and flowers and curls. Foodness of dress will thus become a permanent characteristic, and will osurp the whole attention of the young, and be a long step toward spoiling her.

Third. Let her visit so much that she finds no happiness at home, and therefore will not be apt to stay there and learn home duties. It is a capital thing for a spoiled daughter to seek all her happiness in visiting and change of place and associates. She will thus grow as useless as modern fashionable parents delight that their daughters should be.

Fourth. Be careful that her education gives her a smattering of all the accomplishments, without the slightest knowledge of the things really useful in life. If her mind and time is occupied in modern accomplishments, there will be no thought of the necessity and virtue of being of some real use to somebody pervading her heart, and she will soon be ready as a spoiled daughter.

Fifth. As a consequence, keep her in profound ignorance of all the useful art of housekeeping, impressing upon her mind that it is vulgar to do anything for yourself, or learn her anything that is done in the house. A spoiled daughter should never be taught the mysteries of the kitchen; such things a lady always leaves to the servants. It would be "vulgar" for her to know how to dress a salad or make a pudding.

